Favored Tampa Dumps PC Gridmen As Hose Bid Fails to Materialize

ROY FOWLER

The Blue Hose of Presbyterian made a gallant bid for an upset over highly favored Tampa last Saturday night as they left the field at half-time with the score 14 to 13 in their favor. Tampa, however, crushed all PC hopes during the second half as they turned three intercepted passes and a recovered fumble into touchdowns and a 39 to 14 victory.

Bob Waters sparked the first Blue Hose touchdown drive as he passed to freshman end Jim Kolb for 32 yds., 15 yds., and 15 yds., again. The Sylvania, Ga., quarterback capped the 72-yd. drive with a five-yard down the middle pass to halfback Tony Benson for the initial PC touchdown. Webb converted after the score.

Guard Bruce Barnes recovered a Tampa fumble on the Floridians' 21-yd. line to set up the second and final PC touchdown. Ken Webb crashed over the center of the line from one yard out on a fourth down play and converted afterwards to give the Hosemen a 14 to 13 lead.

Don Herndon, of Wauchuca, Fla., took it upon himself to destroy all Presbyterian plans for an upset. The 6 foot, 185-pound Little All-Amercian candidate scored four touchdowns, recovered a fumble to set up the fifth and intercepted three passes, two of which he ran back for touchdowns, and added two extra points. A lot of this tremendous individual display took place during the fourth quarter as Tampa scored 19 points and sewed up the game 39 to 14.

Presbyterian, still in quest of their first vistory, will visit the Elon Christians in Elon, N. C., this Saturday night. Elon, with three straight victories to their credit, leads the North State Conference League. This means that the Blue Hose will be in for another rugged Saturday night. PC has shown improvement, and just as they pulled an upset in tying Lenoir-Rhyne, another North Carolina state team, so may they pull an upset with a possible victory over Elon.

Intramurals

The second round of intramural football got underway this past Monday. Pika's, winner of the first round, got off to a good start by beating Alpha Sigma Phi 20-6. The KA's, runner-up in the first round, took one from Theta Chi by forfeit. The KA's kept their winning form by beating Pi Kappa Phi 6-0 the very next day. The second game on Tuesday was one on the part of Sigma Nu. The Sig's beat Alpha Sigma Phi 44-6. It was the highest score racked up by a team this year in intramural.

Blue Hose Spotlights Center Jim McLaughlin

Jim McLaughlin, from Charlotte, N. C., is the third senior to be spotlighted by the Blue Stocking. McLaughlin stands 6 ft., 2 in., and tips the scale at 220 pounds.

While in high school at Charlotte Jim played tackle. He also held down this position during his freshman year at Presbyterian. A shortage of capable centers caused the husky lineman to be switched to pivot man for his sophomore season. The T-formation requires an exacting performance from the center. He must coordinate to the fullest extent with the quarterback, and his snaps from center are also highly instrumental in good punting. McLaughlin has learned these lessons well, and he is an important cog in the PC offensive machine.

JIM McLAUGHLIN

Aside from his duties on offense, Jim is also a hard tackler on defense. Come next fall, McLaughlin will be missed. However, during the remaining games of the season, it is a sure bet that the veteran lineman will be giving his all in hopes of helping to improve an unsatisfactory record thus far.

They are made in many sizes. For those who believe that more than a dash of the trash is too rash, we have the one-fourth pint goatskin. For the bloat who likes to gloat and nearly float, we have the fifteen-gallon container with camel attachment. Colors include green, blue, red, and elephant pink. We squeeze to please.

The last item on this month's special sale of collegiate products is a pair of glasses with painted-in eyes. These eyes were copied from a man viewing Kim Novak, so that the real studious appearance dazzles the professor. With a click of the gadget on the side of the frame the expression changes from Keen Interest, to Anxiety, to Concern, to finally the look of "when is the darn bell going to ring." PC Cagers face 23 Opponents

Presbyterian cagers will battle 23 opponents during the 1957-58 basketball season, Athletic Director Walter A. Johnson announced today.

The Blue Hose are slated to open their campaign on November 30 against the strong Parris Island Marines here in Clinton. They will play every state team except the University of South Carolina and Clemson, and the schedule also includes strong teams representing Belmont Abbey, Georgia Teachers, and Mercer.

This year marks the opening season for new head basketball coach Courts Redford, now engaged with the football backfield. He starts without the Thompson boys, Dave and Bruce, who ranked among the nation's top scoring combinations last year with an average of more than 50 points per game and who paced the PC attack during their four-year careers here.

Influenza Throws Skids to Homecoming

• H. C. Activities Cancelled

Homecoming activities at Presbyterian College, scheduled for this Saturday, have been cancelled after influenza forced football opponent Catawba to remain sidelined again this weekend.

Catawba officials said physicians urged that they cancel the game because of the outbreak of influenza at that institution. The Indians had been forced to call off last week's scheduled contest against Elon and Presbyterian likewise had cancelled its Davidson engagement, but PC had planned to play this Saturday until the decision came from Catawba.

Presbyterian had built a full homecoming program around the football game, but the entire event is now being cancelled. Plans had called for a board of directors meeting Saturday morning, an alumni luncheon, class reunions, a president's reception and various other alumni meetings.

A college official explained that advance reservations for Homecoming already had been adversely affected by the fact that Presbyterian had suspended classes all of last week to prevent an influenza epidemic. It was felt that cancellation of the featured football game would be another serious blow to attendance. After consulting with alumni officials, the PC administration decided to call off the entire program.

Presbyterian College has designated the only remaining home football weekend — against East Carolina on November 16—as Parents Day, so there will be no further opportunity for Homecoming this fall.

Queen . . .

The 1957 Homecoming Queen of Presbyterian College is Miss Ann Andrey of Limestone College. Her escort to the game was to be Bobby Brown, but since the Homecoming game was cancelled, the Queen was left without a throne.

A Halloween Dance is the only fragment left of the proposed Homecoming weekend. All other planned activities have been cancelled.

Featured will be the College "N" Orchestra, which is a sixteen-piece orchestra, plus male and female vocalists, from Newberry. All activities on Saturday will be left up to the individual fraternities, freshmen attending the fraternity room of their choice.

Ann Andrey from Limestone College who was elected by the student body as Homecoming Queen, became Queen without a Homecoming when the game ws cancelled. Gordon Livingston, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, expressed his regrets, but explained that nothing coud be done since there will be no Homecoming this year.

Also fouled up by the influenza is the fraternity open socials. Pi Kappa Phi and Theta Chi held theirs at the originally slated times, but due to the week recess of classes Kappa Alpha's date has been changed to November 20, and Alpha Sigma Phi's to December 4. As originally planned Pi Kappa Alpha will hold their social on November 6, and Sigma Uu on November 13.

Advisors Association Aids SC Publications

The South Carolina College Publications Advisors and Journalism Teachers Association was officially formed at the South Carolina Collegiate Press seminar held this past weekend at Furman University. Set up in order to serve the needs of the member publications of the SCCPA, the Advisors Association selected as its first president, Ira L. Baker, head of the Department of Journalism, Furman.

A resolution was passed that the newly formed group be incorporated as an integral part of the SCCPA.

Also established at the Association seminar was a system by which member publications could receive a critical evaluation of their newspaper by a qualified board of journalists at any time desired for a nominal fee.

January Graduates Must Visit Registrar

All students graduating in January are asked to go by the Registrar's office before Friday, November 8, Mrs. Martin, PC Registrar, announced today.

Information blanks must be filled out to use in ordering diplomas. Therefore, it is of utmost importance that those students pick up these forms.

Robed Choir Posts Schedule And Breakdown of Sections

The Presbyterian College Robed Choir will present its first program of the season at the Indiantown Presbyterian Church on November 24. On the same date the Choir will also sing at the Eau Claire Presbyterian Church in Columbia.

This is the first weekend trip of the season. The choir is due to make numerous other weekend trips throughout the year. These will include trips to Cartersville, Ga., Atlanta, Ga., and Newnan, Ga., Orangeburg, Honea Path, Abbeville, Greenville, Manning, Columbia, Anderson, Seneca, Gffney, and Clover.

In April the Robed Choir will embark on its annual Spring Tour, traveling to New Orleans, with presentations in several cities throughout Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana.

The program this year is built around the theme of "Christian Joy." Included in the program will be anthems to emphasize this theme, and there will be appropriate scriptural readings.

The Choir this year is composed of 34 men under the leadership of Director Dr. Edouard Patte and Choir President Blair Baldwin. These include Blair Baldwin, Sonny Embry, Harold Gallimore, Lonnie Love, Britt Spann, and Charles Taylor, singing First Tenor. Second Tenors are Don Burquest, Jim Eller, Rohe Eshbaugh, Jack Fallaw, Ed Galloway, Pat Griffin, Cliff Stovall, Bill Stubbs, and Jack Taylor.

First Basses are Mike Brown, John Childers, Roger Godwin, Billy Piephoff, Scott Reid, Gil Taylor, Jim Townsend, Ben Vincent, Gene Wilson, and Tom Wise. Second Basses are Harry Byers, Dick Carter, Bill Cashwell, Charles Clark, Rutledge DuRant, Bob Horseman, Pat Kelly, and Ed McGee. Harvey Wittchen is the Organist.

The students recognized in Who's Who each year are nominated from approximately 700 colleges and universities. Campus nominating committees are instructed to consider, in making their selections, the student's scholarship; his participation and leadership in academic and extra-curricular activities; his citizenship and service to the school; his promise of future usefulness.

James M. OeLand, Businessman PC Development Program V. P.

James M. Oeland, former treasurer and executive officer of the Darlington (S. C.) Manufacturing Company, has been named vice-president in charge of development at Presbyterian College.

President Marshall W. Brown, in making the announcement, said Oeland will assume his new duties on November 1. He succeeds as development director Otto W. Ferrene, who recently accepted a position with Marts and Lundy, professional fund-raising organizaiton.

Dr. Brown pointed out that Oeland is an outstanding Presbyterian lay leader who has been active in the work of the South Carolina Synod for a number of years. He also is recognized for his business ability, having directed the operations of the Darlington affiliate of the Deering Milliken Company until that particular plant was closed recently. Most of Oeland's long business career has been spent in the textile industry, where he served as treasurer of Clifton Manufacturing Company, Comptroller of Reigel Textiles, and Comptroller of Monarch Mills and of Jonesville Products Company before going to Darlington.

The new PC development director was voted "layman of the year" in 1952 by the Presbyterian Men of South Carolina. He has served as president of this Synod group and of the Men of Enoree Presbytery, as a ruling elder in three congregations and as a deacon in three churches.

A native of Spartanburg, Oeland received his degree from Wofford College in 1919 after brief service in the U. S. Army in World War I. He and Mrs. Oeland are the parents of three daughters.

Esso Foundation Gives $2000 Grant To Assist

Presbyterian College has received another $2,000 grant from the Esso Foundation, President Marshall W. Brown announced today.

This gift is part of a total grant given to 345 colleges and universities to assist them during the 1957-58 academic year. It is unrestricted as to the manner in which it may be used.

The present gifts represents the third time that Presbyterian College has received a grant from the Esso Foundation which was established in 1955 by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and a group of affiliate organizations.

PC Grad Harry Dent Is Thurmond's Aide

Sen. Strom Thurmond announced that he has accepted "with regret" the resignation of Alex McCullough of Spartanburg as his Administrative Assistant, and appointed Harry Shuler Dent of St. Matthews to succeed him.

McCullough's resignation will be effective early in November in order to accept a position in private business in Greenville. McCullough would not identify his new employer, but said his new appointment will be announced "by the corporation which I shall join."

Dent will move up from the position of legislative assistant to Thurmond. Both men joined the Senator's staff in January, 1955, when he first came to the Senate.

"Harry Dent has done a fine job during teh past three years as my legislative assistant and I am glad to have a man so well prepared to become my administrative assistant. He has proved his ability in the duties assigned to him and by successfully completing his law degree by attending night school and passing the South Carolina Bar exmination.

"I look forward to having this young man as my chief assistant. His good judgment has been demonstrated on many occasions."

McCullough was research and press assistant to Governor James F. Byrnes of South Carolina for four years before joining Senator Thurmond in Washington. Prior to that he had been managing editor of the Spartnburg Herald for six years, and a high school principal in Spartanburg County, after having worked as investigator for Spartanburg General Hospital for more than two years.

He is well known in newspaper circles, having been president of the South Carolina Associated Press Association and a member of the American Society of Newspaper

Integration and Segregation in American Colleges

"I can't imagine any set of circumstances that would ever induce me to send troops into . . . any area to enforce the orders of a Federal court, because I believe that common sense of America will never require it. . . . I would never believe that it would be a wise thing to do in this country."—President Dwight D. Eisenhower, July 17, 1957.

Integration, a page one subject across America these days, gets lots of space in the college and national press. Charles G. Manly of Emory University wrote the following letter to The Emory Wheel.

"Editor, The Wheel:

"Will you help me get the following information from the United States Supreme Court?

"Before I start my next year's crop, I would like to get some things straight, since the Supreme Court has changed so many things that our Constitution and our forefathers have stood for.

"I would like to know if I will be permitted to plant my white and black peas in separate rows of equal width and length, or will I have to mix them and sow them broadcast?

"I would like to sell my hogs, but all of them are white. I don't know if I can sell them unless I have an equal number of black hogs to go along with them. Can you get a ruling on this?

"My white 'coon dog won't hunt birds with my black bird dog. Could I get an injunction to make them hunt together? The black dog won't hunt 'coons, and the white dog won't hunt blackbirds. It may be that a Federal judge could use legal persuasion on them.

"If they convict Governor Griffin and send him to a federal concentration camp, can I take him some mixed peas, piebald eggs, 'coon and blackbird to supplement the diet the Yankees are jamming down our throats?

"I would like to get a copy of the new words to the 'Star Spangled Banner.' My copy is all mixed up with 'Old Black Joe' and it just doesn't sound right. I want to learn the National anthem, new version, so I can be 100% Amercian again."

As "Join the Army and see the South" is chanted around the country, the Henderson Oracle of Henderson State Teachers College, Arkadelphia, Ark., lamented the Little Rock story:

"And . . . completely discounting the damage to our relations with regard to the international scene, it has hurt our state for a long time to come.

"The mud that now oozes off the state capitol will present pestilence enough to keep any major industry from ever facetiously considering bringing their employees to our 'Land of Opportunity'."

Dave Palmer expresses one view in the Syracuse Daily Orange:

"We fully realize that integration must be gradual. The Southern Negro, for the most part, has a very low standard of living and if the schools are all at once predominantly Negro, catastrophic results could occur.

"But those who scream about this should realize that the low standard of living, the results of which they abhor, is a direct result of lack of educatoin and implied inferiority written into the law.

"Sacrifices are going to have to be made. What of the intelligent Negro who is denied the opportunity to develop to the fullest extent of his capabilities?

"Gov. Faubus' stupid action is no answer. Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee last year hit the nail on the head.

"He fully agreed, a year ago, with Faubus' contention that it is the sworn duty of the governor of a state to maintain the peace—but he went one step further . . .

"Clement used the National Guard to maintain the peace and enforce the law. Troops were available to see that integration went off smoothly, not to prevent it . . ."

Editors of the Denison, Denison University, Granville, Ohio, noted another angle to the Little Rock story, an issue they call the "whole sphere of states' rights vs federal rights."

They think, "It would seem perhaps this challenge to Washington this affront, is, after all, a good thing. We citizens may be getting carried away on the gigantic pendulum of federal interference.

"Perhaps the Faubus incident is a chance at least for all of us to consider the 'proper' emphasis of the two spheres—and perhaps a reconsideration of the predominant role of all government activity in our daily lives."

Lastly, a Catholic college in Alabama (St. Bernard college) student editors said: "We, as Catholics, should use all the influence at our command to bring about harmony and justice to a troubled homeland, for we should not be so shortsighted as not to perceive that open defiance to a national law on a large scale could only result in chaos and anarchy, which would be wonderful weapons in the hands of our arch foes, the Communists.

"Finally, we have the words of Christ Himself, telling us that whatever is done to the least of our brethren, is also done to Him . . . ."

Meanwhile, the PC student marches on—unblemished.

Prophetic Visions of Pagan's Progress

By LYMAN HARRIS

"Mother of Miseries," I said to myself as I lay in bed with the Asiatic blues. "Fever in the morning, fever all through the night."

My roomo mixed me a "Terpin Hydrate on the Rocks," which I drank while crunching some of Miss Bob's delicious capsuled aspirins. Soon I was asleep and in the midst of a feverish nightmare, or maybe it was a prophetic vision.

In this dream I lay in a hospital bed, suffering. I had been plagued by attendants so much that whenever someone knocked on my door. I shouted in delirium, "Friend or Enema?"

Meanwhile, back in the dream. I was having my sheets changed by a beautiful nurse who had recently shafted me. As she pulled the sheets out from under me and stood them up against the wall, she flipped me out of the bed onto the floor accidentally.

The impact caused concussions, relapses, ruptures, and a whole bunch of other medical terms. She wiped my blood off her hands and as I lay dying, she bawled hideously. I smiled heroically, and coolly said, "You have ended my life. Go, I forgive you." Then I groaned, laughted morbidly, and expired.

After death I rode down a long narrow highway on a crowded army bus. Along the road were signs "Jesus saved," "The wages of sin was Death," and "Eternity here!" Then there was a road marker reading, "Fort Benning one mile ahead, Hell 1½ miles ahead." Hell was across the River Styx from Benning, but actually they were incorporated. Anyhow, we went to Hell.

As we drew nearer we saw billboards along the highway reading, "Go to Hades, located in the foothills of the beautiful Appalachian Mountains," and "For the Finest in liberal sins training, attend Hades." We followed a "One Way" sign and entered.

On the left was the Administration Building, where bald headed men stood on the steps and smiled ridiculously. Further along the divided highway that led through the institution was the Science Hole, and Spencer Inferno. At the end of a long strip (Margo's?) of grass was Nausea Hall, with several other buildings located around it. REPENT!!

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter met Tuesday night and completed plans for the Halloween Dance weekend, and for an alumni meeting in conjunction with the previously planned activities.

A party has been planned after the dance Friday night and activities have been prepared for Saturday afternoon and night. All freshmen are cordially invited to these events.

KAPPA ALPHA

At the weekly meeting of the Kappa Alpha Order, Brother Jimmy Hentz, IFC Representative, informed the chapter of the change in plans by the college in regard to the Homecoming Weekend. Plans were revised, and arrangements were made for the weekend activities.

Other chapter business was taken up, and a discussion of the Open Social, which is to be held November 20, was carried out.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

The regular meeting of Pi Kappa Alpha was held Tuesday night at 7:00 P. M.

Further plans for the Homecoming weekend were discussed and completed.

Brothers Ronnie Wolfe and Jerry Crawford were elected Brothers of the Week. Brother Wolfe pinned his girl last week and Brother Crawford presented his girl with a ring.

PI KAPPA PHI

At the regular meeting Tuesday mght plans were discussed concerning the dance weekend.

Friday night dance intermission will be held in the Fraternity rooms. The Pi Kapp party Saturday night will take place at Peek's Ranch. A combo will be present, and all non-fraternity men are cordially invited.

SIGMA NU

Included in the plans for the Homecoming weekend are an open house duirng the dance, a Smorgasbord at the Mary Musgrove, followed by a dance in the ballroom of the hotel on Saturday night. All non-fraternity men are invited.

A flag pole has been erected on the house grounds by the members of the chapter.

Movie Review . . .

Operation Madball

By SONNY EMBRY

For all gung-ho military students, Operation Madball is a "flic" that can't be missed. The movie itself is a satire on Army red tape and is set in a remote foreign post of the U. S. Army Medical Corps. The situation revolves around the problem of how enlisted men can date the Lieutenant Nurses on the base without infracturing twenty-seven different rules of military discipline.

The movie at first reminds one of television's Sergeant Bilco, but it lacks the coarser features of Bilco's show and not built around just one person, but a team of men. Jack Lemmon is the principal star, and as a quick-minded buck private matches his wits against Ernie Kovak, the Executive officer with political aspirations.

Kovak, in this picture, fortunately isn't in his usual cigar-smoking comedian role, and those who don't particularly like him will find him quite good as the outsmarted Executive officer. Lemmon, himself a ladies man, is helped out in the picture by Mickey Rooney, a Sergeant that spouts out facts from two almanacs that he has memorized and speaks in rhyme.

The climax culminates in a fabulous "Mad Ball" that couldn't have been any more trouble to prepare for than the invasion of Normandy in World War II. Put this all together against a background of beautiful Army nurses and an impossibly naive Lieutenant Colonel, and you have "Operation Madball,' guaranteed to keep your sides splitting with laughter for an hour and a half.

"W'unnerful, W'unnerful, W'unnerful"

By JOHN SUMMERS

New songs are popping up all over the world now that tie in with current events. The authors are suspected of having Associated Press machines over their pianos to give them lyrical inspirations, but this is only a rumor and I have not had it confirmed by Dr. Pat.

Some of the new tunes deal with both international and national news, and range from the melodious strains of Earl Bives to the riotous sound of Monty Vony. Such tunes as "Bell Bottom Trousers" and "Girl of My Dreams" are rapidly being placed in the pre-historic category, while the more modern songs are climbing in popularity.

Here now is a preview of coming selections that are expected to be on the turntables soon. A Russian writer, Tommy Malenkov, is putting out a number entitled "I'll be Down to Get You in a Red Hearse, Kruschev." He has made many conversions in his life, the latest two being the "Red Danube" and "There's a New Moon Over the Kremlin." Stalin himself was one of Tommy's personal fans, and especially enjoyed his "Wake the Town and Kill the People." His "Vulgar Boatmen" is still in the number one spot on the Russian Purge Parade, however.

In other sections of the world, the now famous Asian Flu has quivered the pens of many artists with timely inspiration. "Miss Bob Blues" was written by a local patient of the Doyle Inferno as he fruitlessly tried to shake his thermometer down. It has a good beat, but the lyrics are rather sick. "Close the Gates of Hong Kong" is reaching new heights in the far West, while "Let's Go to China Town Babe, I Got the Oriental Pneumonia" is still strong in Northern New York. These numbers are, on the average, losing ground now as the inoculation rate becomes higher.

"Making Whoopee Under a Full Sputnik" is a scientific arrangement of a sentimental theme now being played more and more throughout the states. "Your Batteries Are Weak, But I Still Get Your Signal" is also believed to tie in with the event, but it is still in the hill-billy stage. "Shine On Harvest Sputnik" is in season now, and is sung by the Rock Ettes, which are a new group hailing from Palomar.

To wind up this ridiculous article, and so that I can stop this nothingness for the week, I would like to remind each of you that if you have any snappy tunes buzzing around in your fevered heads, or if you are carrying some terrific lyrics with no music, see the friendly publisher, Mr. C. S. himself, Carl Scheele, who will be more than glad to get your tune on the Hiss Parade.

"THE PC SPIRIT"

For the last three years Presbyterian has not had a winning football team. It is certainly true that coach Frank Jones and his assistants have not had time to solidify their method of play this year. But what happened during the previous two years? Why didn't the potential of the Blue Hose materialize?

To change the subject and sport for a moment, what happened to the highly regarded Presbyterian basketball team of last year? While they won more than they lost, the PC cagemen never quite lived up to their full capabilities with the exception of the Furman game and possibly a few others.

Questions have been asked and they must have an answer, however theoretical the answers might seem to be. The last winning Presbyterian football season was in 1955, the freshman year of the present senior class. On the team that year was a small senior halfback by the name of George Blue. George was not tremendously fast, nor did he have the size to make himself an outstanding football player. However, Blue possessed three intangible qualities: hustle, spirit, and a determined will to win. He fought for every yard, and kept up his desire to win, no matter what the score might be. Needless to say Blue was the captain and the leader of the team.

The '55 and '56 Presbyterian basketball teams established two of the finest records in the annals of a distinguished PC basketball history. On the team during those two years was a 5-foot, 10-inch guard by the name of Bill Toole. Bill was the playmaker on offense, and he was also one of the finest defensive men that Leroy Springs gymnasium has ever seen. The little guard's greatest asset, however, was his ability in sparkplugging and taking charge of the team.

The two men became student body presidents. It is not so important however, as to what these two men were, the thing that is important is the quality that they stood for and exemplified. You might call it true "PC Spirit," the spirit to have the confidence and desire to win, a spirit that present and future Presbyterian football and basketball teams will need in order to have successful, winning seasons. This spirit seems to be sadly lacking these days.

CROSS COUNTRY TEAM

Prebyterian is searching this year for its first good cross country team in many years. Under the leadership of Coach Lonnie McMillian, the Hosemen are trying to rebuild their lost track prestige.

The team's first meet will be held at Furman on October 27, followed by another meet at Furman on November 1. Later on in November the Hosemen will enter the state cross country meet at Furman.

Returning Hosemen, junior Paul Arrington and senior Mike Andrews, should add plenty of strength to the team. Senior Larry Brown, after a year's absence, will return to the cinders for added strength. Along with these capable men will be freshmen Ralph Dunham, Don McMurry, and Dick Shawn. Shawn was an all-round athlete in high school and he should have a promising career ahead of him.

Benson Top Rusher, Waters Head Passer

Tony Benson leads the Presbyterian College football squad in individual rushing with a 4.8 average. Mitch Mavromat is second with 3.9. Bob Waters is ahead in passing, with 14 completed out of 31 attempts for 210 yards; Dusty Mills has completed 13 passes in 25 attempts for a total gainage of 112 yards.

Webb in 58 attempts has piled up 209 yards, and lost 10 yards for a net yardage of 199 and an average of 3.4 yards an attempt. Benson in 47 attempts has gained 230 yards, lost none, and has a net yardage of 230, with an average of 4.8.

Waters in 38 attempts gained 77 yards, lost none, and has a net gainage of 62 for a 1.0 average. Mills has a 1.4 average after gaining 20 yards on 10 attempts and losing 6 for a net of 14 yards. Mitch Mavromat has an average of 3.9, net yardage of 41, while he gained 41 yards on 11 attempts.

For the entire Hose team there is a net yardage of 449, with 37 complete passes in 83 attempts.

Pika's and KA's Lead Football Second Round

The second round of Intramurals is well underway with the Pi Kappa Alphas in the lead with 8 wins and no losses. The KA's follow a close second with a 7-1 record and the Sigs hold down third place with a 5-2 record. There has been a great deal of interest shown in each game and the Intramural committee stated it is hoped that this will continue to be true as the Intramurals move on into the other phases.

Senior Hustler

Mitch Mavromat, four year letterman as halfback of the 1956 Hose gridmen.

Eastern Carolina Game Posted As Parents' Day

The only remaining football game to be played by the Blue Hose in Clinton this season will be the Eastern Carolina game on November 16. This date has officially been declared Parents Day.

The time of the game has been changed from 8:00 P. M. on Saturday to 2:30 P. M. to make it more convenient for the parents. All visitors will be the guests of the college for a meal in Judd Dining Hall on that Saturday. Plans for other activities will be announced later.

Influenza Causes Cancellations; No 1957 Blue Hose Homecoming

• Catawba Defeated By Flu

Catawba officials, by the recommendation of college physicians, called off the scheduled Homecoming game with the Presbyterian Blue Hose. The Indians had been forced to call off last week's and Presbyterian likewise had cancelled its Davidson engagement, but PC had planned to play this Saturday until the decision came from Catawba.

The Presbyterian athletic department tried to arrange a game with another team, but their attempts were unsuccessful.

Influenza sweeping through the football team forced Presbyterian College to postpone its scheduled game against Davidson last Saturday afternoon.

When the decision was made, 35 Blue Hose players had fallen victim to the disease which had caused a seven-day suspension of classes at PC.

President Marshal W. Brown expressed deep regret over having to call off the game which had been set as the highlight of 1957 Homecoming activities at Davidson. He said efforts were being made to try to arrange for the game to be played the week after Thanksgiving, either on Friday or Saturday, December 6 or 7. This proposal has been made to Davidson officials, but their decision is not yet known.

Influenza started picking off members of the Presbyterian squad early in October, shortly after its return from the Tampa game. When the Blue Hose invaded Elon Saturday before last, the outfit was handicapped by illness to eight players. During the week following the Elon game, the flu hit in full force—sidelining 15 by Monday afternoon and 35 just 24 hours later.

Hampered by illness and injury, the Hosemen dropped their fifth game of the season (against one tie), 35-14, at Elon. The Christians presented a big, fast and experienced squad which currently leads the North State Conference with an unblemished record.

The postponement left Davidson College hunting for a Homecoming football opponent. Athletic Director Tom Scott and Head Coach Bill Dole said they would like to play a college which either had a game cancelled because of flu or had an open date. They finally arranged a game with Elon who had had a game cancelled with Catawba because of an influenza outbreak on the latter's campus. Then at the last minute Davidson also was raided by the flu and also had to cancel.

Halfback Mavromat Versatile Hoseman

Mitch Mavromat, halfback from Brunswick, Ga., is the fourth in a series of Seniors to be spothlighted by the Blue Stocking. Mavromat stands 5'-10" and weighs 185 pounds.

While in high school at Gynn Academy, Mitch was a very versatile ball player. He played fullback, halfback, quarterback, and center during his four years at Glynn.

Upon coming to PC Mitch, in his freshman year, played first string halfback until he broke his hand in the fourth game against Davidson. Mitch during his sophomore year continued at halfback but was switched to fullback the next year because of a shortage at that spot. Returning to his old spot at left half, Mitch is doing a creditable job for the Hose.

His play on offense and the capable defensive play that he has shown will be greatly missed next season. Many eyes will be on this hustling letterman for the remainder of this season, and we are sure that he will live up to his capabilities .

CAMPUS COMEDY

"I hope you and the boys won't mind standing during the game, Coach. We sold your seats to some very influential alumni."

Riflemen Attack Davidson; First Match in Conference

The Presbyterian College rifle team fires today in a three-day match at Davidson College, against Davidson and Furman. This is the first match of the season for the Blue Hosemen and the first match held in the Western Carolina Conference this year.

The U. S. Army International Small Bore Rifle Team visited PC on October 22 and 23 and conducted a clinic for the Hose Rifle team. The purpose was to explain their function and to search for future talent. A big percentage of these men were on the United States Army team at the Olympics last year and several of them are national champions. Lt. Puckel and Sgt. Brown, both of whom were here, are perhaps two of the outstanding small bore riflemen in the world.

During the clinic the Army riflemen fired against the Blue Hose rifle team for a total score of 1460 out of a possible 1500 points. The top five men were Lt. Puckel, who fired 296; Lt. Smith, a graduate of the Citadel, who fired against Presbyterian the year before last, with a total of 295; Sgt. Brown, the top prone shooter in the country, fired 290; Lt. Carter fired 290, which is over his normal average; and Lt. Wright fired 288.

Presbyterian fired a total of 1334 which compares favorably with most college competition they are normally concerned with. Golden was high man with 274, Smith was next with 273, and team captain Hunter fired 268.

The outstanding thing about the match, team Coach Sgt. Knight stated, was that two freshmen, Durden and Parrish, were in the top five scorers. Durden fired 261 while Parrish shot a 258.

Gold P Award Given To Ross Templeton

The Alumni Gold P Award for 1957 will go to Ross Templeton of Charlotte, N. C.

Templeton was selected by the Presbyterian alumni board of directors to receive this citation which is presented annually to an alumnus for "outstanding progress and achievement in his chosen profession." He was cited for his accomplishments in the field of selling as Carolinas division manager of the educational division of Field Enterprises, Inc., publishers of World Book. The PC alumnus ranks among the top five managers of the organization's 40 divisions in the United States and Canada.

Templeton, a native of Owings, and member of the class of 1924 at Presbyterian College, has served as division manager of Field Enterprises since 1935. He also is former president of the Charlotte Alumni Chapter.

Classes Suspended Due To Flu Threat

Classes were resumed at Presbyterian College after a week's suspension in order to prevent an epidemic of influenza.

Action came upon the recommendation of the college physician. It followed a large increase in the number of students reporting to the infirmary over the weekend.

A college spokesman pointed out that influenza had not reached epidemic proportions, but classes were suspended to forestall such a possibility and with the interest of all students as a paramount consideration.

Sick students in the infirmary were restricted to the campus. Also members of the football team were restricted here in hopes that the football game at Davidson could be played. All other students were excused from the campus provided transportation to their homes was convenient; otherwise they were allowed to remain.

The faculty will decide next week at their meeting when the classes will be made up.

SCCPA Holds Seminar, Furman University Host

The South Carolina Collegiate Press Association held its first seminar in history, October 19, at the Furman University New Campus. Set up by the Association executive board at its last meeting, the seminar's purpose was to aid colleges and universities in determining the correct method of publishing and editing newspapers and magazines, especially those schools which do not offer a course in journalism as part of their curriculum.

The seminar featured state-renowned journalists as speakers and discussion leaders. Present were: Mrs. Anita Whaley, society editor of the Greenville Piedmont; Gil Rowland, columnist and reporter for the Greenville News; Keith Shelton, editor of the Furman Hornet; Robert L. Thompson, Jr., sports editor of the Hornet; Ed Hale, photographic salesman for the Simpson Photo Service.

Also, Ira L. Baker, head of the Department of Journalism, Furman; Jerry C. Davis, former sports writer for the Wilmington, N. C., newspaper; Robert Morrison, Professor of Journalism at Winthrop; Loyd Jeffers, member of the United Press state bureau; Dr. Alfred Reid, Professor of English at Furman; Bil Bagwell, head of the Furman News Bureau; and Mis Melba Corley, edior of the University of South Carolina Gamecock.

Keith A. Shelton, president of the SCCPA, and editor of the Furman Hornet, officially opened the seminar at 10:00 a. m. and the remainder of the morning featured classes of a more basic nature. The advisors and speakers were treated to lunch by the executive board at a downtown hotel. Board members present besides Shelton were Glenn Robertson ,Wofford, vice-president; Anita Jones, Winthrop, corresponding secretary; Chuck Davidson, The Citadel, recording secretary; and Jackie McDonald, Limestone, treasurer.

Climaxing the afternoon session of classes were the closing remarks of Dyar Massey, Director of Development at Furman, who extended the University's welcome to the SCCPA at any time, and expressed his appreciation of the importance of the Association and its first seminar.

Dent, Thurmond Aide

Editors and the Associated Press Managing Editors Association. He is a gradute of Wofford College and holds AB and MA degrees from that institution.

Dent is a 1951 graduate of Presbyterian College and last spring earned a law degree from George Washington University. He served as an army officer from 1951 to 1953, chiefly in Japan.

In 1954 he worked in Washington as a member of the Columbia State's Washington bureau, and then joined Senator Thurmond's staff in January, 1955.

Dent is married to the former Betty Francis of St. Matthews and they have three children, Harry, Jr., 4, Dolly, 3, and Virginia, 2.

His succession to Mr. McCullough's former position will make Dent one of the youngest Administrative Assistants on Capitol Hill.

McCullough said upon announcement of his resignation, "I've greatly enjoyed my work, and I was pleased to learn the Senator was appointing Harry Dent, with whom I have worked so closely for the past three years, and whom I consider to be the brightest young man of his age it has been my pleasure to know."

Freshman's Letter to Mom

By TOM GOLDEN

The following two letters are typical ones. The only difference is that the first letter reaches home, the second is merely a truthful translation of the first. why does everybody pin propoganda on the Russians?

Dear Mom:

All of the upperclassmen ginned me today. I guess that will tell you what a goof-off I am. At drill this morning, I looked lousy. The Colonel asked me if I'd shined my shoes and brass with a chocolate bar. My squad leader had to single me out of the rest of the company, because I cannot seem to get the hang of the commands, like the hand salute. I don't think I'll ever drill correctly.

I wish I was home. My grumpy nature has me opening the door at the chow hall for the upperclassmen. The upperclassmen have seen to it that I have to do al the unpleasant things that some of the Freshmen have to do.

Don't be a bit surprised at the grades you will receive for the quarter. I didn't study a lick. I think I will get the booby prize for the lousiest grades. The professors gave easy tests, and if I hadn't cheated I would have gotten a zero. I think I will be weeded out. I am playing a lot of cards, along these lines, send ten dollars, because I find it is verry difficult to fill an inside straight. 'Ive got to run some errands for the upperclassmen now.

Phoo, Lance

P.S. Send my eyeshade.

Dear Mom:

All of the upperclassmen have spoken to me, I gues that proves my popularity on campus. At drill this morning, I looked unusually sharp, because the Colonel commented on how shiny my brass was. My squad singled me out of all the rest of the company as the best drilled cadet.

I am getting along fine up here. My shining personality has me opening doors all over campus. The upperclassmen have seen to it that I am not bothered with trifling things that most Freshmen have to do.

Please don't be alarmed at the results of the quarterly grades sent home. Even though I studied hard, the professors gave unfair tests. I didn't do as poorly as most of the Freshmen did, however. I think they are trying to weed out the weaker ones. I am studying a lot. Along these lines, send ten dollars, because I am buying supplementary study books.

I've got to run now.

Love, Lance

Catcher In The Rye

"What did Mr. Thurmer say to you, boy? I understand you had quite a little chat."

"Yes, we did. We really did. I was in his office for around two hours, I guess."

"What'd he say to you?"

"Oh . . . well, about life being a game and all. And how you should play it according to the rules. He was pretty nice about it. I mean he didn't hit the ceiling or anything. He just kept talking about life being a game and all. You know."

"Life is a game, boy. Life is a game that one plays according to the rules."

"Yes, sir. I know it is. I know it."

Game, my . . . Some game. If you get on the side where all the hot-shots are, then it's a game, all right—I'll admit that. But if you get on the other side, where there aren't any hot-shots, then what's a game about it? Nothing. No game."

That is the realistic style J. D. Salinger u s e s in his book, The Catcher in The Rye.

This is one of the most remarkable books published in years. It is the story of sixteen-year-old Holden Caulfield, who wants desperately to find himself, but who goes underground in New York for forty-eight hours when he is overwhelmed by the perplexing circumstances of his life. Read the first page—and you will not be able to stop until you have completed this wild and magic adventure with him.

Clifton Fadiman said of it, ". . . One reads it, hardly k n o w i n g whether to chuckle or cry . . . that rare miracle of fiction has again come to pass: a human being has been created out of ink, paper, and imagination."

PC United Fund Drive Underway SCA Presents Benefit on Friday

• Students To Be Stars of Show

Through the sponsorship of the Student Christian Association, the United Fund Drive is underway on campus. A cup will be awarded to each fraternity which achieves 100% participation and a trophy will be given to the fraternity or sorority which achieves the highest per capita amount of contribution. The winners will be announced and awards made at the performance of a Benefit Show, sponsored by the SCA, performance date to be on Friday, Nov. 15.

It is emphasized that the trophy will be presented to the fraternity or sorority which achieves the highest per capita amount, the amount contributed will be divided by the number of members and pledges. The resulting figure will determine the recipient of the trophy.

Solicitations have already been made among the faculty, administration, and other members of the Presbyterian College working staff. The United Fund Drive on campus has already topped last year's total.

BENEFIT SHOW

Master of ceremonies of the SCA Benefit show will be Cam Summers, top announcer of radio station WLBG in Laurens. Spotlighted will be a Dixieland band comprised of Ebby Mayfield, Oochie Gibson, Mike Furry, Jack Taylor, and "Punch" Roberts.

The Andrews Sisters, featuring Ed Galloway, Dick Carter, Lonnie Love, and Gene Wilson, will also perform, plus individual renditions by Furry on his electric guitar.

Love will also add to the entertainment with a duet, sung with June Adair, and a minstrel act in partnership with Bill Stubbs.

The co-eds will do their part with a rendition of "Poop Oop Ee Doo," Harold Gallimore will sing, and the "Girls of Vetville" will perform.

John Summers and Lyman Harris plan to present several skits, one of which they presented to the Wofford student body when the Blue Key had its program there. Mrs. Hammet and Dr. Gray will "Charleston" at the Benefit, and Harvey Wittschen will play some "Boogie Woogie' on the piano.

The 'Three Faces in the Crowd," Laddie Jones, Ronald Wright, and "Country" Hughes will entertain the lovers of country music.

Six Wheels Secured for REW; The Remainder to be Laymen

Six big-name men have been secured as speakers for the revised Religious Emphasis Week, which calls for the dismissal of classes for two days. They are William McLeod Frampton, Eugene T. Wilson, John F. Anderson, Al Payne, Dr. Cunningham, and Richard Hoefler, all ministers. The remainder of the speakers are to be laymen.

Rev. William McLeod Frampton is minister of the Central Presbyterian Church in Anderson and national Knight Commander of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Rev. Eugene T. Wilson of Atlanta is minister of the Peachtree Road Presbyterian Church.

Dr. John F. Anderson, who is moderator of his synod, is minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Dallas.

Rev. Al Payne, a YMCA secretary who specializes in discussions of this type, will come to the PC Religious Emphasis Week from Atlanta.

Professor Richard Hoefler is a professor of arts at the Lutheran Seminary in Columbia.

The SCA Cabinet stated that Dr. Cunningham, who is an outstanding Baptist layman and retired professor of philosophy at Cornell University, is being contacted. A search is being conducted for other outstanding laymen; there will be a total of ten speakers.

SCA president, Bill Yearick, stated, "The SCA expresses a hopeful desire that everyone will take an interest in the new program. The idea of the new plan has been formulated from the desire that religion is taking a new trend along with everything else and instead of forcing the week's activity on the student, the topics will be presented and offered."

The new idea calls for dismissal of classes on March 12 and 13; the only classes that will be held is Drill. Fraternity competition for the Religious Emphasis Week trophy will still be in effect.

Survey Reveals PC Students Very Unusual Collegiate Group

By BRITT SPANN

Most Popular Careers Business and Ministry

The 520 students at Presbyterian College are a most diversified group. This is especially apparent in their choice of an occupation, for this student body has an eye on 25 different professions.

Business and the Ministry lead the list as the most popular careers among students. This is in keeping with a trend shown in PC men for these fields for the past several years.

Medicine and teaching follow the two leaders.

A total of 107 or 21 per cent of the group plan to enter the various fields of business. The ministry has 57 candidates or 11 per cent.

There are 49 prospective teachers, or 9.5 per cent and 31 who plan to enter medicine. There are 23 who plan to do some teaching in connection with planned coaching careers.

As always, there is a large group of students who are yet to make the decision as to their life's work.

Among the other careers toward which Presbyterian College students are preparing for are:

Engineering, 10; law, 15; chemistry, 11; social work, 8; Journalism, Aviation, Agriculture, Veterinary, and Government work.

Only Five Non-Church Members on Campus

In a religious survey taken this week at Presbyterian College, only five non-church members w e r e found. Of the 520 students at PC, 515 are church members.

A fraction over 99 per cent of the student body is church affiliated. Of this total 475 or 92% are members of the three largest denominational groups, Presbyterian, Methodist, and Baptist.

A total of 285 students are Presbyterians. The Baptists are second high with 135, followed by the Methodists with 55. The remaining 40 are scattered through 12 denominations.

The total breakdown by denominations is Presbyterian, 285; Baptist, 135; Methodist, 55; Episcopal, 15; Catholic, 6; Lutheran, 6; Christian, 5; Church of Christ, 2; and Reformed, Reorganized, Latter Day Saints, Greek Orthodox, Pentecostal Holiness, Pentecostal, Assembly of God, and United Brethren, one each.

Freshman Cabinet Selected By Sr. SCA

The Freshman Student Christian Association Cabinet was c h o s e n Tuesday night in elections held held within the Senior Cabinet of the SCA. Ten freshmen were chosen to serve in this capacity.

These included Bill Betchman of Summerton; Billy Piephoff of College Park, Ga.; Jim Eason of Clinton; Rohe Eshbaugh of Louisville, Ky.; Gay Maddox of Spartanburg; Bill Wilkes of Aiken; Tom Collins of Pageland; Pat Kelly of Raeford, N. C.; Harrison Clayton of Marieta, Ga.; and Sonny Bell of Macon, Ga.

At the same time, Sonny Embry, a junior from Birmingham, Ala., was chosen to advise the group. The newly formed cabinet is slated to meet early next week to initiate plans for the year.

Projects for the year include the publication of a Student Directory, the annual Christmas banquet and aiding the senior cabinet in other campus-wide projects such as the Religious Emphasis Week.

English Professor O. R. Bush Publishes Book on Whitman

By SONNY EMBRY

The Paul Brand Publishing House of Bussum, The Netherlands, last week announced the publication of a new collection of Walt Whitman's works. The volume, dealing with the Civil War writings of Whitman, is edited by Mr. O. R. Bush, of Presbyterian's English Department. Entitled "OVER THE CARNAGE ROSE PROPHETIC A VOICE," and sub-titled "The American Civil War in Prose and Verse," the book views Whitman in the light of a figure of World Literature. Mr. Bush has skilfully collected this material and organized it into a unified text reflecting not only the chronology of the war, but also the growth of Whitman's personal philosophy from the mere chauvinistic desire for a Northern victory to a rational understanding of the total meaning of war in suffering and death for both the North and the South.

The cover, done by a Dutch friend of Mr. Bush, is in a striking abstract pattern, making use of red (representing the blood of the war period) and black (representing the conflict of the times).

Mr. Bush edited the book while he was abroad, studying, during the last two years. A graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, where he received his AB and Litt. degrees, he has done graduate work at New York University, Pensylvania State University, Indiana University, and the Shakespeare Institute of the University of Birmingham, Stratford-upon-Avon, England. In 1955, he received the honor of being nominated a United States Fulbright Grantee to teach English in The Netherlands.

Prior to coming to PC, he was a member of the University of Maryland's Overseas Program providing college level work at American military bases in the European Theater. Part of the editing of this "war works" volume was done

Parents Day Saturday;

A special Parents Day program is being planned at Presbyterian College for November 16, President Marshall W. Brown has announced.

He said the parents and other members of the immediate families of students now attending PC have been invited to be the guests of the college for luncheon in the dining hall and for the Presbyterian-East Carolina football game scheduled for that afternoon at 2:30 p. m. The game originally had been slated for a night engagement, but the time was changed as a convenience for parents attending.

Dr. Brown said a special program is being planned for the occasion.

Freshmen Fail

A group of around seventy-five freshmen presented Dr. Brown a petition from the student body to the effect that classes should be suspended on Saturday, so that those who wished could attend the Presbyterian-Citadel game in Charleston.

Dr. Brown was unable to grant the request due to the fact that a week's classes were suspended earlier due to an influenza epidemic in South Carolina.

4-H Award Given To PC's Evin Varner

Evin Varner, freshman at Presbyterian College, and formerly an active member of the Marlboro County 4-H Club Council, received two state awards at the state 4-H achievement assembly held Friday and Saturday in Columbia. The awards were presented at the achievement banquet at the Jefferson Hotel.

Evin received a $50 Savings Bond for achievement in Community Relations and a 4-H pen and pencil set for outstanding work in Forestry. His records will be sent to Chicago for judging for eligibility to the National 4-H convention December 1-5. Evin was accompanied to Columbia by Miss Louise Heriot, Marlboro County Home Demonstration Agent.

In addition to these awards, Varner was gvien a lifetime membership in the State Mechanical and Acricultural Society from this congressional district, which means lifetime admission to the State Fair.

Russia's Sputniks Shake Complacency; Americans Have Horse, But No Saddle

By ROGER GODWIN

Irwin R. Levine, an NBC News Correspondent, in a recent interview with Britishers in a London pub, was asked this very disturbing question. "How does it feel to be a citizen of the number two country of the world now?" This points up the attitude of the people of the world and of the United States in particular, since the Russians launched the now famous Sputnik. People in Washington, D. C., people in the south, people in the north, people in the west, in fact, people everywhere are asking why. Why didn't the United States, that has always been there "firstest with the mostest," launch a satellite first? For those who should be the ones to answer, this has created an embarrassing situation.

It is reported in Washington that the Army has had a satelhite project underway for some time, and that actual satellites have already been built. These are of such a nature that they could have already been launched. But the project was curtailed, and has not been carried out, due to politics, budgets and competition between the branches of the Armed Forces. The disagreement was between the Army, who had the Satellite, and the Navy, who had a missile that could have been used to launch the satellite. The Navy, however, didn't want their missile to be used for this purpose, and as a result the United States has yet to launch a Satellite.

The Democrats would lay the blame to the Administration's defense cutbacks to save the taxpayers money and thereby get votes. But their stand could be laid to the fact that the Administration is Republican. Also, the people always want lower taxes, so the blame could hardly be laid to either political party.

The people of the United States have always prided themselves on being the Number One Nation of the world, in most all fields, especially that of scientific progress and development. We have felt this to the point of being condescending toward the other nations of the world, and at times even find ourselves looking down our noses at them. With the launching of Russia's Sputnik, it has been brought to the forefront in the thinking of the Amercian people that perhaps the United States is lagging behind in some fields of endeavor.

The United States has been shaken out of its complacency. It is entirely possible that Russia's launching of the Sputniks will be one of the best things to happen to the United States in years.

Did you see THAT formal!!

Optimistic Outlook!!!

The outlook for Presbyterian College is becoming more optimistic. The entire institution, student-wise, and terrain-wise seems to be improving.

The Student Christian Association is showing a new spark of life in its operations. A lot of hard work is presently going into a Benefit Show to be presented by talent from the student body; the proceeds to be contributed to the United Fund under the name of Presbyterian College. After this affair the Cabinet will be working on a Christmas Dinner in Judd Dining Hall and the annual Christmas party. Also, plans for Religious Emphasis Week are coming along smartly; fine speakers have been contacted thus far, one of which—Dr. Jim Anderson—is coming all the way from Dallas, Texas.

There has been a sifting and shifting of professors in the last few years. Scholastic standards have been raised. Both of these should tend to give us a better crop of teachers and students, and more recognition.

The campus facilities are in much better condition this year than they have been in the past, and they are showing promising signs of more improvement in the future. Everyone knows about the new buildings and that they will definitely be an asset, because so much publicity has been released on them already, Russia probably has us on their list as the number one institution to be bombed. Along with the annual planting of shrubs, many surprisingly good improvements have been made in the classrooms and dorms.

Soon the campus will be bustling with buildings; we'll have a new Student Union Building and a Chapel by 1959 and Neville Hall ought to be good for at least another year.

We can pat ourselves on the back, but unless more people show interest and those who are already hard at work continue their efforts, the SCA plans will wither away, the good professors will leave, and top quality students will go to Davidson.

Strange Things Are Happening

By JOHN SUMMERS

The papers are filled with Sputniks, Mutniks, Intercontinental Ballistics Missiles, trips to the moon Mars, and Venus. Think this is something? Well, here's something else now that with even the thought, it throws us in a new idea of life.

Space ships always are good for a well supported cynical laugh. Men from Mars, the talk of the galaxies beings, and the like are known to creep out of the minds of those who are referred to as having loose bolts, or marble substitution of the brain cells. This is both acceptable and understandable.

Possibilities and probabilities are as far apart as the walls of the Grand Canyon, yet there is a connection that is evident. With all the modern scientific accomplishments occurring all over the world, it is no longer possible to look at Buck Rogers as being only in the funny papers. Secondly, we must realize that we are not the only planet capable of supporting life as we know it on our own solar system, not to even mention the thousands of similar solar sytems in the galaxies, it would be very narrow-minded to say it is impossible that others could exist. As we are by nature egotistical, we like to say we are unique, and that we are the only intelligent beings in the entire universe. When it is looked at in this light, it becomes almost absurd to say it is even impossible.

Viewing it with a mind that is open and imaginative, let's take a look at a few reports from the Associated Press: "Air Force specialists report still no result as they investigate claims from widely scattered sections of the country that strange objects have been sighted. The latest report comes from a Coast Guard cutter in the Gulf of Mexico about 200 miles south of Louisiana. The Cutter "Sebago" radioed that it had a three-second glimpse this morning of an object resembling a brilliant plane with a high rate of speed. The Cutter's message said the object was tracked on a radar screen on an off for 27 minutes.

"Most of the reports, which have been coming in since Sunday, claim sightings near secret military installations in the southwest.

"Marine Major Donald Keyhoe of the National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena adds, however, that the reported objects may be something from another planet. Assuming they are real, he explains, they would be either secret weapons made on earth or interplanetary objects. Keyhoe figures that any nation with the secret would by now have abandoned conventional aircraft or missiles. Therefore, he says, it looks as though they are interplanetary.

"Some of the citizens, Peace Officers, and servicemen who reported sighting mystery objects in the southwest said the objects stalled auto engines and caused radios to fade. One report described a brilliant colored egg-shaped object which flitted erratically across the countryside that left a sort of heat wave in its wake.

"South Carolinians are seeing strange objects in the skies since reports of brilliant, hovering lights have been seen in Texas and New Mexico. Two fishermen near McColl said they saw a dark object about the size of an automobile hovering over a pond last Wednesday night. Frank Fenwick, of Greenville, reportedly saw what resembled a rocket and trailed black smoke and flame. In the Charleston area, Mr. and Mrs. Harlston Adams say they saw a mysterious object in the sky about 4:00 a. m. Mrs. Adams described the object—reddish in color, but not flaming—as a huge football with antennas. The latest comes from Augusta, where a number of people reported seeing a strange object in the sky tonight.

Sure people are nuts. But are they all nuts at the same period, and in many different places? It's possible. Could there really be spaceships from other plants? It's possible. Will we ourselves be in spaceships in the very near future? It's possible. If we are capable of traveling to Mars, and Russia is now planning such a voyage—as they say—then why is it so difficult to conveive of others coming here.

Major Keyhoe, who is with the National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena, has written several books on the possibility of the many reports of Unidentified Flying Objects, and believes that Music . . .

Stan Kenton's Best

If you're looking for something entirely different, something that makes you want to get up and either leave the room, or smash the nearest ash tray; then it's one of Capitol records' new releases.

Stan Kenton, one of America's favorite jazz artists, combines his musical talent with a talented composer to come up with something that is nothing short of strange and inviting both at the same time. Robert Graettinger, a native of Ontario, California, is the composer of the album.

The name? Well, it's City of Glass and This Modern World.

The author has this to say, either as an apology or as an explanation. "The way I hear music is in a series of constantly changing tensions. What I hear isn't individual melodies or harmonies, but something more like abstract shapes in motion-physical things passing through time."

"The music of City of Glass is primarily abstract and non-objective, but it has vivid visual associations for me. The composition as a whole suggests, I feel, a city in which the structures are shapes of musical sound, transparent and in constant motion, so that through one can be seen the outlines of others—a city of moving glass-like edifices."

That's what Graettinger has to say about it, and he ought to know. He was the one who had the headache, not me.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter met this past Tuesday night for its regular session. Plans were discussed for forthcoming events. There is a Chapter Newspaper in the "making" for the use of the alumni.

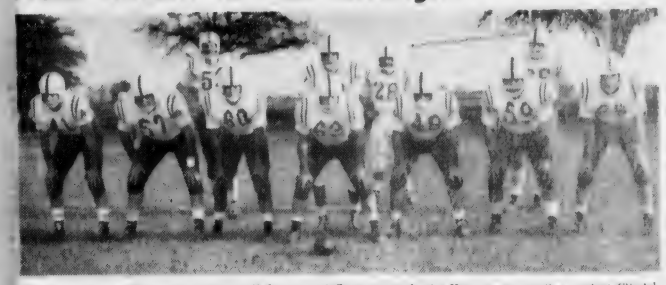
PI KAPPA ALPHA

The Brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha extended congratulations and welcome to Bobby Brown, John Firby, Ted Leahy, Rutledge Durant, Carl Latham, Bob Stratton, Ken Caswell, Cliff Stovall, Earl Miles, Butch Woodward, and Don Scargest who were initiated into the Brotherhood this week.

The Brothers also extended congratulations to Brother John Knox upon his being accepted at the Bowman-Gray School of Medicine.

SIGMA NU

The Brotherhood of Sigma Nu welcomed Warren Rollins, Joe Hardin, Sammy Tate, Larry Brown, and Herman Jackson as new initiates into the Brotherhood on Tuesday night.



Plans were discussed for the coming Open Social and the installation of a Hi-Fi in the Lodge.

THETA CHI

Beta Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity met Tuesday night and made plans for a social which is to be the weekend of November 23. Future plans were also discussed for the Rebel Reunion which is to be held in the early Spring.

Congratulations were extended by the brothers to Brother Bain in pinning Miss Shirley Thomas.

Hose Return to Full Strength

Bulldogs Host to Winless Hose; PC Resumes Action After Layoff

• Rivalry High for Annual Clash With The Citadel

Presbyterian, after missing consecutive games with Davidson and Catawba due to the flu, will resume its interrupted schedule Saturday. The Blue Hose will make their annual journey to the historic city by the sea, Charleston, in order to play the extremely dangerous Citadel Cadets. Beautiful Johnson Hagood Stadium, with the Ashley River in the background, provides the site of combat.

Coach Eddie Teague of the Citadel says that he expects Presbyterian to be tough, with two of the best backs that he will face this year in the persons of Ken Webb and Tony Benson. It is hoped that Coach Teague's prediction will come true. The Hose will have to show an improvement over their previous games if they are to pull an upset or make a good impression against the Citadel. The Hose record thus far this year is an unenviable 0 wins, 5 losses, and one tie. Perhaps the two week layoff will provide a remedy for the Blue Hose, and they may come back to improve upon their dismal record thus far.

If past records are any indication, the game Saturday should prove to be an exciting contest. For the last three years, the winning team has never won by a larger margin than one touchdown. In 1954 PC edged out the Citadel 20 to 19, on Ken Webb's last minute 65-yard punt return. The following year the Cadets returned the one-point margin favor by defeating the Hose 14 to 13. Last year the Citadel again won by the score of 20 to 13. In the latter two games PC completely outgained the military men in the statistics department.

At the halfway mark the Presbyterian record is hardly encouraging. The Hose have lost to arch rival Wofford; Clemson demolished them, Elon and Tampa beat them by four touchdowns, and Appalachian won out in the season opener. The only bright spot was a 0 to 0 tie with favored Lenoir-Rhyne.

A win or even a good impression would help the Blue Hose tremendously at this stage of the season. PC should be in pretty good shape, physically, and they might give the Cadets a tougher game than anyone has expected. Ken Webb has wreaked havoc on the Citadel line for the past three years, and he may break loose again Saturday. If the Hose can find themselves, they may verify Coach Teague's statement and prove themselves to be very tough.

Junior Varsity on the Road Go After Middle Georgians

The Presbyterian junior varsity will make a trip to Georgia Thursday to play Middle Georgia College. This is the second game for the young Hosemen, as they lost earlier in the season to a strong Georgia Military Academy. There are also two more games remaining on the JV's schedule.

Pat Malone, a diminutive quarterback from Atlanta, Ga., and Alex Dubose, hard-running halfback from Oswego, should provide the spark in the backfield. Expected to be strong in the line are end Steve Wilson, of Baton Rouge, La., and guard Ken Mix, of Atlanta, Ga. The game should prove to be invaluable for the JV's as far as experince is concerned. With a 0 win and 1 loss record, the PC junior varsity will be out to even up their season's record.

There is no fixed date as of yet for the rescheduling of the PC-Davidson and Catawba games.

Webb Put at Halfback Nichols Made Fullback

Now the route ahead will be played with a reshuffled lineup. Biggest move has been the shifting of bulldozing Ken Webb to the halfback spot where he has starred in previous years. He'll continue to handle some fullback duties, but most of his action hereafter is expected to be at left half—with his fellow Decatur, Ga., companion, Jimmy Nichols, moving into the number one fullback slot.

PC Defeats Davidson, Falls to F. Hurricanes

In a recent rifle match, Presbyterian defeated a strong Davidson squad but fell at the hands of powerful Furman. Held at Davidson, the triangular meet featured expert marksmanship on the part of all three teams. The final score indicated Furman victors by downing the Hose riflemen by 14 points with the final tabulation reading Furman 1342, Presbyterian 1328, Davidson finished with 1281.

An indication to the powerful squad that Furman has this year lies in the fact that their top three marksmen were out of competition fighting a case of flu.

PC looks forward to a good year as revealed by Sgt. James Knight, coach of the team. Even through the loss of key personnel from last year's squad via graduation, Knight stated that chances for attaining a winning season are good. The team will compete in several mail matches with intrastate competition as well as fire against some of the top squads in the southeast. Other important matches include firing in the Third Army Division Tournament to determine the best team in this district. This is a tournament in which PC has always shown creditably in the past.

High man for the Hose at the Davidson match was Matthew Smith with 279. He was followed by Toby Hunter and Tom Golden with 269 and 264, respectively. Completing the Hose scoring was Desi Durden with 261 and Charlie Murphy with 254.

Intramural Football Terminates; Rifle Matches Scheduled Next

Firing Begins Soon

The Intramural rifle matches will soon commence. This announcement, made by Charles Prickett, chairman of the intramural committee, was revealed after a meeting with Sgt. James Knight who is in charge of all rifle and marksmanship activities carried on at the college. The competition will be run as designed by official marksmanship rules and regulations.

Prickett went on to state that the matches will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays starting at 2:00 p. m. Any team wishing to practice before their match must report to the rifle range at 1:00 p. m. Two teams will fire each day but they will not fire against each other as competition. The winner of the over-all competition will be determined by the team that turns in the highest team score. Three places will be awarded to the teams that finish with the three high scores.

The matches wil consist of shooting from three positions: prone, kneeling, and standing with each position allowing a total of 10 rounds.

Anyone who has ever fired on the rifle team in previous years for intercollegiate competition is automatically ineligible for the intramural matches.

Pika's Lead Football

Intramural football has been moving very slowly this week. On Monday, the Pika's won 7-0 by forfeit from the Pi Kappa Phi. The KA's were one step behind the Pika's when they took one from the Sigma Nu 12-7. The Alpha Sigma Phi's won 7-0 from the All-Stars by a forfeit. There were three others scheduled this week, but there seems to be a lack of interest in the games; consequently, they were cancelled.

The Pika's are still on top with a nine wins and no loss record. The KA's are right behind with eight wins and one loss.

It's been said that the atomic submarine "Nautilus" stays submerged so long that it only surfaces to let the crew re-enlist.

Perhaps for this reason, the Navy has taken valuable space aboard the "Nautilus" for the only soft-drink vending machine in the entire submarine fleet.

Naturally (or you wouldn't hear about it from us) it's a Coca-Cola machine. And not unexpectedly, re-enlistments are quite respectable.

(Editor's Note: The following is a poll that was taken among Presbyterian College students in the fall of 1956. Next week, we will take a poll, and you will be able to judge for yourself if the opinions have changed now that there is a crisis. With that we will conclude the matter as far as the Blue Stocking is concerned.)

WHAT CAN THE COLLEGE STUDENT DO TO HELP DETERMINE THE "RACIAL ISSUE."

JERRY FINLEY, President SCA, Seneca—" I think that we as students of a Christian institution should intelligently discuss and analyze the problem before we form any kind of an opinion. We should keep our minds open and be ready to hear both sides of the question. We have representatives in the state and national government that are there to serve us and we have every right to call upon them, and if we should call upon statesmen, they would listen more to an organized movement of sound-thinking college men than to some unmanageable mob recklessly voicing their opinions without second thoughts."

JIM HANCOCK, President Student Council, Rock Hill—"The most important thing we can do is to learn the facts about the situation, and try to spread them so that more people will act on sound judgment, rather than on unfounded myths and heresy. Furthermore, it is high time that everyone realizes the basic equality of all men in the sight of God and act accordingly."

JOHN THAMES, CECIL GEDDINGS, RAY HODGE, Clarendon county—"With the Governor's power to declare Marshal Law, resistance against mixing seems futile, as was, and is being, shown in other states We, who are living right in the midst of the actual situation, feel that the original issue, which was "equal facilities" for both races, is, and has been, taken care of. Our feelings are that the situation requires living in, and actually studying the situation to the utmost, and if this is done it seems as though a possible, peaceful compromise can be developed."

DR. SEVENSON, English Dept.—"We should not let any extremist persuade us in our thinking. We all have our own free thoughts. However, we must not let ourselves believe that this issue can be settled by force. It must be realized that this situation will work itslef out, but only in time."

PROFESSOR HAY, Bible Dept.—"To say that one should show love for his followman seems trite. We really dont' know what love really is. I am speaking of the true meaning of the word. The opposite of love in the New Testament is selfishness, and not hate."

BILL BOWMAN, RON ISGER, Pennsylvania—"We don't think there is a great deal the college student can do right now in this present situation."

JOE NEGLEY, Pennsylvania—"I think we should coopeerate to the fullest with those who know the situation best."

DR BROWN, President of PC—"Fortunately, we have had very little problems in this immediate area as to the relationship between the Negro and the white, and it has been this way for some time. The question between the relationship of the White and Negro is an important national problem, and is likely to become increasingly difficult. Violence is most likely to develop where careful study has not been given to the problem. As for my personal opinion, I feel the college student can most contribute to the issue by avoiding intense partisanship, and by giving careful, considerate study to the factual elements which are causing present tension."

KEN CASWELL, Kentucky—"Desegregation of school systems is something that will become a uniform reality everywhere in future years. Our main trouble has come from the fact that we are trying to push it too fast. We have tried to do in two or three years what has not been done in a hundred years. Integration is something that will require many years to be worked out satisfactorily. I can see no direct action that we as college students can take toward the enrollment of the Negro students on our schools for we, as mere studnts, do not have the power to submit or reject colored students. However, we can voice our opinions to the administration and let them know how we will react to the admission of colored students in case any action of accepting a negro student is tried."

TOMMY REEVES, Battalion Commander, Denmark—"First of all is is a necessity that all of the prejudice which many of us have inherited from our Southern ancestry be eliminated and replaced with diligent study and coisideration of the matter. Always attempting to follow the Christian principles, but yet, being practical enough to avoid any hasty decision which could possibly set back the education of both races many years."

Jet Pilot!

"Ground control to Blue Leader- attract his attention, but do not, repeat, do not fire on the plane!!

This is a sample of the thrilling dinlogue from Hollywood's Supersonic thriller—'Jet Pilot.' ZZZ ZMMMMMM.

The plot, which is the weakest, repeat, weakest point of the movie concerns an American Air Force Colonel in the person of John Wayne, and a Russian Lieutenant who just happens to be a beautiful blonde in the person of Janet Leigh. She lands her Russian Jet at an American Air Base, from whence the two embark on some really remarkable escapades, including trips to scenic vacation spots in the U. S., and a trip to Siberia.

The movie is concluded in typical Hollywood style—boy gets girl and everyone lives happily ever after disregarding the fact that the beautiful Russian pilot is also a beautiful Russian spy, with enough charges against her to send her up the river for 99 years.

Actually, the only good thing about the movie was the fine photography of U. S. jet planes and the beautiful Janet Leigh in formation.

The Little Things

A book of short stories that a man can enjoy is quite a rarity. "The Little Things" by Joseph Salzburg is a member of that minority group.

Salzburg is the most decorated man of the Korean War. Among his citations are the Purple Heart and the Medal of Freedom.

Mr. Salzburg says that "The great events in life are only the little things, magnified and combined." He adds that these stories are products of his own experience.

Mr. Salzburg has had some interesting experiences.

The characters range from the lonely, the loved and unloved, novice soldiers, intellectuals, show girls, the sex pervert and the insane, the man in search of his youth, and the ball player who never quite makes it. Each becomes very real through Mr. Salzburg's pen.

The place: on fields of battle and in sport, in lovely hotel rooms, in coal mine towns, and the streets of big cities.

In view of those characters and thosep laces, we repeat: Mr. Salzburg has had some interesting experiences.

What it Were, Were Football

By "DEACON ANDY" GOLDEN

It were last October, I believe it were, that a few of the local orientals decided to hold a Shinto revival off at this college town. When we are arriving, I are deciding to pacify my hunger, like leeche nut pacify hog. Ah so! I see a small sandwich stand. I are ordering a small bowl of bird nest soup, with order of chocolate-dipped dill pickle.

When I are getting ready to eating this delicious meal, this group of people are swarming around me, like boy scouts are swarming around Marilyn Monroe. I are forced to move along in the direction of this large place. At a certain place, this rather unhealthy-looking, beady-eyed boy are yelling, "Tickets please." I are telling him to go eat fortune cookie.

I are sitting down in seat, and noticing a small group of girls who are jumping in air, like locust with hot foot. The girl who are leading the rest, make Jane Mansfield look like underfed boy. Then I notice large hole cut in ground. Some escaped convicts got onto field. Some men, wearing space suits are going out to convicts but when they come up close, they shake hands, they were ones who helped them escape.

My attention come again to the cheerleaders all of them are roverly, simply roverly. All people start to yel! I think they have caught the convicts. No, the men wearing the space suits are playing a game, roughly like stoop tag and wrestling. At this time, the man sitting beside me says, "Buddy are having a drink." I are telling him that I would have double shot of saki over rocks. My attention again turns to cheerleaders.

I are noticing a tug at my shoulder. The ugly fellow are saying, 'Sweets, you will have to leave." I bow and leave. I do not know what those men were doing, but I have made a study on it. They were playing either marbles or hopscotch, maybe it was polo or golf, maybe tennis. Oh, foo! I not know, these crazy yankees, no wonder we lose the war, BANZAI!

these UFO's are from other planets. He lists case after case where reliable people have observed these strange phenomena, and where they have made official reports as to their speed, size, shape, and color. The Air Force committee that investigates these reports now has a form to be filled out. It takes in many details and is several pages long. By this it appears that the Air Force has taken the matter of the "impossible" Flying Saucers pretty seriously. Major Keyhoe concludes one of the books with an official Air Force release stating in effect that if the reports were accurate, and there was no reason to believe otherwise, that the only explanation for the UFO's would be that of beings other than humans in or controlling these objects.

Many things have been kept under big hats to avoid panic and unnecessary alarm. I say unnecessary alarm, because in all of the hundreds of sightings, no sign of hostility has been reported.

Like everyone else, the probability of such craft's existence is very obscure in my mind. On the other hand, I believe there is a distinct possibility involved.

Anyone like to take a trip to Canal Street in Mars? They have some real gone trombone players that are just out of this world.

within yards of the runway and amid the thunderous roar of jets at an American air base on the edge of the great North African desert.

The book should be available on the campus shortly, Mr. Bush stated in an interview. The volume, he stated, could be used as a text in college English courses. It could be used as a reading text in teaching English in foreign countries.

SCA Presents United Fund Variety Bit

• Hampton Avenue School Auditorium

The PC Variety Show will be presented at the Hampton Avenue School tonight at 8:00 on behalf of the United Fund Campaign of Presbyterian College and the Greater Clinton area. The production will be under the sponsorship of the Student Christian Association of Presbyterian College.

Master of Ceremonies will be Cam Summers, top announcer of radio station WLBG in Laurens. The program will feature PC student and faculty members in a variety of minstrel routines, skits, song and dance acts, comedy, and pantomine.

Getting the program underway will be the music of a Dixieland band. This will be followed by Lonnie Love and June Adair doing a vocal arrangement of "Moonlight Bay." Next on the program will be the guitar music of Mike Furry. Following Mike will be Harvey Wittchen with a "Boogie-Woogie" rendition on the piano.

Lyman Harris and John Summers will be featured with a comedy routine. They will be assisted in this act by a "Robot." Following will be a dance rendition of the "Charleston." Rose Moore Nettles will be next on the program singing "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me." Bob Pinkston and Tom Golden are slated to be stage hands.

PC's professor, Dr. Gray, is featured next with a number on the violin. Following Dr. Gray will be the "Hill Billies" doing some "Country Style" music. Mr. Powell is next doing a pantomine act entitled the "Drunken Cook." The grand finale will be the combined efforts of the "Quartet" and the "Dixieland Band."

Concluding the program will be Mr. Powell's report on the success of the campaign and the awarding of the trophies and cups. A cup will be awarded to each fraternity which achieves 100% participation and a trophy will be awarded to the fraternity or sorority which achieves the highest per capita amount of contribution.

The United Fund Drive has been underway on the campus for the past three weeks in conjunction with the Clinton drive. The PC Variety Show will be the climax of the campaign.

Parents Day Program Scheduled for Saturday

Presbyterian College will stage its first annual Parents Day this Saturday, and a large crowd is expected to attend the occasion.

A special program is planned for the visiting parents, with the Presbyterian-East Carolina football game that afternoon as the highlight.

Registration is set for 11:30 a. m. in the library building, to be followed by tours of the campus. President Marshall W. Brown and Student Body President John Knox of Decatur, Ga., will welcome the visitors to PC in a 12:30 p. m. gathering in the auditorium. Musical selections by the double quartet of the PC Robed Choir also are scheduled for this time .

The parents are invited to be guests of the college at a barbecue dinner at 1:00 p. m. and at a football game scheduled to follow on Johnson Field at 2:30 p. m. After the game, the various social fraternities will entertain with drop-ins in their quarters.

Among the student groups assisting in the program are Alpha Psi Delta sorority, registration; Blue Key leadership fraternity and the Student Christian Association, campus tours.

President Brown said he is pleased with the response shown to the Parents Day program which Presbyterian College is inaugurating this year. Advance reservations have more than exceeded expectations.

Students whose parents are planning to attend are requested to meet their families in the library at registration, if they are not attending classes, and to show them over the campus in informal tours. Plans also call for these students to attend dinner with their parents and to sit with them in the special midfield section reserved in the north stands during the game.

Five minutes will be cut from each class so that all classes will be over by 12:10 p. m. Saturday. Students whose parents are not attending will be served dinner earlier than usual, beginning at 11:30 a. m.

Committee Chairmen Chosen By IRC Exec

New members of the International Relations Club have been sworn in and chairmen of the various committees have been chosen for the coming yar.

Committee chairmen as selected by IRC executives are as follows: Programs—Pat Wilson; Publicity—Billy Hatchett; International Relations Week—O. H. Embry; Finances—Jim McLauchlin; Correspondence — Tony Gavalas; Executive Committee — John Childers; and Sergeant-at-Arms—Charles Watts.

The program committee stated that there will be a meeting within the next few weeks, at which time a panel of PC professors will discuss missiles and satellites.

SCA Freshmen Cabinet Elect Their Officers

At their first meeting the Freshman SCA cabinet Monday night elelcted officers to lead them during the school year.

Elected to the office of President was Billy Betchman of Summerton. The newly elected Vice-President is Tom Collins of Pageland; and the Secretary-Treasurer is Miss Gay Maddox of Spartanburg.

The group has already jumped in on plans for the year, their first project being the annual Christmas supper, followed by the SCA party for the student body.

Thanksgiving Holidays

PC students will respond to the call of the turkey gobbler on Wednesday, November 27.

Thanksgiving holidays are scheduled to start at 6:00 p. m. on that date. They'll extend through Sunday, December 1.

Science Department Rising; Many Improvements Needed

By SONNY EMBRY

Next week President Eisenhower will make a series of talks to the people of the nation. Scheduled in this list of talks is the very pertinent subject of scientific education for the younger generations. While no one as yet knows what new policy will be established along these lines, it is thought that some system will be suggested whereby promising students will have science scholarships made available to them.

Since PC is not an engineering school, or a well-known scientific school the advent of such a system will not greatly affect us. Great steps have, however, been made along these lines at Presbyterian during the last decade. All of the science laboratories have been improved, especially the Biology lab which has been enlarged and completely rebuilt, and the all-new organic chemistry lab. More and more equipment has been added each year, until now most of the labs are in very satisfactory shape. Of course, each professor has in mind some new equipment that he feels that he could use advantageously if his budget could afford it, and with enrollment going up in the science field, much of this may be added in future years.

The largest single gain in science at PC is the enlargement of our chemistry department. With the doubling of the staff, improvement of facilities, and additions to the curriculum this department is now coming into its own, and will lure more science students to PC.

Largest in the science field is the Pre-Medical interest. One of the main needs, however, is for more students in advanced science.

In an interview for the Blue Stocking, Dr. Neil Whitelaw, Professor of Physcis, stated that the largest single misconception of present students is that to major in science requires a high IQ. The main quality needed is perseverance and the ability to concentrate.

One problem that needs badly to be corrected is the high school science programs. Particularly concerned is preparing students with a solid mathematical background. Needed also are more teachers and better equipment. Dr. Whitelaw quoted Nobel Prize winner Dr. I. I. Rabi as stating that students should have a high school math background solid enough that all colleges could base science scholarships on a test of math achievements in algebra and trigonometry. The student should then enter into analytical geometry and calculus. A second examination, he further stated, should be given at the end of the first year to check on his progress.

At present PC offers no specific science scholarships, but does offer a variety of small "general" scholarships to promising students. The Government at present offers graduate fellowships relating with Atomic Energy, and the National Science Foundation also posts an imposing list of fellowships. With the newly increased emphasis on science, most large colleges offer an inviting list of undergraduate scholarships. Perhap PC would do well to offer more purely scientific scholarships.

PC Library Expands Improvements Made;

Many PC students may have noticed a few improvements made in the library under the direction of Miss Burts.

Perhaps the outstanding improvement is the addition of one hundred new shelves. The card catalogue has been expanded by a unit of fifteen trays and sliding units. A microfilm machine has been installed on the main stack floor.

O fpartucular interest to record lovers are the improvements made in the music room. The rummage sale money was used to buy a rug and an easy chair. When funds are available, drapes and lamps will be added.

According to Miss Burts, special stack assistants are on duty each afternoon and Saturday mornings to help students find magazines.

Tough Year for Choir; Chirpers Hit 5 States

• PICK THE WINNERS •

Church congregations in five Southern states will hear the Presbyterian College Robed Choir during its 1957-58 concert season, according to the schedule announced.

Twenty-three singing engagements in South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, are slated for the five-month season which begins in December and extends through April.

Dr. Edouard Patte, conductor of the choir, has arranged another outstanding program of sacred selections developed around the theme "Rejoice All Ye Christians."

Here is the PC choir's 1957-58 schedule of engagements in Presbyterian churches:

December 8—Cartersville (Ga.) First Church (morning), Atlanta's North Avenue Church (evening); Dec. 9—Newnan (Ga.) First Church (evening).

January 12 — Orangeburg (S. C.) First Church (morning); Honea Path (S. C.)First Church (evening).

February 2 — Abbeville (S. C.) Uppper Long Cane Church (morning); Greenville (S. C.) First Church (evening); February 23—Manning (S. C.) First Church (morning); Columbia (S. C.) First Church (evening).

March 9—Anderson (S. C.) Central Church (morning); Seneca (S. C.) First Church (evening); March 27—Dublin (Ga.) Henry Memorial Church (evening); March 28—Dothan (Ala.) First Church (evening); March 30—Hattiesburg (Miss.) First Church (morning); New Orleans (La.) St. Charles Avenue Church (evening); March 31 — Alexandria (La.) First Church (evening).

April 1—Shreveport (La.) First Church (evening); April 2—Meridian (Miss.) First Church (evening); April 3—Birmingham (Ala.) Woodlawn Church (evening); April 13—Gaffney (S. C.) First Church (morning); Clover (S. C.) Church (evening); April 27 — Indiantown (S. C.) Church (morning); Columbia (S. C.) Eau Claire Church (evening.)

Air Force Reservists Send Lt Col. To PC

Lt. Col. Ben S. Irvin, of the Air Force Reserve, will be in the Military Classroom of the Science Building at 4:30, Tuesday, November 12, to explain the Air Force Reserve program to anyone interested.

The economy drive has forced the Air Force to cut its regular forces, and in the interest of National Defense it is very anxious to build up teh strength of the Air Force Reserve.

All men enrolled at Presbyterian College who are interested in joining the Laurens-Clinton Flight of the Air Force Reserve in order to earn extra money and also help the Air Force, will have their chance soon.

Col. Irvin stated, "I am particularly interested in talking with any student woh has had as much as one year active duty in any branch of the service. ROTC cadets are not eligible to join.

Heavier Load Chosen Solution For Makeups

Out of three possible alternatives, the student body chose in chapel Monday that the best way for classes missed during the flu epidemic to be made up would be for the professors to give heavier asignments.

The other alternatives offered them by the Administration were to either cancel the Thanksgiving holidays, or to come back early from Christmas holidays. Dean Bellingrath said that the students' wish would be carried out in the matter.

Who Cares Any How?

Complaints pouring in about the looseness in the dorms—water throwing, loud radios, screams in the night.

As one listens to Stan Kenton's album, "The Modern World," he feels that he is standing in the middle of the universe and everything is being thrown at him—anxiety, disappointment, and a burden loaded with responsibility.

This type of thing seems to be characteristic of our age; we are living in an age between ages; we are searching to define our problm and find an answer to it. This unstableness is reflected in our literature, our art, our music, and practically everything we surround ourselves with.

This uncertain, unconventional, searching for reality is reflected in the works of Hemingway, J. D. Salinger, and in the modern Existentialists. It is in the faces of people on the streets in large cities, in the news of the world, and in the fact that more and more people are flocking to church in search for security.

When we sit down and let it flow through us, the abstract music that the artists compose for enjoyment, really defines our lives to us in our feelings. Rock and Roll and Jazz give us the feeling of wild freeness that is so pleasant.

Does this feeling come only to those with a morbid outlook on life, or do those with happy natures feel it too in undefined boredom and moodiness?

But what is the cause of all this? Is it the scientific developments which have left us uncertain about life and death? Is it the rapid change in religious views? Or, is the feeling of nothingness the result of a nation of pleasure-seekers, as Paul Tillich says?

In reality, no one knows.

Calling Dr. Heathen!

In a typical town, there is, typically, a typical doctor and his typical, beautiful nurse. In a typical day, he would deliver a couple dozen babies, set a few bones, perform minor operations, like transplanting brains and heart surgery, and quell a few epidemics. Typically, he never have time to romance this beautiful nurse.

One typical morning, he is starting to go to the office, when one of the typical villagers dashes up to him, to tell him of one of his kinfolk who is feeling poorly. Being a humanitarian, Dr. Heathen takes the boy in his car to his relatives. After a three hour drive, they arrive at a rundown shack by the side of the road. Dr. Heathen hops out of the car and diagnoses the case as multiple sclerotic arteriotic membranonosis of the brain. The patient, unless he receives immediate care, will die.

Now Dr. Heathen realizes that he has left his medical kit in his home. He orders the women of the home to have a great big pot of boiling water ready in a few minutes. He places the patient on the dining table. Dr. Heathen makes his first incision with a skinning knife, at this moment the phone rings. Dr. Heathen answers, the voice on the other end of the phone is making a poll, on which TV program is the favorite. At. Dr. Heathen's reply, the lady exclaimed, "I'm quite sure there is no such program on the air."

Getting back to the patient, he props the incision open with a pump handle. He probes for the infected nerve ending with a plumber's friend. At this point, he finds out that he has operated on the wrong person; the delay and the confusion causes the patient on the operation table to die. Of course the other patient dies, too. "Nobody is perfect," utters Heathen as he is sentenced to 100 years in Smythe penitentiary, located in the foothills of the glorious Appalachian mountains.

Jock Faces the Hard Cold Facts of Life

By PAUL ARRINGTON

Jock had planned the trip for next month, but the killing caused an abrupt change of plans. There weren't too many deer left in that section of the county anyway, so maybe it was better that he came early; a little more delay would probably have found all of them gone. He had to get away until things cooled off, so he wasn't really too bad off. But he wasn't exactly enjoying himself, what with the pressure of the cold facts pounding through his mind and the still sensitive scar across his right cheek aching numbly.

If I had only gone out the front way instead of getting to his car through the alley, everything would have been fine; no fight, no knives, no death. But Angelo would get him cleared. This he knew.

He had just pulled out his handkerchief to wipe some stains off the gun when he heard the first crumpling of the dry leaves. He stiffened, then heard more of the same with odd thumpings coming through the bushes, causing him to consider his next move carefully.

The handkerchief was still hanging between the barrel and the magazine when he cautiously rose and walked slowly to the edge of a clearing where he peered through the leaves of a small, red-berried holly tree. Just to his left and across the clearing, was what he was after; the head lowered, and short blades of brownish grass were disappearing under his nose as the eight-point crown wavered menacingly above. Slowly, he began raising his rifle to his shoulder, but he paused with the butt just off the ground. It looked too easy to him; the buck seemed to be either crazy or blind. He thought no more about it and continued raising the piece to his shoulder. He placed it firmly against his collar bone and leaned his head, closing his left eye. The shaking started then, and as he lifted his thumb to release the safety, his whole hand shook, wavering the rifle. The "click" had an ominous sound but the deer seemingly didn't notice it nor the man who affected it. The handkerchief dangled curiously, but he couldn't waste the motion to remove it. His right index finger wrapped comfortably around the trigger as the sight centered on the spot just behind the fore leg.

"Gad, it was quiet!"

He could even hear the unoiled springs of the trigger group as they responded to the pressure of his finger.

The warden thought that the early part of the season would be the best time for his limit of one and the early morning air had a crispness he reveled in; so, gun in hand, he stepped off the porch. The two doe he had seen the day before would surely bring that old blind, eight-pointer up his way, so he began his tracking.

"The last bit of noise had come through only two or three minutes ago, so," he thought, "The old codger couldn't have gone too far."

"Throw your old white tail up at me, will you?"

The excitement of the hunt wasn't anything new to him, so it didn't take a second to get the gun in place and the unwavering sight on the tail of the deer. He mentally gauged the distance from the tail to the heart and moved his sight to the left and to where he knew the heart would be.

Jock thought the sharp report and the overpowering feel of the kick would never come.

"CRACK!" The deer jerked his head around as his shallow eyes seemed to peer at nothing. His ears stood erect as if to send a message to his brain and slender legs; he was gone before the echo of the shot had died.

The warden ran quickly across the clearing with satisfaction

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter met this past Tuesday night for its regular session. The chapter was delighted in having Rev. Ben L. Collins to join in our meeting.

SIGMA NU

The brothers and pledges met last Tuesday to discuss final plans for the open social on November 13. In the eyes of all the members of the fraternity the social was a complete success.

Among the new additions to the house is a new Hi-Fi set which was just purchased recently. Also plans for a stag party were concluded.

KAPPA ALPHA

At the last meeting of Beta Pi Chapter, plans for the forthcoming Parents Day Weekend were arranged. The chapter will hold an open house after the game Saturday for the parents. The Frat House will also be open Saturday night.

Plans for Kappa Alpha's Open Social to be held in early December were also discussed.

"Once A Piakian Always A Piakian" . . . Piakian

By JOHN SUMMERS

(Author's Note: This report comes from an isolated island found in the far-away South Pacific. The people of the island feel as if it is the center of the world, and the reporter is narrow-minded and ignorant of the facts of other civilizations in a very general manner.)

Piaki Island is in the Pacific Equatorial zone near Goosekoo Atoll. It is here that the famous Piaki Island Oysters are grown, and is also the home of the Piaki Island Combo which is known the world over for smooth relaxing music.

The beautiful tropical island has a thriving population of some fifteen-odd people, seven of which pick oysters, seven of which play in the combo, and one ruler. Their ruler and King is Malobrownkiki, a true Piakian and patriot. Incidentally, the oyster pickers are girl Piakians. This makes things work better and gives the island a wholesome air.

Kiaki birds, which are beautiful birds, have multi-colored bills and unwebbed feet. These creatures of beauty have no wings, however, and their only purpose in life is to provide the islanders with entertainment after a hard day in the oyster pits, or a hard workout at the Piaki bandstand. To these people, there is nothing like watching Kiaki birds digging in the sands of Piaki beach, or catching Piaki mosquitos with their muti-colored beaks. The population of the Kiaki birds is dying out, and it may even lead to Kiaki extinction. This is understandable, because the islanders are always watching them, leaving them no privacy.

Each Spring the Piakians have a canoe race to nearby Goosekoo Atoll. The winner gets a bushel of Piaki oysters, and the Piaki Combo dedicates a song to him and his favorite oyster picker. Sounds romantic, doesn't it? This has become an annual affair at Piaki, and many spectators now travel from many parts of the outside world to observe these breath-taking sports events. Last Spring there were nineteen, many from as far away as Turbiki, an island thirty-three miles away to the North. It takes the Turbikians three days to make the trip if the winds are strong, so this should give you an idea of the importance of the Piaki races. We of Piaki island have a fear of this social intermingling, but we do keep the Turbikians spearated when they arrive. If we don't there may be inter-marriage, and there goes our cultural heritage. Our motto is: Once a Piaki picker (or player), always a Piaki picker (or player).

Our King, Malobrownkiki, is also our Good Will Ambassador. He has traveled around the globe taking Kudzu seeds to many countries as a gift to these other societies. From reports from the wires of the Union Press, we understand that this beautiful plant is now flourishing in many parts of the world, lending beauty to the countryside. Briars, another plant with more utility than Kudzu, is also a gift from us. These plants form a natural barbed wire fence for keeping out jungle beasts from homes and farms. He would take some of our oysters with him, but they spoil and the stench ruins the effect of the gift.

Tomorrow here at Piaki Island, Nu Riteus is going to marry Momo Leekah, a beautiful picker who now holds the world's record for gathering 169 oysters on one breath. The marriage is a little touchy, however, for Nu has a trace of Gumeki blood in him, and you know how this looks. He's a good player, though, and we all like him better than we do some Piakians we know.

If the rest of the world has race problems like we do, I hope they will give us the solution. You certainly have to be careful with the mingling situation, for our production of oysters will certainly fall off if we have to teach our children to dive with Goosekoovian children who obviously don't learn as fast, and also can't hold their breath as long. The Goosekoovian peoples have an excellent sense of rhythm we'll admit, but rhythm isn't all there is to our music. That's what the combo players say, anyway. (I don't want to make such rash statements like this myself, because I'm open-minded.)

That's all there is from Piaki Island this year. I'll see you again next fall for another report on the world's front—Piaki. If you have any questions, or would like to visit us, send a quarter of a pint of blood for analysis and three pearls to me at Piaki Island, Pacific Ocean.

I wasn't like a brother—
I went with her for quite a spell
And she wasn't like a mother.

She gave no indications
That things warn't like I tho't they wuz
But then came complications.

She met some other schmoe one nite
And he made passes at 'er;
Tho' she were mine I come to find
To her it made no matter.

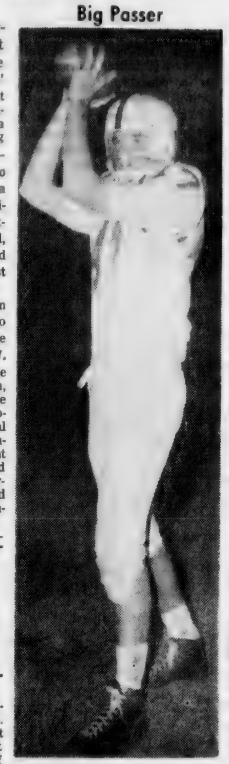
I loved a gal and she loved me—
And him. I waned and wafted
To find to my surprise one day
That I had done been shafted.

Hosemen Dropped by the Citadel, Picked Favorites Over E. Carolina

• Parents Day Game Slated Tomorrow

By ROY FOWLER

The Citadel scored two touchdowns in the second quarter, and went on to defeat Presbyetrian College 14 to 0 last Saturday afternoon. PC made a serious bid for a score late in the fourth period, as they drove down to the Bulldogs' six-yard line. At this point, however, the PC offensive machine ran out of gas. If the Hose had been able to score, it would have thrown an entirely different light on the contest. At any rate the game represented a good effort on the part of the PC gridders. The defense was outstanding except for a short lapse during the second period when the Citadel scored both of their touchdowns.



Parents Day will take place this Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p. m., as the Blue Hose play host to East Carolina. The game had originally been scheduled for nighttime, but was changed to the afternoon as a convenience for parents and other fans who wish to attend the game.

For a change, PC will be on equal footing with its opponent. East Carolina is also winless this year, so Saturday's contest should be a slam bang affair, with both teams battling for the elusive first win. Certainly it would be ironic if the game should wind up in a tie. Don't bet on it, however, because both PC and East Carolina will be firing with all of their guns and then some in order to capture their first victory. It's no fun being a loser every Saturday, and a win would be a big boost to either of the two teams.

Coach Frank Jones states that his team is vastly improved. He also warns that East Carolina is a stronger team than its record indicates. Everything points to an exciting afternoon of football, and, barring a tie, one team should emerge victorious with their first win of the 1957 season.

Relative scores against common teams give no indication as to who should win the game. Lenoir-Rhyne trampled East Carolina 55 to 7, while the Blue Hose held the same team to a 0 to 0 tie. Appalachian, however, defeated PC 20 to 7, while they could only edge out East Carolina by one point, 7 to 6. A national college football power index has installed Presbyterian as a 12-point favorite. Comparative scores and the potential of East Carolina, however, indicate that the game should be much closer than two touchdowns.

Run of the Hose

By BILL YEARICK

SOMETHING'S GOT TO GIVE

An unusual characteristic about this week's game with Eastern Carolina is that both teams are entering the game with unblemished records. Very, very unfortunately for the loyal diehards, this record is one that will never be anticipated or optimistically hoped for. A season without a win is extremely discouraging to the team, fans and probably most of all the coach.

Eastern Carolina is also on the crest of an eight-game losing streak. They will also be out for the start of winning ways and a victory over the Hose would probably do the team wonders.

On the other hand, a win for the Hose would also have the same effect. Coach Frank Jones recently stated after the Citadel game that what the team needed was confidence via the win route. In all likeliness this remedy would be more than a shot in the arm.

For the most part PC played an improved type of game against the Bulldogs of Citadel. It was certainly at least creditable but still shy of the mark. These efforts might be reflected in the saying, "a miss is as good as a mile—except in horseshoes."

One interesting point to observe is that since the shadows have been getting very long towards dusk the team usually transfers their personnel and equipment to Johnson Field and works out under the lights. It might be an indication of how much determination will be shown tomorrow when the Hose meet the Parrots from Greenville.

After a responsive effort shown by the students in trying to put on an all-out pep rally, the Hose should have plenty when they take on their next opponents on Saturday afternoon.

LETTERS, WE GET LETTERS

In some respects the sports department is very fortunate to have such an avid following. Recently we received a satarizing letter which needed some vivid imagination on the part of the critic.

RUN OF THE MILL

The National Association of Ice Sliders held their annual meeting on the Presbyterian College campus last week, with the lower end of the baseball field used to provide the adequate seating facilities. There was an estimated seventeen thousand persons in the stands watching the exhibition of ice sliding, performed by some of the nation's top sliders from as far away as Key East, California.

Officiating at the meet was John Glover and Sid Lowman; both of whom are pretty good sliders on their own. At least their knowledge of the sport was sufficient to guarantee fair judging of the participants in favor of PC.

In the main event, three men of the Varsity Ice Slidnig Squad, roared down the hill of crushed ice on a seven-tread motor scooter onto the ice field. Upon arriving at the fifty-yard line, they dismounted and took their positions. Their only purpose in the game was to keep the opposing team from sliding a goalie into the catcher's box on the far sides of the rink. Seven men broke their own ice on ice, and have been able to spend a nice week of recovery in their rooms.

During the half-time, several amateurs from Clinton, and neighboring communities presented the crowd of eager ice watchers with a unique show of daring skill and courage. They glided all over the arena, crashing into one another, and in genreal ruining the remaining ice for the rest of the game. Coaches from both teams protested, but it was impossible to re-schedule the competition for a later date. As this was the case, PC was awarded the loving cup for the best loving in the stands during the game.

Anyone wishing to join the magnificent PC Ice Sliding Team, can do so by contacting Coach Joel Eastman or by writing to the National Association of Ice Breakers, % Miss Robert at the Inferno.

Juniors' Hard Play Beaten By Georgia

The Presbyterian JV's, after leading 7 to 6 at halftime, fell by the wayside during the second half last Thursday night and lost to a strong Georgia Middle College team 40 to 14. As there are an unusually large number of freshmen on the PC varsity, the young Hosemen were seriously affected by lack of depth, as the second half scoring against them illustrated.

Larry Wood of Moss Point, Miss., stood out on offense for the JV's. The small halfback gathered in the opening kickoff and ran it back the entire length of the field for the first PC touchdown. Wood also snared a Bill Aycock pass in the second half for the second and final junior Hose score.

Cagemen Launch Basketball Against Paris Island Marines

By BILL TURNER

The Blue Hose cage team will launch its 1957-58 basketball campaign, under the direction of new head coach, Courts Redford, against the powerful Parris Island Marines here November 30.

The Presbyterian cagers will be without the services of last year's two sensations, Dave and Bruce Thompson. This twosome combined to score fifty points per game last season. Coach Redford disclosed as many other fans will observe that this high-scoring duet will be one of the hardest assignments for replacement for the ensuing season.

Redford will have the services of three returning lettermen and starters from last year's squad to somewhat relieve the loss of the scoring punch.

At the guard position the Hose seem pretty well set. Co-captain Ken Caswell who averaged 15 points per game last season and who Redford is counting on to move the Hose attack is back, along with Bill Sullivan, the defensive specialist and playmaker of the squad. Sullivan was also a member of last year's starting five. Promising freshman prospects include Paul Ard and Don Blanchard.

The center position will be handled by letterman Wyatt Aiken who last year played behind Bruce Thompson. Behind Aiken are twin giants in 6'-8" Sonny Wells and 6'-7" Frank Barnes. The latter two saw limited action in last year's play but will prove valuable with game experience under their belt.

At forward Redford has three returning lettermen. Ralph Chambers, who was also a member of last year's starting five, and Clayton Adams, rebound artist and board specialist for the Hose will probably man the two starting positions. Bob Stratton will be available at both guard and forward while Bob Stone should help to bolster the Hose hopes.

Coach Redford stated that even though he has three of last year's starting five back, the team isn't shaping up as it should. He also disclosed that the losing of two boys who averaged fifty points per game would probably be the hardest replacement.

The Die Is Cast; KA's and Pika's Tied

On Monday of this week the KA's continued to win when they beat Alpha Sigma Phi 7-6. The Pika's kept their perfect record by beating Sigma Nu's 12-0 on Tuesday. There were no games scheduled for Wednesday.

The climax of intramural football is what is being called "big Thursday." The final game of the year is between the Pika's and the KA's. As everyone knows the Pika's took the first round by beating the KA's in a "Montana playoff." So the KA's will be out for revenge in this game. It promises to be a tough and rough affair.

Intramural rifle teams were to be organized this past Wednesday. Nothing appears to be certain as to a schedule yet.

(Editor's Note: On "Big Thursday" there was a hard fought battle between both teams, and Kappa Alpha came out on top of Pi Kappa Alpha 7 to 0, to tie them for the intramural football lead. Details of the game will be in next week's Blue Stocking.)

PC Host To Hearst Region Competition

On Nov. 22 PC will play host to other regional competition in an effort to capture the Hearst trophy. Sgt. James Knight, coach of the PC rifle squad, announced recently that in playing host for this match the Hose chances for victory remained high. Returning lettermen Tom Golden and Toby Hunter are currently pacing all Hose entries but are being closely pursued by newcomers Desi Durden and Bill Parrish.

So far this season Presbyterian has shown well in competition and in college circles boast a .5000 average with a win over Davidson as opposed to a close defeat by Furman.

The procedure of the Hearst trophy match is as follows: Five men shoot five shots in each of the four main positions. These positions include prone, sitting, kneeling, and standing.

Starting time for the match will be 2:00 p. m.

The Collegiate Answer...

By JIMMY EASON

Last week the Blue Stocking carried a poll taken a year ago regarding the question, "What can the college student do to help determine the racial issue?" It was stated that this week a new poll of this question would appear to provide a contrast between the ideas of some of our student body today with those ideas expressed in last year's poll. Below the statements of a few typical members of the student body will provide material for such comparison in order to demonstrate what (if any) changes have taken place in the opinion of college students.

It is interesting to note that despite the turbulent happenings of the past month (e. g. the Little Rock affair plus complications, teenage race fights, political wrangling over civil rights bills, etc.) there are a few ideas which continued to evidence themselves in the feelings expressed this week as they were evident in the ideas of a year ago. Best example of this is the fact that tolerance, as opposed to prejudice, is advocated strongly in the majority of all polled opinions, past and present.

Charles (Urban) Hughes: "I think we should all be ready to give the negroes, or Jews (or whatever a person's race may be) credit when it is due. Some negroes are smart enough to have better opportunities than they have. Others aren't.; but, yet we are white and therefore it's okay! We should search our own hearts, thing the question through in an unprejudiced manner and do what we think is right. Bitter prejudice is no solution, that's for sure."

Joel Easterling, rabid Democrat): "I am idealistic in that I believe that the members of each race should take the example of their Southern ancestors in regarding each other in the light of Christian brotherhood and mutual respect. For years that formula has worked for the South and in this crisis we should not deter from it, just because a few conniving politicians and judges have seen fit to use the racial question as a pawn in the baffling game of politics. There is no law that can be enforced that goes against the innate customs and traditions of a people. As students, and as Christians, we should seek God's guidance, praying that the conclusion we reach will be right. We have a duty to make a decision as to which we are to agree. Once we have come to a decision let there be no compromise. Those who know a situation best are usually those who a situation concern. The so-called "racial issue" concerns us all and we, the students, should know the situation best."

Al McKie (Yankee): "It appears that integration is inevitable, however, it is quite unfortunate that a relatively few persons representing both extremes of the racial problem have been so vehement in their actions. I do not sympathize with those who would retain the status quo nor with those who demand immediate compliance with the Supreme Court's interpretation of the law. Progressive moderation that will result in a flexible plan that can adopt itself to any specific integration problem is needed rather than just a temporary compromise. We must understand all the facts of this problem and make a sincere effort to reduce our particular prejudices for we may some day be able to actively participate in working out certain of the problems inherent in the situation. The problem must be solved for the sake of the races and our international prestige. Also, we have more important fields in which to expand our energies."

Alex Moorhead (Napoleon): "I think that integration is a zoniological problem that can only be remedied by years of effort on the part of both races to elliminate the conflict. Education is probably the easiest answer provided, that as the educational standards improve, people will become sufficiently broad-minded to completely discard the norm of action established by precedent. Only when we are willing to do this can true harmony exist between the races. It is our duty as college students to take advantage of every opportunity afforded us to favorably influence the attitudes of all and thereby create an atmosphere to better relationships between the races."

Paul Arrington (Self-made intellect): "If one is to approach the situation at all, it must be with an open mind, free of all prejudice. Anyone who considers the facts and views them from all angles, wil surely find a solution wherein the problem will be solved. Naturally it will take time, but with open-mindedness as the byword, it will be easier and more rewarding to everyone."

Educators Will Meet; Chart Future Improving

Another meeting of the educators charting the future needs of Presbyterian College is expected to be held within the next few weeks, with representatives of the Synods of Georgia and South Carolina attending.

Robert M. Vance of Clinton, chairman of the PC Board of Trustees, who was designated chairman of the two-synods advisory council in connection with the survey, has announced these members of the council's executive committee: Hugh Jacobs of Clinton, secretary; R. E. Ferguson, Jr., also of Clinton, treasurer. Georgia representatives—Henry B. Matthews of Macon, Dr. P. D. Miller of Atlanta, and Dr. Robert Strong of Augusta; South Carolina representatives—Mrs. R. Grier Robinson of Charleston; Walter Edwards of Columbia; and J. Edward Means, Jr., of Greenville.

The study toward charting the future development of Presbyterian College and its maximum role in Chrisitan higher education began last spring under the supervision of six distinguished educators. They visited the campus, analyzed various phases of the program at PC and are now preparing a report. This report will be submitted to the advisory council in the near future. The study is being conducted at the invitation of the college administration and the board of trustees.

Dr. R. H. Fitzgerald, chancellor emeritus of the University of Pittsburgs, serves as director of the survey group. He has as consultants: Dr. James M. Godard, of the University of Miami (Fla.); President J. Ollie Edmunds, of Stetson; Dr. G. H. Cartledge, of Oak Ridge National Laboratory; Dean Maxwell A. Smith, of the University of Chattanooga; and Chancellor Guy E. Snavely of Birmingham-Southern.

spread across his face. He laid the rifle on the edge of the clearing and went into the bush, knocking red berries to the ground. He kneeled as satisfaction turned to surprise and then to horror; Jock's right eye was gone, and blood was streaming down his cheek, across the scar to his nose and onto the handkerchief under his head.

The warden didn't know what to do. He had no idea of what would happen; but, he soon would.

Jock was dead, but the deer was still roaming.

Donations Top 1956; $1,071 Given by School

In the final report of the United Fund Drive on the Presbyterian College campus, 533.7% of last year's contribution was collected to total $1,071.21. Mr. James E. Wolfe, Drive Chairman of Greater Clinton, congratulated the students for their interest and industry, and complimented them on their contribution of 5.4% of the total city goal to the drive.

Miss Norma Jean Weisner, president of Alpha Psi Delta, received a plaque for her sorority's highest per capita contribution among the campus Greek organizations. Five of the Presbyterian College fraternities were given cups for 100% contribution. The fraternities and their United Fund Drive representatives were: John Greer, Sigma Nu; Herbert Entrekin, Pi Kappa Alpha; George Sanborn ofTheta Chi; Jim McGirt of Alpha Sigma Phi; and Chuck Hendry, Pi Kappa Phi.

L. V. Powell, Campus Drive Chairman, and Dr. Fred E. Holcombe, President of the Community Chest, commended Bill Yearick, President of the Student Christian Association, and Cam Summers, top announcer or radio station WLBG, for their work in producing the "PC Variety Show" to culminate the campus drive. He further pointed to the pride that should be felt by the college and the community concerning the contribution made by the college group.

Cornwall Named To Receive Award

J. J. "Peck" Cornwall, of Clinton, has been named to receive Presbyterian College's Alumni Service Award for 1957, it was announced today.

He was chosen by the Board of Directors of the PC Alumni Association at its annual fall meeting held on the campus recently.

The group, in its unanimous nomination of Cornwall, cited him for his outstanding work as president of the Walter Johnson Club, the alumni athletic organization. It was pointed out that under his direction during the past year, the club had raised almost three times as much in support of PC athletics as had been raised during any previous year.

Bo Rat Week Here; Two More Rat Weeks

Bo-Rat Week will officially end Wednesday, November 27. Some twenty-five veterans and transfer students have been in rat service since Wednesday, November 20. They will be tried in Bo-Rat Court by a chosen number of freshmen on Monday night.

Bo-Rats are to observe the same rules as the freshmen with the exception of wearing rat hats. Any student, including freshmen, can gin the Bo-Rats and make them submit to their wishes. The freshmen will have at least two more weeks of rat service when Bo-Rat Week is over.

A member of the Freshman Control Board stated, "The freshmen will have rat service from November 2-14 at least, and possibly longer, since they are becoming very lousy in the performance of their duties."

Chairman of the Freshman Control Board is Bob Hill, and members include Bill Webb, Vice-Chairman; Jimmy Nicholls, Charles Quinn, Lyman Harris, and Melvin Little.

U. S. General Garvin Inspects ROTC Unit

Major General Crump Garvin, Commanding General, U. S. Army Reserve Command, Third Army, informally inspected the Presbyterian College ROTC on Tuesday, November 15.

General Garvin was accompanied on his inspection trip by his wife and his aide, Lieutenant McGregor.

Garvin was met at the front of the ROTC headquarters by Lt. Col. Barnett, PMS&T, and was received by the honor company, Company "B" of the Cadet Corps, commanded by Cadet Lieutenant John E. Summers, and the color guard.

Upon completion of his inspection tour, General Garvin met for a conference with President Brown and Dean of Students, Col. A. J. Thackston.

During the inspection of the ROTC, Mrs. Garvin was entertained by Mrs. W. W. Barnett with coffee in her home.

Home Folk Hit Campus; For Annual Parents Day

Three hundred and eighty-six visitors were on the Presbyterian College campus this past weekend for the scheduled Parents Day events.

This was the first annual Parents Day, and the number of registrations indicated the program was a success and worth making into a regular annual affair. Typical of the comments made on the weekend is a letter which was sent to the administration Monday. This person said, "My wife and I would like to express our appreciation for the welcome extended us on Parents Day. Every parent that we talked to had an enjoyable time.

"It was satisfying to see the friendly atmosphere that prevails on the campus. We feel that we are fortunate in having our son enrolled at Presbyterian College."

The parents were greeted at 11:30 a. m. for Registration by the girls of Alpha Psi Delta sorority. They were carried on campus tours by the members of the Presbyterian College Blue Key chapter, and then welcomed formally in the chapel auditorium.

Jim Barksdale, President of the Blue Key, had the invocation; John Knox, Student Body President, gave a welcoming address; musical selections were sung by the Choir Double Quartet; Dr. Marshall W. Brown, President of Presbyterian College, gave his introductory message; and Wyatt Aiken led the group in prayer and grace.

They then moved into the College Dining Hall for a barbecue dinner before the Presbyterian-East Carolina football game on Johnson Field.

TONY TORRE

PC Christmas Dance, Tony Torre Featured

Tony Torre and his Orchestra will be featured at the Christmas Dance on December 6 and 7.

Torre, his thirteen-piece orchestra, and female vocalist will be back on the Presbyterian College campus due to the requests of many students. He, and particularly his young vocalist, have been very popular in past years here.

Inter-Fraternity Council President Gordon Livingston said that a definite assessment has not been set, but that it will probably be $3 for each fraternity member. Friday night the dance will begin at 9 and end at 11 o'clock. The dance Saturday night lasts from 8 until 12 o'clock.

The only events conflicting with the dance will be the Presbyterian-Citadel basketball game on December 6, and the Presbyterian-College of Charleston game on December 7; however, both of these games will be played in Charleston. Alpha Sigma Phi's open social will be on December 4, and Kappa Alpha's on December 11, so there should be no conflict there.

PC Sigma Delta Psi Chapter Named Delta Iota by National

Sigma Delta Psi National Athletic Fraternity has been chartered for Presbyterian College. This chapter will be known as Delta Iota Chapter. It has been chartered by five honorary faculty members. They are: Dr. John Harris, Coach Walter Johnson, Col. A. J. Thackston, Mr. Taylor Martin, and Mr. James Gray.

The fraternity was founded at Indiana University in 1912 and since then has grown so that total enrollment of all collegiate chapters numbers 107. The various chapters are located in the U. S., Alaska, and South Amercia.

One man once stated that, "Men prize the Phi Beta Kappa key. It means that one was once a college man and intellectually one of the best. In like manner the badge of Sigma Delta Psi means that the a man of splendid development. A wearer has been a college man and a man who wears either badge may be justly pruod. A man who wears both is a king."

To become a member there are several events one has to pass, a rigid physical entrance requiring certain standards to be met in the various sports. There is no limit to how long one can train or any set number of attempts in which one must qualify within. A maximum of three events may be passed in one day. Each year there is national competition between schools for achievement and membership. A plaque will be awarded to the winning school which has submitted the best record.

If anyone is interested contact one of the above charter members, Wyatt Aiken or Paul Arrington. Trials will begin in the next week.

Battalion To March At Annual Xmas Parade

On December 6 the Presbyterian College ROTC Cadet Corps, commanded by Cadet Major James T. Richards, will march in the annual Clinton Christmas parade. The parade will begin at the campus, circle the business district of Clinton, and return to the campus.

• Turkey Day Dinner •

Thanksgiving Dinner will be at the lunch hour, Tuesday, November 26, 1957.

A traditional Thanksgiving dinner has been planned, and here is a list of the goodies in store for the Presbyterian College family: Chilled Tomato Juice, Roast Turkey, Nut Stuffing, Giblet Gravy, Candied Sweet Potatoes, Green Beans with Mushrooms, Cranberry Salad, Sliced Tomatoes, Home Style Pickles, Stuffed Olives, Hot Rolls, Butter, Iced Tea, Coffee, Pumpkin Pie, Fruit Cake, and Ice Cream.

In an interview, Mr. Powell, manager of Judd Dining Hall, said, "The college wishes to each of you a pleasant Thanksgiving Season and that a feeling of the magnitude of God's blesings will be present in the heart of each member of the college group."

Parking On Campus A Big Problem; It Is Easier To Drive A Car Than Park It

By SONNY EMBRY

When PC's campus was originally planned, no one of that period could imagine, or forecast that one day the entire plaza would be almost flanked by cars, and that parking would be a problem. During the last few years, the administration has provided some new parking lots, and with Coach Johnson's pull, had two of them paved. However, with the construction of the new SUB, the largest of these lots has been made unaccessable.

The parking lot behind Bailey was planned like a refrigerator—one entrance. This lot is even more so a bottle neck now that the new mud entrance has been made. Of course we all realize that we must make sacrifices for progress, but it is generally felt by the students in Bailey that another entrance should be constructed. This could be effectively done by removing the present posts on the west side of the lot and replacing them to form a short road running parallel to the tennis courts, and intersecting the street at right angles. This would not greatly mar the landscape, and later on if curbing were added and it were paved, it would look quite good.

This new entrance would also help another aggravating situation: going the wrong way on a one-way street. It is now a great temptation to merely turn left coming out, and go the wrong way to avoid having to go all the way around the plaza. This would, of course, necessitate making the present entrance-exit into an entrance only, and the new road into an exit only.

There is also a need for more parking space on campus, and it is hoped that the administration will seriously consider using the present site of the SCA building to enlarge the parking lots already in existence. Again, the use of asphalt and curbing would add greatly to its usefulness and beauty.

The immediate construction of a dirt exit to the Bailey lot would be greatly appreciated by the campus drivers, and with the increase in school bills next year, perhaps money will be appropriated for the paving and addition of curbing. Certainly the campuses mentioned in our recent letter from Dr. Brown have used some of their money for such projects, and with our new increase in revenue, we too, might begin to expect such improvements. Right now it's a terrible nuisance to back fifty yards in a narrow lane, into a mud hole and have to wait five minutes for a Pepsi-Cola truck to stop blocking the only entrance-exit.

To Hell and Back

By TOM GOLDEN

My name is Charles Van Splurd. I am a foreign correspondent to Russia. During my last visit to the Soviet Science Museum, I learned some amazing facts. Before I relate any of these facts, let me start from the beginning.

It was a rainy night in Berlin. I had bribed two Soviet guards into letting me past the gates into the Russian Zone. I then proceeded to get a visa to Moscow. The only articles I had were my camera, and the clothes on my back.

I had gotten pretty far along the dirt road to Moscow when I was stopped and searched by the MVD. It seems that I had contraband American cigarettes and could not proceed further until I had given the cigarettes to them. These Soviets will do anything to get American cigarettes.

By the time I reached Moscow, I had been searched at least a half dozen times, and each time some article would be removed. I appeared in Moscow Square in my BVD's, and holding a roll of film. I then went to the consul to secure permission to enter the Soviet Science Museum. After much RED tape I was given permission to enter the laboratory of Doctor Zdrovwecheck Tovarech.

He was presently working on the marvelous invention, instant Vodka, that could be carried by the front line troops. He was also responsible for other inventions, some of which are: the Widget, a machine that defies a purpose; it is used in brain washing; a sponge that may be inserted into the ear without penetrating the membranes, also used for brain washing. Some of his most important inventions are water, air, stars, and dirt.

After this most enlightening visit I was allowed to go into the museum. I marveled at the ingenious inventions. Igor Sandwittch invented peanut butter. The oldest invention in the museum was a jet plane which was invented by Neanderthalovich, Apemansky. The only reason that this invention was impractical was the fact that he could not think of a fuel for it. I quickly jotted down the notes for my report and returned to my home in America.

The President refused to see my report on the grounds that it was of no value. All those who read this article will write to me so that I might put your name on a petition that will gain my audience to the president. My address is: Charles Van Splurd, 129574650776 Feh Place, Lamont Mental Asylum.

Tough Break!

Visions of sugar plums are already dancing in the PCuns' heads. This is a picture taken in a student's dream, that G. Edward was sent up the river (or creek).

House of Numbers

Have you ever heard of anyone breaking into prison? Well, so have I, but let's not mess up my article. If you haven't, be sure to see this unique movie in which Jack Palance expertly plays a dual role.

Jack is a reasonably respectable citizen in one of his parts, but is a dangerous convict serving time in San Quentin, and also the brother of himself in the second role. Jack No. 1 tries to free his brother for a short time to take care of some personal matters, and he accomplishes his mission by breaking into the mighty institution to take his brothers' place.

The plot is filled with all the details of the adventure and the double acting of Palance is well worth seeing. The movie is filled with plenty of suspense and action from "Directed By—" to "The End," so don't miss it.

Take Me To Your Chief

By JOHN SUMMERS

"How much further, Livingstone?" asked Harold. "We've been walking through this dense vegetation for six weeks, now, and my sneakers are about to wear out!"

"Not too much further, Harold, not much further at all. We should reach the Bowanana Kingdom in another day or two providing the fierce tribesmen don't jump us at the Booze River Junction."

Onward, onward, the weary safari pushed onward, keeping in mind only their mission of securing Madame Moth, a star of the Broadway production entitled, "Holey Underwear." She had crashed in her light plane fifteen weeks ago and had been captured by the man-eaters of the Zorch Jungle Club. She was thought to be safe, because she was not a man. (Harty-Har-Har-Har!!!)

"Look, Livingstone, there's the Booze River. Let's jump in and drink some clean fresh Booze."

"Negative," shouted their leader and harmonica player Livingstone. "No one in my crew is going to drink Booze until Saturday. You and your bird-watchers, Harold, have developed into Owl-Ko-Holics, and I don't want it to spread to the natives."

"Grumble, grumble," replied Harold, as he stood with his left big toe splashing the surface of the river through the now not so small hole in his sneakers. He was thinking of a plan concerning mutiny, when out of the dark humid jungle came the sounds of drums.

"Is that the Nuradic Tribesmen?" asked a porter from under his red cap.

"Negative, porter under red cap, that's Krupa." Livingstone always had an answer for his men. He was a magnificent leader, and his harmonica playing was nothing short of being musical.

"ZAARING-ING-ING." An arrow, spiked with a deadly poison flopped into a cork tree near where Harold was standing. "Horrors!" cried Harold as he slapped his right hand to his forehead. "These natives frighten me to the point of utter unconsciousness. Let's play chicken and return to Bako land where people are more cheerfully social."

"Negative," replied their leader, shaking the saliva out of his well used harmonica. "We have our mission to perform, and shall not leave until it is completed. Buck up, men, buck up. If you get hit by an arraw, remember, it only hurts for a little while!" Livingstone now burst into self-imposed laughter, ant rolled on the jungle floor out of pure delight. It was very rare that his well-developed sense of humor was displayed, but he always enjoyed it.

Out of nowhere, a ninefoot native appeared before them. He was covered with only a pup tent he used for a loin cloth, and a row of plastic beads around his neck. "Y Pluribus U num!" he screamed.

"Mu-uh-therrr!" shouted Harold as he fell on his face yelling and having alternating convulsions. "Livingstone, can we play chicken now?"

"Negative, Harold. We wil try to communicate with this beast. Beast, take me to your leader."

The native, whose nostrils alone looked like a double garage, mumbled out, "Follow me." He had obviously had training at Fort Benning.

"He speaks English well, doesn't he? I think we should leave while his back is to us. One of the porters said he knew his parents, and this guy is only seven years old!"

"Negative, Harold. We shall follow the child to his home. Maybe they will be able to tell us where Madame Moth is being held."

"Well, alrgihty then," said Harold as he pulled out his all-year sucker and began licking it.

At the native's home, they were greeted by his parents. Both were retarded pigmys, but were big for their age.

"Know ye where Madame Moth is?" queried Livingstone.

"Si, si, she is in well house. She wasn't feeling well, so we told her to go feel ours."

"Splendid!" yelled Harold almost in ecstacy. "Now can we play chicken, Livingstone?"

"Affirmative, Harold. At this time you can commence playing chicken." Livingstone cocked his head and watched his nephew play chicken with tender love and affection glowing in his heart.

Harold pulled out his chicken board and talked one of the porters into playing him. Harold was an expert at the game, and each time he won he would shout, "Oh, Joy" and then run to his uncle and tell of his victory.

Livingstone's report of the safari was concluded by the statement that read: "Madame Moth returned to 'Holey Underwear'."

"There's a man in the dorm! Lock the doors! Lock the doors!"

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter met this past Tuesday night for its regular session. Plans were made for an informal party this coming Saturday night. The chapter was pleased to have Rev. Ben L. Collins with us again this week.

KAPPA ALPHA

At the weekly Tuesday night meeting of the Beta Pi Chapter, plans were made for Kappa Alpha's Open Social to be held December 11 in the Chapter Lodge. A discussion also took place in regard to the forthcoming Christmas Dance weekend.

All the Brothers and Pledges on the KA football squad were congratulated on their outstanding performance during the past intra-mural football activities.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

The regular meeting of Mu Chapter was held on Tuesday, November 19.

The Brothers wish to thank Bill Bowman for his fine work in the fraternity suite this past weekend.

Brothers of the week were Bill Bowman for his service to the fraternity, and the Rifle Team which won the intra-mural rifle match.

PI KAPPA PHI

At the regular meeting Tuesday night plans were made for a coming social to be held.

Brother "Fuzz" Prickett is to be congratulated, as he recently became pinned to Miss Lucy Elliott of Limestone College.

SIGMA NU

Plans for two closed socials were discussed at the regular meeting last Tuesday night. They are to be held on Saturday, November 23, and Tuesday, November 26.

Also, a full scehdule of activities for the Christmas Dance weekend was discussed. These plans will be announced later.

THETA CHI

Beta Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity met in its weekly session and made final plans for a Thanksgiving dinner which is to be held in the Fraternity room Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

Congratulations were extended by the Brothers and Pledges to Bruce Prince in pinning Miss Joyce Stevens.

The Brothers welcomed into the Brotherhood: Bob Calrk, Frank Richbourg, and Jack Taylor.

Run of the Hose

By BILL YEARICK

A NEW SET OF VALUES

After last Saturday's surprise defeat to the Eastern Carolina Pirates, most of the crowd sat in stunned disgust still slightly awed at the outcome of events. For nearly four quarters the fans saw the Hose and Pirates battle to a listless draw anticipating some kind of break to determine the outcome of the game.

For the Parents Day crowd the break never came.

The contest for the most part was staged between both teams' thirty-yard lines with neither opponent seriously challenging the goal line at any one point of the game. The soggy turf kept the backs at their slowest speed and while many of the passes were completed, a minimum was thrown.

It was late in the final seconds of the game that the oucome was finally decided when Eastern Carolina shocked the crowd with a 42-yard previous field goal attempt, was blocked.

This turn of events is no doubt making the Hose followers extremely discouraged. What actually do the fans want? It is always desirable to be part of a winning season but probably what the Hose supporters want most is an all-out honest effort displayed by the team.

In the stants the average fan can always call a better game, make a better tackle and run harder and faster than most of the team. They are quicker with their tongues than most runners are when cracking up the middle. But one thing they can have no part in is the way the team breaks from the huddle and the enthusiasm they show in running up to the line and following the play until the final whistle is blown.

Probably this would eliminate the dissension somewhat and knock the weekly griping down to a minimum. In all fairness the team should not be blamed for everything, as at the recent all-out student body pep rally only a smattering of upperclassmen could be noticed.

Some Monday morning quarterbacks might also observe that throughout most of the game Ken Webb, halfback for the Hose, displayed pretty much pain in favoring a bad arm. Still Webb stayed in there and hustled as much as he could. The point is that a man who could have been more effective against the Pirates would have been more of an asset to the Hose efforts.

With the Bronze Derby game at Newberry looming directly ahead, the Blue Hose will probably shoot their whole season's efforts on this one game. The team wil be rested after a week layoff and make a final bid to break into the win column.

HOSE BASKETEERS DISPLAY FORM

In the recent game with the Piedmont Rangers, the Hose cagers showed flashes of brilliance in their initial outing. Perhaps this indicates that the season will not be as long as everyone anticipates.

MORE ACTION TAKING PLACE

The final plans have been formulated so that Sigma Delta Psi, national honorary athletic fraternity, is no longer a pipe dream but a reality. Anyone wishing to join must pass a stiff physical entrance requiring a better than average ability in an assortment of sports.

A Mudslinging Madhouse

Hosemen complete an important pass in picture on the left; and PC makes a valiant stand, blocking the try for an extra point in the picture on the right. Both shots were taken during last week's Presbyterian-East Carolina Parents Day game in which the Blue Hose were defeated 6-0.

Hosemen Drop Sixth Straight; Lose to E. C. in Final Seconds

• Long TD Pass Proves Margin •

By ROY FOWLER

The gods of fate must have frowned down upon PC last Saturday afternoon. All day the Blue Hose had battled East Carolina to a standstill 0 to 0 tie. With only six seconds remaining in the game, it appeared the contest would end that way. Suddenly lightning struck, swiftly and fatally, as East Carolina quarterback Ralph Zehring hurled a 35-yard pass into the waiting arms of halfback Lee Atkinson who gathered it in on the PC 20 and raced unmolested the rest of the way for the only score of the game. Atkinson missed the extra point attempt.

With two and a half minutes remaining in the game, the Hose were apparently marching toward the winning touchdown. On fourth down and three yards to go on the PC 27, halfback John Lucas took a handoff and crashed over the right side of the line for what appeared to be the vital first down. The referee, however, ruled that Lucas' forward progress had stopped short of the mark thus stopping the scoring threat on the 25-yard line. Earlier in the game the Hose had moved to the Bucaneers' 21, 26, and 24-yard lines without scoring.

Bob Waters, despite fumbling three times, passed beautifully as he completed 6 out of 10 for 102 yards. Another powerful offensive weapon for the Hose was the draw play which fullbacks Jim Nichols, J. W. Drew, and freshman Billy Sease all ran very well. Ken Webb, handicapped by a bad left arm and a wet turf, performed very creditably. Standouts in the line included end Ted Leahy, center Mac Copeland, tackle Jack Coppley, and frosh Hardy Ledbetter.

So, another season is about to draw to a close, with games remain only with Newberry and possibly a re-scheduled tilt with Davidson. Perhaps the Hose will win one of these contests, but don't bet on it. Next year should be a much brighter one for PC fans, so just as the famous Brooklyn Dodger cry was, "Wait till next year," so shall the Blue Hose cry also be.

Intramural Football Hits Deadlock; KA, Pika's Play Off Tie, Pikaps Third

KA's 6—Pika's 0

Last week the Pika's and the KA's met for the second time this year in IM football. The Pika's had a perfect record of 9-0 while the KA's had an 8-1 record, the one KA loss being to the Pika's. The KA's won 6-0.

The second game proved to be a rougher game than the first one. The Pika's scored on a pass play only to have the play nullified because the ball had been grounded due to a bad center from Bill Roberts. In the final moments of the first half the KA's scored on a pass play from Tommy Richards to Bill Francis. The try for the extra point was no good. The first half ended before there was a kickoff.

The second half was a bitter struggle. Neither team was able to advance far. Both teams showed strong defensive units.

Pika's 6—KA's 6

Tuesday the KA's and the Pika's paired off for the IM football championship. The KA's and Pika's fought to a 6-6 tie with the game being called because of darkness.

In the first half the Pika's moved very near the goal line. "Chief" Segrest threw a pass to Bill Roberts in the end zone only to have Roberts drop the ball. The KA's took over. On the very next play the Pika's intercepted a pass. The KA defense stiffened and the Pika's were unable to score. In the final moments of the first half, the KA's scored on a quick pass from Tommy Richards to "Bony" Arrington who raced 50 yards for a touchdown. The try for the extra point was no good. The half ended.

In the second half the Pika's scored on a pass play from "Chief" Segrest to Bob Hill. The point after touchdown was no good. From then on, both teams were unable to score again. It was a hard fought game that saw many interceptions by both teams. It might have been called a game of interceptions.

Pi Kappa Phi Is Third

This past Tuesday the Sigma Nu's and the Pi Kappa Phi's played for third place in IM football. The Pi Kappa Phi's won 18-0.

In the final moments of the first half the Pi Kaps scored on a pass play from George Aiken to Melvyn Little. The try for point after touchdown was no good. The half end before there was a kickoff.

The Sigs came very close to scoring in the second half only to have a pass intercepted by Melvyn Little. Moments later the Pi Kaps moved to the one-yard line where they lost the ball on downs. The Sigs were not able to move the ball far up field. The Pi Kaps cashed in on this advantage by scoring for the second time on a pass play from George Aiken to O'Neal Crocker. They failed to make the extra point. Later on Verbie Green intercepted a Sig pass which developed into a Pi Kap touchdown. They scored on a pass play from George Aiken to O'Neal Crocker. The try for extra point was no good.

PC Drops Opener to Rangers, Cagemen Victims in Overtime

In their initial outing of the season the Presbyterian College Blue Hose cagers dropped a close 102-99 decision to the Piedmont Rangers in a closely matched overtime contest.

Throughout the game the lead changed hands several times before Earl Wooten put the game on ice for the Rangers with only 30 seconds remaining. Jim Slaughter was high man for the Rangers with 27 points.

Lack of varsity experience proved the difference as the Hose youth could not cope with the Rangers' height and strategy. One of the bright spots in the Hose lineup was that at one time Presbyterian had four players with relatively little varsity experience and showed up well against the poorly conditioned men from Piedmont.

Leading the Hose was Ken Caswell with 30 points. Caswell teamed up with guard co-captain Bill Sullivan to lead the Hose defensively. Sullivan also turned in his usual fine game as playmaker.

The person who was probably most responsible for keeping the Hose in the ball game just prior to and during the overtime was Clayton Adams. Adams continually played the boards with authority and time after time dumped shots in at crucial moments of the game.

Ralph Chambers started things rolling for the Hose by sinking the first two baskets. Chambers went on to turn in a stellar performance before fouling out late in the game.

During the first half the lead changed hands one time with the aggressive Hose leading when the whistle blew for intermission, 43-39.

Blue Hose Basketball Opposes Twenty-Three

Presbyterian cagers will battle 23 opponents during the 1957-58 basketball season, Athletic Director Walter A. Johnson anounced today.

The Blue Hose are slated to open their campaign on November 30 against the strong Parris Island Marines here in Clinton. They will play every state team except the Unviersity of South Carolina and Clemson, and the schedule also includes strong teams representing Belmont Abbey, Georgia Teachers, and Mercer.

This year marks the opening season for new head basketball coach Courts Redford, now engaged with the football backfield. He starts without the Thompson boys, Dave and Bruce, who ranked among the nation's top scoring combinations last year with an average of more than 50 points per game and who paced the PC attack during their four-year careers here.

Caswell, Sullivan Basketeer Captains

Two sparkplug guards have been named co-captains to lead Presbyterian College basketeers through the rugged 23-game schedule ahead for the 1957-58 season.

They are Ken Caswell, of Paris, Ky., and Bill Sullivan of Frankfort, Ind. Teammates have just elected them to the responsbile positions of leadership under Coach Courts Redford.

Caswell and Sullivan may be the stardust twins of the PC court this season.

Caswell matches his stellar defensive work with an offensive eye which last year earned him a 14.8 points-per-game average. Sullivan shines as the club's floor man and ball handler, and he averaged nine points each game offensively as a sophomore. More important than these averages, perhaps, is the fact that on any given night—with the chips down—either player may burst forth on a high-scoring spree. For example, Sullivan splurged for 27 points against Furman, while Caswell staged a 20-point outburst against Belmont Abbey in two of last season's more important engagements.

Varner Victor Again; Moves On To Nationals

A Presbyterian College freshman, Evin Varner, is the Southeastern winner of a National 4-H achievement project in community relations.

Varner, a freshman from Bennettsville, will claim his award when he leaves next week on an expense-paid trip to Chicago to the National 4-H Club Congress assembled at the Conrad Hilton Hotel. By winning in the competition for this 16-state section, Varner qualifies for consideration in the national contest which carries a $400 scholarship as its prize.

given each year to the alumnus who, in the opinion of the Board of Directors, has performed the greatest service to the Presbyterian College Alumni Association. The name of each recipient is placed on a plaque which is kept on display at the college.

Cornwall, popular Clinton businessman and farmer, was a member of the class of 1925 at PC and served as class president his senior year. He entered Presbyterian from his hometown of Chester but remained in Clinton after marrying a local girl, the former Miss Ethel Copeland. Cornwall has maintained an active interest in the college since his undergraduate days, assisting student organizations and the alumni operations whenever possible.

Satellites, Missiles Topic of Discussion

The position of the United States on Missiles and Satellites will be the topic of a panel discussion at the next International Relations Club meeting.

Mr. Clark, Associate Professor of history, will act as moderator of the panel which is composed of Dr. Whitelaw of the science department, Lieutenant Colonel Barnett and Lieutenant Bennett of the Military Department, and Mr. Gray of every department.

The IRC program will be held in the Radio Forum Room at 8:00 on Monday night, November 25. All members of the student body and faculty are invited.

John Childers, president of the International Relations Club, had this to say in an interview, "This subject, so pertinent to our times, has been one of the top subjects of discussion in the newspapers and on the air, and the opinions of our own faculty members should prove quite interesting as well as enlightening."

Black Watch Scotch Regiment Plans Charlotte, N. C., Invasion

The Black Watch Scottish Regiment—senior Highland regiment of the British Army, which fought the patriots in the American Revolution—is planning an invasion of North Carolina this month!

But when the Black Witch (sometimes called the "Ladies from Hell") comes marching o'er the border, they'll be on a peaceful "invasion."

This time the regiment which ran General Washington out of Brooklyn and attacked White Plains, N. Y., is coming to show off their kilt-clad marching Regimental Band and also their second band of bagpipers and drummers. What's more, there's a group of Scottish dancers coming along to perform the Highland fling, the sword dance, the Reel of Tulloch, and the Argyll Broadswoards.

The one appearance in the Carolinas will take place Monday evening, November 25, at the Charlotte Coliseum.

Nicknamed the "Ladies from Hell" by the Germans of Woird War I, who found the Scotsmen fierce fighters despite their lady-like kilts, the Black Watch has an exciting military history. They have won battle honors since their origin in 1725, when they formed to police or "watch" the turbulent Scottish hill country during the "black" of night—hence the name Black Watch.

But as for their part in the American Revolution, the Black Watch record book has this to say: "We can boast no battle honors for our part in the American War of Independence, because it was rightly decreed that battle honors should not be granted for a war with our kith and kin."

There'll be plenty of the "kith and kin" out to greet the "Ladies from Hell" when they reach North Carolina. Charlotte is one of 57 U. S. and Canadian cities being visited by the two bands and dancers, whose tour is a goodwill gesture from Great Britain. Queen Eilazbeth, the Queen Mother, who is colonel-in-chief of the Black Watch, gave the tour her blessing.

The dark green and blue-black tartan plaid of the Black Watch Regiment, copied by American fashion designers, was taken in part from the ancient tartan of the clan Campbell. The Regiment was organized from among members of the Campbell, Grant, Fraser, and Munro clans of Scotland.

A Tough View on Smooching

(Editor's Note: This is an article on best amusements which was published in 1895 of the Emory Phoenix, literary magazine of Emory University, Decatur, Ga. Since a dance weekend just passed, we think it is appropriate.)

"For heaven's sake don't make a business of it, and don't jump at it with your hat in one hand and your overshoes in the other. Don't pounce on a woman's lips as you would a piece of watermelon or a ripe tomato and bend her back until you can hear the bones crack in the back of her neck.

"Don't glue your face to hers and have a good time all to yourself while flattening her nose on one of her cheeks. Don't take her by both ears and look into her eyes and then try to grab it quick. You are sure to bump noses.

"Stand a little behind her, just on the right side. Place your arm diagonally about the form, extending from her right shoulder until the ends of your fingers touch her belt buckle.

"Take it easy. Don't get excited. Let your hand rest gently for a moment on the warm velvet of her pink and white cheeks. Then gently work the muscles of the right arm until her right cheek rests firmly on your left shoulder just over the pocket.

"Take it easy. Don't be in a hurry, it'll keep. Send a little energy along the line of the left arm. Now stand still as long as you can. Then remove your right hand from her left cheek, letting it drop gently under her right chin. Work muscles of your right arm gently.

"Take it easy. Don't hurry. As chin rises work muscles and let your head fall gently forward. Now a little more motion down the left arm. And as the ripe lips, like twin rosebuds, part, revealing pearly gates through which there steals the warm, sweet perfume of her fragrant breath, then—well, you know the rest as well as I do.

Only take it easy. Don't hurry. It can't get away. And it would not if it could."

Blue Key Taps Three Seniors

Summers, Bowman, Livingston Named to Honorary Fraternity

Three seniors, Bill Bowman, John Summers, and Gordon Livingston, were tapped into the Presbyterian College Blue Key Chapter Friday. Dr. Newton Jones, head of the Histoy Department, was named an honorary member.

To become a member of Blue Key, a man must show leadership on and off the campus, apply himself, and maintain above average scholastic marks.

Bill Bowman served as captain of the 1957 Blue Hose football team, president of the Block P Club, Executive Officer of "C" Company, and as an active member of the Student Christian Association Cabinet. Bowman is hailed by his fellow students as being a leader in the drive for a revival of school spirit.

John Summers has served as commander of Band Company which is praised as one of the best in years, a member of Scabbard and Blade, past president of the International Relations Club, Feature Editor of the Blue Stocking, and Military Editor of the PaC-SaC. Summers was also commended for his work at Clinton's radio station, WPCC.

Gordon Livingston is president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, and is one of the oustanding senior cadets this year; he has been named a Distinguished Military Student, and is a member of Scabbard and Blade Honorary Fraternity.

Dr. Newton Jones, the only professor named to Blue Key Friday, was tapped because of his outstanding work as head of the History Department and his willingness to aid students.

Result of Diamond Jubilee

The Student Union Buildin, located next to Presbyteiran College's old Student Christian Building, is under construction and is due to be completed in the spring of 1958. This building, whichis a memorial to all PC veterans killed in American wars, is the first of several to be built on campus in connection with the Diamond Jubilee Drive.

Torre Spotlighted At Christmas Dance

By SAMMY TATE

Another famous Presbyterian College dance weekend is unfolding this weekend at the Aromry, as every girl from the Greenville Nurses' Home to Columbia College knows. The dance tonight is semi-formal and begins at nine o'clock to the music of Tony Torre's excellent band. In preparation for the big weekend, all fraternity men have been "bled dry," but the cost for non-fraternity men is a very nominal three dollars per couple.

From eight o'clock until twelve on Saturday night, there will be another well known "sweater dance," and again, Tony Torre's fine group will play. Folowing the dance there is planned to be a midnight breakfast in the Mary Musgrove ballroom at a cost of fifty cents per person.

Presbyterian Hummingbirds Travel For the First Road Appearances

By TOM WISE

The choir leaves Friday afternoon on a four-day tour which will take them as far south as Newnan, Ga. First stop for the chirpsters will be Walhalla, where they will give their first concert of the season Friday night.

Saturday morning the group will journey to Atlanta. Most of the day will be spent in "free time", so the students will be exploring the big city of Atlanta. Perhaps they will get a little Christmas shopping done, and avoid the rush.

The concert Sunday morning will be at Cartersville, Ga. Again that afternoon the group plans to return to Atlanta where they will sing at the North Avenue Presbyterian Church for the evening service Sunday night. The last concert on the tour will be at Newnan, Ga., about forty miles southwest of Atlanta. They will sing there Monday night, and return to the campus Tuesday morning.

The program this year is centered around the theme, "Christian Joy." The choir wil sing it in the exuberant melodies of Gretchinoff's "Song of Joy" or in some of the liveliest Negro spirituals. They wil sing it i nthe serene confidence that John Sebastian Bach embodied in the cantata, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," or Schvedov in his mystic anthem, "With Heart Uplifted, With Joyful Song." It will be sung in the martial accents that Claude Boudimel created at John Calvin's request for the "Psaume des Camisards", a psalm that became, later, the battle song of the Huguenots. They will sing it in the quiet devotion of Hammerschmidt's Lutheran Lied. It will be sung in the exultant polyphony of Jan Pieterszoon Sweelinck's great motet of the Dutch Reformation, "The angels said unto the shepherds."

Harvey Wittschen will again be at the organ, and Harold Galimore will be tenor soloist. The readers this year wil be Dick Carter, Roger Godwin, Charls Clark, and Tom Wise.

The Presbyterian College Choir wil share the Christian joy with hundreds of people throughout the Southland in hopes that they in turn wil share it also with others.

Max Shulman Speaks At Nat. Press Rally

Max Shulman, humorist, college newspaper columnist (for Marlboro cigarettes,, and author of the current best seller, "Rally Round the Flag, Bays!" (Doubleday), speaking to the Associated Collegiate Press 33rd Annual Conference at the Hotel New Yorker in New York last week said: "Trouble with youth today is not rebels without cause, but causes without rebels."

Shulman, in attempting to arouse the interest of American youth in truly legitimate causes, put it this way:

"We are to fat and complacent. For one thing, we must reverse the matriarchy! Women are naturally conservative. They are the nesters, the stand-patters. When America was run by restless men, this country was the light of the world. But today the covered wagon is a station wagon and the frontier is a picture window—looking out on somebody else's picture window. Here is something you can do with your own two hands to start reversing this matriarchy," he told the col - lege editors. "Take that girl you've been going steady with since you were 13 years old and punch her in the nose. 'This will settle the issues between you and she once and for all and leave no confusion as to who's boss."

"In my opinion women would appreciate the end of their matriarchy —which has occurred largely by default. Men come home at night too tired to make decisions, so the wife willy-nilly has to. She would be delighted to have this responsibility taken off her hands. So go ahead and take it from her."

Shulman is currently on a speaking tour of Eastern colleges, including Penn State, University of Kentucky, and Vanderbilt University.

Charlotte-PC Club Throws Christmas Ball

The Charlotte-PC Club has just completed plans for the annual Charlotte Christmas Dance to be held in the Fireman's Hall December 26, from 9:00 p. m. until 1:00 a. m.

The music for the dance will be furnished by Johnny Brooks and his Combo, one of Charlotte's leading groups of music makers. Johnny has provided the music for the dance for several years, and has done an outstanding job each time.

Everyone is invited to atend, and tickets can be obtained by seeing anyone in the Charlotte-PC Club, or by contacting Paul Arrington, President of the organization.

This dance has been extremely successful in the past, and with the plans now being put into action, it is shaping up to exceed its own spectacular precedent. This is a very gala and colorful dance, and the officers and members of the club are looking forward to seeing many of the PC'uns in Charlotte over the holidays to join in with the celebration.

Freshman SCA Plans For Annual Banquet

The Freshman SCA Cabinet, working with Mr. Powell, has planned a tremendous banquet for Thurdsay, December 12, and the entire student body is invited to come in semi-formal dress. There will be Christmas carols issuing from the stereophonic speaker system in picturesque Judd Hall, and fruit, nuts, and candy to reincarnate the spirit of Chrsitmas on our campus.

Immediately following the banquet is the annual SCA party, which is to start at seven o'clock, and is to be held in the chapel. Christmas carols will be sung until everyone is assembled when the party will be highlighted by skits from each of PC's six fraternities and the sorority.

The competition will be especially keen, because the winner will receive points toward the intra-mural trophy. This promises to be one of the more hilarious occasions of the year, so let's give them our support by going to the chapel immediately following the Christmas banquet Thursday night.

Christmas Parade

Presbyterian cadets helped escort Santa Claus into Clinton on Thursday afternoon.

The PC battalion of Reserve Officers' Training Corps marced in the annual Clinton Christmas parade, and it was one of the lead units in the event. Commanding was Cadet Major James T. Richards of Heath Springs.

The parade began at the Presbyterian College campus, circled the Clinton busines district, then returned to the campus.

Evin Varner Caps National Honors at 4-H Convention

South Carolina's two national winners in 4-H award programs, Evin Varner and John Atkinson, will be announced during the 36th National 4-H Club Congress at the Hilton Hotel, Chicago, December 1-5, 1957. Of the 1,300 Congress delegates from 48 states, Alaska, Hawaii and Peurto Rico, 194 will receive national honors in 4-H programs conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Evin Varner, Jr., 17, of Bennettsville, receives a $400 scholarship for his work in the 4-H Community Relations program awarded by Wm. Wrigley, Jr., Company. He is one of two winners in this program. Evin, during his 7 years of 4-H, has done good project work and also a good job in community relations for 4-H.

In his church he is a teacher of primary pupils, director of training union, and substitute organist. For his club he publicizes its activities by talks, news articles, TV and radio programs, and a 4-H Newsletter to the 15 counties in his extension district.

In school, he edited the school paper, was president of the library association, and helped to organize chapel programs. He has told the 4-H story to 10 garden clubs, to the DAR, the Jaycees and the Wildlife Federation. He also helped in local charity drives.

His community relations activities helped him obtain a college work scholarsip at Presbyterian College. His 4-H projects were in forestry, conservation, garden, grapes, health, safety, entomology, poultry, swine, home beautification, electricity, and wildlife. He is also 1957 state winner in public speaking.

What it Wuz Wuz a Parade

By CAROL TAYLOR

The theme of this year's Christmas Parade was a little different. Instead of the usual Yuletide conglomouration, its entitled, "Leave the door open Mother, Daddy is coming home blind."

The parade featured some unique floats and bands. Speaking of bands, here comes the first one PC's, ROTC'uns, led by John Summers. Notice his back room complexion and the circles around each eye. All three of them. And what is that music they are playing. It must be the mystery tune because no one seems to know what it is.

The Merita bakers had entered a float that seemed to be very catchy. It was entitled, "Does a girl have to be in the upper crust of society just because her old man's got a lot of dough." Hmmmm!

Another float that attracted a lot of attention was the fireworks display featuring the faculty wives.

And here comes the last float. Who is that sitting atop with all t he bottles marked XXX? No, it's not Saint Nick. Why ,it's Dad and is he ever blind. The sponsor of this float: You guessed it. Charles' Place.

PC Cadets Cited For Military Proficiency

Three more Presbyterian College cadets have been cited as "distinguished military students," Lt. Col. W. W. Barnett, professor of military science and tactics, announced today.

They are: Blair Baldwin of Blair, battalion S-3; James T. Faile of Kershaw, battalion S-1; and Robert R. Hill of Mayesville, battalion executive officer.

This trio was chosen on the basis of outstanding military knowledge, training and leadership to join these other topflight cadets who earlier had been designated "distinguished military students": James T. Richards, of Heath Springs, battalion commander; Alex C. Moorhead, of Anderson, Company A commander; and Bill Yearick, of Miami, Fla., Company C commander.

The Presbyterian College battalion is one of the oldest units of Reserve Officers' Training Corps in the country, having been activated in 1919.

The Shattering Results of a Housewife's Testimony...

Mrs. C. T. Sanders, the mother of two children, a member of the Episcopal Church, the A. A. U. W., the Home and Garden Club, the hospital auxiliary of her city, and Secretary of the Cherokee County Public Library Board, recently printed the following article entitled, "This I Believe," in a booklet called "South Carolinians Speak," (A Moderate Approach To Race Relations).

"As a follower of Christ I believe that God is my Father and that all men are my brothers. I know that I do not behave consistently as a Christian, but in spite of repeated failures I hope to grow closer to the ideal because I so firmly believe in this ideal. There are stumbling blocks which I must recognize and overcome. Because they are the same stumbling blocks which beset many men and women of good will, I presume to examine them here and try to find the right path over or around them.

"Prejudice would be the over-all term which lumps them into one mountainous obstruction, but let us consider some of its component parts. It is made up largerly of fear and ignorance: fear of the change of social patterns and the fear of race mixture, my ignorance of the feeling of others and their ignorance of my ideals and objectives. There is also a sad lack of intellectual intercourse among members of the white and Negro races which prevents an appreciation of each others' attainments. It is only when an individual wins approval because of his worth, not in spite of or because of his color, that we find prejudice melting away.

"In spite of individual cases of injustice we have come to accept the concept of 'equality before the law.' No longer is it popular to propose one law for men and another for women, or even one for white and another for black. However on the educational level our prejudices have chained us to a double standard.

or group should be left out or given special privilege.

"In South Carolina, as in other southern states, we have long told ourselves that we could serve democracy and the best interests of our people (does anyone doubt we mean white people?) by supporting two school systems, white and colored.

"Is there a South Carolinian who is ignorant of the situation that has long existed in our colored schools? We have simply condoned poorly prepared instructors teaching in scandalously inadequate buildings.

"When the fear of desegregation took hold, we quickly started building fine modern schools for colored children, but well-educated teachers are harder to come by. Even if we had unlimited funds at our disposal and could hire the best of Negro teachers and put them in the most modern buildings, we still could not give colored children the education equal to that given our white children.

"The colored child asks, 'Why separation?' The answer does not have to be in words. He knows. His heart whispers, 'Because I am not good enough to go to school with white children.' It is so simple to understand the injustice if we imagine ourselves answering our own children, were they in like position.

"I want for my child and for every child of God the right to lift his eyes and to say within himself, 'There is a place for me in America, in South Carolina if I choose. There is work for my hands and brain. There is happines sand achievement waiting for me if I am true to the best that is within me.' I do not want the color of his skin to kill that dream or a lack of educational opportunity to place chains upon his spirit more terrible than the iron chains that shackled the limbs of his forebears . . . . . "

To show you the results of Mrs. Sanders' written opinion, I have quoted the following portion of a news item from a November 21 issue of The Greenville News.

"Gaffney, Nov. 20—Investigators said no definite leads have been developed in the dynamiting of a Gaffney physcian-surgeon's home last night.

"Officers had several tangible clues but admitted it probably would take considerable time to run down and establish identity of the person or persons who set off explosives at the Dr. J. H. Sanders home. Twelve sticks of unexploded dynamite wired to a timing device were found within inches of the residence. Dr. Sanders, whose wife, Mrs. Claudia Thomas Sanders, is author of a pro-integration article in 'South Carolinians Speak,' said, 'We have been expecting something like this.'

"But Mrs. Sanders said the family, which escaped injury in the blast, had not been actually threatened. 'We haven't received any threatening calls.' Mrs. Sanders said, 'We have had some protests and one letter, unsigned, which was a pitifully ignorant protest, but nothing threatening.'

Concerning the dynamiting, the editor of The Greenville News wrote an editorial entitled "Gaffney Dynamiting Was Cowardly Act." I have quoted parts of this piece below.

"Every citizen of South Carolina who believes in maintaining racial segregation in the public schools and who is determined to oppose forced integration by every legal means should be shocked and angry over the Tuesday night dynamiting of the home of Mrs. Claudia Thomas Sanders in Gaffney.

"They should hope that the lawless persons who perpetrated the criminal act will be brought to justice quickly, and if they are able they should assist the officers of the law who are investigating the incident .

"Let those who disagree with her refute her statements with facts and logic. To answer her with violence is to magnify what she had to say. Within the week, her words will have been broadcast far and wide and the nation will cry shame upon South Carolina. . . .

"The issue of segregation versus integration should be discussed, especially the deep-rooted constitutional questions involved. And those who speak should be allowed to do so freely and without danger of bodily harm . . .

"The official policy of the state of South Carolina is completely opposed to integration. That policy is not so weak that it cannot stand full examination and thorough debate. It is capable of justification.

Santa and Snow-Humbug!

By JOHN SUMMERS

Twas the night before Christmas, and all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a rodent. And why should there be? Everyone in the whole wretched little town had gone to a party at Jake's Drive-In, and the entire contents of a giant size box of Decon had been sprinkled all over the house the week before.

Yes, it was only three days before Christmas, and the jolly old Elf at the North Pole was getting ready to make his annual non-stop house-to-house endurance test. One must admit that the medieval Fats Domino does get around. He is one spirit that is probably aged, but unfortunately due to past background, he isn't bonded. I believe that the case was for breaking and entering, or some other minor offense. In recent years he has been accused of having a red leader on his pack of delinquent does, but this is believed to be prejudices coming down from the Wildlife Association.

in his home, dividing it by the model number of his car, and adding onto this decimated figure, six plus the number of cartons of cigarettes he smokes per week. This gives you his annual income in thousands. With a wheeled caculator, this is figured out as to the amount he can spend on each gift. What a wondrous idea. This certainly will make Christmas more meaningful. The stores' motto reads over every door: "Give Unto Others What You Would Have Them Give Unto You."

Unfortunately, some adults don't believe in the Spirit of Christmas, the immortal merry maker, the bringer of toys and goodies. This is a sad case, but it is attributeed to the fact that they have been told the truth. It's like Eisenhower once said, the truth always hurts, but only for a little while, if you stand on the same street corner for a week and five days.

A growing majority of persons are complaining that the Yule season is becoming too commercialized. I interviewed a group of merchants, and they informed me that this is a gross falsehood. They simply make giving in the Christmas spirit a little easier. For example, they now are designing a chart that lets you calculate the gift you will receive from a friend, or enemy—as the case may be, in order that you will not over or under spend. This is done by taking the number of rooms

Jingle Bell, Jingle Bell, Snow, Snow, Snow. I haven't seen one flake in thirteen years, and the only time I did then was in an air-conditioned theatre with the wires crossed. Around here, snow is only something a girl does to a boy, of vice versa, on rare occasions when both are feeling exceptionally lonely. Snow is beautiful, but so are palm trees in the Yukon.

For us here at PC, it is indeed a happy time of year with almost three weeks of peace and quiet in the making, and the feeling of goodwill preavils between faculty and the student body.

In closing, Merry Christmas, and an elongated New Years!

Around the World in Eighty Days

By AL McKIE

Witty, satirical, and big--big-big "Around the World in Eighty Days" is a production that surpasses "Cinerama," by Mike Todd, who is better known in cinema circles as "Todd Almighty." It is worth at least the $2.50 this writer hesitantly poked through the window for a ticket. Fortunately this spectaculer does not follow too closely to the DeMille trend of lengthy productions although admittedly, it comes close with its two hours and fifty minutes running time. Everything about this flick is big; a cast of nearly 70,000 people and 8,000 animals, a troupe of 34 directors, a $400,000 wardrobe, with scenes filmed at 110 different locations.

Hardwicke, Fernandel, Buster Keaton, Beatrice Lillie, Cesar Romero, Edward R. Murrow, and Frank Sinatra, among others.

An abstract cartoon presentation of the action at the conclusion of "Around the World" allows the viewers to identify those stars which they were not able to recognize during the main action.

Although not to be compared with some of the all-time screen greats, "Around the World in Eighty Days" is a unique and delightful evening's entertainment.

David Niven, Shirley MacLaine, and Robert Newton star, but Cantinflas, the Mexican Charlie Chaplain, assumes major proportions by providing delightful comic relief in this, his first American production. He is in top form for his role as an unwilling but humorously gallant bullfighter at the corridas.

The cinema, like Jules Vernes' book, is a delightful spoof of the British and American scenes as the globe-girdling party blunder their way boldly back to London by one means of conveyance or another. The plot is exciting at times and the travelogue rivals Cinerama in both beauty and variety but Todd adds a third device to produce five-star entertainment. Over forty stars of screen, stage, and TV are cast in "bit" roles to delight the viewer as he recognizes such personalities as Charles Boyer, Joe E. Brown, Charles Coburn, Marlene Dietrich, Jose Greco, Glynis Johns, Peter Lorre, Red Skelton, Ronald Coleman, Noel Coward, Sir Cedric

The Devil's Hairpin

By SONNY PHILLIPS

Automobile racing and the psychology of the drivers are the subjects of this production. It capitalizes on the great and growing interest in automobile racing in this country and abroad.

Cornel Wilde has the lead role, co-starred with Jean Wallace, Arthur Franz, and Mary Astor.

The color, thrills and suspense of hard track, big car racing are perfect subjects for the camera and are used in the picture as a theme and backdrop for a psychological story. Wilde is a race driver who has retired as undispuied champion of the track. To show just what a "meanie" he is, his own mother despises him because he deliberately caused a wreck in which his younger brother received a permanent brain injury.

Miss Wallace is Wilde's girl friend, ex-fiancee of Franz who was his race sponsor, and is frustrated because Wilde prefers the impermanence of a hotel to the permanence of marriage. Miss Astor, as Wilde's mother advises her to leave him, which she does, a blow which ultimately brings him to his senses.

It is a typical picture where the "meanie" sees the light and becomes just a plain good "ol guy." Although the cars are fast and the action is fast, this seems to do very little to speed up the picture which somehow seems to drag. Possibly it might have been better if there had been more racing and less psychology, more Wallace and less Wilde, more sex and less race cars. This picture is a must for all race drivers who can't afford a psychiatrist.

Hose Falls Newberry Prey Lose Famed Bronze Derby

By ROY FOWLER

Newberry College captured second place in the Little Three and also the coveted Bronze Derby with a 13 to 0 victory over Presbyterian College on Thanksgiving Day. The game was played on a wet, muddy field. The Bronze Derby is symbolic of victory in the annual clash between PC and Newberry.

Senior quarterback Richard Phillips passed to end John Hudgens in the second period for the first Newberry touchdown. Taylor converted after the score. Bobby Rowe dashed 2- yards for the second and final Newberry TD with three minutes remaining in the game.

Presbyterian could not seem to get their offense to click. Bob Waters, trying to get his team back into the contest with the home run pass, was constantly thrown for losses by the hard charging Newberry line. Ken Webb, whose forte is offense, ironically enough stood out on defense in the last game of his really outstanding collegiate career. The Bull from Decatur, Ga., intercepted three Indian passes and deflected two more in the end zone .

So, the curtain falls on a dismal Presbyterian College football season. However, a ray of hope shines through the gloom. This year PC will lose only five seniors, Webb, Mavromat, McLaughlin, Bowman, and Powers. These men will be missed, but Coach Jones' freshmen have gained invaluable experience; and this hard gained experience may pay off in victories next season.

About the only effort that the Hose could display this season was a 0 to 0 tie with Lenoir-Rhyne. Not since 1937 have they had such a bad season. The 1937 aggregation scored only three times in losing 10 straight. So, you see, things could have been worse, but they could also have been a lot better. Let's hope the Blue Hose jell in 1958 and produce the first winning team since1954.

Coach Courts Redford Suffers Slight Injury

Coach Courts Redford suffered a slight injury last week when he accidentally fell while awaiting Ralph Chambers in the doctor's office. Red had taken Chambers to the doctor's office after Chambers had been injured in the PC-Piedmont basketball game. Coach Redford is almost fully recuperated, and he will not miss any basketball games or practices. Chambers, by the way, is okay too.

Cage Team Loses Opener to P. I. Challenges Strong Citadel Friday

By BILL TURNER

The PC cagemen who last week lost their season's opener to the Parris Island Marines, will play host to the strong Citadel Bulldogs Friday, December 6, in Charleston.

The Citadel team, coached by Norman Sloan, former Presbyterian College coach, was voted by the sports writers as the most improved basketball team in the country last year. Sharing honors with his team Coach Sloan was voted the outstanding coach in the Southern Conference. The Bulldog starting five which last year was composed of four freshmen and a sophomore will be back with the addition of some talented freshmen and transfers. The addition of these new men and the experience gained by last year's starting five should make the Bullodgs the dark horse of the Southern Conference.

The Blue Hose cagemen under new coach Courts Redford opened their 1957-58 basketball season last Saturday night against the Parris Island Marines. The Hosemen fell before the Marines 100-90.

The Hosemen minus the fabulous Thompsons, jumped to an early lead in the opening minutes but saw their lead vanish as the Marines began to find the range. Midway of the first period, the Marines overcame the Blue Hose and were coasting along with a 10-point lead at halftime.

The shorter inexperienced Hosemen put up a game fight but were unable to overcome the powerful Marines. Midway of the second half the Marines had opened up a 20-point lead, and it looked like a runaway and a drastic defeat for the Hosemen. However the "Boys in Blue" pulled themselves together employing a full court press and were able to come within eight points of the Marines. Their efforts proved to be in vain for the clock ran out and the Hosemen found themselves on the short end of a 100-90 score.

The Hose showed a scrappy, hustling team but were unable to compete with the Marines on the backboards. Time and again the Marines completely dominated both the offensive and defensive boards. Overall the taller, more experienced Marines proved to be too much for the Blue Hose.

Adams' 34 points and Sullivan's 33 led the PC scoring, while Nickelson and Aldridge led the Marines with 20 each.

Fifteen Teams In Basketball Battle

Intramural basketball gets underway this week with fifteen teams entered and the promise of an exciting season.

The games will be played under the same general rules as last year. One referee must be provided from each team to referee the game played before or after their game. Team captains must see that the results of their games are posted on the bulletin board in the dining hall by noon of the next day. No postponements will be allowed unless a representative from each team involved notifies Paul Arrington (Spencer 12) at least one day before the game.

Bill Fulton, chairman of Intramural Sports, asks that all teams make a special effor tto be present for all games since forfeiture will serve only to further complicate an already complicated schedule. In any case, two forfeitures will disqualify any team.

There will be only one round of play. The schedule is as follows:

Monday, Dec. 9
7:15—Theta Chi vs Wrecking Crew.
:815—Pi Kappa Alpha vs Alpha Sigma Phi.
Tuesday, Dec. 10
7:15—Kappa Alpha vs Vetville.
8:15—Sigma Nu vs Shovines.
Wednesday, Dec. 11
7:15—Globetrotters vs Kampus Kings.
8:15—Pi Kappa Phi vs Celtics.
Thursday, Dec. 12
7:15—Spencer Cats vs Rebels.
8:15—Kappa Alpha vs Shovines.

Run of the Hose

By BILL YEARICK

The Bronze Derby game at Newberry on Thanksgiving marked the last appearance for the 1957 Presbyterian College Blue Hose football team. Again the Hose came out on the short end of the score, losing 13-0. This season marked the worst campaign in twenty years; the Hose ended their 1957 season with a 0-10 win-loss record.

In summary of this dismal record there is not too much to say. Sometimes the team showed signs of brilliance, and at other times the fans contended that they would offer little competition to one of the topflight intramural teams or better yet the local high school. For the most part each individual follower had a valid reason why the team was not winning.

An analysis would reveal probably very little. After the humiliating 66-0 defeat at the hands of Clemson, some kind of barrier existed that breaking into the win column seemed almost non-existent.

The one bright spot of the season came on a muddy field against mighty Lenoir-Rhyne of the North State Conference. The Bears had wanted to bounce back into the win column after having a two-year winning streak snapped at the expense of a Little Three opponent. On the other hand the Blue Hose showed a great deal of determination and kept their stronger opponents on an even basis, tying the Bears 0-0 before a few loyal Rock Hill alumni. The outstanding feature of this game is that it was a model of teamwork. The players all realized the need for showing a good example and took it on themselves to provide the punch that was needed.

What is hard to figure out is that after such an outstanding effort against a supposedly superior team, why didn't the Hose break out of their slump and go on to a successful season?

The ensuing games that followed the Hose showed listless performances disappointing the small crowds that followed the contests. Each and every game meant another defeat.

No more rationalizing, no more excuses, the season is over and from some indications evidences a total loss. In one sense this is not entirely correct. Several freshmen received valuable experience in the usually one-sided contests. One individual rushing record was broken and will probably stand for a long time. Capable performances were turned in by individuals whose potential was not even suspected.

The cry, or whisper, of wait until next year is already heard. For the most part the only thing many of us can do is wait and hope. Logically the thing to assume is that the team can do no worse and will easily attain the totals reached in 1957 early in 1958. The answer will only be told by time which in the end will also erase the dim showing of the dormant Blue Hose.

Basketeers Show Scoring Punch

Although the '57 edition of the Hose hoopsters has dropped three close contest by narrow margins, the Hosemen continue to pour the round ball through the nets. An outstanding scoring punch has been revealed in the young season.

Three men have already indicated that they are capable of scoring in the double figures frequently and with a little luck one or two may be able to stay in the twenty points a game bracket. Outstanding defensive play has been erratic and shows signs of brilliance off and on.

Again lack of capable reserves will probably be the main cog in keeping the Hose machine rolling. Lack of varsity experience will no doubt be the main drawback and will undoubtedly play a main role in some of the closely fought contests.

South Georgia Nips PC "B's" In Closely Matched Contest

By BUDDY MULLIS

The Presbyterian College "B" squad nearly brought back a hard-fought victory, but in the waning minutes of the last quarter fell to a strong South Georgia College team at Douglas, Ga., 14-12, last Friday night

With five minutes gone in the opening fray, the host team scored and held a 7-0 lead. But the Baby Hosemen never gave up and contained the Georgia offense for the rest of the first half. Two times the Carolina bunch drove into SG territory only to cough the ball up on costly fumbles. Neither team threatened and each exchanged punts four times.

Trailing 7-0 after intermission, PC received the second half kickoff and marched the length of the field in eight plays for their initial score. Bruce Barnes, who just the same week had been convertd back to his old familiar fullback position, churned for good yardage on every attempt at the line. The highlight of the drive was a sparkling 45-yard Billy Cox aerial to Jon Vastine which carried to the SG 4-yard line. Cox's pitchout to halfback Don Kemp accounted for the six points. The try for the extra point failed.

A strong Hose defense stopped the SGC team cold in the third quarter and half of the fourth. Bob Biggerstaff and Ron Barnette led a tough forward wall which allowed the only scant yardage up the middle.

Larry Wood turned in his usual tremendous game at the halfback position both on offense and defense. The tiny 150-pound scatback from Mississippi piled up good yardage on quick dive plays and hurt the defense with his wide sprints. With the Hose behind 7-6 late in the third quarter, Wood took a flip from QB Cox and started around his left end but was met by the entire SG forward wall. Promptly Wood turned an about face, picked up several blockers and sprinted down the other sideline for the second score and a 12-7 lead. Again the PAT failed with Cox's boot going wide.

In the last quarter, the visiting aggregation seemed to be fighting the South Georgia team, as well as referees and spectators besides. Nothing resulted by way of fistic action but on several occasions a verbal torch was set off. It was obvious the officiating was below par during the contest, but a commendable report can be said of the Presbyterian College crew in the way they received a few bad breaks and continued to give forth a good and especially clean effort.

The South Georgia eleven scored a second tally late in the quarter and held a slim 14-12 lead which was never to be headed.

Little Khaki Field Jacket, and How!

An Equivocal Fairy Tale in Free Prose and Modern Dress.

(With apologies to Little Red Riding Hood and other hoods)

Once upon a time, according to a sort of lie, there live hereabouts a rosy-cheeked, rosy-eyed youth who always, wherever he went, wore a khaki field jacket, for which reason his waggish little friends, as was their grim custom, began to call him Little Khaki Field Jacket. Now just like you and just like little boys the world over, Little Khaki Field Jacket had two roommates; and they were called Little Charcoal Crew-Neck Sweater and Little Pleatless Tapered Corduroy Slacks With Leather Trim. One cold winter, so the story goes, Little Charcoal Crew-Neck Sweater, who was easy prey to every fad that came along, contracted Asian Flu and was straightway dispatched to the tower of Doyle Infirmary. On an evening a few daye after his departure, Little Pleatless Tapered Corduroy Slacks With Leather Trim bundled up Little Khaki Field Jacket in that habitual item of attire, and put a besket full of spaghetti and meat balls and cherry jello on his arm, and bade him take the goodies to their poorly roommate. He gave him, in addition, strictest instructions not to wander off or dawdle along the path, not to talk to strangers, and not to stop by Charley's. Little Khaki Field Jacket waved goodbye to his roommate and staggered merrily down the path. (At this point it might be well to mention that our hero had had on that particular day mammoth tests in Engilsh Lit. 201 and Biology 58; and he was, therefore, completely Bushed, not to say McIntired; for he had been up the night before until the morning after, and was still a tad groggy from an overdose of NoDoze and Miltown. To this foul condition we may, prehaps, partially attribute the colossal incredibility of his account of what came to pass forthwith.)

It appears that he had gone down the path no distance at all, lo and behold! what should he meet but a wolf; and not an ordinary wolf, mind you—not a wolf such as you have seen out in the back yard—but a wolf wearing massive horn-rimmed glasses, and a differentially permeable pale green nylon sport shirt, and a necktie with a hand-painted unicorn on it.

"Hi, there, fella," said the wolf mellifluously, "and what might your name be?"

"It might be Chicken Licken," said Little Khaki Field Jacket, which was uncivil of him. " And what might be your name?"

"It might be Ross Bush if we can get away with it," replied the wolf.

"Well, let us at least try," said Little Khaki Field Jacket, "for a Ross by any other name would not be nearly so funny."

"Can the ad-libbing," snapped the wolf. "Where are you going and what have you in that basket?"

"I am taking a batch of tasty ol' goodies to my roommate who is in the infirmary," Little Khaki Field Jacket told him.

"Are you now?" said the crafty wolf. 'I must say that is exceedingly charitable of you; but whyever don't you pick a bunch of these lovely posies that are growing round about for your poor ailing shut-in friend; I feel sure they would cheer him immensely."

"By Mother Goose! that's a fine idea," exclaimed Little Khaki Field Jacket ,and he set about it at once, soon becoming so involved in the task that he quite forgot his original and foremost mission.

Meanwhile the wicked wolf hastened away to the infirmary. Now the infirmary matron, we might explain at this junction, was, for the sake of the plot, a large, fierce bird named Mrs. Bob-White. Yes, she was. And unfortunately, when the wolf arrived, she was in the forest chopping wood. Well, the wolf—as you undobutedly are aware—stealthily entered the infirmary and ate Little Charcoal Crew-Neck Sweater, who slept through the whole thing, which is a blessing. Then the wolf jumped into the bed and pulled the covers up over his nose.

Some time later, when Little Khaki Field Jacket finally arrived, the wolf was asleep, and it was necessary for him to rap on the door several times before the wolf called out, in a wee, small voice, "Come in." A she approached the bedside with his basket of food and his boquet of wild flowers, he exclaimed, "My, Little Charcoal Chew-Neck Sweater, what a big room you have."

To which the wolf replied, "Stick to the script, you idiot; what big eyes."

"And my little Charcoal Crew-Neck Sweater, what a big bed you have!" he said.

"Nose! Nose!" said the wolf.

"And, my, oh my, Little Charcoal Crew-Neck Sweater, what a big vocabulary you have!" Little Khaki Field Jacket all but shouted.

And the wolf, convinced that Little Khaki Field Jacket was somewhat wary of delivering the punch line, cried, 'All the better to teach you a lesson with." And he leaped from the bed and ate Little Khaki Field Jacket, anyway. Alas and alack! just as he turned to the basket of goodies, who should burst through the doorway but Mrs. Bob-White. And when that fierce ol bird saw what had come to pass she was so angry that—believe it or not—she gobbled up the wolf. Then she sat herself down to the spaghetti and meat balls and cherry jello; and when she had eaten every bite of all the goodies, she arranged the wild flowers in a Dixie cup and set them on the cupboard in the corner, next to the gilt-framed picture of Thomas Alva Edison.

Moral: A Bush in the bird is worth two on your hands.

Ol' Scrooge Strikes Again

By LYMAN HARRIS

Once upon a time in Schlitzerland there was a cool cat named Scrooge. Scrooge was real gone, so real that he was almost went.

Every night he was the life of the party; Scrooge was a mad dancer and a real make-out king with the femmes. And what's more, Scrooge wasn't no ordinary cat; he was a mad worker, a Who's Who, tops in ROCID, and a prep star in collegiate athletics. And when ole Scrooge wasn't playing, he was a real athletic supporter.

This cat was the friendliest too; whenever babes wished him a cool yule, he would emote joyously, ' Yeah, man! It'll be a real humbug of a blast. The most!"

But one night after a ball, ole Scrooge couldn't sleep. He had indigestion from eating to many peanuts and punch. So he tossed and tumbled, rolled and rocked as he lay in bed, while concentrated stomach acid burned holes in his sheets. Scrooge mumbled, "Man, these gone gas pains' gotta go."

And when Scrooge did finally slumber, he had a hot dream. He was frolicking in the lane with some sweet chicks, when all of a sudden his cool dream wen tdry. This arch angel, dressed in white, came up and scared al lthe chicks away. In the face she looked like his mom, so Scrooge, like always when he saw his old lady, said, "Momma, give me to eat!" But ole arch-momma wasn't to much with him. She says, "Scrooge, thou have had it. The night before last thou came in yesterday; last night thou came in today; tonight thou came in tomorrow. I am through with you."

Ole Scrooge was sweating it, when out of a cloud of mist appeared the great white father, dad. Scrooge-boy was relieved, and cried, "Dad-Buddy!" But ole Dad-Buddy wasn't too much with him either. Dad-Buddy says, "Scrooge, Jr., I used to think that thee and me were the most. But I'm beginning to wonder about thee. Right now ,tho udoesn' twarrant a harp aid halo. Thou better get on the stick!"

Scrooge felt like he had been sold up the river, and he was really up th ecreek. He jumped from the bed and pressed his hot forehead on a cool window pane. A dark cloud floated in and it began to drizzle. A loon cried out over the lake. Scrooge was no longer cool; he cried out ,"I'm in heat, man! I'm in heat!"

When what before his wondering eyes did appear, bu ta miniature sleigh and eight puny reindeer. In Scrooge's eyes registered St. Nick. Scrooge ran to the fireplace down the hall, and down it jumped Santa, right on the ball. Scrooge licked Claus' hand joyfully.

But ole Nick pushed Scrooge-boy aside, and filled his stockings with ashes and switches. Santa filled the stockings jolly and quick and with a finger in his nose and a twinkle in his eye, shouted, "To the top of the roof, to the top of the wall, agapa, agapa! That's all!"

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter met for its session last Monday night. Plans were completed for our Christmas Open Social which was held Wednesday night. Plans were also discussed for the Christmas Dance and another Social to be held next Friday before leaving for the holidays. Pledge John Neal was elected to play the part of Santa Claus at the party.

Alpha Psi is proud to be joining the other chapters in our fraternity in celebrating the 112th anniversary of the founding of Alpha Sigma Phi at Yale University on December 6, 1845.

The Brothers and pledges also joined in a hearty congratulation to Brother John Childers on the pinning of Miss Jane Heath last weekend.

KAPPA ALPHA

Plans for the coming Christmas Dance weekend were discussed at the weekly meeting of Beta Phi. Brother Charles Quinn, Social Chairman, completed arrangements for the events to take place Friday and Saturday.

Also finalization of plans for the Kappa Alpha Open Social to be held next Wednesday, December 11, took place, at which time all non-fraternity men, their wives, members of the faculty and administration are invited to the Chapter lodge.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting this week the Brothers announced that a Christmas party is to be held Saturday afternoon at 3:30 for the children in a cottage at Thornwell. Brothers and their dates are invited.

Brothers of the Week were Ed Messer and Pecker Latham who pinned their girls recently. The Brothers also extended congratulations to Jack Shelburg who has been accepted at the School of Medicine of Virginia.

PI KAPPA PHI

At the meeting Tuesday night plans were made for the dance weekend. The dance intermission Friday night will be held in the fraternity rooms. The party Saturday night will be at Peck's Ranch.

Sonny Elmore and Joe Cunningham are welcomed into the Fraternity as new pledges.

THETA CHI

At the regular scheduled meeting this week plans were approved for socials to be held during the intermissions of and after the two dances which will be held the sixth and seventh of December. All non-fraternity men are cordially invited.

A picnic was planned for the brothers, pledges, and their dates to be held the afternoon of the seventh of December.

Plans for a Christmas party to be given for some of the children of Thornwell were discussed and passed. The party is to be held at four o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, the eleventh of December.

SIGMA NU

At the regular meeting last Tuesday night plans were made for an intermission party for Friday night of the dance weekend. Also, a breakfast will be given after the dance Saturday night. Both of these social functions will be at the Mary Musgrove Hotel.

Scabbard and Blade

At the meeting of the Scabbard and Blade, the vote was taken for new members. These names have been decided upon and tapping of these men will come in the near future.

Bob Hill having returned from St. Louis where he attended the National meeting of the Scabbard and Blade, reported the meeting as being very successful and enjoyable.

The Blue Stocking

Distinguished for Its Progress

Vol. XXXVI Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., February 7, 1958 No. 11

Student Council and Blue Stocking Honors

• To Be Selected •

Elections for the Blue Stocking editorship and for the position of Business Manager will be held on Monday, along with the election of two Sophomore representatives to the Student Council.

Nominated by the Blue Stocking staff for the position of editor were Roger Godwin of Atlanta, Ga., and Paul Arrington of Charlotte, N. C. Gene Wilson, also of Atlanta, Bryan Carr of Fayetteville, and Bill Turner of Winnsboro, N. C., were picked for the Business Manager race; Wilson withdrew from the slate due to lack of time.

Both Godwin and Arrington have had prior newspaper experience, Godwin serving as Associate Editor for the past year and Arrington working on the news, sports and feature staff. Both were newsboys as children.

Paul Arrington is president of the Charlotte-PC Club, is on the track team, a member of the SCA cabinet, the IRC, and an officer in his fraternity, Kappa Alpha. Godwin is a Reader in the Robed Choir, member of the Freshman SCA and now a member of the SCA cabinet, the IRC, and an officer in Alpha Sigma Phi.

When questioned for past honors Godwin stated that he was the winner of a spelling bee in the third grade, and runner-up in a ping-pong tournament. Arrington was a patrol boy in the fifth grade and once pitched horseshoes with Fuz Prickett. (He lost, but it was close)

Bill Turner, Sigma Nu, is Secretary-Treasurer of the IFC, a member of Tau Phi Pi science fraternity, and the Blue Stocking staff. Carr, a Pi Kappa Alpha, served as Circulation Manager of the Blue Stocking for the past year.

Nominations were Tuesday at chapel period for Sophomore Representatives on the Student Council. Will Wallace, a Sigma Nu, Frank Richbrough, of Theta Chi, and Hal McGirt, a non-fraternity man. Elections for the Blue Stocking and Student Council positions will be on the same ballot Mnoday in the rotunda of Neville Hall.

Polio Drive Closes; Total Over Last Year

The 1958 Polio Drive Campaign for Presbyterian College has netted a total of $126.12. This is an amount that is approximately five times that collected in the campaign last year.

The campus campaign was directed by the PC Blue Key Chapter under the leadership of Blue Key President Jim Barksdale. A week of intense campaigning was carried out last month with the outstanding results noted above.

The combined Laurens - Clinton Polio Drive was under the direction of Mrs. Ben Hay Hammet. Mrs. Hammet said that she was very pleased by the response to the drive by the students at Presbyterian College. She stated that the drive at PC was one of the best organized that there has been for several years.

Also in connection with the Polio Drive fund raising, polio shots have been and continue to be offered to the student body. A large number of students turned out for the initial shot which was given last month. The second shot was given this week but a large number of students who took the first shot failed to take the second .

Barksdale urges that all students take the shots. He especially emphasized the necessity of taking all three shots ,since all three must be taken in order to be completely immunized.

Several PC Alumni Moderators of Synods

Presbyterian College alumni currently serve as moderators of these four synods of the Presbyterian Church US.

Moderator, South Carolina—The Rev. Isaac Bagnel, class of 1927 at PC, pastor of the Bennettsville Presbyterian Church.

Moderator, North Carolina—The Rev. Marshal S. Woodson, '20, president of Flora McDonald College and acting president of proposed Consolidated Presbyterian College of North Carolina.

Moderator, Tennessee—The Rev. Anthony W. Dick, '21, pastor of the Memphis Second Presbyterian Church.

Moderator, Kentucky—The Rev. Thomas M. Johnston, '31, pastor of Maxwell St. rPesbyterian Church of Lexington.

Billy May Secured For Military And Fraternity Spring Dances

By ROGER GODWIN

Billy May and his Orchestra have been secured by the Scabbard and Blade for the 1958 Military Ball. April 11-12 is the date set for the dance which each year is sponsored by the ROTC Department.

Billy May ranks as one of the outstanding orchestra leaders in America today. He has displayed forward looking musical ideas since the early 1930 when he played jazz with an equally outstanding friend, Erroll Garner. May is famous for the humor and style of his music and for his showmanship. His latest recording is on a Capitol label and is called "Sorta May."

Alex Moorhead, Commander of the Scabbard and Blade, said that the securing of such an outstanding Orchestra was possible through the combined efforts of the Scabbard and Blade and the Inter-Fraternity Council. It was regretted that Billy May could only be secured for one night; he will play for the Friday night dance, April 11, which is the Military Ball. Fo rthe following night, April 12, a popular and moderately priced combo will be secured.

It was felt by the Scabbard and Blade and the Inter-Fraternity Council that this combination of a nationally known band and an outstanding local Combo would be conducive to a highly successful weekend.

The expense for the weekend will be somewhat more than it has been in the past, due to the securing of such an outstanding Orchstra. This expense will be borne by the Military students and the fraternities through the Inter-Fraternity Council. The increase in expense will be held to a minimum through their working together. It was felt, however, that the additional cost would be well worthwhile in view of the excellent quality of the music offered.

Tough Year for PC Robed Choir Noted Chirpers Hit Five States

Firehouse Five Plus Twenty-Eight

The Presbyterian College Choir is midway in a tour of twenty-six concerts, covering six states. The Spring tour, scheduled for March 29 through April 3, will carry the choir through Alabama, Missisippi, and Louisiana, ending in New Orleans.

Renewed each season by the addition of freshmen, the Choir is for the eleventh year trained and conducted by Dr. Edouard Patte, who is also the college's Professor of Sociology and an ordained Presbyterian minister. Dr. Patte attempts to depict musically great themes of the Christian faith. One theme is developed each season through the presentation of ancient and modern classical selections.

"Rejoice, Ye Chrisians" is the theme of this program which seeks to emphasize the message of joy which pervades the Christian faith. It is presented in three phases: "Joy to Live," "Joy to Believe," and "Joy to Witness."

A total of 26 concerts is included on the schedule of the Presbyterian College choir this season, a schedule which includes a spring tour through four Southern states and weekend engagements before church congregations throughout South Carolina.

Dr. Patte is now conducting the choir for his 11th season. During this time, the group has received outstanding recognition for its high standard of musical excellence in more than 425 appearances in ten Southern states and the national capital.

Special emphasis on the program this season is given to music of the early Reformation period. Dr. Patte is particularly pleased with two pieces he believes may be receiving their first audition in America: A Hammerscmidt motet in the Lutheran tradition entitled "Sing to God, O My Soul, Exult"; and Claude Gondimel's "Psalm 68" in polyphonic setting as used in the Geneva Cathedral.

Two chorales by Johnann Sebastian Bach are presented, along with the Latin motet "Angelus ad Pastores" writen by Jan Peter Swelinck around 1600. The program also includes several anthems of the old Russian school and, by request, four Negro spirituals of varied moods.

The breakdown of the Presbyterian College Robed Choir for the 1957-58 season includes:

Tenors—Blair Baldwin of Blair; Sonny Embry of Birmingham, Ala.; Harold Galimore of Tryon, N. C.; Lonnie Love and William Stubbs, both of McColl; Britt Spann of McRea, Ga.; Charles Taylor of Shreveport, La.; Don Burquest of Sarasota, Fla.; James Eller of Charlote, N. C.; Rohe Esbaugh of Louisville, Ky.; Jack Fallaw of Rock Hill; Edward Galloway of Jacksonville, Fla.; Pat Griffin of Montgomery, Ala.; Bob Pinkston of Carthage, N. C.; and Cliff Stovall of Mullins.

Bases—Roger Godwin and Billy Piephoff, both of College Park, Ga.; Jim Townsend of Bennettsville; John Childers, of Birmingham, Ala.; Mike Brown of Albany, Ga.; Scott Reed of Union; Charles Clark and Gil Taylor, both of Orlando, Fla.; Ben Vincent of Danville, Va.; Gene Wilson of Atlanta; Tom Wise of Thomasville, Ga.; Harry Byers of Jonesboro, Ga.; Dick Carter of Florence; Bill Cashwell of Fayetteville, N. C.; Rutledge DuRant of Gable; and Bob Horseman of Brinkley, Ark.

Harvey Wittchen of Charleston, serves as organist for the group.

Eight Students Chosen PC Senior Superlatives

Eight seniors were elected for Senior Superlatives before the semester break.

Jim Barksdale was voted Best Dressed, Bill Webb—Most Popular; Dick Hamby—Most Intellectual; Jay Drake—Most Handsome; John Brownlow—Most Athletic; Larry Clark—Wittiest; Guice Potter—Best All Around; and Bob Hill—Friendliest.

These men were elected by the Seniors at a chapel period, and their pictures will appear in the annual.

Dr. Patte, Choir Conductor, Serves His Eleventh Season

Dr. Edouard Patte, who has conducted the choir for 11 years and through more than 425 concerts, not only knows his music. He teaches Presbyterian students sociology and fine arts, and he is an ordained Presbyterian minister.

A native of Switzerland, Dr. Patte received muscial training in several of the leading graduate schools of Europe. He acquired his AB degree from the University of Geneva when only 16 years old, and also holds degrees in letters, theology and sociology. His advanced studies in music have centered in particular upon organ and choral work at the Geneva Conservatory of Music and Geneva's Saint Peter's Cathedral.

Vitally interested in the YMCA, Dr. Patte at one time was general secretary of the Geneva YMCA and during World War II became one of the executives of the War Prisoners' Aid of the YMCA in Europe and America.

He settled in the United States after the war and helped to establish the North Augusta (S. C.) Presbyterian Church. It was from the pulpit of this church that he joined the Presbyterian College faculty in 1947. Dr. Patte continues to supply churches and he recently served as moderator of Enoree (S. C.) Presbytery. Dr. and Mrs. Patte and their son, Chris, became naturalized citizens of this country in 1950. Chris, a 1956 graduate of Presbyterian College, now serves as an officer with the 101st Airborne Division.

In the 11 years under his direction, the Presbyterian College singers have become recognized as one of the outstanding college choirs in the South.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Editorials : Features : Humor

We Get Letters...

Letters printed are not necessarily the opinions of the Blue Stocking. Their purpose is to give students a chance to express themselves. The Blue Stocking is also willing to print answers to any letters, if the opposing party chooses.

"Dear Editor,

"The purpose of this letter is not to bring to the student body the particular act involved, but the principle behind it.

"For approximately two hundred years after our country was first settled we were under the rule of England. In 1776 this nation rose up against its rulers and established a free nation in which a democratic government prevailed and the protection of the natural rights of its citizens was foremost in the minds of the Constitutional Fathers who drew up our Constitution.

"The act that is behind this letter occurred a few weeks ago on this campus. A student brought a piece of his personal property to school and put it in his room. On finding out about this, the administration removed this article from his room without his knowledge. They did not notify the boy concerning this article and give him a chance to explain where he got it. In fact the first thing that the boy knew, he and his roommates received carbon copies of a letter which had been sent to their parents. The letter stated that these boys had unauthorized possession of this article which had been removed and turned over to the city police. They were also charged in order to pay the man who had taken the sign to the police.

"After receiving this letter one boy went to the administration and told them that the article belonged to him, and that he had had it for around three years, and that his roommates had nothing to do with it. After hearing this, the administration sent a retraction to the parents explaining what had happened and expressed their apologies.

"As I stated before the purpose of this is not the act, but the principle. What would you do if someone entered your room or home and took something that belonged to you without giving you a chance to explain how you acquired it? These rooms are ours just as much as if we were renting an apartment from someone; therefore, the administration did not have the right to remove this boy's property from his room.

"Not only did the administration write six unnecessary letters, cause a man to waste time in taking the article to the police, worry these boys' parents, and create a feeling of ill will, but they also violated the 4th Amendment of the Constitution, which protects a person, his house, papers, and property against unreasonable search and seizure without a search warrant describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized.

"The next thing we know, we will be having our rooms and personal belongings searched, which is alright with me provided they have a search warrant as prescribed in the 4th Amendment to the Constitution. How about you?

"I believe in protection of the consitutional rights of man and protection of the rights of the minority.

Legal Club Reorganized

By PAUL ARRINGTON

Presently under consideration for another member to join the vairous "clubs" on campus; it is the Legal Club. The Legal Club, previously known as the Solons, was once an active part of campus activity in which all whatsoever took an active part; but, during the war years, its members lost interest and the club was forgotten.

At the beginning of this school year, with quite a number of law students enrolled, the interests in such a club were revitalized. Since then, with the always available assistance of Dr. Newton Jones, the club has progressed to the stage wherein the by-laws are being drawn up, which will pertain to all the interests and functions of the club. Mr. John Glover has consented to act as faculty advisor and will assist in the forensic functions of the club's activities. Also acting in an advisory capacity will be Mr. Tench Owens, Past President of the Solons, who will assist in the general legal activities.

The main functions of the club will be to carry on debates, to assist its members in obtaining pertinent books of law, to carry on correspondence with law schools in this part of the country and with the U. S. State Department, and to aid in general any student who plans to make a career if the many fields of the legal profession.

There is a need for many more interested members, and it is hoped that all members of the student body who have an interest in any legal field will take an active part in its many planned activities.

NEW BOOKLET

A new booklet, "U. S. Marine Flight Training," is now available to any college man interested in becoming a Leatherneck Flyer.

The booklet contains a thorough coverage of the Marine aviation officers training during flight school.

Personnel interested in this booklet, or any other Marine officer program, should contact Major Charles B. Redman, by writing or visiting his office in room 407, First Citizens Bank Building, Raleigh, N. C., or by calling TEmple 2-1131.

The Burden of Power

The acquisition of power and its use for personal or tyrannical ends stands in the way of humanity's search for peace and new horizons to guide its creative energies.

This classical theme, as applied to contemporary life and times is presented by Edwin Hedman in a just-published book, "The Burden of Power," by Pageant Press.

Using the fgiure of the god Zeus, the author reveals the thoughts of this Tyrant and king of the gods experiences when confronted by the personal charm and loveliness of Semele—a symbol of freedom and democracy.

The adventures of Zeus truly indicate the nature of the problem when power gets into the hands of men who do not falter to suppress. Detailed are the steps to power—his success—and the ultimate disaster of those taken in by his guile.

Both powerful and pastoral, depending on the mood, the verse conveys an acknowledgement of the universality of the Zeus-like figure possessing the power of destruction. Mr. Hedman artfully avoids preaching, but does make a plea for power to serve in the cause of freedom.

Movie Review . . .

And God Created Woman, And woman succumbed to temptation. Briggette Bardot stars in this movie —need we say more. Frankly, this to more relaxed censorship in the picture is an example of the trend movie industry especially in the north. For example, certain of the "spicier" parts included in the Atlanta. Censorship or not, this Washington showing were deleted in Bardot woman is sexy. However, excluding this factor from the review and leaving the matter to personal taste, this movie must be recommended both on grounds of the superior acting of Bardot and the supporting cast plus the well developed and (in places) dramatic story. The fact that the dialogue is in English and that the photography is in wide screen color adds to the enjoyment.

Briefly stated, "And God Created Woman" is the story of an orphan who while living with her foster parents acquires unjustly the reputation of a tramp and thus marries out of necessity and not love to prevent her return to the orphanage. The basic action is her struggle to remain faithful despite temptation and to discover a more spiritual love toward her husband.

However, she is overcome by a physical attraction to her husband's brother and her submission to him nearly destroys the newly discovered happiness and security evolving out of her hasty marriage. The intervention of her husband's wealthy employer, who himself originally desired the woman but later realized she could be his ruin, prevents the dissolution of the marriage. The cinema ends with the reconciliation of the young couple. The audience senses the probability of future temptation but the increased strength and love in this marriage indicates success.

Critics have generally rated this production good to excellent.

ALPHA PSI DELTA

The sisters and pledges of Alpha Psi Delta held their weekly meeting at the home of Miss June Adair. Refreshments were served, after which plan were made for the smoker. Officers were also elected for the coming year. Sara Christy was elected to the office of president; Dorothy Chandler became the new vice-president; Mary Virginia Neil took over the secretarial duties; and June Adair was elected treasurer. Gayle Robertson was elected pledge mistress at this meeting on January 18.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter met Tuesday night at which time the date for the annual "Black and White Ball" was set. It is to be March 22 in Charlotte. Plans were also discussed for the smoker and for a drop-in after the basketball game Saturday night. Brother John Childers was commended for pinning his girl recently.

KAPPA ALPHA

The weekly meeting of the Beta Pi Chapter was held Wednesday night at which time a most favorable letter from the Order's Regional Advisor concerning the high merits of Beta Pi was presented to the brothers by our Number One, Guice Potter.

The brothers were told of the most recent plans for the Military Ball weekend by our IFC representative, Jim Hentz.

Later, a discussion of some length was led by social chairman Charles Quinn concerning first the smoker to be held Feb. 20, and second the big open social to be held after the basketball game tomorrow night. It was emphasized by Brother Quinn that of course all students would be cordially welcomed.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting held Tuesday evening important matters were discussed and a regular slate of business was carried out by the new officers. Brother Bill Wolf was welcomed back for this spring semester. Don Segrest, who pinned his girl, along with Bob Hill and Jerry Crawford, were named outstanding brothers of the week. Plans were made by Maurice Copeland for a "stag supper" Friday night, the 7th, at Panorama Lodge. Everyone is invited up to the fraternity suite after the game.

PI KAPPA PHI

At the regular meeting, Beta elected Marvin Jenkins of Mullins, to the office of Warden vacated by Charles Madden of Greenville.

The brothers and pledges welcome Pledge Bob Biggerstaff into the brotherhood.

THETA CHI

At the regularly scheduled meeting of the Beta Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity plans were made for a party to be held on the 15th of February. Plans for the Smoker were also discussed.

SIGMA NU

At the regular meeting of Zeta Theta Chapter, plans were discussed for the "White Star" weekend which is to be held March 7-8. This dance will be at the Mary Musgrove Hotel, and all chapters in this area will be invited. Plans were made for a party this Friday night.

Preston Visits Town

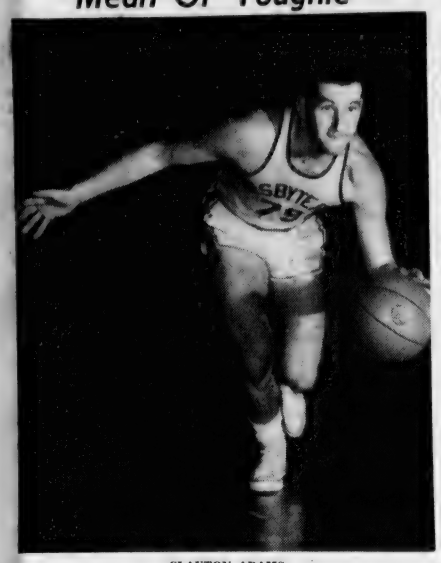
By T-BOY ELLIS

Have you ever wondered how hoypnosis actually works or what it feels like to be hypnotized? If you have, then you probably went to see the Great Preston, who was in our fair city this past Monday and Tuesday. If you didn't then lend me your eyes for a few lines.

It was a strange sight to see a long black Cadillac strolling through the streets of our city with a driver having a wierd look in his eye. If you couldn't take you eye off him then you wouldn't have noticed the Cadillac or the bold sign advertising "The Great Preston," Hypnotist and Magician.

He is the man that has caused much conversation and doubt in the minds of Clintonians and students of Presbyterian College all this week. His performance was quite a demonstration of the power of hypnosis and some of the things that can be done through it. Not to leave out the part about his magic act either, for it was well presented and fascinating. The majority of his magic was slight of hand tricks with a very apt act of putting a number of needles on his tongue, drinking a glass of water, placing a length of thread in his mouth, also drinking more water, and bringing the needles strung on the thread out of his mouth. It's beyond me how he does it, but as the purpose of his act is to fool people, then I guess I am fool enough.

The main attraction was when he put one of our lads to sleep for four hours at a time of $3.00 an hour. I would have done this myself but having a rather weak mind I remained an innocent bystander.



Not that having a feeble mind has anything to do with hypnosis but a person has to have a reasonable power of concentration. This is considered the most important thing in hypnotizing or being able to hypnotize a person. As to how the Great Preston does it, it is fairly hard to determine. People of his type of profession rarely divulge their trade secrets.

Monday night he hypnotized a lady from the city in the window of Maxwell Brothers Furniture Store and at the beginning of his act, had her brought in an ambulance to the High School auditorium. You may think that having to come in an ambulance might suggest that she was sick, but this was just the most convenient way to transport someone who is asleep. Or as this case was, under hypnosis.

The next night he transported one of our own students, Jack Crandall, from a state of complete normality to that of a hypnotic sleep or one of the school's best courses commonly known as "sack time." The fascinating thing was that he was hypnotized over radio. First, he tested Jack out for his susceptibility to hypnotic suggestion and as you can guess our boy was quite susceptible. He then proceeded to put him into a complete state of hypnosis whereby he told him that whenever he would say "go to sleep" he would immediately fall into a deep, restful sleep, but not harmful sleep. Then Preston motored out in his Black Unit to our local radio station WPCC to finish his job. Jack, in the meantime, was listening to the radio at the furniture store and when he heard Preston's voice he knew that he was going to go to sleep. So our lad racked out in the window of the store. But do you think he was there all by his lonesome? Not our boy Crandall, for Preston being the man that he is, placed beside him a very attractive girl form our local burg. Don't get me wrong though, she was ten feet away in another bed. And there slept the two of them in compliance, he went into hsi magic them to appear on the stage that

CLAYTON ADAMS

Adams Proves Asset to Hose; Begins Third Year as Regular

By ROY FOWLER

Clayton Adams came to PC after playing several seasons of high school and service basketball. He became a great asset to the Blue Hose during his freshman year as he teamed up with Dave and Bruce Thompson to bring the Hose a Little Four championship in 1956. Clayton averaged 12, four points a game during that season.

Clayton hails from Spencer, Mass., and is known to his teammates as "Beak"; the reason for the nickname is fairly obvious. Adams has a fine competitive spirit, confidence, and a desire to win. When he is not in the game you can always hear him pepping it up from the bench.

"The Beak" has an uncanny ability to score under the backboards and you might call him the backboard artist of the team. Clayton also relies on a southpaw hook shot for his points, and this year he has developed an outside jump and push shot to add to his effectiveness. A hustler on defense, Adams also uses his 6'2" frame to advantage in snaring rebounds. Clayton should prove invaluable in helping the Hose to gain more cage victories during the remainder of this year and next year also.

Firy Spirit Ignites Hose to Winning Play

Presbyterian cangers, after taking time off for semester examinations, already have racked up top grades in the basketball book of their supporting fans.

For, the unheralded little squad, which was conceded less than an even chance against larger rivals at the start of the season, has blazed its way to an imressive record of 10 victories and just 6 defeats thus far. And the momentum seems to increase nightly as the fiery spirit ingnites yet greater hustle.

The Blue Hose wil put South Carolina's top basketball record to a severe test when they return to action at Wofford this Saturday night. It's an important game in the fast Little Four League which PC currently leads on the strength of a victory over Newberry. The Indians, in turn, have whipped both Wofford and Erskine.

Presbyterian courtmen have collected 992 total points in the first 12 games for an 82.5 per average. That ranks high nationally. The most impressive figure, however, is the point spread which emphasizes the quality of PC's basketball defense this season. Opponents have colected 810 total points for a 67.5 average.

The well balanced nature of the Presbyterian attack is a key factor in the success this year. Individual stardom is subordinated to team play, and four of the five starters are currently averaging more than 13 points per game.

Sophomore Forward Ralph Chambers of Clinton, heads the offense with 206 points and a 17.2 average. He's followed closely by Guard Ken Caswell of Paris, Ky., with 189 points and 15.8 average. Guard Bill Sullivan of Frankfort, Ind., has pumped in 165 for 13.8 per game, and another sophomore forward—Bob Stratton of Lawrenceville, Ky.—boasts 158 points and 13.2 average. Among the othe regulars, Clayton Adams of Philadelphia, averages 7.6 points with 91 total, Center Wyatt Aiken has 82 and a 6.8 average, and Freshman Guard Don Blanchard of Fayeteville, N. C., has shot 62 for a 5.2 average.

Hose Post Impressive Record In State Play

By ROY FOWLER

With two-thirds of the season behind them, the Presbyterian College basketballer shave a highly respectable record of 10 wins and 6 losses. The Hose have a two wins and one loss record in the Little Four standings. Newberry leads the Little Four with a mark of three and one. Should PC defeat Wofford Saturday night, it would place them in a tie position with Newberry. The contest with Newberry on Newberry's home court the following Saturday night would then gain special emphasis. Fort the Little Four team with the best record in league play gains the number one seeding in the annual Little Four tournament which takes place after the regular season is over.

The Blue Hose have come along very nicely under Coach Courts Redford's first year of leadership. At the beginning of the cage season perhaps no one would have predicted that the Hose would have a 10 and 6 record at this point. That they do have this record can be attributed to the fine coaching of Redford and the hustling, determined spirit of the far this year have been recorded players. Impressive victories thus over Furman, Mercer, Pheiffer, Georgia Teachers, and Newberry. It might be added that the Hose are also definitely out to revenge an earlier season setback at the hands of Wofford when the Terriers invade Leroy Springs Gymnasium Saturday night.

Ralph Chambers of Chicago, Ill., has led the Hose thus far this season in scoring, being followed closeby Bob Stratton and Ken Caswell, two Kentucky boys. Wyatt Aiken of Greenville, Bill Sullivan of Frankfort, Ind., and Clayton Adams of Spencer, Mass., have also added immeasurably to the Blue Hose cause. The PC cagemen make up for their lack of height with their tight defense, their fast break, and their sharp shooting. These three qualities along with Coach Redford have made the Hose into a winning combination.

Johnson Announces 25 Gridsters Win Awards

Twenty-five gridmen and two managers earned football letters at Presbyterian College during the past season ,Athletic Director Walter Johnson announced today.

He said Coach Frank Jones had recommended five seniors, 11 juniors, three sophomores, and six freshmen for the monograms. Nine of this group receive them for the first time.

Letters are awarded these 25 players for their services during the 1957 season:

Sophomores—End Paul Chastain of Central; Guard Mac Copeland of Athens, Ga.; and Quarterback Bob Waters of Sylvanai ,Ga.

Freshmen—Guards Bruce ——— of Concord, N. C., Don Bridges of Decatur, Ga., and Bobby Jones of Jacksonville, Fla.; Fullback Bill Sease of Clinton; End Jimmy Kolb of Sumter; and Tackle Hardy Ledbetter of Ridgeland.

Netmen Invade Fla.; Launch 1958 Season

The Blue Hose tennis team launched the 1958 season by participating in the Austin Smith Championships at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. Prominent players from the U. S. such as Gardner Malloy and others from Europe and Australia were represented in this tournament of the Florida winter circuit.

Both John Brownlow and Jim Shakespeare reached the third round. Brownlow, who was fourth seeded, was upset by Bill Parker from Los Angeles in a close three-set match, Shakespeare lost to Wayne Reid of Sydney, Australia, who was number one foreign seeded, 6-4, 6-2.

Guice Potter bowed in the second round to Burt Brown, a former professional who was sixth seeded; Jim Peck was downed in the second round to one of the leading French players; and Harry Hoffman lost to John Cappell of the University of Miami, also in the second round. Bobby Daniels lost in the first round to Walter Johnson of Cleveand.

The netmen gained valuable experience in this tournament for the coming season. Coach Leighton accompanied the team which enjoyed the hospitality of the Shakespeares in Hollywood.

Run of the Hose

By BILL YEARICK

The 1957-58 Blue Hose still continue to roll on to a successful season. Quite different from everyone's opinion at the beginning of the season, the Hose have continued to amaze everyone with their team play and all-around hustle. At the present time the Hose boast the second best won-lost record in the state. And for the better part of the first half of the season they held first place honors.

The team is not equipped with a great deal of height. Out of the first six men, Wyatt Aiken at 6'4", is the tallest regular. Clayton Adams has displayed numerous times his authority under the backboards. Team spirit and well balanced offense have been the main reasons for success.

In the past all Blue Hose teams have had at least one and sometimes two players who averaged 20 points a game. This year the case is exactly the opposite, with four of the regulars being bracketed between 17 and 13 points. There is no consistent high scorer night after night. When one team member has an off night he is aided by the other members of the team. Ralph Chambers is currently leading the Hose threats with a very respectable 17.2 average and at the same time is the second highest scorer in the state. In his latest outting against Belmont Abbey he sank 28 points for high scorer for the evening.

At the beginning of the season it looked as though the Hose defense was going to be the sore spot of the team. Early season losses to non-collegiate teams of Piedmont Rangers and Parris Island Marines saw the Hose go near the century mark but still they came out on the short end of the score. From first glances the games were lost on defensive errors that with a little more experience on the part of the team could have been avoided.

Now the situation has exactly reversed itself. The Hose have continued to maintain their scoring punch and at the same time put a wide gap in the scoring. Ballhawks Bill Sullivan and Ken Caswell have continually pleased the crowd with dribbling antics which leave the opposition completely bewildered. They have also proven themselves as offensive threats with point-producing fast breaks.

A SUGGESTION

With the advent of spring just around the corner and everyone turning their attention to tennis, track, and baseball, several problems will arise. The tennis team will not have any bleachers except for the Miami match and the baseball team will not have a field to play on.

Unlike most schools, the baseballers will come charging out to practice minus bats and balls but instead will have rakes, shovels, and rollers. For the better part of the practices, most of the time and effort will be put into getting the field in shape. With this kind of attiude going on it is no wonder that the Hose nine has failed to win more than a handful of games over a three-year period. Even though the team does put a lot of time on the infield, usually on the first game of the season, Willie can be seen out near the pitchers' mound or batting box trying to supply the necessary material to provide the players a firm footing.

Therefore it would seem logical to try to get the field into shape a little before the season actually begins.

Spring Practice Resumes Action Nineteen Gridiron Men are Back

Spring football practice gets underway at Presbyterian College on Monday afternoon.

Coach Frank Jones said today the call already has been issued, and approximately 45 candidates are expected to report. He plans to continue the off-season drills for five weeks, ending them before the spring sports program begins.

The Blue Hose gridmen will practice two hours daily, 3:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. Main emphasis at first will be on conditioning and the fundamentals of the game, after the drawing of equipment on Monday and Tuesday.

Assisting Head Coach Jones will be Line Coach Clyde Ehrhardt and Backfield Coach Courts Redford. The latter, however, must work the football drills into his crowded schedule as head basketball coach.

Only six seniors are being lost to graduation, but scholastic hurdles tripped three other players who will not be around for spring practice. Nineteen lettermen are available among the returning candidates.

As the drills begin, the coaching staff is determined to bounce back next fall from one of PC's most disastrous seasons in history. The 1957 campaign produced one tie and eight losses.

Preston The Magician

night still in their state of hypnotic sleep.

For those that think that this is all a farce, just ask Crandall. For he will tell you that it isn't and that there was no play acting to it whatsoever. You may say, "sure, anyone can go to sleep in a window," but do you think that he could keep the same expression all during the time that he was prostrate and not wake up with all the commotion that was going on when they brought him into the aduditorium.

After bringing the two back to earth and their receiving an ovation of applause which they well deserved, he went into his magic act. This fellow Preston is quite talented what with being a good magician plus his very interesting and hypnotic powers.

After intermission came the climax of calling for volunteers from the audience to be hypnotized. He first put them through tests to determine whether they were susceptible to hypnosis or not and those that were not could sit it out and enjoy the rest of them in their stage of hypnosis. After this he would have them doing all sorts of antics such as fanning the heat from their faces or mosquitos. To one of the subjects, who was rather cute, he suggested that she was Marilyn Monroe and she really put herself into the act. Need I say more. Another of our students who happens to be Fred Smith was told to act like Elvis Presley and sing "Ain't Nothin' But A Houng Dog." He was terriffic and if I didn't know better I would think that he was Elvis' brother or a close relative.

If you don't get a chance to see if you can be hypnotized, maybe the Great Preston will return to our fair city again sometime in the near future and you can get your opportunity.

Evangelistic Team Preaches

Evangelistic Team Preaches

Three evangelistic teams, each composed of four or five PC students, are available to handle any type of regular church activity. Theme are usually directed toward young people—an area in which the college men are particularly effective—but the programs also hold appeal for adults.

It is sponsored by the PC Ministerial Club under the guidance of Dr. Joseph M. Gettys, professor of Bible at Presbyterian College, and well known religious writer.

Dr. Gettys said he has been impressed by the reception the evangelistic teams have received from churches in which they have appeared. He added:

"Every church has been high in praise of the quality of the programs presented, and I feel the young men are rendering a worthwhile service."

All types of services have been handled by these Presbyterian College students preparing for the ministry. The variety includes: Mother's Day service at the Orangeburg First Presbyterian Church last spring; Men-of-the-Church meeting at the Anderson First Presbyterian Church; Young People's program for the Spartanburg Second Presbyterian Church; Sunday night services at the Union First Presbyterian Church; and others.

Officers of the sponsoring Ministerial Club are: President—Charles Taylor of Shreveport, La.; Vice-President—Larry Crocker of Union; Secretary—Ben Donaldson of Blackshear, Ga.; Treasurer—Wayne Wiggins of Fort Mill; Chaplain—Hugh Burns of Piedmont, Ala; and Historian—Paul Reid of Union.

Film Society Being Organized

A series of films have been ordered by the PC English Department. The showing of these films will be open to all students, faculty and friends of the college who wish to purchase a block of tickets for the prcie of $2.00. This entitles the holder to see all five of the films to be offered. The tickets wil only be sold in block form, and tickets for individual performances will not be sold.

The first film, to be presented on February 20, will be "The Titfield Thunderbolt," a delightful comedy about an antique train. The second presentation, on February 27, will be "The Mikado," Gilbert and Sullivan's outstanding musical comedy. "The Red Shoes" will be shown on March 6. "The Importance of Being Earnest" is slated for March 14, and "Henry V" will be shown at a date to be announced later.

All these presentations will be shown during the middle of the week and at 7:00 in the evening. Tickets may be purchased from Mr. Bush in the English office. Tickets must be purchased before February 11.

Movie Review . . .

Sayonara

By JIM MONROE

With the roar of American jets one finds himself on an adventure that will end in a conflict for superiority of the Japanese and American peoples. The conflict is based on the marriages and associations of the Amedican service men and officers with the Japanese women.

Colonel Lloyd Gruver (Marlon Brando) and Airman Joe Kelly (Red Buttons) are shipped to Japan, Gruver for medical reasons and Kelly for transfer to the United States. Colonel Gruver is stationed at Kobe, mainly because the commander's daughter, who is his fiancee' is there with her father. Kelly, breaking orders against Japanese-Amercian relations, marries a Japanese girl.

Gruver, while watching a group of Takarazuka dancers (Masubashi dancers) ,falls in love with the star, Hana—Ogi. After weeks of trying to see her, he finally wins her and they break regulations by meeting at the home of Kelly and his Japanese bride. The struggle of holding their relations is seen throughout the rest of the movie which ends with the announcement by Hana-Ogi and Gruver of their future plans.

More Top REW Speakers Secured for PC's Big Week

By PAUL ARRINGTON

The President of the SCA, Bill Yearick, has just announced that plans are nearing completion for the Religious Emphasis Week program which will begin on Wednesday, March 12, and will run through Chapel period Friday, March 13.

There will be no classes Wednesday and Thursday and the schedule for both days is as follows: 9 A. M.-A. M., chapel speaker; 10 A. M.-11 A. M., free period; 11 A. M.-12 P. M., chapel speaker; 12 P. M.-2 P. M., lunch; 2 P. M.-3 P. M., chapel speaker; and speakers in the chapel both nights from 7 P. M.-8 P. M. Regular classes will be resumed on Friday wiht a final talk during chapel period on Friday.

Ten speakers will visit the campus and will speak on a variety of subjects gathered from many different fields of endeavor.

A PC alumnus, Dr. Cliff R. Johnson, will leave his Westminster Presbyterian Church pastorate in Alexandria, Va., to bring ot us what should certainly be an enlightening talk. Other speakers will be: Col. J. Woods, Chaplain from Fort Bragg, N. C.; Col Lauren T. Jenks, Chaplain, from Fort Jackson in Columbia; and the Knight Commander of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity, Dr. W. McLeod Frampton, of Anderson.

The presence of these men on our campus will give everyone an opportunity to hear some very interesting and enlightening talks and will also make possible many private conferences on personal problems.

A trophy will be given the group which has the best attendance, and Bill Yearick has urgently asked that everyone contribute heartily in making this unique Religious Emphasis Week a most successful one.

Origin of Ready Kilowatt

Today I will devote my sterling column to a study of a few little-known but very pertinent facts about things that we modern age people are inclined to take for granted.

ELECTRICITY—Electricity was founded in 429 BC by a roving interior decorator named Pawnus Gable. The telephone had been invented some weeks before by an acquaintance named Roogie TARN. Pawnus had been used to going to this friends' houses and carrying on amiable conversations without having to carry a telephone along with him. He decided it would be much nicer to merely stay at home and speak into a mouthpiece. He then invented electricity from a recipe for nostril soup that had been in his family for generations. With many a "Por bono publico" his jolly friends carried him away to be thrown to the wombats.

THE DOUBLE BUNK—The double bunk was of course invented by Clovis Bood. He lived in a closet with ten cobras for three years. A man of strange whims.

THE VICTORY GARDEN—Invented by Tarsie Fligg, the great lady elephant wrestler, to celebrate throwing a fully-equipped band of tiger hunters, elephants and all, out of her spring onions.

Last but not least—THE REVOLVING DOOR—Invented in 1656 by Norman Renee, the only girl rickshaw-puller in Peking. Norma, a sadist at heart, developed this door to demoralize the general public.

More on the last later as soon as an adequate census of China has been made.

Increasingly,

Business Interviews

During the next few weeks there will be representatives from various businesses in this part of the country to aid seniors in directing their interests upon graduation. Last year there were seventeen representatives from the Textile Industries, Insurance Companies, Civil Service, and many others which helped greatly in placing graduates.

The placement office in the Administration Building has many books, folders and correspondence which contain helpful advice on getting appointments with these and other companies. There are also forms which may be filled out and kept in a student's file to be used for future references. It might also prove interesting that these representatives could open the door of opportunity to majors in any field, not just those of the Business Profession.

Theré are also opportunities in the Federal Government, the Merrit System of South Carolina, and the various teaching professions not only here in South Carolina but over the entire country.

Alumni Officers Elected At Meeting

Presbyterian College alumni are now voting to elect four new officers of the Presbyterian College Alumni Association and to register a choice on mail ballots.

The PC alumni office today announced these nominees are receiving consideration for the four positions:

For alumni representative on the college board of trustees—James Wilson, class of 1934, Fayetteville, N. C., lumber executive; and Knox Wyatt, '31, of Rome Ga., Georgia State manager for Franklin Life Insurance Company.

For vice-president of the Association—John Montgomery, '28, of Columbia, managing editor of The State newspaper; and Ross Templeton, '24, of Charlotte, Carolinas division manager of Field Enterprises, Inc.

For alumni directo rfrom Georgia —O. A. Dunlap, '31, of Atlanta, president of B. M. Grant Company; and Howard Stamps, '33, of Decatur, owner of the Stamps Tire and Recapping Company of Atlanta.

For alumni director from Georgia Carolina—Dr. Duncan C. Alford, '21, Spartanburg, physician; and Harold Dean Jackson, '31, of Cheraw, Standard Oil Distrbiutor.

Fraternity Smokers Scheduled; Freshmen Party Rush Rules Listed

By GORDON LIVINGSTON

The annnal Rush Week will take place February 19 through 26. The first smoker will be held by Alpha Sigma Phi on Wednesday night, February 19, followed by the Kappa Alpha smoker on Thursday night, February 20. Theta Chi will have their smoker Friday night, February 21. There will be no smoker over the weekend, and Pi Kappa Alpha will resume Rush Week with their smoker Monday night, February 24. Pi Kappa Phi will have their smoker Tuesday night, February 25. The last smoker wil be held by Sigma Nu on Wednesday night, February 26.

Quiet period will begin immediately at 12 o'clock on the night of February 26, and last until 6 o'clock, Friday afternoon, February 28; the extra day of quiet has been added in order to give the non-fraternity men extra time to make their decisions. Pledge day will then take place from 2 until 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, February 28, in Professor Baker's classroom in the Science Building.

The following rules, taken directly from the IFC constitution, must be strictly obeyed by all non-fraternity and fraternity men:

1. Without the permission of the IFC, no other fraternity will be permitted to have any organized function during the time assigned to the fraternity giving a smoker.

2. Pledges may go to the fraternity room of their choice after they have cast their pledge ballot, and after casting their ballot they will fall under the rules for quiet period established by the council.

3. After any pledge has cast his pledge ballot for one fraternity and after that ballot has been counted by the Faculty Fraternity Committee, he may not change his pledge without the written permission of the president of that fraternity to which he first gave his pledge.

4. An undergraduate or transfer shall not be eligible for pledging until he has been a student at Presbyterian College for at least one semester.

5. Before a student is pledged into a fraternity he must have spent one semester in the college. In the semestre prior to his pledging he must have carried a regular schedule and shall have accumulated during the preceding semester eight (8) quality points toward graduation.

6. No fraternity man is permitted to discourage any freshman from attending smokers of other fraternities. He is not to carry him off or keep him, in any way, from another smoker.

7. No freshman will be allowed in any fraternity room during the hours of smokers (8:00-12:00) except in the fratermity suites scheduled to have its smoker on that night. Freshman means a non-fraternity man who has not been at Presbyterian College one term.

8. Only brothers and pledges of that fraternity, having the smoker shall be permitted at the smoker. Brothers and pledges of other chapters of the same fraternity are permitted to attend.

9. No freshman will be allowed in any fraternity room during quiet period. After he has cast his ballot to pledge he may go to the fraternity of his choice, but he falls under the rules for quiet period established by the council.

10. No fraternity man will be allowed in, on, or around the Science Building, Spencer, the Plaza, SCA Building or Bailey between the hours of 2:00 to 4:00 o'clock on pledge day except those who have classes or live in the respective buildings. As soon as their classes are over, they must leave this area without talking to a freshman.

11. No fraternity man will be permitted to have skits, stunts or group singing, etc., outside of their fraternity room during quiet period.

12. No pledges will be permitted to influence freshmen who have not signed up or cast their pledge to joi na particular fraternity. The fraternity shall be held responsible for the action of its new pledges.

13. During quiet period no fraternity man is permitted to:

a—Eat with freshmen anywhere, including dining hall.
b—Take a freshman to a show.
c—Take a freshman to Roddy's, Dairy Bar, etc.
d—Offer rides to and from town, Laurens, Joanna, or anywhere else.
e—Fraternity men shall not accept rides from freshmen.
f—Fraternity men shall keep out of the freshmen's rooms unless he lives there.
g—In other words—do not associate with the freshmen in any way.

PENALTIES: MAXIMUM—Closed for 6 weeks or $50.00 fine.
MINIMUM—Closed for 1 week or $25.00 fine.

New Award to Be Given

The mathematics department announced this week that a new award is to be given at the end of the year. This award will be presented to the freshman who has shown the most progress in mathematics over the year.

The award is a book of mathematical tables and the winner's name will be engraved on it. The recipient will be chosen by the mathematics professors. The book, published by the Chemical Rubber Publishing Company, is on display in the library now.

Gavalas Elected IRC Hoss

Last Saturday, February 8, representatives from all International Relations Clubs in South Carolina colleges met in Columbia for the purpose of consolidating the South South Carolina IRC chapters on a state level instead of the present regional level. This move was decided upon at the regional conference in Birmingham, Ala., last year.

At the meeting, it was decided by the chapters to elect a chairman to head the newly created state conference, and for that chairman in turn to appoint the necessary subordinate officers from his own chapter, since it would be difficult, as well as expensive, for the chairman to have to work with officers some distance away.

Representing PC were Tony Gavalas, Secretary of the IRC chapter here, and George Sanborn. In the elections, The Citadel nominated Gavalas, and their nomination was

Godwin, Turner Sweep Elections

Take Over Blue Sock; First Edition Next Week

By JOHN KNOX

The student body went to the election polls Monday to elect an Editor and Business Manager of the Blue Stocking for the new publication year and a Sophomore Representative for the Student Council for the remaining year.

The Blue Stocking staff nominated two candidates for Editor and two for Business Manager. Out of a very close election, Roger Godwin of College Park Ga., outnumbered Paul Arrington, and Bill Turner of Winnsboro, emerged ahead of Bryan Carr for the Business Manager.

The student body selected Hal McGirt of Maxton, N. C., to fill the Sophomore Representative position vacated by Chuck Hendry who transferred at the end of the first semester. Frank Richbuorg and Will Wallace were the Sophomore candidates who opposed McGirt.

This year Godwin served as Managing Editor of the publication and is also Christian Faith and Heritage Chairman of the SCA and an officer in Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity. He is also in the International Relations Club and a Reader in the Robed Choir. Bill Turner also served on the staff this year and is a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity. In addition he is Secretary-Treasurer of the IFC and a member of Tau Phi Pi Science Fraternity.

Godwin and Turner will assume their duties with the next issue.

Twenty-Sixth Anniversary Of Presbyterian Blue Key

By BLAIR BALDWIN

Each year students on campus are met with some strange sights, which is the informal initiation of the college's more prominent student leaders. They will be wearing signs fore and aft, much in the same manner as freshmen goof-offs, except that the sign will be in the shape of a key. They will be carrying a weekend bag containing gum, candy, cigarettes ,a brick and a raw egg with autographs on it.

Then, on a particular afternon, these same men will line up on their hands and knees on the plaza and try to win a race by pushing an egg across the campus with their nose.

So, if you happen to see some boys dressed up in such regalia don't get excited and think they're "nuts, or all shook up or something," for, if you look closely at the printing on their signs, you will note that they are being initiated into the Blue Key National Honor Fraternity. This is a way of calling the Student Body's attention to the fact that they have been selected by their fellow students as outstanding.

This year the Blue Key is celebrating its twenty-sixth year on the Presbyterian Colege campus. Blue Key was established here on March 29, 1932.

The work and purpose of the Blue Key Fraternity is not all as jocular as the initiation ceremony may make it appear. Behind the Key lies a serious and worthy purpose. The fraternity was established to foster leadership in various students in the colleges and universities throughout the country. Among its purposes are to promote high ideals, faith in God, intellectual achievement, and service to one's fellowman.

Blue Key has been active at Presbyterian College since 1932. In 1931, President Marshall W. Brown, then Dean, along with Col. R. E. Wysor, Jr., PMS&T, and C. W. Grafton, English professor, established an honorary leadership fraternity on the campus called the Archons. The Archons joined another group called the Musketeers in the fall of 1931 and petitioned the Blue Key National Honorary Leadership Fraternity. Ther charter was granted in the spring of 1932.

Some prominent members of the faculty and administration are honorary members of the Blue Key as: Baker, Walter A. Johnson, Leo V. Marshall W. Brown, Kenneth N. Powell, and Newton B. Jones.

It is also noted that the faculty alumni members of the campus Blue Key were all prominent members of the Student Body during their years at Presbyterian College. These men are: Ben Hay Hammet, Lewis A. Hay, G. Edward Campbell, Fililam B. Toole ,and Andy Howard.

Today Blue Key members represent all phases of campus life. They are active members and leaders in the majority of campus organizations. The organization represents a cross section of campus affairs. They are leaders in every element of campus life, be it extra curricular, scholarship, military, athletic, or social and religious activities.

Dr. Newton B. Jones, Outstanding Individual

Dr. Newton B. Jones, who was recently tapped into the Presbyterian College Blue Key Chater, has had a very active part in campus affairs since his arrival here in 1950. Dr. Jones attended grammar school and high school in Mcaon, Ga., after which he attended Emory University where he received his Masters Degree.

Dr. Jones was employed by the Virginia World War II Historical Commission for one year in 1947 before he began his graduate work at the University of Virginia. Both at Emory and the University of Virginia he received graduate school fellowships. He attained his Ph.D. in 1950 after which he began his teaching here at Presbyterian College.

Between the time of his A.B. and M.A degress at Emory, he served four years in the army. During this time he attended Officers Candidate School ,and at the completion of his four years of active military service eh held the rank of Captain.

Dr. Jones had had a number of articles published in the field of history ,three of which dealt with Virginia history and one of which pertained to travel in the United States in the 1820's. He has also had six reviews published in the "Virginia Magazine of History," and in the "Georgia Review."

Scholastic Fraternity Reorganization Begins

In 1925 a local scholastic fraternity, Sigma Kappa Alpha, was founded on the campus of Presbyterian College. It had as its aim the promotion of greater interest in scholarship. Eligibility to the organization was based upon scholastic merit and members were selected by the faculty upon the recommendation of the Dean. Only juniors and seniors were eligible for admission, and placement on the Dean's List was a requirement for membership. During World War II this, like many other organizations, crumbled due to lack of support.

Presently Dr. Newton Jones and the PC Blue Key chapter are at work, trying to organize a Sophomore society, based on a minimum of three semesters. It is hoped that this will eventually lead to a Phi Beta Kappa chapter or a local scholastic fraternity,

Liberal Arts College, Located . . .

By DR. NEWTON B. JONES

Education in the United States has been subjected to searching and repeated criticism in the recent past. In view of such criticism and the numerous suggestions as to the best way to improve our schools, it may be well to consider the objectives of a liberal arts college and the elements of a liberal education.

Any college is made up of three groups of people—students, faculty, and administrators. At times each group may consider the other two a necessary evil. For maximum effectiveness, however, all three groups should be in basic agreement on the objectives of a college education. At one time there was a fairly general agreement on the purpose of a liberal arts colege. It was to build character by adherence to a rigid course of study which had been handed down from European universities. Its ingredients were Greek and Latin, the classics, mathematics, and logic. The entrance requirements of the University of Georgia in 1834 included a correct knowledge of Virgil, a portion of the Greek Testament, English grammar, geography, and arithmetic. Any similar requirements today, even for college graduation, would considerably reduce the number of holders of the AB degree; and few people would advocate turning back to the 1830's.

George P. Schmidt, in a recently published book entitled "The Liberal Arts College, has traced the history of higher education in the United Staets. He notes that Europeans today are amazed by some of the courses offered by our institutions of higher learning. The typical state university maintains the liberal arts tradtion in its undergraduate college, but also offers vocational training so that the farmer, the businessman, the engineer, and the public school teacher can receive instruction in his articular skill. This is inevitable, but there is an ever present danger of assumnig that success in farming, business, industry, or even teaching, is an indication that a person has a liberal education. Mr. Scmidt undertakes the difficult task of constructing a yardstick by which to determine whether or not a person has a liberal education. He states that the goal cannot be attained by passing any number of college courses and that holders of the A.B. or even the Ph.D. degree do not necessarily have a liberal education. Those who have never been on a college campus may, however, have attained the goal.

The yardstick requires that an individual posses knowledge about the world—scientific information — and about human society in its historical aspect and as it exists today. It includes a test of the individaul's knowledge of his native tongue and of a foreign language. One must appreciate his fellow man and strive to improve the society of which he si a member, He must be understanding and appreciative of creative ability, be it in fine arts, literature, or science. If a person cannot think critically and choose wisely among alternatives, he fails the test.

Therefore, languages and literature, the social sciences, fine arts, and the biological and physical sciences constitute the core of the liberal arts curriculum; study of them is a member. He must be understand liberal education. Experience in the classroom, the laboratory, and the library, however, is not the whole of a college education; extra-curricular activities, including sports, and the experience of living on the campus contribute, or should, to the same end. If all three groups on the campus of a liberal arts college agree that the basic objective is to produce graduates with a liberal education, the campus atmosphere will be one that will encourage academic achievement and will produce graduates who are well-rounded individuals.

Blue Key Speaks . . .

All of us are at times prone to think of receiving instead of in terms of giving. This seems to be a universal tendency of thought. However, the Master of life Himself taught us that this type of thinking is folly.

There is probably no student on this campus who has not thought in terms of receiving some material or spiritual benefit from the college. How many of us, however, have thought in terms of giving something either material or spiritual to the college. Certainly the founder of this institution thought in terms of giving and not receiving, thus we are obtaining an education now as the positive result of one man's concern for the welfare of others.

An effort was made at the beginning of the school year on the part of some of the leaders of the campus with the co-operation of the administration to improve the general campus life in both material and spiritual matters. Much enthusiasm was created, however, within a few short weeks much of it was lost. The question then arises "Why?"

In answer to such a question the blame could be attributed to many faults. The first, and perhaps the most prevalent one is the students themselves. It can be argued that because of their lack of effort and participation interest is lost, thereby killing the objective. This argument in part is true. Quite often an objective is started with enthusiasm and co-operation and with a potential "Pusher." However, because of more important things such as TV, movies, and such, the students do not take an interest and thereby kill the objective.

The second and perhaps the equally common argument is the administration. Many times it has been said if the students and student leaders had the co-operation and endorsement of the administration and the faculty a project would be successful. This also in part is true, for without the backing of the administration and faculty, no project regardles of student participation is truly a success.

The third and final argument then falls on the leaders of the campus. It can be said that many projects fail because of their incompetence. This is also true in part. Some of the leaders of the campus are incompetent, however, one must realize that many are overworked and because of various reasons take on more than they can handle. The result is quite evident.

What then would be the immediate solution? One may say better participation on the students' part, more co-operation on the administration's and faculty's part, or a greater variety of leaders who are able and have the time and know-how to carry a project through. However, it is my opinion that a more willingness to give of ones' self, both materially and spiritually to the betterment of the campus life and its objectives would be the wise solution. We must be willing to give of our effort and time in order to receive the richness of a complete and successful college life.

Blue Key Oscar

BEST MOVIE OF THE YEAR—Since "Bridge on the River Kwai" has not been released in this area yet and we have not seen "Raintree County," our choice for the best movie so far is "Sayonara."

BEST MUSICAL—"Pal Joey" tops our list in musicals. "Les Girls" had a lot of good satire, nice scenery (Mitzi Gaynor), and good dance routines, but the songs were not much. "Pal Joey's" songs and humor were tops.

BEST COMEDY—"Don't Go Near the Water" should take this because of one bit—that of the foul-mouthed seaman. Ernie Kovac's portrayal of an army major in "Operation Madball" was perfect, but the Navy picture was funniest, second only to "Jet Pilot."

BEST ACTOR—Critics say that Alex Guiness will run away with an Oscar for his leading role in "Bridge on the River Kwai," but disregarding this movie which we haven't seen, we pick Marlon Brando for his realistic Southern accent and actions in "Sayonara."

BEST ACTRESS — Although Joanne Woodward probably will not stand a chance in the Oscar race, we choose her for our number one actress of the year for her versatility in "Three Faces of Eve."

Mumbling Man of Metaphor II

By GUICE POTTER

Resting in the solitude of my dismal room and following the dust particles as they landed on the ridge of my nose, I was suddenly interrupted by "Boisterous Bark" who entered the privacy of my dust and immediately began coughing.

He seemed to be trying to tell me something, but was sure getting blue as he was suffocating from my dense dust, so I slapped him on the back and said, "Come, boy, and spit it out." Sure enough, he planted a well known seafood delicacy right in the middle of my stained rug. He attempted to apologize, but I explained that it was perfectly all right because this was the season and I had been depositing a few around the room myself.

With that the color left his cheeks as I explained, "You know, Bark, they contain many valuable things. Why just yesterday I found a gold filling, but I don't think Bobby will miss it."

B. B. didn't seem too pleased with my industry, but I explained to him that it was a field of business that had never been explored before, and offered many rewards to the person who is willing to search for them, especially during the "cold" season.

Barks didn't look too well, and seemed to be trying to change the subject, so I dropped my latest enterprise.

"Well, Barks, what brings you to the den of dust, your good health?" He beamed with pride at my question, because he has always been proud of his rosy cheeks. Actually they got so rosy one time that it took two weeks of work to get over them. He smiled when I started getting sick, so I said, "Well, what do you want with me?"

"The Backdoor Key is putting out the Blue Suffocation, and we want you to replace the mumbling man of metaphor this week," said B. B., "and write his column." I had heard over the air waves one day, when the dust was down, that the metaphor man had evacuated campus, but I knew better. He had just been posing as Larry Elgart and hiding behind a thick dark beard that covers his entire chin. Guess his leadership as band director went to his head.

"Well, why do you want me to write the article, Barks? I haven't been passing out that propaganda of 'Have pencil . . . will write'," I said.

"Look, Hose Nose," said B. B. "Had you rather write the column of nonsense or try to sell those silly show tickets to this haven of illiterates?" I knew when I was well off so I elected to write.

Having accomplished his mission, Barks appeared to be rather anxious to leave the room, but I had to show him the new addition to my filth. Reaching under the bed and pushing aside the accumulation of socks, I produced an open box that I had been letting the woolies play with. You know woolies make wonderful playmates because they cling to everything.

"What is the tooth brush doing in the box of sand?" asked Barks. "Oh, I'm breeding measle germs and that tooth brush happens to be my deceased roomos," I said.

"Did he die of measles?" asked Barks. "Well, sort of," I said. "You see, he always had trouble breathing, especially when Shazam was kicking up the dust in the parking lot, and one day his iron lung failed while he was coming down with the measles. Next thing I knew they were carting him out."

"Guess you sure miss him, don't you," said Barks. "Nope, he left me his hi-fi and tooth brush, and those are the only things I roomed with him for anyway."

Barks has never been a very sociable person, in fact he can be awful at times by just walking out on you. But he left me with work to do so I sat down and started writing my obituary.

Dum Vivimus Servimus

College Seal Dates to 1915, Designed by Tommy Pryse

The burning torch, upholding a scroll with the Latin motto, "Dum Vivimus Servimus" inscribed on it came into being back in 1915 as the Presbyterian College seal. Col. Thomas Pryse, of Beattyville, Ky., originated the trade mark of the class of 1915.

Later college administrators felt the need of a distinctive seal for the institution. It was only a logical outcome that the seal of the class of 1915 was adopted.

It originator was the editor of the '15 yearbook, and historians have assumed that the figure was designed as a feature of the college annual.

Col. Pryse, in addition to being the PaC-SaC editor, was the manager of the first PC football team coached by veteran Walter Johnson.

In those days the school was encumbered with the name "Presbyterian College of South Carolina," and the seal bore the inscription of "of S. C." But, when the Presbyterian Synod of Georgia joined with the Synod of South Carolina in helping support Presbyterian College, the cumbersome "of South Carolina" was dropped and the figure assumed the shape and inscription it now bears.

Behind the Blues

-:- -:- -:- By Tommy Richards

LITTLE FOUR WILL HAVE LEADER

There is no doubt that the Little Four will have an undisputed leader after tomorrow night. When the scrapping Blue Hose travel to Newberry to do battle with Newberry's much imroved Indians tomorrow night a leader will emerge. Both teams sport identical 3-1 records in conference competition. However, PC topped the Indians in a closely fought battle on the Hose home court in their only previous encounter. The only Hose defeat came at the hands of the talented Wofford Terriers at Spartanburg during the semester break. This loss was avenged Saturday night when the Hose jumped into an early lead just before the end of the first half and then held off stubborn Terrier attempts for victory.

Both PC and Newberry have proved surprisingly effective on the hardwood so far this year. In a conference that Wofford and Erskine were supposed to dominate they have been the front runners during the entire season. Wofford, now holding a 2-3 record in the conference play, has only one league game remaining and can hope for no better than a .500 season. This would afford them no better than a tie for second place should either PC or Newberry lose all of their remaining games. Erskine, now 0-3, has few hopes of climbing out of the cellar. This leaves a clear-cut fight between the Hose and the Indians for top honors in regular season play and top seeding in the annual Little Four tourney.

TOURNAMENT SEEDING

If the games are paired in the tournament by seeding a top team, this team will definitely hold an advantage over the others. The number 1 team would play the number 4 team and numbers 2 and 3 would tangle on opening night. Looking back on the season Wofford has definitely been the biggest threat to the two top teams for season honors. Therefore, the team that played them would have a tough time reaching the finals of the tournament and then if they did it would mean playing two tough games on successive nights. On the other hand the team opening with Erskine would very probably not have quite as tough a job on their hands.

Both Newberry and PC have remaining, besides this game tomorrow night, one game against winless Erskine, which both should win. Therefore, it probably remains that the winner of the contest tomorrow night will be the winner of the Little Four and the seeded team in the tournament.

UPSETS MUST BE CONSIDERED

Although Erskine has not been a winner in Little Four play during the year, no one has ever consistently been able to predict the outcome of basketball contests. Erskine has been no real pushover this year and can at any time be expected to hit a hot streak and "upset the apple cart," either PC's or Newberry's. This could possibly throw the Little Four outcome into a three-way tie. So we are not going out on a limb and try to predict any games but we will have to take a wait-and-see attitude.

THIS AND THAT

Spring practice is off to a fast start and the presence of several transfers along with returnees from last year's team may add needed speed to a Blue Hose line and backfield. Football may take on a new look for next season and give Hose fans something to look forward to . . . Look out for Clayton Adams may have been the cry at Indian basketball practices during the past week if anybody from Newberry saw him in the game against Wofford last Saturday night. The Beak, as he is commonly called by his fans, went wild during the opening part of the second half and was unstoppable for ten minutes as he emerged with scoring honors after potting 28 points for his night's work . . . PC, after being rather cold at the free throw line in several of the last games, looked like shades of old as they hit 25 of 31 charity tosses against Wofford . . . Comment from a Wofford fan after witnessing their loss, "Don't you guys ever lose a game on your home court?" We might even say the same thing about the Terriers.

Bronze Derby Rivalry Tops Celebrates Twelfth Season

Newberry Sole Possessor

By BILL BOWMAN

Thirteen years ago at a 1946 Newberry-PC basketball game, a fellow by the name of Jim Kellett, who was then a student at Presbyterian College, had his derby stolen from his head by one of the enthusiastic Newberry rooters. Charles McDonald, former Blue Stocking Editor, and public relations director, immediately pounced upon the incident and had the hat returned with the purpose of setting it up as an incentive to uplift the spirit of rivalry between Presbyterian and Newberry.

McDonald, who was also active in the Blue Key at PC, had the honor fraternities of the two schools sponsor the project. The hat was sent to a novelty firm where it was bronzed. Since that date the "Bronze Derby" has been at stake in football, basketball, and baseball, and has been a symbol of 35 years of athletic rivalry between the colleges. However, since the founding of the "Bronze Derby," Newberry has held the upper hand in possessing the Brown topper.

More recently, in fact only this last year the Blue Key again sponsored a trophy between Presbyterian and another of the little three schools, Wofford.

In a chapel program at Wofford College, Jim Barksdale, president of the PC Blue Key, presented this trophy to Twitty Carpenter, who heads the Wofford Chapter. This trophy was given with the understanding that at the end of each sports year the school with the greatest number of points would gain the trophy. The points would be computed from the number of wins in the three major sports, with consideration also given to the sportsmanship displayed by each of the schools. This trophy would be the symbol of sports success in the past year.

With this understanding well underway, the Blue Key Chapter of both schools hope that this trophy will in the future serve to increase the spirit in a friendly way, and continue the traditional rivalry between Wofford and Presbyterian.

Blue Hose After Indian's Scalps; Will Travel and Attack Newberry

By TOMMY RICHARDS

It's win or take a second seat to Newberry for the Presbyterian Blue Hose tomorrow night. Both clubs carry identical 3-1 records into the game and both are out to break the two-way tie for the Little Four conference that they find themselves in.

A capacity crowd of both Blue Hose and Indian fans are expected to jam the newly-lighted Newberry field house for the tip off at 8:00 P. M. The Indians will be out to avenge an earlier loss at the hands of the Blue Hose in LeRoy Springs Gymnasium.

PC, sporting a well rounded club of hustlers, will depend on their accurate shooting to make up for a shortage in height. Newberry will be expected to take charge in the rebound department, and they also sport some rather fancy shooters themselves. The big gun for the Indians so far this season has been forward Charlie Gallagher, a sophomore who is averaging well in the double figures with his deadly jump shot. Bobby Lynch, a fancy Dan dribbler and ball handler, will handle the back court duties for the Braves and can also be counted on for outstanding defensive service.

Leader in the rebound department for the Indian has been center Jim Woolridge, who takes great advantage of lightning reflexes, good spring, and added height to sweep both offensive and defensive boards. The Hose answer to Newberry's blonde giant is 6-4 Wyatt Aiken. Aiken, much improved over last year, has added rebound strength to a comparatively small Hose quintet.

PC boasts of five men who have all at one time or another taken high scoring honors. Forwards Ralph Chambers and Bob Stratton, center Clayton Adams, and guards Bill Sullivan and Ken Caswell have all been big guns in the well balanced Hose lineup. Chambers has been a consistent high scorer with a soft jump shot from the head of the free show circle. He has also been a threat at all times with his driving under the backboard layups.

Stratton on the other hand has scored well with a one hand push from the corner and a moving jump from the lane. Adams, deadly accurate from a low position, has tallied his points with short hooks and layups and a good one hand push shot.

Sullivan, a master at ball handling and dribbling, has been deadly with an outside jump after a back court pick or behind an outside screen. Caswell, an excellent playmaker and fast break man, uses a long outside jump shot and a good running jump to very good advantage. All five have been consistently accurate both from the floor and the charity line.

PC coach Courts Redford expects a tough game from the Indians. He plans at this time to go along with the lineup that has taken games from Wofford and Erskine in its last two outings.

Probable Starting Lineup
Presbyterian — Stratton, Chambers, Adams, Caswell, Sullivan.
Newberry—Jackson, Gallagher, Woolridge, Dugan, Lynch.

Spring Training Rough; Weekly Scrimmages Set

The Blue Hose football team took the field last week for approximately five weeks of rugged Spring practice in preparation for next year's schedule. The first few days were spent in limbering up in preparation for the hard work facing the squad. However, durinug the past few days the PC squad, strengthened by the addition of several transfer students has been hard at work in full uniform.

Coach Frank Jones is planning at this time to stage a full-scale scrimmage at the end of each week in order to evaluate the work done. Plans also call for a ful-scale intra-squad game at the end of the five-week session.

Spring Practice Roster

Ends: Gardner, Kolb, Leahy, Chastain, Vastine, and Bridges.

Tackles: Parrish, Ledbetter, Piggerstaff, Morris, Walker, and Barnette.

Guards: Nix, Bridges, Boney, Firby, Anderson, DuBose, and Sinclair.

Centers: Copeland, Carter, and Shrigley.

Quarterbacks: Waters, Isger, Aycock, Malone, Denning, Gill, and Cole.

Halfbacks: Messer, Kemp, Wood, Benton, Lucas, Benson, F. Stanley, and G. Stanley.

Fullbacks: Sease, Drew, Mathews, and Barnes.

Blue Hose Bite Terriors To Tune of 78-72 Victory

The Blue Hose of Presbyterian College came back fast in the second half to extend a two-point lead to a 9 and then fought a valiant Wofford rally late in the game to avenge an earlier loss to the Terriers by a 78-72 score. PC, outscored from the floor by their much taller opponents, found the range at the free throw line to make the difference in the scoring.

After a nip and tuck first half the Hose left LeRoy Springs floor with a 36-34 halftime lead. The second half saw a fired-up PC team manhandle Wofford for the first 10 minutes of the second period to build up a lead that the Terriers could never quite overcome. Center Clayton Adams led the red hot attack in the second half with 21 to run his night's total to 28 and game scoring honors.

For Wofford it was a do or die situation as far as the conference championship was concerned and their hopes of this flew out of the window when they dropped their third conference loss. Coach Courts Redford used only six men in the effort by the Hose. PC's floor game was sparked all the way by guard Bill Sullivan until he fouled out late in the final period. Sullivan continually set up valuable baskets with his uncanny passing and hit 11 out of 11 charity tosses to give him a total of 13 for the night.

Adams, deadly with a short hook, continued to amaze both the Wofford team and spectators as he dumped point after point on the PC side of the scoreboard. The Hose forwards, Bob Stratton and Ralph Chambers, both hit in double figures with 16 and 11 points, respectively.

Forward Marshall Perkins was Wofford's top threat with 19 points on a nice jump shot. Twitty Carpenter added 15 and was his team's leading rebounder. Trap Hart and Ralph Jenkins tallied 11 and 10, respectively.

Presbyterian hit on 26 of 49 shots from the floor for a percentage of 53.1 while Wofford had a percentage of 43.8 and 28 for 64. The Hose hit a good 83.9 per cent from the charity line with 26 for 31 which spelled the difference in the game. Wofford had 14 of 19 for 73.7 per cent .

Liberal Arts College, Located . . .

By DR. NEWTON B. JONES

Education in the United States has been subjected to searching and repeated criticism in the recent past. In view of such criticism and the numerous suggestions as to the best way to improve our schools, it may be well to consider the objectives of a liberal arts college and the elements of a liberal education.

Any college is made up of three groups of people—students, faculty, and administrators. At times each group may consider the other two a necessary evil. For maximum effectiveness, however, all three groups should be in basic agreement on the objectives of a college education. At one time there was a fairly general agreement on the purpose of a liberal arts colege. It was to build character by adherence to a rigid course of study which had been handed down from European universities. Its ingredients were Greek and Latin, the classics, mathematics, and logic. The entrance requirements of the University of Georgia in 1834 included a correct knowledge of Virgil, a portion of the Greek Testament, English grammar, geography, and arithmetic. Any similar requirements today, even for college graduation, would considerably reduce the number of holders of the AB degree; and few people would advocate turning back to the 1830's.

George P. Schmidt, in a recently published book entitled "The Liberal Arts College, has traced the history of higher education in the United Staets. He notes that Europeans today are amazed by some of the courses offered by our institutions of higher learning. The typical state university maintains the liberal arts tradtion in its undergraduate college, but also offers vocational training so that the farmer, the businessman, the engineer, and the public school teacher can receive instruction in his articular skill. This is inevitable, but there is an ever present danger of assumnig that success in farming, business, industry, or even teaching, is an indication that a person has a liberal education. Mr. Scmidt undertakes the difficult task of constructing a yardstick by which to determine whether or not a person has a liberal education. He states that the goal cannot be attained by passing any number of college courses and that holders of the A.B. or even the Ph.D. degree do not necessarily have a liberal education. Those who have never been on a college campus may, however, have attained the goal.

The yardstick requires that an individual posses knowledge about the world—scientific information — and about human society in its historical aspect and as it exists today. It includes a test of the individaul's knowledge of his native tongue and of a foreign language. One must appreciate his fellow man and strive to improve the society of which he si a member, He must be understanding and appreciative of creative ability, be it in fine arts, literature, or science. If a person cannot think critically and choose wisely among alternatives, he fails the test .

Therefore, languages and literature, the social sciences, fine arts, and the biological and physical seiences constitute the core of the liberal arts curriculum; study of them is a member. He must be undereliberal education. Experience in the classroom, the laboratory, and the library, however, is not the whole of a college education; extra-curricular activities, including sports, and the experience of living on the campus contribute, or should, to the same end. If all three groups on the campus of a liberal arts college agree that the basic objective is to produce graduates with a liberal education, the campus atmosphere will be one that will encourage academic achievement and will produce graduates who are well-rounded individuals.

Blue Key Speaks . . .

All of us are at times prone to think of receiving instead of in terms of giving. This seems to be a universal tendency of thought. However, the Master of life Himself taught us that this type of thinking is folly.

There is probably no student on this campus who has not thought in terms of receiving some material or spiritual benefit from the college. How many of us, however, have thought in terms of giving something either material or spiritual to the college. Certainly the founder of this institution thought in terms of giving and not receiving, thus we are obtaining an education now as the positive result of one man's concern for the welfare of others.

An effort was made at the beginning of the school year on the part of some of the leaders of the campus with the co-operation of the administration to improve the general campus life in both material and spiritual matters. Much enthusiasm was created, however, within a few short weeks much of it was lost. The question then arises "Why?"

In answer to such a question the blame could be attributed to many faults. The first, and perhaps the most prevalent one is the students themselves. It can be argued that because of their lack of effort and participation interest is lost, thereby killing the objective. This argument in part is true. Quite often an objective is started with enthusiasm and co-operation and with a potential "Pusher." However, because of more important things such as TV, movies, and such, the students do not take an interest and thereby kill the objective.

The second and perhaps the equally common argument is the administration. Many times it has been said if the students and student leaders had the co-operation and endorsement of the administration and the faculty a project would be successful. This also in part is true, for without the backing of the administration and faculty, no project regardles of student participation is truly a success.

The third and final argument then falls on the leaders of the campus. It can be said that many projects fail because of their incompetence. This is also true in part. Some of the leaders of the campus are incompetent, however, one must realize that many are overworked and because of various reasons take on more than they can handle. The result is quite evident.

What then would be the immediate solution? One may say better participation on the students' part, more co-operation on the administration's and faculty's part, or a greater variety of leaders who are able and have the time and know-how to carry a project through. However, it is my opinion that a more willingness to give of ones' self, both materially and spiritually to the betterment of the campus life and its objectives would be the wise solution. We must be willing to give of our effort and time in order to receive the richness of a complete and successful college life.

College Seal Dates to 1915, Designed by Tommy Pryse

The burning torch, upholding a scroll with the Latin motto, "Dum Vivimus Servimus" inscribed on it came into being back in 1915 as the Presbyterian College seal. Col. Thomas Pryse, of Beattyville, Ky., originated the trade mark of the class of 1915.

Later college administrators felt the need of a distinctive seal for the institution. It was only a logical outcome that the seal of the class of 1915 was adopted.

It originator was the editor of the '15 yearbook, and historians have assumed that the figure was designed as a feature of the college annual.

Col. Pryse, in addition to being the PaC-SaC editor, was the manager of the first PC football team coached by veteran Walter Johnson.

In those days the school was encumbered with the name "Presbyterian College of South Carolina," and the seal bore the inscription of "of S. C." But, when the Presbyterian Synod of Georgia joined with the Synod of South Carolina in helping support Presbyterian College, the cumbersome "of South Carolina" was dropped and the figure assumed the shape and inscription it now bears.

Behind the Blues

-:- -:- -:- By Tommy Richards

LITTLE FOUR WILL HAVE LEADER

There is no doubt that the Little Four will have an undisputed leader after tomorrow night. When the scrapping Blue Hose travel to Newberry to do battle with Newberry's much imroved Indians tomorrow night a leader will emerge. Both teams sport identical 3-1 records in conference competition. However, PC topped the Indians in a closely fought battle on the Hose home court in their only previous encounter. The only Hose defeat came at the hands of the talented Wofford Terriers at Spartanburg during the semester break. This loss was avenged Saturday night when the Hose jumped into an early lead just before the end of the first half and then held off stubborn Terrier attempts for victory.

Both PC and Newberry have proved surprisingly effective on the hardwood so far this year. In a conference that Wofford and Erskine were supposed to dominate they have been the front runners during the entire season. Wofford, now holding a 2-3 record in the conference play, has only one league game remaining and can hope for no better than a .500 season. This would afford them no better than a tie for second place should either PC or Newberry lose all of their remaiming games. Erskine, now 0-3, has few hopes of climbing out of the cellar. This leaves a clear-cut fight between the Hose and the Indians for top honors in regular season play and top seeding in the annual Little Four tourney.

TOURNAMENT SEEDING

If the games are paired in the tournament by seeding a top team, this team will definitely hold an advantage over the others. The number 1 team would play the number 4 team and numbers 2 and 3 would tangle on opening night. Looking back on the season Wofford has definitely been the biggest threat to the two top teams for season honors. Therefore, the team that played them would have a tough time reaching the finals of the tournament and then if they did it would mean playing two tough games on successive nights. On the other hand the team opening with Erskine would very probably not have quite as tough a job on their hands.

Both Newberry and PC have remaining, besides this game tomorrow night, one game against winless Erskine, which both should win. Therefore, it probably remains that the winner of the contest tomorrow night will be the winner of the Little Four and the seeded team in the tournament.

UPSETS MUST BE CONSIDERED

Although Erskine has not been a winner in Little Four play during the year, no one has ever consistently been able to predict the outcome of basketball contests. Erskine has been no real pushover this year and can at any time be expected to hit a hot streak and "upset the apple cart," either PC's or Newberry's. This could possibly throw the Little Four outcome into a three-way tie. So we are not going out on a limb and try to predict any games but we will have to take a wait-and-see attitude.

THIS AND THAT

Spring practice is off to a fast start and the presence of several transfers along with returnees from last year's team may add needed speed to a Blue Hose line and backfield. Football may take on a new look for next season and give Hose fans something to look forward to . . . Look out for Clayton Adams may have been the cry at Indian basketball practices during the past week if anybody from Newberry saw him in the game against Wofford last Saturday night. The Beak, as he is commonly called by his fans, went wild during the opening part of the second half and was unstoppable for ten minutes as he emerged with scoring honors after potting 28 points for his night's work . . . PC, after being rather cold at the free throw line in several of the last games, looked like shades of old as they hit 25 of 31 charity tosses against Wofford . . . Comment from a Wofford fan after witnessing their loss, "Don't you guys ever lose a game on your home court?" We might even say the same thing about the Terriers.

Bronze Derby Rivalry Tops Celebrates Twelfth Season

Newberry Sole Possessor

By BILL BOWMAN

Thirteen years ago at a 1946 Newberry-PC basketball game, a fellow by the name of Jim Kellett, who was then a student at Presbyterian College, had his derby stolen from his head by one of the enthusiastic Newberry rooters. Charles McDonald, former Blue Stocking Editor, and public relations director, immediately pounced upon the incident and had the hat returned with the purpose of setting it up as an incentive to uplift the spirit of rivalry between Presbyterian and Newberry.

McDonald, who was also active in the Blue Key at PC, had the honor fraternities of the two schools sponsor the project. The hat was sent to a novelty firm where it was bronzed. Since that date the "Bronze Derby" has been at stake in football, basketball, and baseball, and has been a symbol of 35 years of athletic rivalry between the colleges. However, since the founding of the "Bronze Derby," Newberry has held the upper hand in possessing the Brown topper.

More recently, in fact only this last year the Blue Key again sponsored a trophy between Presbyterian and another of the little three schools, Wofford.

In a chapel program at Wofford College, Jim Barksdale, president of the PC Blue Key, presented this trophy to Twitty Carpenter, who heads the Wofford Chapter. This trophy was given with the understanding that at the end of each sports year the school with the greatest number of points would gain the trophy. The points would be computed from the number of wins in the three major sports, with consideration also given to the sportsmanship displayed by each of the schools. This trophy would be the symbol of sports success in the past year.

With this understanding well underway, the Blue Key Chapter of both schools hope that this trophy will in the future serve to increase the spirit in a friendly way, and continue the traditional rivalry between Wofford and Presbyterian.

Blue Hose After Indian's Scalps; Will Travel and Attack Newberry

By TOMMY RICHARDS

It's win or take a second seat to Newberry for the Presbyterian Blue Hose tomorrow night. Both clubs carry identical 3-1 records into the game and both are out to break the two-way tie for the Little Four conference that they find themselves in.

A capacity crowd of both Blue Hose and Indian fans are expected to jam the newly-lighted Newberry field house for the tip off at 8:00 P. M. The Indians will be out to avenge an earlier loss at the hands of the Blue Hose in LeRoy Springs Gymnasium.

PC, sporting a well rounded club of hustlers, will depend on their accurate shooting to make up for a shortage in height. Newberry will be expected to take charge in the rebound department, and they also sport some rather fancy shooters themselves. The big gun for the Indians so far this season has been forward Charlie Gallagher, a sophomore who is averaging well in the double figures with his deadly jump shot. Bobby Lynch, a fancy Dan dribbler and ball handler, will handle the back court duties for the Braves and can also be counted on for outstanding defensive service.

Leader in the rebound department for the Indian has been center Jim Woolridge, who takes great advantage of lighting reflexes, good spring, and added height to sweep both offensive and defensive boards. The Hose answer to Newberry's blonde giant is 6-4 Wyatt Aiken. Aiken, much improved over last year, has added rebound strength to a comparatively small Hose quintet.

PC boasts of five men who have all at one time or another taken high scoring honors. Forwards Ralph Chambers and Bob Stratton, center Clayton Adams, and guards Bill Sullivan and Ken Caswell have all been big guns in the well balanced Hose lineup. Chambers has been a consistent high scorer with a soft jump shot from the head of the free show circle. He has also been a threat at all times with his driving under the backboard layups.

Stratton on the other hand has scored well with a one hand push from the corner and a moving jump from the lane. Adams, deadly accurate from a low position, has tallied his points with short hooks and layups and a good one hand push shot.

Sullivan, a master at ball handling and dribbling, has been deadly with an outside jump after a back court pick or behind an outside screen. Caswell, an excellent playmaker and fast break man, uses a long outside jump shot and a good running jump to very good advantage. All five have been consistently accurate both from the floor and the charity line.

PC coach Courts Redford expects a tough game from the Indians. He plans at this time to go along with the lineup that has taken games from Wofford and Erskine in its last two outings.

Probable Starting Lineup
Presbyterian — Stratton, Chambers, Adams, Caswell, Sullivan.
Newberry—Jackson, Gallagher, Woolridge, Dugan, Lynch.

Spring Training Rough; Weekly Scrimmages Set

The Blue Hose football team took the field last week for approximately five weeks of rugged Spring practice in preparation for next year's schedule. The first few days were spent in limbering up in preparation for the hard work facing the squad. However, durinug the past few days the PC squad, strengthened by the addition of several transfer students has been hard at work in full uniform.

Coach Frank Jones is planning at this time to stage a full-scale scrimmage at the end of each week in order to evaluate the work done. Plans also call for a ful-scale intra-squad game at the end of the five-week session.

Spring Practice Roster

Ends: Gardner, Kolb, Leahy, Chastain, Vastine, and Bridges.

Tackles: Parrish, Ledbetter, Piggerstaff, Morris, Walker, and Barnette.

Guards: Nix, Bridges, Boney, Firby, Anderson, DuBose, and Sinclair.

Centers: Copeland, Carter, and Shrigley.

Quarterbacks: Waters, Isger, Aycock, Malone, Denning, Gill, and Cole.

Halfbacks: Messer, Kemp, Wood, Benton, Lucas, Benson, F. Stanley, and G. Stanley.

Fullbacks: Sease, Drew, Mathews, and Barnes.

Blue Hose Bite Terriors To Tune of 78-72 Victory

The Blue Hose of Presbyterian College came back fast in the second half to extend a two-point lead to a 9 and then fought a valiant Wofford rally late in the game to avenge an earlier loss to the Terriers by a 78-72 score. PC, outscored from the floor by their much taller opponents, found the range at the free throw line to make the difference in the scoring.

After a nip and tuck first half the Hose left LeRoy Springs floor with a 36-34 halftime lead. The second half saw a fired-up PC team manhandle Wofford for the first 10 minutes of the second period to build up a lead that the Terriers could never quite overcome. Center Clayton Adams led the red hot attack in the second half with 21 to run his night's total to 28 and game scoring honors.

For Wofford it was a do or die situation as far as the conference championship was concerned and their hopes of this flew out of the window when they dropped their third conference loss. Coach Courts Redford used only six men in the effort by the Hose. PC's floor game was sparked all the way by guard Bill Sullivan until he fouled out late in the final period. Sullivan continually set up valuable baskets with his uncanny passing and hit 11 out of 11 charity tosses to give him a total of 13 for the night.

Adams, deadly with a short hook, continued to amaze both the Wofford team and spectators as he dumped point after point on the PC side of the scoreboard. The Hose forwards, Bob Stratton and Ralph Chambers, both hit in double figures with 16 and 11 points, respectively.

Forward Marshall Perkins was Wofford's top threat with 19 points on a nice jump shot. Twitty Carpenter added 15 and was his team's leading rebounder. Trap Hart and Ralph Jenkins tallied 11 and 10, respectively.

Presbyterian hit on 26 of 49 shots from the floor for a percentage of 53.1 while Wofford had a percentage of 43.8 and 28 for 64. The Hose hit a good 83.9 per cent from the charity line with 26 for 31 which spelled the difference in the game. Wofford had 14 of 19 for 73.7 per cent .

Presbyterian Marches Onward

By LYMAN HARRIS

"Wretched . . . Rack-up . . . Wretched . . . Rack-up . . . Wretched . . . Rack-up!" This strange noise pounded my ears so that I couldn't sleep.

"What's that noise, roomo? Surely it's not the bowling alley upstairs—they've closed down for the night. Play period is over."

"No, it's not the bowling alley. I don't know what it is. The 'wretched' seems to be coming from the front of Bailey and the 'rack-up' from the rear.'

"It's driving me batty. I'm gonna find it and stop it before I go out of my mind." I armed myself with a pail of water for protection and headed downstairs.

Once on the ground floor it was fairly easy to determine that the 'wretched' was coming from the powder room, but I still couldn't tell what it was. I opened the outside door and crept wearily to the powder room window. On the right wall a neon sign brilliantly read, "Only Fools Make A Mock at Sin," and under it one of PC's professors worked industriously, printing work books. As the printed sheets emerged, the press rhythmatically sang, "Wretched . . . wretched . . . wretched."

My curiosity satisfied concerning the 'wretched' noise, I then began a search for the source of the screaming "rack-up . . . rackup . . .rack-up." I walked through the TV lounge and out a side door. I followed the noise to its source which seemed to be in the basement of Bailey.

I tried the basement door but it was locked. I knocked, though, and a sliding panel quickly opened and two beady eyes stared out at me. The door finally opened and I saw that the man behind the beady eyes was Hal Capone, the campus syndicate leader.

"What ya want, Mac?" Capone mumbled gruffly.

"Pardon me, Sir, for disturbing you, but I just wondered where all the noise is coming from."

"Step inside and take a look," was his answer.

Inside, on the left wall was another neon sign, this one reading, "ONLY FOOLS MAKE A MOCK AT SIN. SMART PEOPLE DO IT UP RIGHT." Beneath it a printing press screamed, "Rack-up . . . rack-up . . . rack-up."

"I'm publishing all the skin notes for the syndicate in here," Capone screamed back. "We're working for the betterment of campus life . . . student aids . . . 24 hours a day—12 hour shifts."

"How about showing me around," I asked innocently.

We passed through the working crowd into the next room. The retail store was located in the rear window where the screen had been knocked out. Beside the window was a labeled filing case. In the Bible course section, all the scrolls were neatly tacked to the inside of a Revised Standard Version, and sold for a mere $3.55, tax included.

Of course there was a space allotted for the exams themselves, which only the more wealthy students could afford to buy because there was a limited supply.

We passed through the section of the room that was printing irregular Spanish verbs on cigarette paper. Capone warned the students that it was useless under John Sobey but there was a great demand nevertheless.

A red buzzer warned the approach of a tudent council member. The presses immediately shut down and Capone sipped a hot toddy until the green light came on again.

A group of slight-of-hand artists were working over in the corner trying to figure out a way to buck "Nostalgic Newton" Jones, "the man with the month-long tests." They weren't worried with the problem of passing; they just wanted to get through.

In another room, specialists were working on Univac watches, designed to give all the answers. Of course there were tiny tape recorders to be inserted in mock hearing aids, and microfilm that slips into a slot on your glasses.

I could see that Hal Capone had a well-knit organization. It was all nice and he expected a nice profit, but I knew he wouldn't succeed. Who would buy from him? After all, PC's got an honor system . . .

The task will also be rsi of making all arrangements and the organization of the first annual State IRC convention.

HAVE A WORD

By JOE HARDIN

PI KAPPA ALPHA

The regular meeting was held Tuesday night in the fraternity suite. Announcements were made concerning the Founder's Day banquet to be held in Spartanburg March 5. The brothers of Mu are looking forward to this joint meeting with the brothers of Nu Chapter of Wofford.

The regular meeting had a pleasant surprise when our newly elected advisor, Brother Dr. John McSween, visited briefly and said a few well chosen words.

Brothers of the week are all of our members of the basketball team who have done such a fine job on the hardwood this year. They are Ken Caswell, Bob Stratton, and Sonny Wells. Also, along with these Bill Bowman, Herby Entrekin, and Jack Tyalor were named brothers of the week for constructive work shown for the fraternity.

ALPHI PSI DELTA

The Alpha Psi Delta Sorority met at the home of Miss Eleanor Hudgens Tuesday evening. Plans for our smoker were completed. It is to be held next Tuesday evening at 7:30 P. M. at the Calvert House.

SIGMA NU

Zeta Theta Chapter of Sigma Nu was pleased to have visiting with them this past week Brother Bill Pittman from the National Chapter, and Brother Charlie Vance, Division Comander. At the meeting held Wednesday afternoon Brother Pittman talked on the fraternity life. Plans were further discussed for an orchestra for the White Star Weekend to be held on March 7 and 8. This dance will be the highlight of social activities within the fraternity for the year. Also plans were made for the Open Social on Feb. 26.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

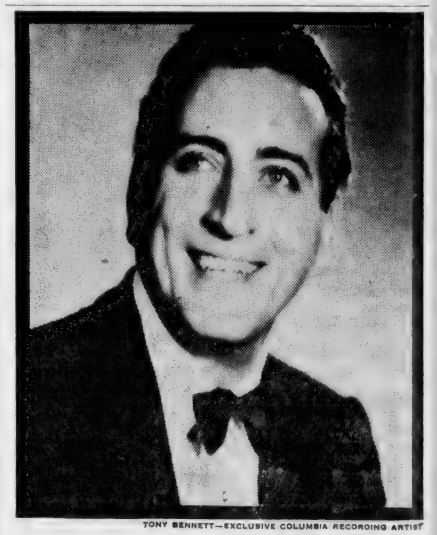
At the last meeting plans were completed for the Smoker to be held next Wednesday. Brother Al McKie, who is in charge of the operation, presented a detailed report and all arrangements were completed.

Brother Roger Godwin was commended for his new position of Editor of the Blue tocking, replacing past editor, Brother Lyman Harris.

KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular Tuesday meeting of the Brothers of Beta Pi Chapter, plans for the Smoker were completed. Brother Pat Wilson related the events of KA's Old South Ball to the Brotherhood, an annual event to be held in Columbia March 22-24.

Also Brother Don Clark, a transfer from Kappa Chapter of Mercer University, was welcomed into the Brotherhood.



Intramural Basketball Results

Intramural basketball seems to have dominated the sports scene this past week as eight of the fifteen teams entered on the schedule gave out with some fast action and much excitement. Joe Pinkston's win-happy "Globetrotters" came through in fine style as they downed the Rebels in a fine fast-moving, scrappy battle. Coach Pinkston, in a statement to the press, said that he expects much more out of his boys and is anxiously preparing for his battle with the KA five on Thursday night. The game should be an action-packed affair as both have fine records and always present a fine battle .

The PiKA's came through in fine style in a Wednesday afternoon win over the Kampus Kings even though most of their players were out knocking heads for coach Jones.

Next week's schedule includes the Ferocious Five going against the Wrecking Crew in what should be a "bang-up" battle. Also the Celtics will meet the KA's in what should be a fast-moving contest.

The schedule has been moving fairly slow in the past week or so as there were quite a few postponements but the action should be picking up again soon as everyone has settled down after resuming the spring semester. It is hoped that more postponements will not be necessary since with only a third of the games already played, there are only a few weeks before the spring weather brings out the softballers.

Annual Approaches March 15 Press Date

This year's PaC-SaC, now in the last stages of formation, promises to be one of the finest ever presented on our campus. Last month, the largest section of the yearbook, the class pictures, went to press at Jacobs Brothers Printing Company here in Clinton.

The second section, the activities section, also one of the largest in the annual, will be completed and sent to press on the twenty-fifth of this month, and the remainder of the annual will be finished by March 15. The only part of the annual not done in Clinton, the cover, has already been finished and is now in manufacture. The cover, strikingly beautiful, was drawn by Jimmy Nichols, and promises to be one of the outstanding attractions of the 1958 PaC-SaC.

Editor Blair Baldwin, stated that he is more than pleased with the results thus far. He is also very proud of the capable work being done by his staff, and the cooperation he has received from the student body. The only difficulty that has thus far shown itself has been the number of sponsors' pictures turned in for the beauty sections. Several pictures have still not been received, and as the above dates indicate, they must be in immediately if they are to appear. Also Baldwin asked all students to watch the bulletin board for the times and places of the remaining pictures to be taken.

Two PC Snowmen

Will James is pictured above with a giant snow man built last Saturday by industrious PC students. The campus was blanketed with the heaviest snowfall since 1952, some of which still remained this week due to the low temperature.

Rush Week Underway; Pledge Day Moved Up

The annual fraternity rush week got underway Wednesday night, February 19, as Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity held the first smoker of the season. . The members of Kappa Alpha Fraternity were hosts at the second smoker held last night in their fraternity room.

The room of Theta Chi Fraternity will be the scene of the third smoker of the season as they entertain tonight, and conclude this week's organized activities of rushing.

Pi Kappa Alpha will resume the smokers Monday night, February 24, as they welcome rushees to their suite.

The smoker of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity is on the agenda for Tuesday night as they entertain their rushees.

Sigma Nu fraternity will fete their prospective pledges on Wednesday night, as they conclude the rush season which ends immediately following their smoker.

Quiet period as enforced by the Inter-Fraternity rules will begin Wednesday night, February 26, at 12 o'clock, and will continue until pledging is over.

Pledge day has been moved up 24 hours by the IFC. It is to be Thursday, February 27, from 2:00 until 4:00 in the afternoon. The ballot box will be located in the classroom of Professor Kenneth Baker, chairman of the faculty committee on fraternities. His office is located in the rear of the Science Hall.

The IFC asks that special attention be given to the rules governing rush week which were published in the Blue Stocking last week.

Administration Plans Parking Improvements

Several months ago the Blue Stocking brought to light complaints concerning our present parking facilities. The administration, under the insistence of Business Manager Edward Campbell, has lost little time in taking action on the suggestions mentioned in the article, and ideas of their own.

Arrangements have already been made with the county highway department to "surface treat" and curb two new lots on campus. One of these lots is to be behind Spencer Dormitory, with an entrance on South Adair Street, and an exit on the one-way plaza street.

The second lot will occupy that space behind Bailey Hall, the area between the dormitory and the tennis courts, as well as that behind Bailey and the tennis courts. This will provide an exit behind the tennis courts and an entrance from the plaza. This lot will be left partially unfinished so that it can be enlarged to include the lot now occupied by the SCA building as soon as it can be torn down.

Mr. Campbel said that the parking capacity of this project should at least double the number of spaces now available on the plaza, and that with this improvement, the administration will be able to prohibit parking on the plaza, thus reducing dangers of side-swiping parked cars.

Mr. Taylor Martin, of the Mathematics department, is surveying and mapping out the new lots. As soon as this is completed construction will begin immediately.

FLASH!

The new Student Canteen of Columbia College is set for the grand opening on February 22 at 8:00 There will be an opening ceremony, after which there will be a dance in the new canteen. The student body of Presbyterian College is invited to attend these gala festivities.

Robed Choir Leaves; Concerts In Two Cities

The Presbyterian College Robed Choir will leave tomorrow for a weekend tour to Manning and Columbia, where they will present concerts in two Presbyterian churches.

The choir will leave the school at 1:30 P. M. and arrive in Manning that evening. They will be entertained Saturday night in the homes of the members of the First Presbyterian Church of Manning and present their concert there Sunday morning.

Sunday afternoon the choir will return to Columbia and sing at the First Presbyterian Church, after which they will return immediately to school.

Thirty-Four Students Qualify for Dean's List

Ten Approve Laurels; Attain Perfect Averages

Thirty-five students earned scholastic recognition last semester as members of the Deans' List. It is necessary to maintain an average of 2.4 for this honor. Those students earning an average of 2.6 or better are given unlimited cuts with a maximum of eight for a two-hour course and twelve for a three-hour course.

The perfect scorers for the semester with 3.0 averages were Mary Keith Adair, Guy Blakely, Ralph Chambers, George Jacks, Al McKie, Gay Maddox, Jimmy Suttle, and Tommy Richards.

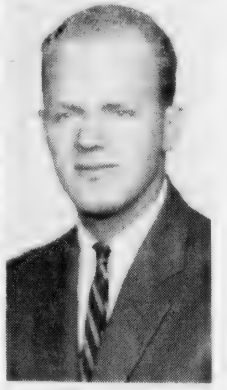
Making better than 2.8 but below 3.0 were Bo Jeanes and Mrs. Nettie Young. Following with averages of more than 2.6 but less than 2.8 were June Adair, John Brown, Mike Brown, Hugh Burns, Bill Davison, James Faile, Dick Hamby, John Knox, Jim McGirt, Bill Sease, and Jim Shakespeare.

Concluding the list with averages of 2.4 but less than 2.6 were Bill Aycock, Blair Baldwin, Olin Briggs, Paul Chandler, Jim Eller, Sonny Embry, and Martha Glasure. Also included were Ed Jackson, Don Kay, Yong-Ki Lee, Jim Tinman, and Steve Wilson.

Caswell Is Elected To Head Tau Phi Pi

Ken Caswell, a junior from Paris, Ky., was elected presdient of Tau Phi Pi Science Club in elections held this past week. He suceeds Bob Hill who has led the club for the past academic year.

Bruce Prince, of Union, takes over the vice-president spot from Tommy Richards. The new secretary-treasurer is Ron Isger of Clairton, Pa., who replaces Jack Shelburg.



Tau Phi is an organization whose purpose is the promotion of interest in scientific endeavor on the campus of Presbyterian College. Membership consists of those men on campus who are science majors and who possess an interest in the promotion of scientific activity and investigation.

Dr. Nolan Carter is the advisor to the club.

Arrington Is Named Law Club President

Paul Arrington was elected president of the newly formed law club, "Solons," in a meeting held February 13. Named to the office of vice-president was Ronald Wrght. Al McKie was chosen secretary, and Billy Hagood is to be treasurer.

There were eleven men present at this first organizational meeting. These men are the charter members of the club. In addition to the officers elected present were Ed Mayfield, Charles Watts, Jr., James Binder, Gene Watts, Paul Phillips, Jr., Don Girvan, and Albert Copelan, Jr.

PAUL ARRINGTON

The name "Solons' was chosen by the charter members and is taken from the original legal club which was active before World War II.

The by-laws, accepted Thursday, have been revised slightly and will go to the law office of Mr. Tench Owens on Monday for final corrections and legal phrasing. From there they will go to President Brown for final approval and then back to the club members to be accepted as the official by-laws of the "Solons."

Plans for activities will be discussed in the near future, and anyone who wishes to become a member of the "Solons" should submit a written statement to any member of not les than fifty words on why he would like to become a member.

ROTC Battalion Comes Indoors; Senior Cadets Instruct Classes

By FRANK RICHBOURG

Beginning on February 10, the military battalion came indoors for a period of five weeks' drill in weapons instructions. Each year around this time the valuable and vital subject of weapons is taught. Training in the basic weapons of the United States Army is necessary for all military cadets .

Each morning from Monday through Friday the command, "Good morning, gentlemen," and the cheery response, "Good morning, sir," can be heard in the classrooms of the Science Building and Neville Hall. Most of the cadets rejoice in having classroom instruction because this means that they will not have to drill on the field in the cold weather, but on many mornings those frigid classrooms in Neville Hall provide only protection against the wind.

The weapons which the freshmen cadets are studying are the carbine, grenades, the M-1 rifle, and the .45 pistol and sub-machine gun. Machine guns, mortars, the Browning Automatic Rifle, and the rocket launcher and recoilless rifle are the different crew-served weapons which the sophomores are studying. Many valuable rules can be gained from studying these weapons. For examlpe, the sophomores are warned, when they are disassembling the BAR, against burring the piston rings. The first-year advanced military class has been studying the mission and function of arms and services.

The senior military students are the instructors for the freshmen and sophomores. Most of them have been very industrious in preparing their subjects and in working out teaching methods. A couple of senior instructors shirked their duties, however, by reporting to their classes late because they overslept. Major Lawmon handled this situation with perfect coolness and composure of mind. The instructors of the MS III's are Lt. Bennett, Sgt. Rowe, and Col. Barnett, who has been teaching communications.

All students are urged to do their best because the weapons grades are composing a part of the final military grades. Also, the grades will be counted according to companies in company competition.

In summing up, it can be said that the knowledge of weapons is very important in a military mans' life. After all, the army doesn't need second-hand officers.

First Campus Film Shown at Thornwell

The first in the series of campus movies sponsored by the English Department was shown last night at the Thornwell Auditorium. It was entitled "The Titfield Thunderbolt," and was a comedy about an antique train. The next feature in the series is scheduled for February 27 and is entitled "The Mikado."

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Editorials : Features : Humor

Rush Week Dilemna . . .

Why could not Rush Week have been held the first week of the semester? The advantages of this are quite apparent upon examination.

As the schedule now stands, Rush Week comes during the third week of the semester. This is also the week when many professors begin having their first quizzes of the semester. This places the fraternity men and the rushees in a predicament. Two important items are on the agenda, and naturally one or the other must give. For fraternity men and those who intend to join a fraternity this is the most important week of the year. Needless to say, studying takes second place, and grades suffer.

This conflicting situation could be easily alleviated by having Rush Week the first week of the semester. All the pressure and tension of Rushing would be over, and students would be better able to center their attention upon studying when quiz time comes around.

Naturally this means that the list of those eligible to pledge would have to be published at the beginning of the semester. But would it not be worthwhile in view of the fact that a great many students would get off to a better scholastic start for the semester.

Looking Ahead . . .

For the confidence placed in us, and for the privilege of working for the student body, we the Blue Stocking staff express heartfelt appreciation.

As we begin our term in office, we are mindful of the fine reputation and the outstanding quality of the Blue Stockings of the past. It will be our earnest desire to attain to this quality with the paper under our editorship. We look forward to serving the student body of Presbyterian College, of which this publication is a vital part, and pledge ourselves to uphold the principles of truth, honesty, and decency, which are the watchwords of self-respecting newspapers.

It goes without saying that the Blue Stocking is the voice of the Presbyterian College student body. In our editorial policy we shall endeavor to fulfill this role. In order to give individual students the opportunity to express their opinions, we invite your letters. Those which express some worthwhile thought will be published in a separate "Letters to the Editor" column.

We do not intend to be the advocate of any faction, and will not rest assured until every represented organization has been heard. Constructive criticism will be welcomed by the editor and staff at any time, as we endeavor to make the Blue Stocking the best paper that we possibly can.

Book Review . . .

Marjorie Morningstar

Herman Wouk portrays in his latest book, "Marjorie Morningstar," the life of a young Jewish girl who is filled with aspirations of achieving stardom and fame in the fascinating city of New York. The book is magnificently characteristic of the life of the theatres and resorts.

Marjorie Morningstern seeks fame under the name of Marjorie Morningstar and represents the image of any girl who has ever dreamed of seeing her name on a Broadway marquee. She is also the picture of a woman who falls in love and sets out to capture her man within the bounds of matrimony. From the very beginning of her college life she is conscious of this desire to act on the legitimate stage. She scores repeated successes in all the local pro-

BUMS AND BUTTS

By JIM HOWELL

The other day I noticed on the dining hall chronicle, at the right as you go in the door, a bulletin asking for a crusade against fag moochers; but being one myself I can't criticize too harshly. PC students come to realize after about two years that these words of Kipling were true: "A woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke." That I believe is carrying it a little too far, though.

It is really more serious than one would imagine! Just think, you can't go through life a cigarette bummer, I don! think. How would it fit in the news if your reply to the question, "What is your opinion on segregation?" was "I dont' know, but do you have a cigarette?"

What would the tobacco farmers think of themselves if they knew they were creating a campus problem in that they are causing friends to fall out every day over just a few butts? I suppose he feels like the Christian bootlegger who says that he onyl sells the stuff but doesn't make you buy it.

One can always say, "No, I just have a few for my own personal use." Or, if he asks you if you have a cigarette for a friend, say, "Sure, for a friend", and then walk off. Or better still, just smoke Cools.

The type of bum that gets me is the Wall Street Bum, who asks you for a cigarette and then says, "That's OK, those aren't my brand." Those are the times that try men's souls. You try desperately not to hit him right in the mouth.

My roommate Simp from Clemsonville, Tenn., had to quit smoking "on a coun ah his frens." They were chain smokers and he supplied the chain.

Anyway, here at the Monastery, if a man doesn't smoke three packs a day, he need not worry about contracting lung cancer. After loaning out two packs of them, and dropping three fags in the snow, using a couple more to keep his steak from bleeding in the dining hall, and three more to Professors for brownie points, he is hunting for ducks in Neville Hall. By the way, that is a very good place to hunt if you get there before the janitor takes them at home for his pipe.

What Simp always did was get a duck and "tear off thuh en at ad thuh foir on it. It's more clean nat way." Actually, Simp has some ducks in his desk that are so old you have to smoke them in a perfectly horizontal position. Otherwise if you lean forward the least bit all of the tobacco will pour out on your bed and you have only the paper in your mouth which still retains its original shape.

One other type of bum who will make you want to start swinging is the one who, after hitting you for a fag, will bring forth a $25 Ronson Windproof Lighter with gold trimming, and full name engraved on both sides, light the cigarette and say, "Thank yea, Babe." If he can afford a lighter like that, surely he can buy a pack of cigarettes, or at least call you by your name instead of Babe.

Another type is the fellow who gets a cigarette from you and puts it in his own pack or behind his ear and walks away, without saying anything — except, "OH," when you pop him in the back of the head with a plate.

Also there is one more type by far the worst of the lot. He has just eaten chow, and you can understand how he would naturally want a cigarette, then above all other times, because you are addicted to the habit yourself. He doesn't have any (of course) and asks you for one. You are a kind hearted person and do not mind loaning anyone a cigarette under these circumstances. So you do. He lights it and doesn't inhale the smoke. He only smokes for prestige and attention and tries to make everyone think he is a real Bad Man like in the movies. He really fools no one but himself, but probably enjoys doing that.

This could go on all night, but remember, next time someone asks you for a cigarette, the words of Shakespeare in his Hamlet (which I read in a Mad comic book): "Neither a borrower nor a lender be: For loan oft loses both itself and friend."

Between Two Slams

By PAUL ARRINGTON

"SLAM!"
"Good evenin'. What'll it be?"
"Coffee."
'One be enough?"
'Why sure; you don't see anyone else, do you?"
"Don't guess I do, but I thought maybe you'd want more bein's it's so cold out."
"My gosh, man, it's not cold out there. What you got, water in your veins?"
"No, don't guess it's really cold. Want cream?"
"What, are you crazy? I said coffee, not milk. Want me to get a curdled stomach? You know I didn't ask for cream."
"Don't guess you did, come to think of it. How about sugar, then?"
"Sugar? What you want, to kill me with diabetes? I didn't ask for no sugar. Can't you tell I got diabetes?"
"No, I can't. 'Sa matter-of-fact you look pretty healthy. Musta played some football in your day, huh?"
"Football? I hate the game. Turn off that TV, will you?"
"Okay."
"Click!"
"Hows about a sandwitch, egg or somethin'?"
I thought you just got through telling me I looked healthy. Don't I look healthy, huh?"
Yea, sure you do."
"Then, why ya' trying to stuff me, then? If I want somethin', I'll ask for it."
"Sure, okay."
"Okay? Whatdaya' mean, okay? You didn't even gimme any water. Whatsa 'matter? Don't ya have no water in this crummy joint? Can't ya see I'm 'bout to die o' thirst? . . . and ya don't even gimme no water."
"Sorry, here."
"Slusssh"-"Clink."
"Whatsa matter with you? You got ta get it all over my sleeve? I want it in me, not on me."
"Sorry. Here's a rag."
"A rag; a crummy ol' rag. Aintcha got no napkins? At least somethin' clean to wipe this stuff off with?"
"Sure, here's a napkin."
"'A' napkin, he says. Whatsa matter, ya cheap or somethin'. Ya can't gimme more'n one skinny napkin? Can'tcha see I'm soaked, huh?"
"Sure, here's some more."
"Man, I don't see how you keep this place open, much less make a livin'. What a crummy joint. I'm gettin' outa here."
"Hey! You forgot to pay for the coffee!"

Hose Will Bounce Back

After PC went down last Saturday night to an 84-66 count at Newberry, it was quite apparent that the Hose will be facing a tough quintet from Sartanburg the opening round of play in the Little Four tournament. The Hose were simply out-shot, out-played, and out-spirited by the band from Newberry, who incidentally took a string of three consecutive losses into the fray. The Tribe proved a hustling club in the initial contest when the home five nosed them out in the closing minutes of play. Then with a home court advantage and the oppositoon playing the calibre of ball they displayed, winning was no problem to Newberry; consequently, the Little Four title was drawn to a close by this convincing victory.

Opening with supposedly the weakest squad in the LF Conference, Coach Redford took his inherited material, shaped them to a maxmium peak and at the present time boasts one of the best records among the state teams. Who would have thought the Hose to be riding toward another winning season? Maybe the optimism of a rookie coach being the only exception. Possibly the enthusiasm of the players ran at a low ebb with the dependable Thompson boys gone. Spirit and team work have been the real factors to push the Blue Hose into a most successful season. Redford's fireball type of play coupled with the brilliant teamwork have produced 14 victories in 21 outings. If Chambers or Stratton is off one particular night, Adams will pick up the slack, as evidenced in the 78-72 triumph over Wofford with his rampage of 28 points. The ball-hawks, Sullivan and Caswell, cannot be overlooked in the least. Playmakers of their type could certainly find a spot in anybody's league, thus giving the reason why PC and its explosive offensive could easily score in the Little Four tourney at Anderson.

The cry of the students after the miserable showing at Newberry went to the sound of "we'll bounce back in the tournament."

24 DAYS TILL CHRISTMAS

Spring football drills have been slowed down momentarily because of the recent snow and extremely cold weather. PC gridmen drew equipment on Monday, February 3, and since that time only six off-season practice sessions have been endured. In between interruptive holidays and the space of these few days, emphasis has been placed on conditioning, with half-line scrimmage drills furnishing the contact work.

Coach Jones stated in a recent interview, "we plan to keep our workouts within a 30-day period so the boys can go out for spring sports." Since PC is not a member of the NCAA, the off-season workouts are not checked by a limit of 20 practice sessions.

The Blue Hose are bolstered by several junior college transfers—a pair of quarterbacks and as many linemen, which are putting hope into the eyes of Coach Jones for the 58 season. Prominent among these is Fred Gill ,a 6-foot, 200-pound quarterback from Gulfport, Miss., who played at Perkinston Junior College. Quarterback-halfback Nat Cole, a 6-2, 190-pounder from Natchez, Miss., and who played at Southwest Mississippi Junior College. Tackle Cecil Morris, a 6-3, 210-pounder from Hazelhurst, Ga., who played at South Georgia. Guard Tommy Boney, a diminutive 5-8, 180-pounder from Jacksonville, Fla., who comes to PC from South Georgia and Tampa Unviersity. Newcomer Morris played previously at end, but will try him at tackle during spring drills. All four transfers have two years of college eligibility remaining.

One position change finds lettermen Bob Matthews, Decatur, Ga., junior, at fullback instead of at the flank. Freshman Bruce Barnes of Concord, N. C., pho played briefly at fullback the latter part of the '57 campaign, hopes to make it a definite stay. He makes the change from playing the majority of the season at guard.

17 lettermen are among the 44 gridmen now engaged in the off-season workouts. There'll bc at least one letterman at very position.

SHRIGLEY BACK

A familiar addition to the spring football roster for 1958 has been that of Richard Shrigley. The juniors and seniors around campus will probably remember this stellar lineman but not as well as the opponents of the '55-'56 PC fooaball teams. During the course of the '55 season Rich lined up at the guard position beside his brother George, the center on the team, who completed his collegiate eligibility here at PC that year. The Shrigley combination was a most impenetrable one and maybe a stronghold the Hose forward wall has lacked ever since.

Haunted by injuries during most of the 1956 season, he was forced to gvie up football. That year Shrigley was switched from guard to center and lettered at the pivot post. Finding it most difficult to eb away from the gridiron entirely, Rich accepted the duties of an assistant coach during the following campaign. Now back with the knocking again, he can be remembered for his rugged defensive play and quick reacting from the linebacker position. We look for him to bolster the Hose line and will most likely hold down the center position come next fall.

Detroit Lions Draft Ken Webb; PC Gridman to Enter Pro Ranks

When Presbyterian's Ken Webb was tapped by the professional Detroit Lions, it marked only the third time a PC gridman has achieved such an honor.

The senior from Decatur, Ga., a 5 foot, 11 inch, 200 pounder, established himself as one of PC's all-time great ball carriers. During his career, he amassed 1,893 yards in 341 rushes from scrimmage his first three years for an average of 5.5 yards-per-carry. He racked up 441 yards in 74 carries as a freshman in 1954; 828 yards in 155 carries as a sophomore, when he topped the state in rushing and made All-State; 624 yards in 12 carries during the course of his junior year. He was chosen as an alternate captain his last year with the Hose.

Coach Walter Johnson says, "this is a wonderful opportunity for a great athlete. I have watched Webb perform since a freshman and he has definitely developed into one of the all-time footballers at PC. It will be tough going for him up in the pro ranks and he will be competing against the best."

Two former PC football greats, June Moore ('39), and Larry Weldon ('45), both graduated into the pro ranks from here.

Blue Hose Defeat Flying Fleet; Meet Belmont Abbey on Monday

Stratton Nets Twenty-one Points

By ED GALLOWAY

The fighting Presbyterians again showed their fans a real game by downing the Erskine fleet here last night by the score of 84-71.

PC took over a 3-2 lead and throughout the game led their Little Four rivals, but were threatened when Erskine brought the score to an almost tie of 44-42. This was the closest score and at one time PC led by a 17-point margin.

The Blue Hose proved their strength in this game by hitting 60 per cent of their field goals, and improving their win-loss mark to 14 wins against 7 losses.

This gives PC a 4-2 record in the fast Little Four race, and Erskine has yet to score a win. Our next, and last, home game is Monday night against Belmont Abbey.

Newberry Stops PC With 84-66 Victory

By LARRY BROWN

Presbyterian College's high-flying cagers hit a snag last Saturday night and fell before a Newberry onslaught 84-66.

The scrappy band of Indians jumped off to a fast start and by intermission led by an enjoyable 36-27 margin over their Blue Hose cousins.

By virtue of this key win, the Redskins climbed into an undisputed first place in the tight Little Four race, with PC falling into second position.

Newberry took control of the game midway in the second half and slowly widened the gap over the faltering Hose. It was a team effort for the tribe, for all starters hit in the double figures. Forward Charlie Gallagher set the pace for the victors with 24 points.

Newberry hit 41 per cent of their shots from the floor, while the usually hot PCuns were far below par.

Clayton Adams and Bob Stratton, with 15 points each, led the Blue Hose attack. Looking sharp, was guard Bill Sullivan who hit for 11 points and played a superb game.

The Newberry win over PC evened the series up, for the Blue Hose had earlier beat them here, 73-66.

Sports Quiz

Each week three questions will appear in the Blue Stocking and will be sponsored by the Broadway Theater. All students are eligible and shall turn in to the Sports Editor only one set of answers. The contest will close at noon Monday and the first correct answer will receive a free pass to the Broadway.

(1) Who was the first major league team to win the pennant five years in succession? What were the years and who were the managers?
(2) What heavyweight boxing champion has held the title longer than any other fighter and for how long did he wear the crown?
(3) In 1957, who was the winner of the National Collegiate A A Basketball Championship? Who wast he losing team, the final score, and how many overtimes did they play?

Crusaders Boast Impressive Record

Monday night the Blue Hose of Presbyterian College will play host to the Crusaders of Belmont Abbey here in Leroy Springs Gymnasium, for the concluding game of the regular season.

Belmont Abbey invades Presbyterian with a very respectable twenty wins and one loss record. Their team is a well balanced and experienced outfit with a good defensive team. Previous opponents have seldom scored more than sixty points against them.

They hold one previous victory over Presbyterian, in which they took the game by a margin of 22 points .

Presbyterian will be facing a tough opponent, but Coach Courts Redword's seasoned cagers will prove tough for the Crusaders to handle. With very respectable wins over Erskine, Georgia Teachers, and Pheiffer, the Blue Hose will be in prime shape for this Monday night game.

Stratton Proves Worth As One of Top Scorers

Sophomore forward Bob Stratton of Lawrenceburg, Ky., is one of the reasons the Hose have been surprising everyone this year. He has a remarkable eye for the basket and is making a strong bid for Little Four honors.

The 6 foot, 2 inch cager was a much sought prospect after graduation from high school in Kentucy and thus brought an outstanding record to Presbyterian College. He claims as his biggest thrill in prep circles the 34 points he scored in a Kentucky Regional Tournament.

"Tank," as he is called, started his first college basketball game against Furman this year. Bob had a terrific night from the floor and gathered in a total of 30 points for the Hose.

Stratton has scored 20 points or more a game on seven occasions, with a high of thirty or better performances against Furman twice, Wofford and Newberry for his largest production. Through the Pheiffer clash last Tuesday night, Bob has amassed a total of 325 points through the nets.

Besides claiming honors as a top scorer, the sophomore competitor excels in other departments of the game. He is a good rebounder and also one of the stalwarts in the tough Blue Hose defense.

Bob, as well as any player on the squad, has a great deal of regard for Coach Redford. "Through his efforts," says Stratton, "the team has emerged from the cellar dwelling predictions at the start of the season."

Football Letters are Slated For Twenty-Seven Gridmen

Twenty-five gridmen and two managers earned football letters Presbyterian College during the past season, Athletic Director Walter A. Johnson has announced.

He said Coach Frank Jones had recommended five seniors, 11 juniors, three sophomores, and six freshmen for the monograms. Nine of this group receive them for the first time.

Letters are awarded these 25 players for their service during the 1957 season:

Seniors—Guards Bill Bowman of Monongahela, Pa., and Jackie Powers of Andrews; Halfbacks Ken Webb of Decatur, Ga., and Mitch Mavromat of Brunswick, Ga.; and Center Jim McLauchlin of Charlotte.

Juniors—Halfbacks Tony Benson of Chester; John Lucas of Donora, Pa.; and Ed Messer of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Tackles Jack Coppley of Lexington, N. C., and Marion Parrish of Chester; Ends Ken Gardner of Greenville, Ted Leahy of Atlanta, and Bobby Mathews of Decatur, Ga.; Guard John Firby of Belvedere; Quarterback Ron Isger of Clairton, Pa.; and Fullback Jimmy Nichols of Decatur, Ga.

Sophomores—End Paul Chastain of Central; Guard Mac Copeland of Athens, Ga.; and Quarterback Bob Waters of Sylvania, Ga.

Blue Sock Setup Compares With Chain of Command

By SONNY EMBRY

With the election of a new editor for the Blue Stocking last week, some question as to the duties of the offices to be filled entered the minds of many of the students.

The system of the Blue Stocking is not unlike the military chain of command. At the top of the chain is the faculty advisor, Ben Hay Hammet. Beneath him are the elected offices of Editor and Busniess Manager.

It is the responsbiility of the Editor to choose and govern subordinate positions such as Managing Editor, Associate Editor, News, Feature, and Sports Editors who in turn wrok with the Editor in choosing a staff of reporters and writers. The Editor is responsible for all that is finally printed in the "Sock," the layout, and headlines of the articles.

Most of the time the Editor writes the Eeditorial. His task is not so simple as it may sound. This would compare favorably with putting together a three-thousand word term paper each week, and usually takes upward of ten hours work for each paper.

The Business Manager is responsible for all ads and soliciting done for the paper. Unknown to many people, the task of circulation is his also. As soon as the paper leaves The Chronicle Office downtown, the Editor's job is done, while the job of the Business Manager, together with the Circulation Manager and staff whom he appoints, is just beginning. The Editor notifies the Business Manager that the paper is printed, and he in turn notifies the Circulation Manager who is responsible for taking it from the printer to the four dormitories on campus, placing a copy in each faculty box, and leaving a supply in spots convenient to the day students, co-ed, and married students. Once during the week, the circulation staff also must fold, address, and stamp a mailing list of the Stocking which includes the Board of Trustees, and many friends of the college.

If any of these links are weak, then the job of someone else is made much harder, or the task may be left undone. From the indications of the enthusiasm shown by this new staff, I am sure that no weak links exist, and that this year's Blue Stocking will continue to be one of ductions and summer stock at the resorts of upper New York state. Finally after managing to secure a small part in a poorly produced Broadway show, she is released because of not portraying the role of a prostitute accurately.

During one of her summer escapades she meets Noel Airman, an erratic song writer who is in charge of productions at one of the larger resorts. Airman, ten years Marjorie's elder, plays the role of the self-sufficient independent bachelor who has a witty intellectual outlook on life. He categorizes the average girl as a "Shirley" seeking only the tangible items in life such as a home in the prominent section of town, a good car and needed security. His own life becomes a search of "Hits" resulting from the breakdown of the four main elements of life itself. They are religion, philosophy, sex and money.

Marjorie chases Airman, captures him, loses him and then captures him again only to find out that she doesn't really want to lead the life of a wandering Bohemian. She in essence becomes a "Shirley" and finds her place in life; she marries becomes the wife of a prominent Jewish citizen and gains the security she basically has seadched for. Airman, after having been turned down, loses all self-confidence and turns out to be a third-rate television writer.

Blue Hose Defeat Georgia Teachers

After being defeated by the Indians of Newberry, the men from Leroy Springs gymnasium gave their fans something to see last Monday night by defeating Georgia Teachers 73-65.

The game was led all the way up until the last half of the second period by the Profs, when the Blue Hose let go and showed how it should be done. Trailing at the half by only 2 points, PC came back on the court with a will and determination to win that turned the game into a thriller, to say the least. The fine playing of "Sonny" Wells was a great asset to the team, and he showed the fans how a rebound should be taken of the boards.

High point man of the night was Bob Stratton with 17, followed by 16 apiece for Don Verstraete and Chester Curry, both of Georgia Teachers.

Fraternities Get Eighty-Eight, Campus Rush Week Activities End

KA, With Twenty-Seven, Has Largest Pledge Class

Rush Week came to an abrupt end yesterday when eighty-eight men pledged the fraternity of their choice between the hours of 2:00-4:00 P. M.

Kappa Alpha led the list as twenty-seven men made it their choice. Pi Kappa Alpha and Pi Kappa Phi tied for second place honors as each got nineteen new members.

Alpha Sigma Phi placed fourth with a total of fifteen new pledges. Sigma Nu was fifth as five men made it their choice, and Theta Chi was sixth with four new members.

The eighty-eight men who have pledged fraternities are:

Sigma Nu—Julian Allen, Anson Faust, Wilbur Douglas, Bill Stubbs, Dan McQueen.

Theta Chi—Don Burquest, John Gossett, Jack Clontz, Maxie Gray.

Alumni Association Elects New Officers

Four new officers of the Presbyterian College Alumni Association have been named in a special election which also brought approval of the mail ballot system of voting.

Announcement came today from Ben Hay Hammet, director of public relations and alumni office, who said close races were waged in the balloting open to all alumni. These men were elected:

Alumni representative to the PC board of trustees—James Wilson, Fayetteville, N. C., lumberman and member of the class of 1934, replacing J. Ferdinand Jacobs of Clinton, who last fall was named a trustee by synod.

Vice-president of the alumni association—John Montgomery, '29 of Columbia, managing editor of The State newspaper, succeeding Francis Hart of Anderson.

Alumni director for Georgia—O. A. Dunlap, '31 of Atlanta, president of the Grant Company, to succeed George Ewing of Augusta.

Alumni director for South Carolina—Dr. Duncan C. Alford, '21, Spartanburg physician who replaces Dr. William Peter Beckman of Columbia.

The offices of president and of secretary-treasurer of the PC Alumni Association were filled last year for two-year terms. J. Edward Means, Jr., '30 of Greenville, serves as president; and A. Bynum Poe, '27 of Rock Hill, as secretary-treasurer.

Dorm Discussions

Dormitory discussions have been set by the Student Christian Association for Wednesday and Friday nights of next week. These discussions will be led by popular faculty members and will center on subjects and problems brought up by the participating students, as well as in preparation for Religious Emphasis Week which will begin on March 11.

Shakespeare Voted To Head Alpha Sigs

Jim Shakespeare, a rising senior from Hollywood, Fla., was elected this week to the position of President of Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity. Shakespeare replaces Albert Copelan of Mooresville, N. C., and will serve as president for one year, beginning with his formal installation next Tuesday night.

Selected for the office of vice-president was Charles Watts, a rising senior from Georgetown, who replaces Joel Easterling of Hartsville.

Elected to the offices of recording secretary and corresponding secretary were, respectively, Bob Forbis of Moultrie, Ga., and Bob Hafner of Chester. These men replace Harold Galimore of Tryon, N. C., and Sonny Embry of Birmingham, Ala., who served in these offices last year.

Selected to handle the finances was Roscoe Lindsay of Marion.

PC's Math Dept. Offers Award to Top Freshmen

The mathematics department announced this week that a new award is to be given at the end of the year. This award will be presented to the freshman who has shown the most progress in mathematics over the year.

The award is a book of mathematical tables and the wniner's name will be engraved on it. The recipient will be chosen by the mathematics professors.

Bain, Carter, Embry Vie For Top SCA Position

Nominated yesterday by the Student Chirstian Association cabinet was an impressive list of campus leaders who will vie for SCA top offices at the polls next Monday.

Nominated for the office of President were Dick Carter, Sonny Embry, Neil Bain, and Don Hendrix, who has since withdrawn from the race.

Carter, a rising senior from Florence, has played an active part in campus activities and lists among his interests chapel program chairman of the retiring cabinet, robed choir reader, section leader and treasurer, Westminster Fellowship, Blue Stocking staff, and the Ministerial Club. He also holds office in his fraternity.

Embry, a rising senior from Birmingham, Ala., likewise has played an active part in campus activities which includes publications chairman of the retiring cabinet, advisor to the Freshman cabinet, Editor of the Knapsack, Editor of the Student Directory, PaC-SaC Activities Editor, News Editor of the Blue Stocking, International Relations Club, Westminster Fellowship, section leader in the robed choir, and offices in his fraternity. He is also a consistent member of the Dean's List, and a retired biology labora tory assistant.

Bain, also a rising senior, hails from Fayetteville, N. C., and lists to his credit personal and campus affairs chairman, Knapsack staff, and Ministerial Club.

All three nominees have dedicated their lives to full time Christian service. Carter and Bain, after graduation, will attend seminary to work on their B.D. degrees, while Embry will do graduate work towards an M.A. in YMCA work.

Nominated for vice-president were Bob Matthews, Paul Arrington, and Al McKie.

Matthews ,a rising senior from Decatur, Ga., is on the varsity football team, a member of the Block P. Club, Methodist Student Union, PaC-SaC staff, and holds office in his fraternity. He has also been vice-president of his class for the last two years.

Arrington, hailing from Charlotte, N. C., is a rising senior and the Intramural Chairman of the outgoing SCA Cabinet. A member of the track team, he holds office in his fraternity. Feature Editor of the Blue Stocking, President of the Charlote-PC Club and president of the newly formed Solons.

McKie, a resident of Alexandria, Va., is likewise a rising senior, and is presently the Associate Editor of the Blue Stocking, Fraternity Editor of the PaC-SaC, a past member of

Major in Sociology To Be Added in Fall

Beginning with the 1958 fall term, the college will add the field of sociology to the list of majors offered at Presbyterian.

This addition of a major in Sociology to the college curriculum will include numerous courses, some of which are mentioned in the bulletin, some which are not. The courses to be offered in the field are two semesters of General Sociology, two semesters of Modern Social Problems, one semester of Christian Sociology, Marriage and Family, Race Problems, Juvenile Delinquency, Anthropology, Sociology of the South, and advanced courses in numerous fields. The requirements for a major in Sociology will be six hours of General Sociology and Modern Social Problems, plus twelve additional hours in remaining subjects, and an additional reading course in Anthropology and Sociology. Also there will be a required paper ranging from 15,000 to 20,000 words which will encompass research in the reading course or findings from assigned field work.

Since 1948 the Sociology department has grown from a one-semester course in General Sociology, which included Marriage and Family, to a complete department including twenty-seven semester hours and an additional reading course. Such growth can be attributed to the management and guid-

Tuesday Night Dinner . . .

Princeton Chemist to Lecture Here

A prominent analytical chemist, Dr. Clarke E. Bricker, of Princeton University, will visit Presbyterian College on Monday and Tuesday for two days of lecture and consultation.

The PC Chemistry Department brings Dr. Bricker to the campus at this time under the visiting scientist program of the American Chemical Society, sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

The highlight of his stay will be a dinner on Tuesday night in Judd Dining Hall. At this time, Dr. Bricker will speak to PC chemistry students and a number of high school chemistry teachers and interested students who have been invited. The topic of this general lecture will be "The Every Day Aspects of Analytical Chemistry."

In addition to this general lecture Dr. Bricker is to deliver classroom lectures to the Quantitative Analysis and General Chemistry classes on Monday and Tuesday.

He will also be available for consultation Monday afternoon in the Chemistry Department, and by special appointments through Dr. Carter.

Dr. Bricker is one of the prominent younger men in the field of modern analytical chemistry. He has written over twenty-five technical articles for professional publications, and is co-author of a popular textbook in the chemistry field.

DR. CLARKE E. BRICKER

He has served as president of the American Chemical Society, and is a former consultant in the Los Alomos Scientific Laboratories.

Since going to Princeton in 1948, Dr. Bricker has served as a member of the Faculty Committee of the Course of Study, and has served on the Committee on Underclass Years that is studying Princeton's underclass prgram in its extra-curricular as well as its curricular aspects.

The Presbyterian College Chemistry professors, Dr. Nolon Carter and Dr. R. B. Purdom, are associating with Tau Phi Pi Science Club in bringing Dr. Bricker to the campus.

Solution To A Problem...

Last week the English department took a step foward towards a cultured campus atmosphere, but which has been at least a partial failure—due to dependence on the incomplete and therefore inaccurate school calendar maintained by the college. Not only are regular meetings such as the Science Club and the Ministerial Club not on the calendar, but neither are basketball games, fraternity smokers, choir trips, and other irregular, but important events.

Blame for this incomplete calendar cannot be placed on any one person, since it is the fault of many people including the student body, the administration, and the faculty. The fault lies, rather, in the system used in setting up the official school calendar. The answer, therefore, is to change or supplement the system.

During March alone, three of the six fraternities on campus will have state-wide or area-wide dances that will take a sizeable block of students away from the campus for a weekend. None of these dances are on the calendar because they will be held in other towns, and the fraternities involved do not wish to go through the red tape and questioning that usually accompanies the placing of an event on the calendar. The military ball committee, not knowing of all of these events, had much difficulty in scheduling the military dance.

Many other illustrations can be given along these lines, including the difficult task of finding the Dean in his office and not out of town speaking at the necessary, and frequent, high school college days.

A large new bulletin board should be put in a central part of the campus, probably the SCA building. This would supplement the bulletin board in the dining hall, and would be helpful to married students and day students who do not eat in the dining hall. On this board should be a large flip page calendar on which could be recorded all meetings and all events. This would in no way replace the official school calendar maintained by the Dean, but would serve the students and supplement the school calendar.

A campus officer could then periodically compare the two calendars with the Dean and bring both up to date, officially and unofficially. Clearance with the Dean would still be necessary to put dates on the official school calendar, but this would facilitate the scheduling of major events, and help familiarize the Administration and faculty with the activities on campus. Conflicts would still arise, but these could be ironed out much easier with such information on hand as described above.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter is happy to welcome the new pledges into the fraternity. At our last meeting officers were elected for the coming year. Jim Shakespeare is the new president, and Charlie Watts is the vice-president. Treasurer is Roscoe Lindsay, and Bob Hafner and Bob Forbus are the respective recording and corresponding secretaries.

Plans were made for the pledge party and plans ae being completed for the annual "Black and White Ball."

KAPPA ALPHA

At the last meeting of Beta Pi Chapter the following pledges were initiated into the brotherhood: Jim Binder, John Brownlow, and Ben Smith. Preparation for the Old South Ball was discussed and Miss Patricia Padgett was elected our KA Rose and will represent Beta Pi Chapter at the colorful event.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

The brothers extend a cordial welcome to the new pledges into the fraternity.

Plans were completed for the Founders Day Banquet to be held March 5 at the Spartanburg Country Club in conjunction with Nu Chapter at Wofford.

Plans have also been made for the annual Barefoot Ball to be held March 10. Brother Jack Taylor was commended for his fine job as Ruse Chairman.

PI KAPPA PHI

Beta Chapter held its yearly smoker Tuesday night, which was a big success. Present at this smoker were Greg Elam, the National Executive Secretary, and Alumni Jim Wilson, John Holland Hunter, and Pa Patterson.

Pledging was Thursday afternoon. This was followed by a pledge party with Columbia College girls at the "Mary Lou Ranch."

THETA CHI

At the regular meeting of Beta Psi final plans were made for the pledge supper to be held on Thursday night at Panorama Lodge. An approximate date was set for the Pledge Party, and final plans were made concerning it.

Too Much for Me

By PAUL ARRINGTON

It was back last February and I went down to this little ole college 'own to see one o' my buddies, you know. Well, when I got there I had to go through a reg'lar chain o' command, like they do in th' army, you know, and this soldier found my buddy for me.

Well, I thanked him kindly and we went on over t' eat at this little restaurant over there on the campus. We waited in line fer a few minutes while some more boys was a'readin' these signs on a board over there and one o' them signs was an advertisement for a dance, and at the last it said, "fun assured for all," and one boy made a few scratches on it and I ain't never heard th' likes of the laughin' that then went on. Friends, they almost rolled on th' floor.

Then the line moved on an' they got up to eat. I had to pay this boy who was punchin' this machine (I ain't tellin' how much) and got my food. It was a purty place to eat with th' flowers an' all, and friends I thought I'd need those flowers on my grave before the night was out; my ulcers might near knocked my belly up to my head. My buddy musta' been used to it though; he ate it up.

We went over to where it was that we was a'sleepin'. We walked in one o' th' side doors an' I knowed right then that it was goin' to be nice an' warm; it had radiators all over the place. It was purty well noisy an' dirty, too, but I knowed I could git used to that.

We, me and my buddy, went on in a room an', friends, right in 'tween two rooms was a shower bath. I knowed I was goin' to like that. I spruced myself up a bit an' got ready to go out, an' friends, what do you think m'buddy wanted to know?

He wanted to know where it was that I was a'goin' and I told him OUT!, and he said there weren't no place to go. After all my sprucin up, there weren't no place to go. I was beginnin' not to like this place

Then I heard all th' noise again. Friends, there musta' been one hunnert boys just a'runnin' up an' down th' halls an' stairs just' a yellin'. It seems like they was agoin' to some "Smith Bee" for somethin'. I don't know why they was a leavin' but I was shore glad when they did. As a matter of fact, I left too, in the opposite direction.

Well, friends, I don't know what it was they was adoin', but it seems that they was goin' to this "Smith Bee' to git some boys what weren't in no club, an' friends, they looked like they meant to git 'em, too. I don't know what happened but I know if I'd a been them boys I'd a hid til' I knowed what it was that they was a wantin'. All I know is, is that I ain't agoin 'back down there

The Greatest Custom

By JIM HOWELL

The greatest customs of PC'uns is the clean rooms we keep. Much care is taken to make sure that we have by far the cleanest rooms on the floor. We are, as a whole, too careful about keeping our rooms in tip-top shape. We spend too much time sweeping, making up our beds and straightening up our desks. This has to stop. (Please pay more attention to your studies than your room.) It can cause one to flunk out, you know; especially if one canot go to his desk because of old clothes, letters from home, shafts, and ex-roommates blocking his path.

Boys, always keep at least an one and a half foot wide path to your sack. At least then if you flunk out, you will enjoy it. The fact remains that since Junius quit sweeping the rooms, and making the beds, the only place one can draw a breath of fresh air is in the head.

No stuff, I have really seen at least two people on campus who make their beds. They are Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Blakely. It has become so bad that even the boys who take up cleaning and laundry are passed by the Deparament of Sanitation. Incidentall, the sanitation inspector, himself, gave us an excellent rating because as he said, "If I don't rate you highly I will have to come back to inspect again and goodness knows, one more trip through those dirty rooms would kill me."

What I like is the beautiful color of the rooms; they change every year ,you know. The rooms get smaller each year. Don't ever start chipping off the paint. I did once. After about an inch of paint came off, I found this note, "I still say that there will be no war between the North and the South."

Anyway, talk about the dirty rooms, personally when I visited the campus for the first time, Mr. Campbell was showing me Spencer first of all. The room on the left of the front door I figured to be the janitor's junk room. Then we opened another door and I thought to myself, "Hmm, the janitor must have two junk rooms." I would have thought that right on but a student moved in one corner of the rubbish. I knew he was a student because he took a swing at my escort.

To give an illustration of this, my roommate "Simp," before going to bed last night, peeled back his semester sheets (sheets lasting a whole semester without washing or restarching) gingerly threw out of his bed a wet wash rag, an open razor, a French book and a freshman. He then nonchalantly tucked himself in without a word.

From the standpoint of health, it would help for the janitors to start cleaning the individual rooms again. TB, blod poison, lung cancer, athletes foot and jungle rot would be cut down considerably on campus.

Movie Review . . .

"Strange American" Offers Murder in Oriental Setting

By JIM MONROE

The Chinese New Year, perhaps one of the most colorful celebrations on earth, with all of its splendor and noise and then murder begins the story of the fight against Communism and colonialism in Viet-Nam.

With the identification of the body the movie takes its viewers back to work out the details leading up to the starting point. The hero (Michael Redgrave), whose name is never given, and Tuong (Giorgia Moll) meet a young American businessman who is in the orient supposedly to start a toy factory. The American (Audie Murphy) falls in love with Tuong while they are dancing before dinner.

The two men go to see a celebration of a young religious cult. The American cannot start his car and on the way to Saigon with the other man they give out of gas and are caught in a fight with the Communists. They both escape and return to Saigon.

The Englishman (Redgrave) is tricked by the Communists into believing that the American is making bombs for a rebel leader to use against the Viet-Namese. He makes attempts to trick the American into admitting it, but has no luck.

During this time both men have been trying to get Tuong to marry one of them. Finally the Englsihman has led her to believe that he will soon be able to marry her, and she has agreed to wait. She soon discovers that she has been tricked and goes to the American.

The Englishman is finally persuaded to lay the plans for the murder of the American. He does what he is told and the Communists set their trap. After the murder is carried out the Englishman is arrested on suspician of murder. He finally clears himself and finds that he will be able to marry Toung, but she refuses to go through with it because she thinks he purposely lied to her before.

The movie, even though it had a basically good plot, was too drawn otu and rambling. There are many parts that could be cut out. Even though the movie as a whole was not up to par, it offers a good two-hour entertainment for any lover of intrigue.

Little Four Tournament Opens Tonight

BUDDY MULLIS—Sports Editor

Cage Fever Reaches Peak

Tournament time—when all foul lanes lead to Anderson, and the Little Four Basketball Championship—is here again.

Play begins tonight when PC-Wofford clash at 7:00 and Erskine-Newberry tangle in the nightcap. Regardless of which team claimed top honors in regular season play or who boasts one of the best records in the state, tonight and tomorrow night's contests will furnish an undisputed Little Four champion.

Newberry, top-seeded in the tourney, brings a 5- record and a greatly improved squad as compared to last year's representation. Gallagher and Company are tough on a given night and looms as a favorite this year.

The Wofford Terriers definitely have a height advantage to their favor. Big boys Carpenter, Perkins, and Barbee will give the Hose trouble under the boards as they completely dominated that department in the first outing of the two.

Little Erskine went through Little Four competition very impressively, but of late have practically surprised everyone. The Flying Fleet own a well balanced club with the possibility that they may spring a convincing upset tonight. They are defending champs in the tournament and could prove that a dark horse shouldn't be counted out.

Who can overlook PC's chances in the tournament? Coach Redford's charges, 15-7 on the year, have exploded in their last four games with most impressive victories over Georgia Teachers, Pheiffer, Erskine, and because it was only the second time such a feat has been administered in the season finale with Belmont Abbey. The last of these was significant the Crusaders in the '58 campaign. The Hosemen are a consistent club with definitely owning the best rounded starting five among the L-F teams. Giving away a few inches to a team is nothing new and quite frequent during the course of the season. Wofford will have the advantage in that respect. PC has shot for remarkable percentages from the floor in their last four contests. Quite instrumental was the 85 per cent displayed in the Belmont Abbey game.

The Blue Hose will have to hurdle two obstacles in order to capture top laurels in the Little Four. They are in top form and could serve the knockout punch in this tournament. It will take top performances from the cagers to go undefeated in the two-day affair, and with all the PC rooters present they could easily do the job.

This could prove to be one of the best tournaments since its beginning in 1950. Every year the competition is keen but this year especially, any one of the Little Four teams has the strength and is capable of capturing the crown.

ALL-LITTLE FOUR

Bobby Lynch—Newberry
Eddie Rice—Erskine
Marshall Perkins—Wofford
Charlie Gallagher—Newberry
Trap Hart—Wofford

Who will agree with these selections of the 1958 All-Little Four Conference team as tabulated by The State newspaper? They were a result of votes by the four L-F coaches: Erskine's Alexander, Newberry's Pickett, Wofford's Robertson, and PC's Redford. The coaches were asked to vote for ten players separated into two teams without regard to position. First team votes were worth five points and a second team nomination gave the player three points.

I personally can't see how the selections are justified—certainly, probably not in the eyes of the Presbyterian College students.

Post-season dream teams include frequently only seniors and that possibly would've eliminated any hope for PC having a spot on the pick. Consequently, our fine basketball team did have several outstanding players who should've received such recognition and were deserving of the honor. The fact that their being only sophomores should hold no bearing on the matter, since Hart and Gallagher are second year men, Lynch and Perkins juniors ,and Rice being the only senior on the squad.

It will be interesting to note how this All-Little Four team will compare with the team picked after the finals Saturday night.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

The Hose cagers score before home crowds, winning a phenomenal ten of eleven home games . . . Bernie Eckert, a junior college transfer from California, should help the tennis team this spring . . . Intramural basketball will resume play again Monday afternoon . . . Second leading scorer in the state, Ralph Chambers, was PC's representative on the top ten players in the league . . . The Hose also claim the 19th place among small colleges in field goal percentage in Bob Stratton . . . Baseball coach Clyde Erhardt has his pitchers and catchers working out in the gym.

Powerful Blue Hose Upset Favored Belmont Abbey

By ED GALLOWAY

Leroy Springs gymnasium rocked and cheered when Bob Stratton pushed in the final basket of the year, and beat the Abbey Crusaders 65-63, with only 10 seconds left on the clock. It was a story book ending for the Hose, as they saw their 9-point lead cut down to nothing, and then end up on the big end of the score, which was an upset over the fine players from Gaston County.

Being behind by 2 points at the half, the PC basketballers came back to go ahead in the middle of the second half. With only 2 minutes left to play, Belmont tied up the game and went ahead. The lead was exchanged by both teams, and then tied up again by the Blue Hose.

Captain Sullivan called for a time out, and the Hose came back on the court with one of the finest freezes ever witnessed by the sideliners. Moving the ball in fine fashion were Ken Caswell and Bill Sullivan, who saw an open man, passed the ball to "Tank" Stratton, who in turn ripped the cords, putting the team ahead. The Abbey boys had the time run out on them, thus losing the second game of their '58 season.

It was another great team effort for the Hose, and the scoring column showed just how much they wanted to win. Ralph Chambers, Bob Stratton, Ken Caswell, and Bill Sullivan all had 14 points apiece, ending the '58 season with a fine and really surprising record of 15 wins against 7 losses. This game was the second loss for the Belmont Crusaders, whose fine shooting and above average height has given every one of their opponents a rough time.

Hight point man of the night was Abbey's Boyle, who hit for 15 points, but with four of the Hose hitting in the double figures, it was too much for their opponents, and their fast break outclassed the Crusaders.

The next game for the Presbyterians is Friday night in Anderson against the Wofford Terriers, in the first round of the Little Four tournament. Let's ALLLLLLLL get over there and boost the Hose to another victory.

Sock Cagers Ready To Battle Wofford

Presbyterian College cagers head into the Little Four Tourney this weekend with an impressive record of 15 wins and 7 losses. PC will open the tournament tonight at 7:00 as they battle Wofford in Anderson's Field House.

It's one of the most successful marks established by PC cagers, and the Hosemen hope to keep the triumphs rolling in the post-season meet at Anderson. The Blue Hose closed out regular season play on Monday night with a stunning 65-63 upset over strong Belmont Abbey.

Coach Courts Redford went off the floor that night on the shoulders of fans, a fitting tribute to his brilliant debut with an unheralded squad. The Hose enter the Little Four tourney, which was established in 1950, with two championships, in 1951-52.

Presbyterian has gone into three final games and lost only one. Last year PC entered with an outstanding record only to be knocked off by Wofford in the first round, and Newberry in the consolation game.

Good balance and expert shooting accuracy stand out as the keys of succes sthis year. All five starters have been scoring in or near the double figures throughout the season.

Forward Ralph Chambers of Clinton, leads the quintet with an even 17-point average on 374 total points, while running mate Bob Stratton of Lawrenceburg, Ky., follows with 259 points and a 16.4 average.

Guards Ken Caswell of Paris, Ky., and Bill Sullivan of Frankfort, Ind., have scored 292 and 277 points and have 14 and 13.3 cuipuis, respectively. Center Clayton Adams is just off the double figures with 201 points and a 9.0 average.

In the field goal shooting department, the Hosemen have collected 660 baskets in 1360 attempts for an uncanny 48.5 percentage. And Presbyterian has scorched the cords for better than 60 per cent from the floor twice this season.

Most notable wins for PC have been knocking Mercer from a string of nine wins, the win Monday night over Belmont Abbey after compiling a 22-1 record, Furman, and annexing key Little Four contests from Erskine twice, and one apiece from both Newberry and Wofford.

Sports Quiz

1. What man, a former president of the National League, is now commissioner of baseball? He was elected in 1951 and reelected on July 8, 1957, for a seven-year term.
2. In 1956, what country was the winner of the Olympic Games?
3. Who was the winner of the U. S. Tennis Men's Singles Championship in 1957?

Note: There was no winner in last week's quiz, so three correct answers for the above questions will offer two (2) free passes to the Broadway Theater.

Last week:

1. New York; 1947-1952; Casey Stengel.
2. Joe Louis; 11 years, 8 months, 7 days.
3. North Carolina-Kansas; 54-53, 3 overtimes.

Spring Practice is Resumed As Gridmen Hold Scrimmage

While the spotlight is resting on the outcome of the Little Four tournament, the knocks and bruises of Spring Football is beginning to take a regular schedule with the change of the weather.

Up to last week only six had been managed since February 3.

Coach Jones reports that he cannot see too much at this stage of off-season drills, but he definitely is glad the freezing spell has left in favor of the warm weather. Five days of practice highlighted spring drills last week. Conditioning is becoming a minor object now with new combinations and plays taking consideration of the 40 candidates.

An intra-squad game was witnessed last Saturday with favorable comments coming from the coaches after the review. Particularly impressive was QB Fred Gill, one of the transfers from Mississippi, who is beginning to hold true to expectations. His maneuvers on the option play sparked several drives in Saturday's scrimmage.

A touch of intentinal flu confined about a dozen gridmen to the infirmary the latter part of last week.

Every week will be climaxed by a similar game as the coaches will be able to summarize the progress in the off-season sessions.

Golf Team Hits the Links As First Match Approaches

With the warm weather upon us, practice on the links has begun for the Presbyterian College golf team. From now until the opener with the University of South Carolina on March 28, the squad will be concentrating on improving last year's 7-6 record. The Hose golfers claim the Little Four title for the past two years.

Two big gaps were left when Co-Captains Warren Mayes and Robert Odum graduated last June. Also several of the lettermen are missing due to academic reasons.

Returning lettermen include senior Mitch Mavromat of Brunswick, Ga.; juniors Albert Copelan, Mooresville, N. C., and Trotti Riley from Columbia.

Ready for his first year of eligibility is Larry Ford from Georgetown. He is expected to carry a big load is already shooting a good game this early in the year. He should be tough to beat with the first match a month off.

Newcomers to the Hose golf team include freshmen Harry and Hexie McDonald, twins from Asheville, N. C., and Sonny Bell of Macon, Ga.

Dr. Joseph Gettys has accepted the duties of golf coach this year. Through his efforts the team now has a practice green here on campus.

Coach Jim Leighton Writes For Top Tennis Publication

Jim Leighton, who is beginning his ninth season as coach of Presbyterian college's highly renowned tennis team, is also an outstanding writer in the field of sports.

His latest article, which is to appear in the March issue of the "Athletic Journal," will be an analysis of the volley and the serve.

Coach Leighton has been writing for several years on the theory of good tennis. His articles have appeared in two well known athletic magazines, The Athletic Journal, and the Scholastic Coach.

His previous efforts include a series of articles entitled "Making of a Champion." In this series Coach Leighton tells how he shaped the game of Allen Morris, one of the most outstanding netmen ever to play for PC. Other articles by Coach Leighton include "Developing a Tennis Game," and an "Analysis of the Forehand Drive." In this latter article he uses a different approach in analyzing the tennis strokes. First, he presents the views of a number of recognized authorities and then sums up by explaining which methods he prefers and why.

Presbyterian College for many years has been well known in the world of tennis, but it has been under the leadership of Jim Leighton that PC has come into the limelight as one of the top teams in the nation.

Coach Leighton has been responsible for the bringing of many outstanding athletes to the PC campus. He has attracted fine tennis players from all parts of the nation, and has been responsible for molding them into the teams for which Presbyterian is now famous.

During the summer months Coach Leighton serves as Professional at the Charleston, W. Va., Country Club.

Jim Leighton is without question one of the most outstanding men in the tennis world today. PC is truly fortunate in having him at the helm as leader and coach of the tennis team.

Wood is the Snapshot Editor of the PaC-SaC, and a member of the Blue Stocking staff.

Gavalis is secretary of the IRC, and State IRC Chairman.

Biddy Mullis, Ebby Mayfield, and Reed Clark have their hat in the ring for treasurer. Mullis, a rising senior from Jacksonville, Fla., is the dormitory discussion chairman of the retiring SCA Cabinet, past treasurer of the Westminster Fellowship, Sports Editor of the Blue Stocking, a football manager, a member of the Block P Club, and has held office in his fraternity. Mayfield, a rising junior from Greer, is a member of the IRC, Methodist Student Union, and the Interdenominational Council. Reed Clark hails from Winston-Salem, N. C., and is a transfer from the University of North Carolina.

Trustees To Assemble For Business Session

Trustees of Presbyterian College will assemble on the campus Tuesday for their regular annual business session.

The board is composed of 28 members elected in this manner: one trustee named by each of eight South Carolina presbyteries, and five chosen at large by the South Carolina Synod; one each elected by six Georgia presbyteries, and five selected at large by the synod of that state; and three trustees elected at large by PC alumni.

Robert M. Vance of Clinton, serves chairman of the board of trustees. The Rev. J. Davison Phillips, of Decatur, Ga., is vice-chairman; and J. Ferdinand Jacobs of Clinton, is secretary.

Religious Emphasis Week Begins Tuesday

SONNY EMBRY

BOB MATTHEWS

EBBY MAYFIELD

Ten Outstanding Speakers Offer Variety of Messages

The annual Religious Emphasis Week, sponsored by the Student Christian Association, will officially get underway next Tuesday night in Chapel, carrying as its theme, "The Christian Position in the Modern World."

This year the Religious Emphasis Week is departing from the customary plan of one main speaker and two classroom speakers to a "Mike Todd" type of program whereby each speaker is a main speaker in his own right.

Ten of the top ministers, businessmen, and professional men in the Eastern United States will be on our campus for this occasion. These ten speakers will be presented in a conference type plan on Wednesday and Thursday.

A roster of the student body has been divided alphabetically into ten groups, and a speaker assigned to each group. These groups will meet with a different speaker in three informal talks and discussions each day.

The roll will be checked before each period for statistical purposes and for the awarding of SCA fraternity cup to the fraternity with the highest percent present over the entire REW.

All classes with the exception of drill have been suspended on Wednesday and Thursday for this meaningful experience. Tuesday night Col. Loren T. Jenks will address the student body in the chapel. On Wednesday night the speaker will be Col. John O. Woods, followed by discussion groups in the various fraternity rooms.

On Thursday Dr. Cliff R. Johnson will speak, and on Friday at Chapel Dr. W. M. Frampton will present a summation of the week's activities and discussions.

The ten speakers who will lead the Religious Emphasis Week activities are:

Dr. W. McLeod Frampton is a graduate of PC and Columbia Seminary in Decatur, Ga. Dr. Frampton has just recently resigned from his pastorate in Anderson to accept a church in Orangeburg. A dynamic speaker, he is well known on campus through his work as Knight Commander of Kappa Alpha Order.

Mr. Roy Lecraw is a past mayor of Atlanta, Ga., and is an active elder in the North Avenue Presbyterian Church in that city. Presently a prominent businessman, he has seen action with the Air Force during the war as he served in the Far East and in Korea.

Mrs. Fountain I. Chapman, a psychiatric assistant in Charlote, N. C., is a very active type person with college groups, having served on forty-eight projects of this type last year. She is a member of several national, state and city psychiatric boards.

Dr. G. W. Cunningham holds an impressive number of degrees, including an M.A., D.Litt., LLD, and a Ph.D. He has been a Sage Professor since 1942, a Professor Emeritus since 1949, and has instructed philosophy and English at such colleges as Middlebury, University of Texas, Cornell University, and Howard College. He has served as Dean of the Cornell graduate school of philosophy, and is the author of several books in philosophical research.

Dr. John McSween is a past President of Presbyterian College. Holding the B.A., B.D. and D.D. degrees, he has served as a chaplain on the Mexican border and in France. He is a past trustee of Thornwell Orphanage and Columbia Seminary, and is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa Honor Fraternity.

Col. Loren T. Jenks is the Post Chaplain for Fort Jackson. Holding an A.B. from Coe College in Iowa, and an M.A. from the University of Iowa, he was originally commissioned in the infantry and has served in

Embry Elected to Head SCA; Matthews Named Vice-President

• Wood, Mayfield Also Chosen

Sonny Embry, a rising senior from Birmingham, Ala., was elected President of the Student Christian Association in elections held Monday.

Dick Wood and Ebby Mayfield were named to the positions of secretary and treasurer, respectively.

There was a tie for the vice-presidential slot between Paur Arrington and Bob Matthews. A run-off was held today between these two candidates and Matthews, by a narrow margin, emerged victorious, becoming the number two man in the SCA. With 301 votes cast, Matthews received 152 to Arrington's 149.

In the race for president Embry defeated Dick Carter and Neal Bain. Vieing for the vice-presidency in addition to Arrington and Matthews was Al McKie. The other candidates for secretary were Tom Wise and Tony Gavalas; Buddy Mullis and Reed Clark were in the race for treasurer.

Embry is well qualified to carry out the responsibilities of SCA president, having played an active part in campus activities since coming to PC. His previous activities include publications chairman of the retiring cabinet, advisor to the freshmen cabinet, Editor of the Knapsack, Editor of the Student Directory, PaC-SaC Activities Editor, News Editor of the Blue Stocking, International Relations Club, Westminster Fellowship, Section Leader for the Robed Choir, and fraternity officer. He is also a consistent member of the Dean's List.

Matthews likewise is a leader in campus activities. He is a rising senior from Decatur, Ga. His activities include being a member of the Block P Club, the varsity football team, Methodist Student Union, PaC-SaC staff, and an officer in Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity. He has also been vice-president of his class for the past two years.

Dick Wood, the new secretary is a rising junior from Greer. His activities include Snapshot Editor of the Pac-Sac, and Fraternity Editor of the Blue Stocking.

Ebby Mayfield, the new treasurer, is a rising junior and also hails from Greer. He is a member of the International Relations Club, Methodist Student Union, and the Interdenominational Council.

These men will aid in carrying out of Religious Emphasis Week next week and will take over the full responsibilities of the SCA soon thereafter.

Chapman Is Named To Head Sigma Nu

Don Chapman, a rising senior from Lincolnton, N. C., was elected this week to the position of Commander of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Chapman replaces Bill Yearick of Miami, Fla., and will serve in this capacity for one year.

Selected for Lt. Commander was William Turner, also a rising senior, hailing from Winnsboro. He succeeds Larry Clark in this capacity.

Malcolm McHargue of Moultrie, Ga., is the new Recorder replacing Ken Fleischer.

Handling the finances is Will Wallace of Mooresville, N. C., who replaces Bill Fulton as treasurer.

Col. Barnett Announces ROTC Inspection Dates

Col. W. W. Barnett, PMS&T of the Military Department, announced today the dates for the annual Federal and District inspections.

March 19th is the date set for the South Carolina District Inspection. This is the informal inspection of the Military Department's general facilities and activities. A team headed by Col. James O. Boswell, Chief of the South Carolina District, will carry out this inspection.

April 14th and 15th are the dates for the Federal Inspection. This is the formal inspection which will include inspection of students in ranks and a parade.

Arrington Elected Number One of KA

Paul Arrington, a rising senior on campus, has been elected to the position of Number One of Beta Pi Chapter of the Kappa Alpha Order. Paul is a native of Charlotte, N. C., and will replace Guice Potter of Aniston, Ala., in the Number One spot. Paul is a double major contender in the fields of History and Business Administration.

Elected to the Number Two position was Bob Richardson of Greenville, who replaces Tommy Richards of Heath Springs. Bob is also a rising senior and a Business major.

Bill Porter will fill the shoes of Jim Barksdale in the Number Three position. Bill is a native of Anderson, and Jim hails from Rocky Mount, N. C.

Installation of the above officers will take place April 1, and they will serve in the positions for a period of one year.

Seven Seniors Complete Degree Requirements

Seven seniors completed work toward their degrees at Presbyterian College during the first semester of the current session, Registrar Roslyn Martin announced today.

They will receive their diplomas at the regular commencement exercises in June.

Six of these seniors finished requirements toward batchelor of arts degrees. They are: Lawrence Campbell Ashmore of Greenville; James Warren Carter of Lake City; William Davis Hawkins of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Luther O. Hinson, Jr., of Spartanburg; Bobby Glynn Shealy of Newberry; and Richard Dotson White of Charlotte, N. C.

Completing work toward his bachelor of science degree was James Avery Barnes of Clinton.

Committee of Fifty Set To Direct REW

A "Committee of Fifty" has been named to take charge of the carrying out of Religious Emphasis Week. This committee will take charge of all phases of the week's activities, and will be under the direction of the SCA officers.

The committee is broken down into seven sub-committees. They are Planning, Program, Publicity, Prayer, Dorm Discussions, Contact, and Attendance.

The Planning committees is composed of Bill Yearick, Lyman Harris, Charles Taylor, and Sonny Embry. Programming is composed of Harrison Clayton, Bill Betchman, Blair Baldwin, Rohe Eshbaugh, Jim Eason, Bill Wilkes, Pat Kelly, Sonny Bell, Billy Piephoff, and Tom Collins.

On the Prayer committee are Don Hendrix, Joel Easterling, Penn Ballenger, Hugh Burns, and Mike Andrews.

Publicity will be carried out by Dick Carter, Roger Godwin, John Summers, Lonnie Love, Larry Crocker, Tom Richards, and Jim McLaughlin.

Dormitory Discussions are under the direction of Buddy Mullis, Ed Galloway, Ben Donaldson, and Jim McGirt.

The Contact committee is made up of Dick Hamby, Neil Bain, Ron Isger, and Jack Taylor.

Attendance will be directed by Gay Maddox, Bill Bowman, Jim Faile, Paul Arrington, Roy Fowler, Jim Barksdale, Hugh Burns, John Childers, Jim McGirt, Jim Elliott, and Tom Wise.

Trustees Reach Important Decisions

The Presbyterian College Board of Trustees authorized a twenty per cent increase in faculty salaries and named the recipients of three honorary degrees from the college at their annual meeting this week.

President Marshall W. Brown, reporting on the Trustees' decisions, stated that salary increases of twenty per cent for faculty members with two years service would become effective next September. The Board also approved a revised salary scale which would provide for additional increases in the years immediately ahead. Clerical workers with a tenure of two years will be included in the increase with a ten per cent raise.

Honorary Doctor of Divinity Degrees will be awarded to the Reverends Ernest Arnold of Atlanta, Lynn Temple Jones of Columbia, and Allen Jacobs of Talladega, Ala., during the commencement exercises in June. All of these men are outstanding PC alumni.

In selecting the honorary degree recipients, the Board cited Ernest Arnold for excellent work as President of the Protestant Radio and Television Center in Atlanta; Lynn Temple Jones for his service as pastor of Columbia's Eastminster Presbyterian Church and the Royster Memorial Presbyterian Church of Norfolk, Va.; and Allen Jacobs for his accomplishments as President of the Alabama Presbyterian Home for Children.

Dr. Brown also announced the promotion in rank of four faculty members of the board. Both Robert A. McIntyre, Assistant Professor of Biology, and Dr. Karl A. Scheele, Assistant Professor of Economics, will be advanced to Associate Professorships next fall. Instructors Andrew Howard in Mathematics and William B. Toole in English will be raised to Assistant Professors in their respective departments.

New REW Plan...

In the spring of last year the SCA realized the need for a new and different Religious Emphasis Week. At the time it was apparent that to continue in the same manner of previous years would not only bring constant revolt by the student body but also de-emphasize the real meaning of REW.

A new idea was introduced and after numerous meetings with advisors and committees it was taken before the student body for a sign of approval. With an almost unanimous vote the SCA went ahead to iron out all the details that would be encountered in order to have a successful REW. The cabinet has come up with many disappointments in their efforts but at last it looks as though these efforts will be rewarded.

The SCA has secured ten outstanding speakers. These men and women are not all ministers and will not be throwing religious issues around lightly. They will be in a position to answer competently any questions which might arise. The speakers represent many different various walks of life so that in all reality no one should be bored by what they have to say.

Often in the past after an REW many people have commented: "Boy, I've had enough religion to last me a year. They really crammed it down us this year." Another aim of the SCA this year is to keep this kind of comment to an absolute minimum. The cabinet has arranged for the student body to rotate around each speaker and gather different and varied views about different religious problems and positions that are prevalent today. Religion this year is rather going to be presented and discussed instead of crammed, rammed or jammed down an individual's throat. This year there will be absolutely no classes for the days of March 12 and 13. The SCA feels that to put on any kind of successful week it will be necessary to include all students and free them of scholastic obligations in every form. Statistics will be kept on classroom attendance only for fraternity competition and to determine just how the student body reacted to the new program.

The Student Christian Association needs help and the only place it can be secured is from the student body. Without it the program will be a complete flop and more than likely things will return to the way they were. The SCA is in a position to go forward or backwards. But it needs help and in a bad way. If this program goes over a great deal of respect can be gained by the study body from the faculty and the administration. We are striving for 100% participation and without 100% cooperation from the student body this year's REW aims will not be realized.

—BILL YEARICK

Blue Sock Salutes...

The Blue Stocking expresses to Coach Redford and the basketball team the deep appreciation of the student body for the excellent record of this season. After being picked in preseason forecasts for a mediocre season, the team went on to achieve a truly outstanding record of sixteen wins against only eight losses. This was a remarkable achievement in view of the formidable opposition and the relative lack of height. The team has displayed a fine team effort and grea' sportsmanship, and has achieved a record for which we can justly be proud.

The Sackist Movement

By JIM HOWELL

Have you heard of the new religious order on campus? They are called the "Sackists" (worshipers of the sack). That means the bed for all you aristocrats. I have heard many students declare that if the Lord had anything any better than the sack, He would have ket it up there with Him.

Many will put up the argument that woman is the greatest gift to man. Also, there are many who live in Vetville who consider those fightin' words. The argument has come down through the ages about which of the two is greatest, sleep or women. I think we will all have to agree with Mark Twain when he said, "—sleep is the greatest thing, beside women."

The byword of the Sackist is "The Sack is calling." This is true, it really does call. If you have ever met someone coming to the dorm and upon speaking to him receive no response, don't think he is conceited; he is just under the tempting lure of the Sack, induced by one of the Professors. The Professors are, without realizing it, the true Apostles of the Creed.

One thing mankind has never been able to master is the art of getting up in the morning. It will be difficult as long as one lives. My roommate, Simp, couldn't understand why Dr. Bellingrath w ouldn't excuse his third cut in Algebra. He just slept late. He thought that excuse should be accepted just as quick as the boy down the hall writing him a doctor's excuse.

What really makes it difficult is the early breakfast hours: 7:00 to 7:45. If you are not in military you are really messed up, because class desn't start till 9:00 and hardly anyone on campus goes to bed before 12:00. Coach Mac told me not to say this, but, I think breakfast should be moved up a little. The latest one can get up for breakfast, and still eat, is 7:30, and being finished by 8:00, has a whole hour to run around the dorm and beat his head against the wall to try to keep out of the Sack. Even if you do jump back in the Sack then you have to get up again which is twice as bad. Most schools serve breakfast from 7:30 on till nine or ten, but this isn't most schools. When Benjamin Franklin let us know that an hour's sleep before twelve is worth three afterwards, we must also remember that he was Ambassador to France at the time. If it's true that the early bird gets the worm, it is also true that the early worm gets eaten.

Now as a result of the Sackist movement, brought about by dry lectures and early breakfasts, one has to specify what kind of Lab he says he is taking; whether it Chemistry, Biology, Physics, Horizontal. The requiremnets join this club are as follows: Four, three-hour Horizontal labs week. (2) Sleep through at lea six classes. (3) Never go to brea fast. (4) Take no interesting co ses. (5) Turn in a written letter approval from Tom Williams, o most faithful member.

'Underwater Warrior'

By JIM MONROE

The belated rising of two Navy divers starts the fun-filled, suspense-filled "Underwater Warrior." It is the story of the development of the "frogmen," and the trials and triumphs of this group are followed from the early beginning to the Korean War.

Of course no movie is complete without the traditional "boy-meet-girl" part and this is no exception. The lieutenant (Dan Dailey) who first conceived the idea of a fighting force to come in from the sea without vessels and another diver swam out to a boat in the Caribbean in order to meet the two girls on board. For both of them the venture was successful, for by the end of the picture both of them were happily married.

Throughout the picture the work of the "frogmen" is followed. Many of the supposed dangers of the sea bottom are disproved and many new ones are brought to light. One feels a part of the story as he worries with the wife (Claire Kelly) of the commander of the group and as he watches the dives into the ocean depths. This is an excellent production and is well worth any one's time to see.

Ah Springtime!

By PAUL ARRINGTON

Ah, Springtime! The college man's favorite time of year; the time when, in almost every region of the world, small, green sprouts of grass herbs, and flowers burst forth from the earth with majestic tenderness Sweet smelling odors float lazily on gentle breezes flowing over meadow and lane caressing the loved, the lost, and the folorn alike.

And in all of this tenderness, lovely Presbyterian College is not forgotten; oh no, certainly not forgotten. As a matter of fact it seems to have received the wrath of the gods. You might think that with all the flowery countryside surrounding the campus, teh scents filling the air would be enjoyable ones.

But no; not here. The tender breezes turn to gales; and the odors borne on them? SWEAT!

Behind the Leroy Springs Memorial comes the huff and puff of a never ending stream of cindermen who seem to be doing more than their share in the odorous production. Just across the street are the many major league aspirants with their constant "chatter' and harassment of "McMillan's Maulers." From over the hedge come the grunts and groans of the spring footballers "jukin' it up" for the forthcoming fall contests. This covers one side of the campus.

From another side come the Davis Cup contenders who certainly do their share in making our atmosphere such a pleasant one. Along with these are those who are preparing for the up and coming "Peter Invitational" with much patience and diligent perseverance.

This seems to cover all parts, bo does it? The front campus is fro from the atheltic scourge; shouldn its breezes be clean and stimulat nig? Heh! Do you remember th sprouts of grass in the various re gions of our noble globe? And wha helps them grow? You guessed r —MANURE; from one end of th campus to the other. Chicken feath ers and other parts of said fow are spread out by the truckloads Then the rains come and wash it al back to where it should have gon in the first place.

But the grass seems to grow any way. Then the toils of the back cam pus begin paying off and the dance bring odors of spirits and distille flowers so that if you try hard en ough, the place might become bear able after all.

Sports Begin Full Program

Business has started picking up in earnest on all sports fronts lately, and there's something to keep almost every sports enthusiast interested.

There may still be a bit of ice hockey weather in the air, but Coach Clyde Ehrhardt's Presbyterian College baseball team has taken to the diamond for their initial workouts in preparation for the 1958 season. The schedule for this year's campaign has not yet been released, but will appear in the next issue along with a salute to this year's squad.

Coach Jim Leighton has his boys out every day and busy after a long layoff. The cold spell put the netmen at a disadvantage of not any use whatever of the frozen coutrs. The reaction to the spring of warm weather gives them ample time to ready themselves with a tentative opener on March 17 against Clemson here.

Incidentally, according to the latest National Rankings in "World Tennis," PC'c top netmen rank up among the best with a 26th in the field.

Guice Potter claims 18th in Souhtern Rankings featured in the magazine. Former Blue Hose stars, Allen Morris and Harvey Jackson, hold numbers 3 and 11, respectviely, in the Southern listings.

The Presbyterian College golf team, holders of two consecutive Little Four Championships, are frequently seen on their very own practice green. With the material out already, the future is promising and a third crown for the Hose linkmen is forecast.

One activity which has been seen battering since the first of February, and probably will continue for the next week and a half, has been the off-season drills by the football team. The spirit is running high and several new faces in these spring sessions have been bright and figure highly for next year's squad.

Jones said in a recent newspaper interview that quarterback still is the big question mark for which an answer must be found. From the outcome of these workouts there will probably be an answer to his terrific worry to the tune of a first class signal caller.

The coming of warmer weather certainly makes for more sports activity all the way around, and the hope is that it stays for a long time.

ERSKINE PULLS SURPRISE

Last Saturday night marked the end of the road for all but one of the Little Four teams. The process of elimination narrowed the field down to a single qualifying team for District 26 competition at Belmont, N. C.

Often as not, determination tips the scales in tourney play. A team bent on winning is hard to beat, regardless of personnel comparison. This certainly proved itself true last week. The Flying Fleet from Erskine carried a miserable 1-5 LF record into tournament play and was definitely tagged a long shot to capture the crown for the second straight year.

The very deserving cagers from Due West pulled out a victory in the last minute over Newberry in the first round, and completely outplayed Wofford for the Little Four Championship in the finals.

Consequently, Coach Alexander's fine squad met defeat at the hands of powerful Belmont Abbey in the NAIA playoff game, but not without showing why they were the most representative team in the conference. Quite a debatable statement, but who will not admit the Fleet displayed sufficient form to receive recognition—that being the season finale at Anderson.

That's why tournament competition is so unpredictable. That's why there are so many so-called "upsets." Maybe that's why tournament games are so interesting.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Congratulations to Clayton Adams and Bob Stratton for their superb play in the tournament and a berth on the All-Tourney team . . . Eight lettermen are back to bolster the Hose on the diamond . . . Rising senior Jim Eller will handle the chores of baseball manager this spring . . . Bob Stratton won top scoring honors in the LF tournament with a total of 41 points . . . Fans saw senior Wyatt Aiken give his year's best performance in the consolation game against Newberry . . . John Brownlow and Guice Potter will captain the PC tennis team this spring.

Tennis Tournaments Decide Ranking Among PC's Players

By ED GALLOWAY

The Calloway tennis courts have had a good workout lately, with the PC racketeers, under the fine leadership of Coach Leighton, trying hard to field the finest tennis team in the nation again.

The team has been playing a series of tournaments, so as to decide the rank in which each one will play. A series of 10 tournaments are played, and the ranks are determined by a system of points. So far, they have completed 6 rounds, and the rankings are as follows:

1. John Brownlow. 2. Guice Potter. 3. Jim Shakespeare. 4. Harry Hoffman. 5. Jim Peck. 6. Bobby Daniels.

Bernie Eckert, the transfer from California, is showing up very well in practice and will most probably see plenty of action this season.

The first time that the Hose fans will be able to see the team in action will be on the 17th of this month, when the netmen play host to Clemson here.

Their next match will be in Spartanburg on the 20th, against the Wofford Terriers, which should be a fine match.

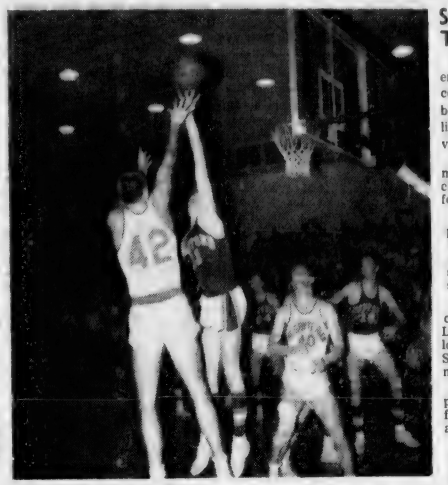
During the Spring holidays, the team will travel to the deep South and invade Miami and other opponents on the way. Along their trip down South, they will stop in Athens, Ga., to play the University of Georgia, and in Atlanta to oppose Georgia Tech. The big spot on the escapade will be the Good Neighbor Tournament in Miami Beach. This tournament is very interesting because many big tennis players will be there for the games.

After playing in this topnotch match, the boys will then take on Miami with two matches, which will surely be the most important match of the year. On the way back to their Alma Mater, the netmen will stop and play Rollins College, giving them a full and hard trip all the way.

Sports Quiz

The Broadway Theater again offers one free pass for the winner of our Blue Stocking Sports Quiz.

1. What American Association baseball player holds the longest baseball throw on record? His throw was 445 feet, 1 inch, and it was set on August 27, 1956.



2. What horse was the first to earn more than a million dollars for his owners? He was retired at the age of six, July 19, 1951.

3. In 1957, what golfer won the U. S. Open Golf Championship?

Last week Guy Boyd answered correctly the three questions.

1. Ford Frick. 2. U. S. S. R. 3. Mal Anderson.

Blue Hose Overpower Newberry, Place Third in Little Four Tourney

Socks Stage Rally To Outlast Indians

Presbyterian College's basketballers rung down the curtain of a successful cage season against Newberry Saturday night with a thrilling 83-81 Little Four Tournament victory over the Indians.

On the previous night the Hosemen had been eliminated from championship laurels by a 70-86 defeat at the hands of Wofford.

Against the Terriers, the PC point producing machine was a little rusty, and the Blue Hose slowly dropped behind to the sharp shooting Methodist onslaught.

After trailing 14-13, Wofford took command and was never led again. Leading the Presbyterians in the losing cause were forwards Bob Stratton, with 21 points, and running mate Ralph Chambers with 19.

The Blue Hose hit a miserable 37 per cent from the floor against Wofford, far below their 46 per cent average.

It was a different story when the Hose took the court to battle Newberry the following night. The fighting Hosemen trailed throughout the first half, but after intermission they stormed to gain their hard-earned victory. Again it was another terrific team effort for Coach Redford's charges.

Both Ken Caswell and Bill Sullivan put on sterling dribbling performaces to help stall off the desperate Indians in the waning moments of the contest. Pacing the PC attack again was Bob Stratton with 18 markers.

The Blue Hose wound up the season with a record of 16 wins against 8 defeats, giving them one of the school's better records. It was a fitting tribute to the team and their coach.

Being a ragged band of sophomores in November, Redford rallied them together to mold an aggregation which gained much recognition and respect throughout South Carolina cage circles.

Flying Fleet Takes Crown In Little Four Competition

Erskine's Flying Fleet, proving a good little team can overcome a big team, repeated as Little Four tournament champions with an easy 63-47 victory over the Wofford Terriers in the tournament championships Saturday night after Presbyterian surprised Newberry, 83-81, for consolation honors.

Erskine played a slow, possession-type game that completely befuddled the taller Wofford crew and gained a 32-30 halftime margin.

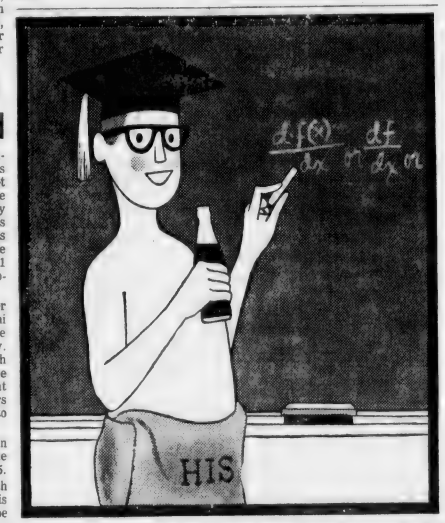
Wofford was out of it by mid-point in the second half as Eddie Rice, Bobby Johnston, and Dick Harben worked in and around the Terriers, setting up center Jerry Wolff for easy lay-ins to pad their earlier lead.

Wolff led the Erskine scoring with 20 points while Trap Hart was Wofford's best with 11, nine in the first half.

The all-tourney teams were dominated by Rice, Harben, Wolff, and Blanton of Erskine, while Carpenter and Marshall Perkins of Wofford, Sonny Dugan and Charlie Gallagher of Newberry, and Bob Stratton and Clayton Adams of Presbyterian, were other all-tourney selections.

Intramurals Resumed As Teams Vie for Lead

After a few weeks layoff, Intramural basketball got underway this past Monday. The action was hot and heavy. Thehe was an average of three games a day. On Monday the Spencer Cats beat the Kampus Kings by forfeit. The Sigma Nus beat Alpha Sigma Phi 40 to 25. The Ferocious Five walloped Vetville 51 to 15. Pi Kappa Phi beat the Shovines 50 to 28.



On Tuesday afternoon the Spencer Cats overcame Alpha Sigma Phi 37 to 35 in the last five seconds. The game had been close all the way. High scorer was Ed Galloway with 17 points. The Shovines won over the Celtics by forfeit. The Rebels beat Theta Chi 47-27. The Globetrotters overcame the Wrecking Crew 35 to 32 in another very close game.

On Wednesday Phi Kappa Phi won by forfeit from the Rebels. The KA's beat the Spencer Cats 55 to 35.

Now that there is almost a month before any sports take place it is hoped that more enthusiasm will be shown in intramural sports. It is evident that there is some spirit lacking due to the fact that some of the teams have not fielded a team.

Dr. Walton Brown Completes Thirteenth Year as President

President Marshall W. Brown has just completed his 13th year as PC's 13th president. During this time the institution, under his direction, has realized its greatest achievement—and all marks point to loftier heights ahead.

Endowment has increased four-fold in this period. Academic standards have been steadily raised. Individual faculty salaries stand at more than twice their previous scale. A program of construction is underway which already finds two large new buildings added to the campus plant and a third one to be started this spring.

And the over-all development of Presbyterian College is being projected forward in all of these spheres so that this institution may meet squarely the crucial challenge now being posed for higher education.

These are the highlights of the record Dr. Marshall Walton Brown has etched across PC's historical plaza since he assumed the presidency at 4:00 p. m. on February 27, 1945. That's when the board of trustees tapped him to succeed the late Dr. William P. Jacobs II (then returning to private business after leading Presbyterian through the financial depression and World War II).

In selecting Dr. Jacobs' own personal choice as his successor, the board recognized 19 years of outstanding service already rendered Presbyterian College by Dr. Brown.

Young 25-year-old Marshall Brown had come to PC in 1925 as a professor of history under the administration of Dr. D. M. Douglas. Three years later, he stepped into the chair of dean. In each capacity—from teacher to president—he received the accolade of fellow associates. Some of these include:

President of the South Carolina Historical Association (1933-34) president of the Southern Conference of Academic Deans (1937-38); president of the Presbyterian Education Association (1952); South Carolina Synod Man-of-the-Year (1952); moderator of South Carolina Presbytery; and he currently represents South Carolina on the Southern Regional Education Board and is a member of the Presbyterian Church US board of education.

Immediately after becoming president, Dr. Brown launched a campaign which doubled PC's endowment. Another drive in 1953 produced Bailey Hall dormitory, a $250,000 addition to the campus plant.

Then late in 1955, Presbyterian College opened its most successful fund-raising program in history. Eighteen months of intensive campaigning brought more than $1,000,000 in subscriptions. As the fruits of this drive, a new $250,000 student center rapidly moves toward completion and detailed plans already are developed for an early start on a spacious chapel-auditorium capable of seating 1,200 persons.

Even as these dreams become reality, a group of distinguished educators are bringing forth their studied recommendations to guide in charting the future destiny of Presbyterian College.

Marshall W. Brown has built his life into this college—helping direct it through its relative youth to the vibrant maturity of a 77-year tradition.

MAJOR IN LEADERSHIP
with the Advanced ARMY R.O.T.C. course

If you are a sophomore Army R.O.T.C. student, there are three important reasons why you should accept the challenge of applying for the Advanced R.O.T.C. course. As an advanced R.O.T.C. student, you will:

1. Learn to Lead
With R.O.T.C. you can actually take a course in Leadership—a course that will prepare you to think on your feet for an executive position, whether in military or civilian life. In addition, you will get practical experience in command responsibilities.

2. Attain Officer's Rank
As an R.O.T.C. graduate, you will fulfill your military obligation as an Army officer. You will not only enjoy the rank, pay and privileges of an Army officer, but will also have the satisfaction of serving your country in an important capacity.

3. Receive Extra Income
With the Advanced R.O.T.C. course, you will qualify for a subsistence allowance which comes to around $535 for the two-year course. You will also be paid $117 for your six-week summer camp training and receive a travel allowance, of five cents per mile to and from the camp.

RE Week Concluded; Final Address is Given

• Dr. McSween Gives Final Talk

Religious Emphasis Week came to a close this morning in Chapel as Dr. John McSween delivered the concluding address of the week's activities.

Dr. McSween was one of nine outstanding speakers who came to Presbyterian College for the two full days of Religious Emphasis.

The other speakers who came included Mr. Roy LeCraw, a prominent businessman and church leader from Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Fountain L. Chapman, a psychiatric assistant from Charlotte, N. C.; Dr. G. W. Cunningham, fromer Dean of the Cornell Graduate School of Philosophy; and Col. Loren T. Jenks, Post Chaplain at Fort Jackson.

Other speakers included Rev. Joseph L. Kellerman, minister of the Holy Comforter Episcopal Church in Charlotte, N. C.; Col. John O. Woods, Post Chaplain of Fort Bragg, N. C.; Dr. Eugene T. Wilson, pastor of the Peachtree Road Presbyterian Church in Atlanta, Ga.; and Dr. Cliff R. Johnson, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church in Alexandria, Va.

Classes were discontinued for the two-day period in order to give full emphasis to the RE program. In place of regular classes there were classes directed by the different speakers. In addiiton there was a joint worship service each night, and fraternity discussions on Wednesday night.

Col. Loren T. Jenks opened the week on Tuesday night with the first of the nightly services. Wednesday night Col. John O. Woods delivered the message, and on Thursday night Dr. Cliff Johnson was the speaker. This morning Dr. McSween concluded the services in chapel.

Class attendance was not required, but roll was kept for statistical purposes. The classes were broken down alphabetically into groups of fifty for each of the speakers. Final results of attendance have not been compiled, but it was estimated that between 40 and 50 per cent of the student body supported the program.

Bill Yearick said in an interview today, "We're well pleased with the results of the week and the program presented. We were trying a completely new approach to Religious Emphasis Week, and many people were naturally skeptical of the results. Attendance was not what it could have been, but we feel that it was relatively good and those who attended got a lot out of it."

DR. BROWN is shown with the members of the PC Survey group which will offer its report Monday.

Noted Educators Meet Monday, Will Present PC Survey Report

• Will Chart Future Needs

A detailed report by educators charting the future needs of Presbyterian College will be presented here next Monday.

Representatives of the controlling Synods of Georgia and South Carolina, serving as an advisory council, will assemble at PC on this date to receive the report. They were appointed at the start of the survey by the moderators of the two synods.

The study toward projecting the future development of Presbyterian College and its maximum role in Christian higher education began last spring under the supervision of six distinguished educators. They visited the campus, upon invitation of the college administration and trustees, and analyzed various phases of the probram here.

Results of this survey and recommendations will be delivered in the final report to be presented at 11 a. m. Monday in the library building.

Dr. R. H. Fitzgerald, chancellor emeritus of the University of Pittsburgh, serves as director of the survey team. It also includes: Dr. James M. Goddard, of the University of Miami (Fla.); President J. Ollie Edmunds, of Stetson; Dr. G. H. Cartledge, of Oak Ridge National Laboratory; Dean Maxwell Smith, of the University of Chattanooga; and President Guy E. Snavely, of Lafayette College.

After receiving the report, the two-synod advisory council will help interpret it to the Presbyterian constituency which controls PC and assist in implementing its recommendations. Robert M. Vance, of Clinton, chairman of the PC board of trustees, heads the 35-member advisory council.

Tucker Orch to Play For Military Dance

Tommy Tucker and his Orchestra have been secured for the 1958 Military Ball. Tucker will supply music for this event which is scheduled for April 11.

The military Ball Committee was able to secure the Tucker orchestra after Billy May cancelled last week.

Tucker is only slated to play for one of the two dances scheduled for the weekend of April 11-12. On the following night there will be an Inter-Fraternity Council Dance for which another group is being secured.

Tommy Tucker and His Orchestra, one of the best show units, has played for audiences the country over in hotels, theatres, ballrooms, and clubs. Top engagements at the Hotel Astor in New York, the Roosevelt Hotel in Washington, Copley-Plaza in Boston, The Essex House in New York, Statler in Cleveland, Wardman Park Hotel in Washington, El Patio Ballroom, San Francisco, and Elitch's Gardens in Denver, among many others, have brought world-wide acclaim. Theatres where Tommy Tucker and his crew have played include the Roxy, Capitol, and Strand in New York, the Oriental and Chicago Theatres in Chicago, the Earle in Philadelphia, Stanley in Pittsburgh, and the Riverside in Milwaukee.

TOMMY TUCKER

On the air Tommy Tucker has been here innumerable times on each of the major networks on dance and music pick-ups. He has also appeared on the Fitch Bandwagon, the Coca-Cola "Spotlight Bands" program, completed a long period on the New York "Pot O' Gold" show for tums.

AN YANG PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, SEOUL, KOREA

Ministerial Club Sponsors Project for Korean Church

By CHARLES TAYLOR

Wednesday, March 19, will mark the kick-off date for the oncoming fund-raising project of the Ministerial Club. The local organization is turning all its effort into raising enough money for the completion of the An Yang Presbyterian Church of Kyung Gi Do, Korea. The church was destroyed during the war, financially and hysically, but the congregation and the pastor still live.

Since the war they have attempted in many ways to rebuild their church and worship once again in a united body. Through the efforts of the meager means of the congregation only four walls and a roof have been completed. A balcony was partially completed, but collapsed during a Christmas service in 1956 when the congregation, eager to worship, filled it beyond capacity.

There were many injuries, but fortunately no fatalities. Since that time it has been impossible to raise enough funds for rebuilding the balcony or for completing the church. There is not a pew in the building. There are no hymn books. The congregation sings without a piano. The minister preaches without a pulpit. There are no chairs in the Sunday school rooms. The parsonage is a combination tent and lean-to.

Knowledge of this critical situation came to the Ministerial Club by Mr. Yong Ki Lee. He and his family are members of the An Yang Church. Lee's father is a leading officer in the congregation. He is also a medical doctor and gave free medical attention to those injured when the balcony collapsed. He mortgaged his home in order to get money to pay the church debt.

A letter was recently received from Rev. Kee Won Ro, pastor of the church. The gratifying spirit of his letter captured the hearts of the Ministerial Club. The following is a translation of one paragraph. "We thanked the Lord for what had been accomplished by you for our church through the grace of our Jesus Christ. Even thousands of miles be between us, but our prayers are always for you though we have not met before. Needless to say, your letter has renewed our concept toward the fellow American Christian and his deep faith in our Lord. We announced this gratifying news to all of our congregation and also about your firm belief in this campaign for the rebuilding of His house in our war-torn country. The grace of God be with you forever."

The current goal for the project has been set at $3,000 (three thousand dollars). This would be an impossible amount if left only to some twenty-five ministerial students. But with the help and interest of the entire student body, administration, and college family, this amount is meager.

SCA Officers Choose Cabinet Membership

The newly elected Student Christian Association officers today announced the appointment of the new SCA cabinet which will serve with them during the next year. This group of students will function in the planning of the many activities of the SCA as well as carry out individual duties that their titles imply.

Appointed to the position of corresponding secretary, a newly created position, was Miss Gay Maddox of Spartanburg. Working with the intramural program will be Larry Wood, Ed Galloway, and Ronald Boston, hailing from Moss Point, Miss., Jacksonville, Fla., and Darlington, respectively.

The Publications Chairman is Bob Dean of Marietta, Ga., and working with the Chapel Programs will be Don Hendrix, a native of Thomaston, Ga. Personal and Campus Affairs, the department that will handle activities in the new Student Union Building including the new student school calendar, will have Dick Carter of Florence, as its Chairman, and assisting him will be Reed Clark of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Christian Faith and Heritage Chairman will be Tom Wise of Thomasville, Ga., and the Publicity Chairmanship will be filled by Lonnie Love of McColl. Dormitory Discussions will be handled by Bob Horseman a resident of Brinkley, Ark., and the Music Department will be headed by Gene Wilson of Atlanta.

Rohe Eshbaugh of Louisville, Ky., and Frank Richbourg of Pinewood, will be in charge of Deputations and World Relations, respectively. A new position of Special Events Chairman will be filled by Paul Arrington, a native of Charlotte, N. C., and his assistant will be Tom Collins of Pageland.

Baptist Missionary To Speak in Chapel

Dr. James D. Belote, Southern Baptist Missionary to Hong Kong, will speak in chapel on Wednesday, March 19.

Dr. Belote has been in mission work since 1940. Prior to that time he was pastor of the Augusta Road Baptist Church, Greenville. During World War II, Dr. Belote served as pastor of the Wahiawa Baptist Church in Oahu, Hawaii, and in 1947 moved to China where he did evangelistic work in South China.

When communism took over China, to moved to Hong Kong, and in 1952 he became president of the Hong Kong Baptist Theological Seminary.

Dr. Belote is presently on furlough in the United States and comes to Presbyterian College under the sponsorship of the Baptist Student Union.

"Do It Again . . ."

Excuse our raving but something great has just occurred on this campus. The SCA can rightly be proud of their efforts for a new REW. Admittedly, certain arrangement difficulties were encountered but those are inherent in any new program and the variety. The ability of the speakers surpassed any similar selection of the past few years and the end result was both surprising and enlightening. Those students that cut out for two days missed an experience that will not often be duplicated.

This wasn't a superficial religion beefed up with bromide cliches and gymnastic showmanship. This was an eternal religion made real in the 20th Century, today . . . NOW. A religion which the men and women who led us in our thinking had integrated into their own personalities. They had wrestled with God Almighty and were themselves living interpretations of the living Word. Not many answers but a lot of fresh ideas, attitudes, and questions. This was an approach that couldn't help but disrupt the spiritual lethargy that had grown out of a static situation on this campus. We need and we want more of it.

It has been novel and refreshing to walk in on a bull session and hear a man and his ideas discussed; to see men sitting on burlap for military demonstration when there were no chairs available at a discussion; to notice smiling, understanding glances between students when a speaker presented a novel idea; and to repeatedly overhear the admonition not to miss this or that speaker for he or she was great.

True, the statistics of this REW will be compared with those of past years but frankly we couldn't care less. The true results are intangible and will remain mostly unknown but the outward expression of what has transpired is so openly enthusiastic that there is no need to convince the student body, the faculty or administration of an obvious success. In that sense this editorial need never have been written but such a congratulatory editorial among many of complaint of condemnation will perk up the spirits of any editorial staff if no one else.

This was the spirit of REW as expressed by Dr. Johnson: The college man has a "terrifying superb self-confidence" and within him a compunction to "do it himself." "The fearful thing is he almost can, but not quite. We say 'do it myself,' until there comes a point in life where our glaring inadequacy manifests itself and we beg pitably, 'dear Father, please,' and then getting on the other end of life God gives it a thrust by which we are sent up into the blue where we may see His mighty and moving horizons for our lives. We shout excitedly, 'dear God, do it again'."

Thomas Carlyle writes of the Aware who glimpse into the infinite and spiritual. We have had Aware men and women on this campus and they have helped us to become aware. We rave, but let's not slump into lethargy again. Let us have more of the same, let us be lifted again above our narrow horizons, let us "do it again."

Recognizing A Need . . .

In recent years many steps have been taken toward the improving of Presbyterian College. Last week the Board of Trustees made another important step forward in this endeavor with the twenty per cent increase in professors' salaries.

It goes without saying that this will be much welcomed by those directly affected, the professors and their families. Teaching is a profession for which the material rewards are far too small, and this increase in salary is one which is not only needed but also well deserved.

The voting of this raise is a step which will be a boost for more than just the professors themselves. It affects the students, and it affects Presbyterian College in general. This means a better chance of retaining the outstanding professors we already have, and it means that other good professors can be more easily attracted to our campus.

This in effect will do much toward raising the academic standing and the reputation of Presbyterian College in relation to other schools.

The Board of Trustees is to be commended for recognizing such a need, and taking an adequate step toward fulfilling it.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter met Monday night for its weekly session. Discussion centered on future social events. Religious Emphasis Week was discussed, and it was decided to back the program fully. The pledge class has plans to redecorate the fraternity room entrance and stairway.

KAPPA ALPHA

Due to Religious Emphasis Week Beta Pi Chapter did not hold its regular meeting this week. Wednesday evening the chapter welcomed Dr. Eugene Wilson, father of Brother Gene Wilson, who conducted the discussion for Kappa Alpha. Newly elected pledge officers for the pledge class are Howard Baumgardner—President; Doug McDonald—Vice-President; Pat Dorn—Secretary; and Bill Betchman—Treasurer.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

The annual Barefoot Ball was given by the brothers to the new pledges Monday night. Pledge Herb Hammet and Rosemary Coleman were elected King and Queen.

Plans are being made for the annual Houseparty to be held the first week of June. Dr. John McSween, Alumnus Counselor, led the REW fraternity discussion group Wednesday night.

PI KAPPA PHI

Last week the pledges elected officers at their regular meeting. Elected were Marion Lee—President; Tommy Middleton—Vice-President; Don Brown—Secretary; Ron Boston—Treasurer; Bill McElderry—Sergeant-at-Arms; and Jimmy Culpepper—Chaplain. Also assigned were the pledges' "Big Brothers."

THETA CHI

At the regular scheduled meeting of Beta Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity final plans were made for the Red Ox Stampede which is to be held this weekend. Reports were heard concerning the forthcoming Rebel Reunion which is to include chapters from all over the Southeast and is to be held in Clinton. The pledge class elected officers. Elected were John Gossett—President; Don Burquest—Vice-President; Matthew Smith—Secretary; and Max Gray—Treasurer.

For Medicinal Purposes Only

By PAUL ARRINGTON

The sky was spotted here and there with small, grayish clouds, and the sun cast their shadows along the beach as they moved on in from the sea. Some of the old-timers told me a storm was brewing out there so I figured that riding out a small one at first would get me in practice for the bigger ones; that's why I picked that day. Of course, another reason was that my wife and kid had left me the day before and I wanted to get away in case they decided to come back.

The motor was in good shape; the sail was new; had plenty of gas; had food for three weeks; everything seemed fine. I even had three cases of "Haig and Haig" placed at certain places for ballast and, of course, it would come in handy for medicinal purposes, especially since I was mentally ill. The fishing tackle was in good shape, so I knew that there would be something to do while I was just floating around. I had even brought along a deck of cards for some solitaire; all was ready.

I took a good stiff one, corked the bottle, put it in my pocket, and shoved the small boat away from the pier; the bottle fell and smashed on the top of the motor. I cranked 'er up, cut my hand on the glass and moved on out to sea. When I got out about ten miles, I cut the motor, ran the sail up and tried some fishing.

On the first cast the hook caught me in the ear. I jerked it out as quick as I could and threw it, cursing, over the side. The hook and the bait on it sank fast and when I reached for the rod, I found out why; they were still on the string and the string was still on the rod, but the rod wasn't still on the boat. My ear was bleeding, too. I got out the cards and got blood all over them.

I needed a drink! I opened the case on the left side in the rear first. I pulled out a bottle and saw a "Mason" jar full of peaches. The rest of them were twins. I sneaked over to the next case. Slowly I opened it and reached in; the fat top of the bottle made my heart sink. I pulled one out—twin cases. I got scared and raced over to the last case. I found what I wanted and got drunk.

When I woke up and looked around, I found that half my goods were gone; never did know what I was doing during a drinking bout. My three-week food supply ran out in six days. After eight days I pulled myself up enough to look

A Winning Team Next Fall?

FOOTBALL OR BUST

How can our coaches put out a winning team next fall? Several factors stand out above the rest and bear on this matter of producing a supposedly "dream outfit." Just what are they?

Certain people are inclined to believe that we have the material, even though the public view is that the present staff inherited a bunch of "kittens" from the previous years. Nevertheless, the coaches have their initial collegiate campaign behind them now, relieving certain so-called jagged tensions. Not one reader would care to be reminded about the record posted this year, and neither do the coaches care to dwell on such memories.

At the present time, and even since the termination of the season, the coaches have been constantly observing high school prospects, as well as junior college material who desire to play for this school. Certainly, a handful of top prep gridders will be landed with the allotted funds, but what about those others who will give PC a complete brush-off because we lacked what it takes to purchase them.

There has been talk of de-emphasizing football here at PC and the student body is fully aware of such a move. Last week, the controlling body of this institution met and probably included the above among their topics of discussion. The effect on the reputation of the college by a partial reduction of gridiron support may influence the final verdict by the trustees.

Football is not allowed as much in the athletic budget as it is at other schools. The difference is also embarrassingly obvious in wins and losses between PC and other colleges. Is the total amount now being put into football program a complete waste? Does it account for the record made in 1957? Everyone has his own answer to these thought-provoking questions. Surely the enviable school reputation and athletic plant built up by Athletic Director Walter Johnson reveals the benefits of our sports program to date. No one wants to see football die out here at PC, but if something is not given the necessary implements to progress, why should it continue against such overwhelming opposition.

If there were a contant flow of monies into the scholarship fund, and a capable administrator to distribute such among those deserving, I do feel that rewarding results would be noticed by the alumni, student body, and all concerned with the athletic program and its development.

We do get considerable help from many alumni and outsiders, but there are many graduates who have forgotten about their alma mater completely, or just don't care about the future of athletics at Presbyterian College. However, those who do contribute to athletics have returned to find concrete results growing out of their aid.

If football is not given any more attention than it is, why not discontinue this sport in favor of a revised program of athletic development that would still make for a well-rounded athletic program here at Presbyterian College.

Grid Practice Ends Saturday, Inter-Squad Game is Slated

Presbyterian's footballers wind up spring drills tomorrow with their last intra-squad game to be played on Johnson Field.

The squad scrimmaged Saturday under game-type conditions including also authentic referees. Two hours of solid contact work with effective blocking and tackling saw the Whites smother the Blues 21-0 in what was considered to be an evenly divided squad game.

A couple of versatile sophomore backs headlined practice field developments as the Hose squad ended its fifth week in spring drills with this contest.

HB Billy Benton and QB Bobby Waters produced the afternoon's outstanding surprise as the White unit completely outmanned the Blues and dominated play throughout the game.

Benton, a shifty 170-pounder from Atlanta, who was used almost sparingly throughout the '58 campaign, came into his own and picked up a total of 53 yards in 9 carries. He crossed the Blue double stripe early in the first quarter for the initial score of the afternoon.

"It looks like Benton could break into our starting lineup," Jones said. "I'm impressed with his alert thinking and ability to find holes, and above all his determination. He can go all the way when he's in the open. This fellow may be a surprise and play considerably for us next year."

Bob Waters of Sylvania, Ga., first string quarterback during the past season showed up well in the Saturday game. He completed 9 of 11 passes for a total of 149 yards with two of the tosses going for touchdowns.

Sophomore Paul Chastain from Central, took in a 30-yard flip from Waters at the Blue 35 and completely outraced the secondary. Paul played a fine defensive game for the Whites, contributing greatly with his fast charges to block two punts. Another of Waters' aerials went to Sophomore John Vastine, who made a diving catch at the goal line for the last score.

Waters pulled a quick maneuver for the first PAT, as he received the ball to hold, then rifled to John Lucas for the new ruling 2 points. After the last White score Bill Sease kicked a perfect placement for a single point.

Halfback Tony Benson was the work-horse for the Blues. He carried the ball 15 times for a net of 51 yards. Tackle Jim Walker and end Ted Leahy played a fine defensive game for the Blues, and the two linemen repeatedly threw opposing backs for large losses.

"The guard and halfback positions have become the most difficult to fill. Several experienced hands at these two positions have been hampered with injuries and will miss the remainder of the off-season drills."

Halfback Ed Messer, letterman for the past two seasons, is on the injured list and will probably miss the current track season.

"We have been working mainly on fundamentals this spring. A lot has been leraned from the drills, and especially noticeable is the improved team spirit and hustle by the entire squad. We think that the installation of several wing-T plays will help our offense a great deal, though we will continue to use the split-T offense which we employed this year."

Netmen Are Prepared For Season's Opener

The smash and swish of racquets and balls are very familiar sounds on the all-weather courts behind Bailey Hall nowadays. With this welcome weather, the PC racqueteers are working hard trying to develop back and forehands that will be hard to beat, and speed which will amaze their fans more than ever.

Coach Leighton's men are continually playing tournaments, which will decide the ranks of each player. Mr. Leighton is very impressed with the calibre of players, and their terrific interest displayed this year, especially the type of improvement which Bernie Erkart has shown in the past few days. Bernie will most probably hit in the number 6 position.

Coach feels as if this is the strongest team he has had in all of the nine years of tennis coaching at PC, and all of us are hoping to see the team come through on top. The weakest point so far is in the doubles field, but should be cleared up before too long.

Playing doubles this year will be: 1. Potter and Brownlow. 2. Shakespeare and Hoffman. 3. Peck and Erkart.

The co-captains for the 1958 season are John Brownlow and Guice Potter.

The revised schedule is as follows:

March 20—Wofford at Spartanburg.
March 24—Kings at Clinton.
March 27—University of South Carolina at Clinton.
March 28—University of Georgia at Athens.
March 29—Georgia Tech at Atlanta.

April 22—Harvard at Cambridge.
April 24—Yale at New Haven.
April 26—Princeton at Princeton.
April 29, 30-May 1—South Carolina Championships at Clinton.

Track Gets Underway With Columbia Meet

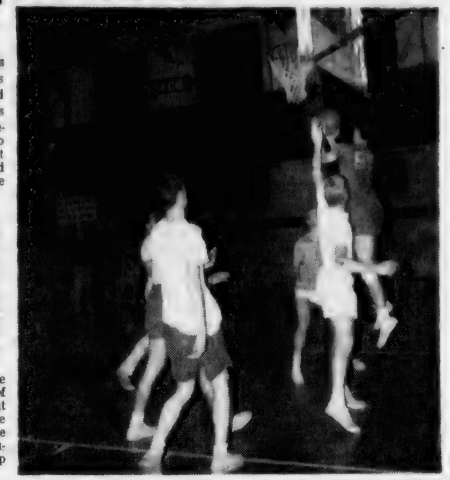
The 1958 track season gets underway with time trials Saturday, March 15, and the first meet in Columbia. The remaining meets of the track schedule follow with the Furman meet March 25 in Greenville, Florida Relays March 29 in Gainesville, Fla., Furman Relays April 4 in Greenville, Clemson April 19 at Clemson, The Citadel April 26 in Clinton, and the State Meet May 2-3 in Clinton.

PC faces a tough schedule this season with stiffer competition than in the past. The Clemson and Furman meets are two of the more fugged meets as compared with the past few years. It appears that our strongest point on the cinders will be in the hurdles with the supporting aid of Aiken and Thomas. We are expecting good results from the team this year with Shawn and Elmore leading. The mile relay also holds a strong outlook with promising results for this spring.

Sports Quiz

The Broadway Theater will continue to offer a free movie pass to the winner of the weekly contest.

1. What team was the winner of the Eastern Hockey League last year?



2. In 1957, what two teams tied for the Atlantic Coast Conference football championship?

3. Who was the last major league pitcher to pitch a no-hit game?

Bob Stratton came up with the three correct answers to win the contest last week. The answers were: Don Grate; Citation; and Dick Mayer.

Ferocious Five Retain Lead In Intramural Cage League

By TOM SPRATT

Intramural basketball winds up this coming week. This past week saw some hot and heavy action on the courts. On Thursday of last week, the Rebels beat the Wrecking Crew by a score of 47 to 27. Sigma Nu beat the Globetrotters 54 to 39. The Ferocious Five continued their winning streak by walloping Alpha Sigma Phi 49 to 19. The Pi Kappa Phis continued to win by beating Theta Chi 59 to 24.

This last Friday the Shovines walloped the Globetrotters 56 to 28. The KAs beat the Wrecking Crew 36 to 25. The Pikas continued their unbeaten record for this year by beating the Rebels 40 to 21.

On Monday, especially Monday night, the games were hot and heavy. Both games played that night were very close between the leading teams for the first place honors this year. In the afternoon the Spencer Cats won by default from the Globetrotters. Theta Chi won over the Celtics. The score is not known. There were two very important games that night.

The Ferocious Five, who have not lost a game in three years and who have won the cup the last two years, played the Pikas who had not lost a game this year. The Ferocious Five won the game by a score of 39 to 34. The game was won in the last few minutes when the Five took advantage of the time out rule. High scorer for the Five was Paul Chastain with 13 points. High man for the Pikas was Harry Hoffman with 11 points.

The second game was between the Pi Kappa Phis and the KAs. Each team has lost only one game this year. The game was very close all the way. At the half the KAs were leading 21 to 17. In the second half the Pi Kaps came from behind to go ahead. The lead changed hands a number of times and with seconds left in the ball game the KAs tied it up with a foul shot by Brownlow. The game went into a five minute overtime period. It had been tied up 34-34.

The Pi Kappa Phis won 38 to 36. High man for the KAS was Brownlow with 15 points; he was also high man for the game. High man for the Pi Kaps was Banks with 14 points.

On Tuesday Sigma Nu walloped Theta Chi 60 to 39. Vetville beat the Rebels 61 to 43.

The Ferocious Five who are unbeaten so far in three years are on top. The Pikas and the Pi Kappa Phis are in second place with only one loss to each of their credits. The KAs are next with two losses. And so follows the pack. Let's all get out and support the various teams in this last week of intramural basketball.

Baseball Team Opens Wednesday With Invading Catawba Indians

Coach Clyde Ehrhardt's Presbyterian College baseball team has taken to the diamond in preparation for a tough 20-game schedule beginning next Wednesday entertaining the Catawba Indians.

Ehrhardt comes to PC to undertake his first position as head coach; however, he has had previous coaching experience in the Army.

While in the Army he earned every medal for valor given by the Army except the Congressional Medal of Honor as one of the most-decorated soldiers of World War II.

Ehrhardt will have eight returning lettermen around which to build his team. The returning men are infielders Tony Benson, Ted Leahy, and Ray Hodge; catchers Jim Newsome and Jerry Crawford; pitchers George Aiken and Bill Dobbins; and outfielder Ed Jackson. This nucleus of veterans will be strengthened by the addition of some outstanding new men.

First year men Harvey Blanchard and Ken Nix have looked especially good in practice. Blanchard, who was an all-state pitcher in high school, has the pontentiality to develop into one of the outstanding players of the club.

Besides Nix and Blanchard, other new men who have looked good are: Alex DuBose, Bob Matthews, Paul Chastain, Bill Sease, Wayne Godfrey, and Pat Malone.

Although hampered by bad weather and several of the players engaged in spring football practice, the men of the diamond are getting into shape, and are looking forward to a successful season.

Last Years Top Events Are Listed By Harris

Looking through the pages of last year's Blue Stocking, there are several events which should perhaps be termed outstanding—such as: the naming of Walter Johnson to the Sports Hall of Fame, revamping of PC's Religious Emphasis Week, and the Hose's tennis win against powerful Miami. Disregarding the new Student Union Building and the proposed Chapel-Auditorium, both of which were announced in 1956, these are what the 1957-58 term will be remembered for.

THE BIGGEST NEWS EVENT and the most creditable honor to Presbyterian College was the selection of Athletic Director Walter A. Johnson to the Hall of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. Johnson, now serving his forty-third year as athletic director at PC, was selected for this honor because of his outstanding career as a "contributor to the cause of inter-collegiate athletics." The biggest entry beside the name of Walter A. Johnson is the influence he has had upon hundreds of young men in teaching them to give every obstacle a hard, clean fight.

THE MOST OUTSTANDING ACcomplishment of a campus organization was the revamping of Religious Emphasis Week. Under the new system, the SCA scrounged a two-day class suspension from the faculty, giving REW a modern approach. Instead of the old system in which a revival was held each night and at chapel periods, there are three hour-long discussions led by ten outstanding Southern ministers and laymen. This should be much more interesting and beneficial in consideration of the level of college intellect.

THE MOST UNPOPULAR event of the year, perhaps the action that caused the most protests, was the increase in fees by $222 per year. President Brown stated in defense that the soaring costs of operation in this inflationary period was excuse enough, and that all other schools have been forced to do likewise.

SPORTSWISE, PC's TENNIS team gained national headlines by halting Miami's five-year streak of seventy-two wins with a 5-4 upset battle. Miami's large black and white "84" sign, indicating their goal for the year, was presented to Coach Leighton's team and brought home after the Florida conquest.

Turning to the feature page, Edward Minus' attempt at poetry tops the list in originality and individual writing skill. His work was entitled "FACULTY MEETING," and contained such golden gems of thought as: "LOWMANIA," or "A FUNNY THING HAPPENED TO ME ON THE WAY TO CLASS TODAY."

"Whenever dear Major Lowman
He of the pudgy abdomen,
Fails to start class with a joke that is crass
That's an awfly ominous omen."
"Triangle"
"Burts
flirts:
Mac and Aurel
Quarrel."

That's the outstanding events of the "Diamond Jubilee—located in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains" year.

over the side. An ocean liner was about to run me down.

I felt like Huck Finn for a minute but didn't have enough energy to jump. I waved as well as I could and some men waved back. When the ship came closer, he grinned and flipped me a quarter. I hope he didn't feel like he had wasted his money since I didn't dive for it. The ship moved on with my last ray of hope tagging along with it.

Then I began writing. When I finish I'm going to put it out to sea in one of my medicine bottles and just lean back.

Student Union Building Named To Honor Late President Douglas

• Recognizes One of Greatest Presidents

Presbyterian College's new Student Union Building will be named the Douglas House in honor of one of the institution's greatest presidents.

President Marshal W. Brown announced that the board of trustees chose this means to commemorate the spirit and accomplishments of the late Dr. Davison McDowel Douglas, who served as chief executive of PC from 1911 to 1926.

Trustee action came at the annual board meeting, as construction on the new student center moved steadily toward its June 1 completion date. The structure also will serve as a memorial to Presbyterian College alumni who lost their lives in World War II and in the Korean War.

President Brown said that the student center will be dedicated on October 18 as part of the 1958 Homecoming activities. Hundreds of alumni are expected to return to the campus at this time for the occasion. In announcing the selection of the name Douglas House, Dr. Brown added:

"It is most fitting that Dr. Douglas should be honored in this manner. Not only was he a man whose outstanding accomplishments laid foundations for the future of Presbyterian College, but his love and understanding of young people gave him a special place in the heart of every student. He walked in simple greatness."

It was Dr. Douglas who brought Dr. Brown to PC as a young history professor in 1925. At that time, the chief executive lived in a large white, wood-framed home which has been used for the past two decades as a student center. This former home of President Douglas is being replaced by the new student building.

Dr. Douglas came as president to Presbyterian College from the pastorate of Baltimore's Maryland Avenue Presbyterian Church in 1911. During the 15 years of his administration, the present campus plan was laid out, four large new buildings were added to the plant and student enrollment greatly increased.

He retired in 1926 to become president of the University of South Carolina.

Dr. Douglas died in that office on August 1, 1931. He is survived today by his wife, who lives in Chester, and by two daughters, Mrs. A. Izard (Elizabeth) Josey of Columbia; and Mrs. H. Robert (Margaret) Woods, Jr., of Chester.

Finalists Compete For School Awards

Twenty-four senior high school students have reached the finals of the Founders Scholarships awards at Presbyterian College.

Dean of students A. J. Thackston, in making the announcement, said these students will be entertained on the campus March 28-29, as they compete for grants ranging up to $2,000 each. A welcoming banquet is scheduled for the evening of March 28, to be followed by special tests and interviews the next day.

The select group composed of 13 South Carolinians, nine Georgians, and two from Florida include:

South Carolina finalists—Carl W. Adams of Shaw Air Force Base; Thomas C. Carlisle of Lyman; James O. Clarke, Jr. of Greenville; Maxwell Clyburn of Kershaw; James B. Winthrop Choir Will Give Program Here

The Winthrop College Choir will sing in chapel at Presbyterian College on Friday, March 28. Their program will be presented at the regular chapel time, 10:40 a. m.

The choir comes to PC on part of their annual spring tour of the northwest section of South Carolina. The choir is under the direction of Miss Katherine Pfohl of the Winthrop Music Department.

The choir offers a secular program and a sacred one. The secular program is available for school assemblies, alumnae, and other club meetings.

Sigma Nu, Alpha Psi Delta Tie for RE Week Trophy

• Marks Sigs' Third Consecutive Victory

Competition for the Student Christian Association Emphasis Week cup resulted in a tie between Sigma Nu Fraternity and Alpha Psi Delta Sorority.

The cup is awarded to the fraternity or sorority having the largest percentage of attendance during the REW programs and should the competition result in a tie the cup goes to the winner of the cup last year if the last year's winner is one of the parties in the tie for the current presentation.

Both Sigma Nu Fraternity and Alpha Psi Delta Sorority had a hundred percent attendance. Both organizations tied last year also. The REW planning committee, therefore, is awarding the present cup to Sigma Nu which will keep it permanently since this is their third straight victory, and starting a new cup which will be ordered soon and will have Alpha Psi Delta's name engraved upon it.

The third place winner was Alpha Sigma Phi, who was also in last year's three-way tie for the first position.

Caswell Is Elected To BSU Presidency

At the annual BSU elections Thursday night, Ken Caswell of Paris, Ky., was elected president for the coming year.

Roscoe Lindsay of Marion, was chosen for the first vice-president position, and Mary Keith Adair of Clinton, was named secretary. Charlie Watts of Georgetown, was elected to fill the office of treasurer.

BSU meets weekly on the campus, and the church here in Clinton has special Sunday school and Training Union classes for all college students.

Other officers also elected include: Wayne Wiggins—devotional vice-president; Jimmy Elliott—social vice-president; Sonny Wells—Sunday School representative; Jerry Davis, Training Union representative; Evin Varner—publicity chairman; Jack Taylor, music chairman; June Adair—Christian Action chairman; Ken Gardner—extension chairman; and Butch Woodward—day student representative.

Ft. Jackson Trip Slated For Advanced Cadets

Advanced students of the Reserve Officers Training Corps will travel to Fort Jackson on April 18-19, Col. W. W. Barnett announced today.

They will make this trip for the purpose of observing the operation and activities of units on a regular army post. The trip will include a tour of the post for both seniors and juniors on Friday afternoon.

The following day the seniors will take part in a tour of inspection among enlisted personnel on the training base, while the juniors will go to the rifle range for a session with the M1 Rifle.

Students making the trip will be excused from all classes on Friday and Saturday. They will leave the campus on Friday morning, April 18, and return to school the following afternoon, Saturday, April 19.

First Semester Rushing?

Last month the Blue Stocking published an editorial on the advantages of having Rush Week at the beginning of second semester, instead of three weeks later during first quarter quizzes. Now we would like to go a step further and consider the even greater advantages of having first semester rushing.

There are inherent faults with the present system that would be eliminated by having rush week first semester. The biggest fault with the present system is that a tremendous amount of time is spent over the period of the semester on rushing. Officially Rush Week doesn't begin until second semester, but in fact it begins the day school opens and does not end until the pledge day many months later.

For fraternity men this means that a good portion of their social activity during more than half the semester is spent in an effort to influence rushees toward their fraternity. For the rushee it means that much of their time is consumed in evaluating and comparing fraternities.

This could be eliminated by having Rush Week first semester. Rushees would go ahead and make their decisions, and there would not be the prolonged indecision about which fraternity to join.

The second disadvantage with the present system is that tension and ill will build up over rushing. Competition between fraternities is keen, which is as it should be; but in regard to pledging the tension mounts and ill will is often created between fraternities. First semester rushing would do much toward alleviating this tension since it would not have so long to build up.

A system of first semester rushing would be a boost for the fraternities and for the rushees involved each year. For the fraternities it would mean that they could function as fraternal organizations without such a prolonged emphasis on rushing; and for the rushee it would mean that they could become more quickly settled into the routine of college life, without the prolonged indecision that results from second semester rushing.

Channel Number Six: The Moon

By PAUL ARRINGTON

The sky was overcast with clouds hanging low and grey just a few hundred feet above the launching platform. There was no wind and the quietness was unbearable. Stretching ominously upward and almost piercing the clouds was the rocket, unsupported and oolking as though it would spring upward at the least provocation.

Three hundred yards away sat the squat, flat-roofed hut, its color almost matching the sky, and inside the quietness was even more unbearable. The walls and ceiling were sound-proofed and the sound of any whisper faded instantly. No one spoke; neither did any of the thousands of parts of electronics equipment make a sound. The scene was wierd.

A man sat tensely a a control panel, peering steadily through the small, glassed-in slit in the wall. This had failed three times before and the hopeless anticipation showed on the faces of everyone this time even more than before. They wanted a TV camera on the moon and this would be the last chance for years; it must work.

The silence was broken by a voice from the control panel. Everything was ready; the countdown began:

"5—4—3—2—1—GO!"

A button was pressed at the control panel. Not a sound. Through the window could be seen a cloud of smoke at the base of the rocket three hundred yards away. Slowly it began to rise on a thin column of flame and then the flame left the ground. Slowly it gained in momentum, getting smaller and smaller, and smaller until only the sound evidenced its progress; eventually it ceased.

Everyone left the hut and looked skyward. When the rocket could no longer be heard, they knew that it had worked. A yell went up before everyone turned and went back to look at the TV receiver.

About fifteen hours later, the set began flashing streaks of white and black across the face of the set then the streaks broke into a picture. They were looking directly into a crater. The light was brighter than they had ever seen before. It could hardly be shielded.

The controls were moved and the picture changed. The camera was being directed around the moon where no one had ever seen. The excitement was tremendous; it was like static in the hut. The picture suddenly got pitch black; not one hint of light came through.

The infra-red lights were turned on and the picture suddenly took on a wierd red hue. Except for the color, the picture was the same: huge craters and small mounds every few hundred yards. The camera moved on and began to rise over one of the rounds. Suddenly, at the top and off into the distance there appeared a pointed object. As the camera got closer it showed the whole picture.

Off to the right was a rocket standing erect in the middle of a vast plain. To the left was a small hut, dark and slouching against a small hill. Suddenly the rocket began to rise and just as suddenly, was out of sight of the picture. A few minutes later, small, dark objects emerged from a dorway in the hut, each bouncing around excitedly.

The picture suddenly cut off; the same blank picture came from the receiver as before. It must have been too much for the camera, too

Record Review . . .

Adventures in Sound . . .

By AL McKIE

Adventures In Sound, by Columbia Records, presents new places, new faces, and new sounds in a series of nineteen records which will highlight the tenth anniversary of LP records.

With the accent on discovery this series opens the door musically speaking to the romance and wonder of far away places and to new and provocative talents. The stress of most of the albums is on rhythm, but range of musical types is as varied as the countries represented. Strict classical or rock-and-roll fans will be disappointed but those who have a taste for the unusual will discover enjoyable listening on many of these albums. Also, the audiophile will find that these discs provide a good demonstration material for the best reproduction systems.

This musical adventure includes such albums as: Sorcery!-Sabu, WL 101, featuring "wild, uninhibited improvisations" by an oboe, eleven drums and other percussion instruments. Delirium In Hi-Fi, WL 105, was recorded by Elsa Popping and Her Pixieland Band and is described as a "fascinating and hilarious musical expedition into the remoter world of sound—and the unsound." The Sounds of India, WL 119, samples the musical folklore of that country with exotic improvisations on ancient Indian instruments by Ravi Shankar. Our only recommendation on these three is that you listen before you buy. Music like this could be a treat but seldom a steady diet, that is unless you are either delirious or from India.

Other parts of the world are represented by: Caribee, WL 103, with songs in Spanish and Papiamento and Jamaican Drums, WL 121, with steel band excitement, both from the West Indies. The folk and love songs of Mexico are recorded on Caballero, WL 102, and Mucho Gusto, WL 113. Sicily lives in the music of the San Comenice Barbers of Taormina on Mandoline, WL 116, and Chile is revealed by Los Chilenos on El Rodeo, WL 104.

Some others include: Paris—Grand Bal Musette, WL 109; Greece—From the Land of the Golden Fleece, WL 123; Italy—Neapolitan Gold, WL 117; and Russia—Dark Eyes, WL 118.

There are still others, all different, all unusual, and all guaranteed to give a new slant to any record collection.

Movie Review . . .

"Peyton Place"

By JIM MONROE

"Peyton Place" takes the lid off a small New England town. It is one of the most emotional and strong stories put on the screen in recent years.

"Peyton Place" carefully but fully scrutinizes the emotional problems of two entirely different girls. Selena (Hope Lange) and Allison (Diane Varsi) are drawn together by circumstance in a community where they are set at the opposite end of the economic scale. Selena comes from the poorest section of town while Allison comes from the most fashionable residential section. Even though both girls have problems caused by their invironment, Allison's are more acute because of her unwed mother (Lana Turner).

The movie has as its background the beautiful scenery of New England. Most of the movie was made in Camden, Maine, and the screen extras are citizens of Camden.

ALPHA PSI DELTA

Alpha Psi Delta met at the home of June and Mary Keith Adair. The date was set for the pledge supper.

KAPPA ALPHA

Beta Psi Chapter held its regular weekly meeting. Programs and tickets for the Old South were distributed, and Miss Patricia Padgett, fiancee of Brother Quinn will represent Beta Pi at the Old South as our KA Rose.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

On Tuesday the regular meeting was held. Final plans were made for the "PiKA" weekend. Brother McElveen was elected as the new IFC representative replacing Brother Newsome.

Brothers of the Week are Bill Aycock, on being accepted to Wake Forest Law School; Brother Newsome on his selection to co-captain of the baseball team; and Brother McElveen, for services rendered.

The pledges elected their officers: President—Hal McGirt; Vice-President—Paul Ard; Secretary—Bill Hatchett; Treasurer—Johnny Granger Assistant House Manager—Walt Ferrene; Correspondent—Herb Hammet. Chaplain—Will James.

PI KAPPA PHI

Beta Chapter met Wednesday for its regular session. Plans have been made for a party to be held Saturday night. Other plans have been made for the Military Ball weekend. The "Mary Lou Ranch" has been secured for both nights of that weekend.

The pledges have chosen Monday night their regular meeting night. They have started on some new projects consisting of the construction of a new sign to be placed over the door, and a large circular card table for the room.

SIGMA NU

Work on our now nearly completed patio was resumed after a very successful and enjoyable White Star weekend. For the third straight year perfect attendance was asked for and achieved for Religious Emphasis Week. Professor Glover was our able and interesting discussion leader Wednesday night.

THETA CHI

At the weekly meeting of Beta Psi Chapter further plans for the coming Rebel Reunion were discussed, and delegates were elected. Plans for the Military Ball weekend were also discussed.

BUDDY MULLIS—Sports Editor

Spring Slate In Full Swing

Spring sports were engaged only partly this past week and with the coming of another week business really starts picking up in earnest on all fronts. By Friday, March 28, baseball, track, tennis, and golf will have at least one or more contests in the record books.

The only remaining opener yet to be unveiled will be that of the linksmen. The opening golf match comes next Friday when the Blue Hose meet South Carolina in Columbia. Only a day later the golfers travel on and stop at Charleston to tee off against The Citadel on March 29.

These two matches take the lid off an 11-match schedule, but after this action they are idle till April 10 when they entertain Belmont Abbey on the home courts.

Coach Joseph Gettys hopes to improve on the '57 record posted by the Hose, and successfully defend the Little Four Championship with his top shooting squad. The team members are: Larry Ford, Albert Capelan, Sonny Bell, Sonny Hagood, Harry and Hexie McDonald, and Mitch Mavromat.

Somehow when spring arrives and warm weather sets firmly in place, everyone seems to turn attention to baseball. The '58 season was to have opened here Wednesday with the Catawba Indians furnishing the opposition. But due to rain and a soggy field the game was called off to a later date. Coach Ehrhardt and his young squad departed early this morning to meet a highly touted Belmont Abbey nine up at Belmont, N. C.

Eight lettermen are on hand to furnish Ehrhardt with a well-balanced ball club, lacking only any considerable depth on the mound. Hope of improvement over last year's 7-12 record will depend on top performances from five moundsmen. Veteran sophomore righthanders Bill Dobbins and George Akins will carry a tremendous load and from this pair will provide a starter up at Belmont Abbey. Harvey Blanchard, a fine freshman prospect, finds himself lying in the infirmary for the season's opener. The extent of his illness has not been disclosed. Alec Dubose and southpaw Ted Leahy round out a slim pitching staff for the Hose.

Going around the horn finds Tony Benson at third, Paul Chastain at short, Wayne Godfrey at second, Ted Leahy at first, and Ken Nix, Jerry Crawford or Jimmy Newsome behind the plate. Ed Jackson and Ray Hodge return to roam the outer gardens, with Bill Sease rounding out a strong outfield for the Hose this spring.

The track team will dual Furman Tuesday over in Greenville, and Friday will depart for the colorful Florida Relays held every year on the University of Florida campus in Gainesville, Fla.

Lightning is due to strike twice with the presence of both Dave Sime of Duke, and Abilene Christian's Bobby Morrow to be down at Gainesville next Saturday. The Sime-Morrow debate has been going on ever since the Abilene Christian accelerator and the Blue Devil space-consumer divided a pair of celebrated dashes two years ago.

The busiest sport next week will be that of the tennis squad. Coach Leighton's crew has a heavy slate of four matches in the course of six days. The highly touted PC team will take on Kings College Monday, and the University of South Carolina on Thursday here on the Calloway Courts. The University of Georgia and Georgia Tech matches Friday and Saturday in Athens and Atlanta will round out a full week of tennis for the Hose netters.

ALL-STATE TEAM

The 1958 Collegiate Sports Editors' All-State basketball team was released this week as a result of a poll conducted and sponsored by The Hornet, Furman University newspaper.

Sports Editors and their assistants of each college in South Carolina participated in the selections.

First team: Vince Yockel, Clemson (11); Art Musselman, The Citadel (10); Byron Pinson, Furman (7); Ray Pericola, S. C. (6); Marshall Perkins Wofford (5).

Second team: Dick Wright, Furman (4); Charlie Gallagher, Newberry (4); George Krajack, Clemson (2); Dick Wherry, The Citadel (2); Ralph Chambers, PC (2). Each player's total number of votes received is listed in parentheses.

Honorable mention: Dick Hoffman, S. C.; Ray Graves, The Citadel; Eddie Rice, Erskine; Bobby Lynch, Newberry; Dick Prater, S. C.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Ken Gardner, ace righthander for the Hose baseball team a year ago, is ineligible to compete this spring . . . Albert Copelan, a junior from Mooresville, N. C., was elected to captain the PC golfers this season . . . There has been some talk lately and a spread in the Greenville News, that their city would like to play host to the Litte Four Tournament next year. . .

Intramural Play Concludes, Ferocious Five Still Champs

Intramural basketball winds up this week. The Ferocious Five are on top so far with an unblemished record. As a matter of fact, the Ferocious Five have not lost a game in three years. This year they are out for their third straight championship.

On Monday the Pikas walloped Theta Chi 74 to 25. The Pikaps, who had lost one game to date, beat the Spencer Cats 53 to 45. Vetville forfeited to the Wrecking Crew. On Monday night there was a crucial game as far as first place was concerned.

The Ferocious Five and Sigma Nu, both unbeaten this year, met on the court. The Sigs, playing without Fulton, lost 59 to 33. The Ferocious Five dominated play the whole first half. The Five were ahead at halftime by a score of 32 to 12. The Sigs began to find the range a little better in the second half. However, they came out on the short end.

The Five used their subs extensively in the second half. High scorer for the Ferocious Five was Chastain with 18 points, followed by Shrigley with 13. High men for the Sigs were Sonny Phillips and John McIntosh, both with 8 points.

On Tuesday the Shovines beat the Wrecking Crew 45 to 35. Vetville forfeited to Theta Chi. The KA's handed Sigma Nu its second loss in as many days. The KA's had 58 with Brwonlow scoring 13. The Sigs scored 42 with McIntosh scoring 30 points. Tuesday night the Pikaps tried to knock the Ferocious Five from the unbeaten laurels.

The Pikaps came out on the short end, losing 60 to 44. The Five were leading at halftime by a score of 29 to 23. High man for the Five was John Lucas with 21 points. High man for the Pikaps was Gordon Livingston with 11.

The only game played Wednesday afternoon with the results in was the Spencer Cats 52 to 40 for Sigma Nu.

JOHN BROWNLOW

Brownlow Will Hold Top Tennis Position

By BOB STONE

John Brownlow, a rising senior who hails from Cleveland, Ohio, is starting his fourth year with the PC netmen. He will captain the Hose while playing the Number One position.

When John came to this institution he had already gained national recognition in the tennis world. While playing in the Junior Division he went to the National finals before being eliminated. The next year he came here as a freshman and played the Number Three spot.

He is now ranked as the 26th amateur in the nation, and has played in many nationally ranked tournaments. Among these are the highly regarded Good Neighbor Tournament in Miami, Fla., and the National Tournament in New York.

Along with being an excellent singles player, John is also one of the best dobules players in the nation. He and Al Morris, one of PC's all-time greats, were undefeated during Al's senior year. John now teams up with Harry Hoffman to make another great doubles team which could become the best in college competition. Last year, they won the state championship in doubles, and John won the singles championship.

The "red crab," as John is called because of his reddish blonde hair and his ability to move so quickly, also excels in basketball for his fraternity, KA, in the intramural league. John was offered several scholarships for his basketball ability when he finished high school.

Brownlow, as well as the many followers which he has obtained through his hustle and fine court play, thinks that the Hose will have another successful season, and he is looking forward to his final year of play with the PC tennis team with much enthusiasm.

Seven Will Receive Basketball Letters

Just seven players earned basketball letters at Presbyterian College during the past season, Athletic Director Walter A. Johnson announced today.

They carried the load during the bright campaign when the small unheralded Blue Hose squad posted an enviable 16-8 record.

Dr. Johnson said his awarding of letters to the seven cagers and one manager came upon the recommendation of Courts Redford, who completed his first season at the helm of the Hosemen.

The 1957-58 basketball lettermen are: seniors—Centers Clayton Adams of Philadelphia; and Wyatt Aiken of Greenville; juniors—Guards Bill Sullivan of Frankfort, Ind.; and Ken Caswell of Paris, Ky.; sophomores — Ralph Chambers of Clinton; and Bob Stratton of Lawrenceburg, Ky.; and freshman Guard Harvey Blanchard of Fayetteville, N. C. Don Hyde of Grover, N. C., received the manager letter.

Blues Defeat Whites, Spring Football Ends

Quarterback Bobby Waters passed 13 yards for a second quarter score and sneaked a yard for another to give the Blues a 12-7 win over the Whites in the annual wind-up of off-season football drills at Presbyterian College.

Waters' perfect pitch to end Jimmy Kolb climaxed a 45-yard drive with halfbacks Bill Benton and John Lucas alternating for most of the yardage. The score broke up a close battle btween the two evenly matched squads.

Neither team threatened in the first quarter as a result of two tough forward walls forcing both to punt twice. White end Ken Gardner punted 35 yards to his own 45, where a White lineman recovered for the first break of the game. However, on the first attempt at offense, quarterback Fred Gill fumbled and end Jon Vastine fell on the ball for a Blue first and ten.

The Blues drew first blood as a result of this costly fumble. Waters directed his team down to the 12 and passed ot Kolb at the 6, where he bulled his way over for the score. The try for point after was unsuccessful. The Blue walk held a slim 6-0 lead at haftime.

The second half kickoff went to the Bluets and they quickly marched 70 yards to the White 9 before their potent offense stalled. Little Tommy Boney led a host of White linemen in tightening up a defense which stopped four tries from the 9.

The Whites took over but managed only two plays before fullback Bob Matthews coughed up a fumble at the White 15. The Blues took over from there.

Waters kept an option for a gain to the seven. Fullback Barnes made a first and goal at the four. It took three knocks at the Blue double stripe before Waters sneaked over from the one and the Whites pulled ahad 12-0. For the second time Waters failed to connect for the point after touchdown.

Transfer signal caller Fred Gill from Natches, Miss., unreeled the longest run of the game midway in the third period. Gill faked to his halfback, raced laterally along the line of scrimmage, then cut down the field for a beautiful 35-yard advance to the Blue 45. Consequently, the Whites worked up no serious threat at this point, so were forced to punt.

The Blues had the opportunity to score again late in the third quarter as a result of a poor punt landing dead at the White 45. Two attempts and the Blues were back to the 20. On third down, alert Rich Shrigley, from his linebacker post, intercepted a Waters aerial and had clear sail before being brought down from behind at the White 30.

Gordon Stanley and Bob Matthews started a late drive going for the Whites and advanced the ball to the Blue 40. Three passes by Gill were incompiete and Stanley punted on the fourth down.

The Whites gained possession again late in the final quarter at their own 43. Fullback Matthews led the way as they pushed down to the Blue 45. Gill attempted for end Gardner, then Parrish broke through on the next play throwing Gill for a 15-yard loss back to the White 40.

Quarterback Gill then found Leahy in the clear at the Blue 30, and the big end completely outran the secondary for a White score. Gordon Stanley kicked the extra point making for a little more respectable score at a 12-7 count.

Sophomore Billy Benton, who just one week previous to this game led all ball carriers in an intra-squad, again was tops in this department with 51 yards in 8 tries. Waters connected one aerial for a score, but was off his usual form in completing but 2 of 11 tosses for 30 yards.

For the Whites, Bob Matthews proved himself at his new fullback position, picking up 47 yards in 14 carries. Quarterbacks Gill and Aycock put together 3 of 8 pitches for a total of 70 yards.

. . . This game highlighted the climax to a long off-season workout for some 45 PC footballers, and the last chance for fans to get a glimpse of the 1958 Blue Hose football team in action.

Track Season Underway As USC Tops PC 82-42

Presbyterian College cindermen opened their 1958 season by tasting an 82-42 defeat at the hands of powerful South Carolina on Thursday at Columbia.

The Blue Hose, sorely out of shape, gave the sharp Gamecocks a real battle all the way. Many of the events were closely contested and were decided at the wire.

Leading the Presbyterians was big Wyatt Aiken who captured one first and four second places, and was also high scorer for the meet. Aiken won the high jump event with a leap of 5 ft., 11 inches, and was a real contender in both hurdles and the broad jump and javelin throw.

The most thrilling race of the day was staged between USC's Buddy Mayfield and PC's freshman flash, Richard Elmore, in the 440 dash. Malfield clipped Elmore at the finish line by a mere few steps.

The Hose will move over to Greenville to run Furman on Tuesday, and the meet should be more closely contested, as PC begins to round into shape.

PC Defeats Wofford As Net Season Opens

The powerful Presbyterian College tennis team launched its 1958 season by defeating arch-rival Wofford 9 to 0 at Spartanburg. Playing without the services of Co-captain John Brownlow and Jim Peck, Coach Leighton's team handled the Terriers with ease through all the matches.

Co-captain Guice Potter playing in the Number One spot swept through Coleman of Wofford in straight sets, 6-1, 6-0. Jim Shakespeare and Harry Hoffman playing Number Two and Three, respectively, had no trouble in subduing their opponents 6-2, 6-0 and 6-2. Also contributing to the Blue Hose victory were Bobby Daniels, Bill Roberts and Jimmy Hentz.

The next contest for the Blue Hose will be March 24, when they play host to Kings College of Bristol, Tenn.

Individual results:

Potter (P), D. Coleman (W), 6-1, 6-0.

Shakespeare (P), D. Crossland (W,), 6-2, 6-0.

Hoffman (P); D. Woodham (W), 6-2, 6-0.

Daniels (P), D. Gerry (W), 6-3, 6-3.

Roberts (P), D. Bynum (W), 6-1, 6-1.

Hentz (P), D. Coggins (W), 6-0, 6-1.

Doubles results:

Potter-Hentz (P), D. Coleman-Woodham (W), 6-1, 6-.

Roberts-Shakespeare (P), Carpenter-Coggins (W), 6-0, 6-2.

Hoffman-Daniels (P), D. Crossland-Gerry (W), 6-3, 6-1.

with the Advanced ARMY R.O.T.C. course

If you are a sophomore Army R.O.T.C. student, there are three important reasons why you should accept the challenge of applying for the Advanced R.O.T.C. course. As an advanced R.O.T.C. student, you will:

1. Learn to Lead

With R.O.T.C. you can actually take a course in Leadership—a course that will prepare you to think on your feet for an executive position, whether in military or civilian life. In addition, you will get practical experience in command responsibilities.

2. Attain Officer's Rank

As an R.O.T.C. graduate, you will fulfill your military obligation as an Army officer. You will not only enjoy the rank, pay and privileges of an Army officer, but will also have the satisfaction of serving your country in an important capacity.

3. Receive Extra Income

With the Advanced R.O.T.C. course, you will qualify for a subsistence allowance which comes to around $535 for the two-year course. You will also be paid $117 for your six-week summer camp training and receive a travel allowance of five cents per mile to and from the camp.

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE ROBED CHOIR

Presbyterian Robed Choir Departs Today For Annual Spring Tour

Singers Are Dothan-Bound For First Alabama Engagement

The Presbyterian College Robed Choir left today on its annual spring tour, heading for Dothan, Ala., where they will sing the first concert of the tour. Covering over a thousand miles during the eight-day tour, the choir will carry sermons in song to churches in Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana.

This year's theme, "Rejoice, Ye Christians," carries in its program thirteen anthems representative of music from the 16th century to our modern times. Included in this wide selection are six Negro spirituals, the most popular music done by the choir.

Making the tour for the eleventh consecutive year is the conductor, Dr. Edouard Patte, and Mrs. Patte.

The tour is a climax of the year's choral activities, which have included concerts in churches in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. Each year the choir travels about five thousand miles, and tries to hit a representative number of churches in the above mentioned states as well as traveling as far as Washington, D. C., New Orleans, La., and Miami, Fla., in its cycle of three years.

The choir will sing in Dothan, Ala., tonight; in Hattiesburg, Miss., Sunday morning; in New Orleans, La., on Sunday night; and in Alexandria, La., on Monday night. Tuesday night the choir will appear in Shreveport, La.; on Wednesday night in Meridian, Miss.; and the last concert will be on Thursday night in Birmingham, Ala. Friday the choir will spend the day in travel back to school, making two stops to let Georgia students off to be home for Easter holidays.

Those making the tour include the following: Tenors—Sonny Embry, Blair Baldwin, Charles Taylor, Harold Gallimore, Lonnie Love and Britt Spann. Second Tenors—Ed Galloway, Cliff Stovall, Bob Pinkston, Don Burquest, Roshe Eshgauh, Jack Fallaw and Bill Stubbs.

PC Receives Funds From SC Foundation

Presbyterian College has received $10,151.38 as its share of the 1957 funds recently distributed by the South Carolina Foundation of Independent Colleges, President Marshal W. Brown announced today.

This total showed an increase over the previous year—compared to $9,279.83 in 1956—and brought PC's over-all share for the three years the Foundation has been in operation to $23,070.91.

Eight other independent colleges of the state are combined with Presbyterian in the Foundation for the purpose of making a united appeal to industry for financial support. It is a long range program which will require time to be completely established, but corporation contributions already provide a substantial foundation for improvement of higher education in South Carolina.

Thus far over the three-year period, 110 companies doing business in the state have contributed $296,533.94 to the South Carolina Foundation.

Johnson Club Increases, But Fails to Hit '57 Goal

Sports-minded alumni contributed $7,225 to the Walter Johnson Club in 1957, Athletic Director Walter A. Johnson has announced.

This figure represents the largest amount ever to be raised in a single year by the alumni athletic organization, and the total of 200 donors also set a new high.

Despite this effort, the final amount came to less than one-half of the $20,000 goal established last year by the alumni directors as necessary for continuing PC's well-rounded athletic program on its present level. It was pointed out then that the athletic department had been operating at a considerable financial loss.

The trustees also noted this fact in their recent meeting when they appointed a special committee to make a thorough study of the athletic situation here.

Theta Chi to Hold Rebel Reunion at PC

For the first time in the history of Presbyterian College a social fraternity is being host for a convention. The Beta Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity will be host to their brothers here in Clinton on April 18-20 for the Rebel Reunion. All activities will be held at the Mary Musgrove Hotel. Among these activities will be a stag party on Friday evening, a formal dance on Saturday evening, and the annual regional banquet Saturday. Classes will be held in all phases of fraternity life.

Among the guests will be Mr. Joe Ross, National Vice-President; Jim Wall, Counselor Region 5-E; Jim Hunt, Counselor 5-W; and several alumni.

Chapters in this region are at Furman, University of Georgia, Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, Chattanooga, University of Alabama, Auburn, Birmingham Southern, and Presbyterian College. About one hundred undergraduates are expected for the weekend.

Ah Springtime!

Spring officially decked the campus of PC March 21. Even though Spring, in one sense, is not here as the above picture indicates, there is that smell in the air of its nearness. With the beginning of tennis, baseball, and track there is that tendency to move outside with the putting away of the books and pulling out of the bermudas.

Bartlett, Turner to Vie For Editor of PaC-SaC

Elections Are Officially Postponed Until April 11th

In the student body nominations for the PaC-SaC Editor and Business Manager held Wednesday, six men were nominated to vie at the polls April 11. Nominated for Editor were Ron Bartlett, William Turner, and Paul Arrington, who has since withdrawn from the race due to lack of time. Selected to run for Business Manager were Bob Matthews, Toby Hunter, and Bill Porter.

At a meeting of the student body today, the elections were officially postponed until April 11 due to a large number of absences next week due to the Golf trip, Choir trip, Baseball trip, and the Tennis trip.

Bartlett, a rising senior from Atlanta, Ga., has been a member of the PaC-SaC staff for the past three years, working as an assistant during his freshman year, and as Class Editor and Associate Editor in his sophomore and junior years, respectively. He has been on the Blue Stocking staff for the last two years, and served last year as its Business Manager. A member of the choir for two years, he is also the treasurer of his fraternity and last year was a representative to the State Student Legislature. He also lists to his activities, the Vice-Presidency of the Atlanta-PC club.

Turner, also a rising senior, hails from Winnsboro, is the Secretary-Treasurer of the IFC, and the Business Manager of the Blue Stocking, for which he has worked for the last two years. To his list of activities may be added his position as Vice-President of his fraternity, and membership in Tau Phi Pi science fraternity.

Matthews, a rising senior from Decatur, Ga., has been on the PaC-SaC staff for the last three years, and is the Vice-President of the SCA, an officer in his fraternity, a member of the Block P Club, the Methodist Student Union, the Varsity Football squad, and has been Vice-Presdient of his class for the last two years.

Hunter is also a rising senior, and is a resident of Simpsonville. He is captain of the Rifle team on which he has served for two years, a member of the Block P Club, and the treasurer of his fraternity.

Bill Porter is a rising senior from Anderson. A transfer from Emory University, his feshman year, he is presently the Secretary of his fraternity, and is a consistent member of the Dean's List.

Arrington, a native of Charlotte, is also a rising senior and is the President of the Charlotte-PC Club, is on the track team, a two year member of the SCA cabinet, the IRC, and the President of his fraternity.

Faculty Beats Varsity To Benefit Operation K

Operation "K" gained momentum last night as the Ministerial Club sponsored basketball games were played in Leroy Springs gymnasium.

In the first game the Red Devils of Clinton High School were defeated by the Intramural All-Stars. The second game was between the Ferocious Faculty of Presbyterian College and the College Varsity Squad. The varsity went down in bitter defeat as the faculty proved to be too much for them to handle.

The amount raised was some $230.00. This was a good start toward the goal of $3,000. Charles Taylor expressed his gratitude for the support that was given but he also expressed disapointment that not more students turned out to support this worthy cause.

This is only the first of a number of activities planned by the Ministerial Club as they continue their campaign for Operation K.

Mutual Obligations of Students

The editors feel that the administration of Presbyterian College is doing an excellent job of student selection this year, which will motivate a better academic and moral spirit on this campus in future years.

But, the time has come to say a few words on the condition of the Student Body and its mutual obligations at the present.

As we come up through the classes a certain realization of influence dawns upon us. We realize that we are being watched as examples and certain ones of us either do not care or are not aware of the tremendous influence that we have upon the actions of the underclassmen.

Some of us do have foresight enough to realize that the morals of this college rely on our influential traits of character. Some of us should never have come to Presbyterian College because of our unwillingness to uphold the Christian principles upon which this college was based.

We are talking of those who make fun of Student Council actions, of the various programs carried on by the administration to rid the campus of these distracting and detrimental influences which seem to be inherent qualtiies of some of the abnormal characters who roam the campus trying to disrupt and destroy the peace of mind of various students who expected more from PC than this situation.

We are talking of the men who purposely lead new students astray from their moral convictions simply because it gives them a boost to see someone traveling down the immoral road which they have followed.

The new students will have to realize that everywhere one goes he is plagued by those people who tend to think that an immoral deed or a move which will make the student of high character squirm is a quality of an adult. These men are not adults; they are children. Some never grow up. Some realize, only too late, that they have thrown their education to the winds by overriding it with bad habits that plague them through life.

No one can truly measure a man's character by just meeting him. This is the tremendous job of the administration. This year more emphasis than ever is being put upon the character of the individual. They cannot succeed in elimination of characters who do not live up to our code of God-fearing principles until the Student Body itself cooperates in the sorting out of men who do not meet the standards.

(Editor's Note: The above editorial was originally published in The Blue Stocking on November 4, 1955. We chose to reprint it as we feel it will be of interest to all thinking students.)

A Martian in the Grass

By PAUL ARRINGTON

It was the first really hot day of the summer and the kids in the neighborhood, from all yelling indications, were taking advantage of every minute of it. They seemed to thrive on the heat.

Agnes was gazing thoughtfully out the window when she first noticed Anne playing in the hedge. She seemed to be talking to someone through the thick brambles of the bush. She immediately sprang to her feet and came charging into the house wanting a glass of water for the little bald headed man outside.

"What man?"

"The man in the bushes. He told be that he had just gotten here from far away and was very thirsty. He told me not to tell anyone he was there, but can't he have some water?"

Agnes thought that it must be the heat that was causing her imagination to run wild. She poured a glass of water and had it snatched from her hand as Anne left more quickly than she had come.

"What an imagination these nine year olds have," she thought. She returned to the window and looked out, not seeing anyone. It was then that she noticed an ominous quietness over the house. None of the kids who were shouting and crying a few mniutes before could be heard. Since it was about lunch time, she decided that they had all gone in for the summer afternoon sandwich and nap.

She turned and thought that she had better get a few sandwiches made. Anne would be yelling for one before long, she knew. She had just returned everything to its proper place and had the sandwiches on the table when Anne came charging in faster than before.

"He says he is hungry now. Can I take him something to eat?"

Playing along with the joke, Agnes said that she would go out and eat with them.

"It will be nice having a guest for lunch."

"No! He said that he didn't want anyone to know he's here. He told me that a lot of his friends had come with him and they're trying to destroy everything and kill everybody, but he said he likes me and we're friends. He'll leave if you go out there!"

"Ha! Ha! Alright, I won't run your friend off! When did he say he was going to start the invasion?"

"At four o'clock. He wants me to come in right before then so I won't get hurt."

With that she was gone. Agnes started to tell her to be sure and be in by then when she realized how silly it would be. She had a lot to do so she forgot the whole thing.

Later that afternoon she suddenly realized how deathly still everything was. She cautiously walked to the front door and peered through the glass. Not a soul was to be seen. Unconsciously she turned the key in the lock. She turned and walked toward the back of the house. She heard the back door open and close quickly. Her heart stopped for a moment and then its beat was the only audible sound in the air. Suddenly Anne came running into the room where she stood. A laugh came from deep in her throat as she seemed to relax.

"They're starting. He told me to come in and not to go back out. He said we would be alright, though."

Suddenly the stillness was broken by a distant explosion; then another and another and they got closer. The house rocked and glass broke; everything was one huge roar of blasting Then it was quiet. She hadn't time to get scared, but her knees suddenly shook violently. She walked to the window in the back and looked out. Everything was in smoke and houses were leveled. In the middle of the desolation stood a lonely figure; the little bald headed man—waiting.

HAVE A WORD

By DICK WOOD

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Mu Chapter held its regular meeting Tuesday night. Plans were discussed for the Military Ball April 11 and 12, including a Roman Holiday to be held Saturday afternoon, April 12.

Brothers of the week were: McElveen, for work done on the party over last weekend; Bowman, for being named to All-PiKA football team; and Norris and Jackson, for having the cutest dates of the past weekend.

SIGMA NU

The brothers and pledges of Zeta Theta Chapter welcomed Bobby Baldwin into the fraternity as a new pledge Tuesday night.

Plans were discussed for a party at Lake Greenwood and a breakfast at the Mary Musgrove Hotel during the Military Ball weekend.

PI KAPPA PHI

At Beta's regular meeting final plans were completed and passed for the pledge projects.

Brothers Roy Fowler and Charlie Owens were elected captains of the softball and volleyball teams, respectively.

Plans were begun for the summer house party which will be held at Crescent Beach.

Congratulations were also extended by the brotherhood to Brother Wilson Livingston on an attempt to get a date for dance weekend.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter held its regular meeting Tuesday night. Plans for the forthcoming dance weekend were discussed. Also plans for a House party this summer were discussed.

The brothers all congratulated Brother Al Copelan on the fine work he did for our Black and White Ball.

Raunchy BLABS

RAUNCHY BLABS

That a historic event took place the other day when Martin Hope finally had a date for a party. Rumor has it, however, that it was his sister in disguise.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Bill (I'm a school teacher) Bowman was so sleepy at the PiKA Ball that he had to sleep on the table top. He was out, but was still heard to say "Bottoms Up."

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Sonny Phillips seems to have been in school here so long and still likes North Carolina so much that he should go back and try up there again.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Jackie (I have a line, but no girl) Powers was the worst looking KA of the crowd come Sunday. He seemed not to know when to say "No more, thanks."

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Gus Montgombery should get a manager, and fewer black eyes.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That the only reason Tommy Richards is going to Charleston to Med School is because Jimmy Hentz will be there to get him dates.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Bill (Candy) Yearick is animally frustrated. Many Winthrop girls seem to be majoring in refrigeration.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Alan (Mr. Efficiency) dated a celebrity to the Alpha Sig's Black and White. She knew Paul Anka! Oh boy! Gee Whiz! Golly! Wow!

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Dr. John Summers, of Black Room Fame, is being officially adopted by the man with the pudgy abdomen.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Captain Pushman is considering going steady with Marion. Oh well, sweets for the sweet.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Blair Baldwin has been nominated for Pika of the Week for laughing loud in the chow hall. We'll juke it up, Babe!

RAUNCHY BLABS

That a couple of KA's are going to have to get Ivy League suits or go inactive. Shape up or ship out.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Alice (Mr. Activities) Embryo is getting the call to the west. There's nothing like young love, my little Angel Unaware.

That Guice (Jew Boy) Potter still has two girls, but right now seems to favor the one who took care of most of the bills for the Old South weekend.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That John (Silas) Chiders is going home for a celebration Easter. It's sort of like a birthday; his girl is reaching puberty

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Billy Betchman looks more like his brother, Hugh, every day.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Bill (I love figures) Aycock is still holding his own with "Granny."

RAUNCHY BLABS

That Charlie Owens and Maxie O'Toole have been seen together so much lately that we feel that their romance is almost as strong as Ly man's and John's.

RAUNCHY BLABS

That rumor has it that Pete Ragsdale has a date for the Military Ball. How about this, "Root;" or are you and Sullivan going together?

Movie Revue . . .

Dostoevsky's, pronounced Dostoevsky's) novel is a panoramic view of the 19th Century imperial hearts of aristocrats, peasants, hearts of aristocratts, peasants, monks, intellectuals, women of low morals, women of high morals, sensualists, and ascetics. It contains flights into metaphysical fancy and deep psychological probing into the remote dark corners of a sinner's soul.

The filming of this novel was a tremendous achievement by Hollywood. They managed to convert this soul-inspiring Russian novel into an All-American love story; the intense mystery was even diluted so much that Perry Mason could have used it.

Yul Brynner portrays Dmitri (pronounced Dmitri), and Grushenka (pronounced Grushenka) is played by our latest German importee, titillating, inebriating Maria Scheli, who is also ventilating (she lets her mouth hang open through the whole picture with a ridiculous smile).

The story involves Dmitri's (pronounced Dmitri's) conflict with his hell-raising father, his choice between two women, his spiritual development, and a murder mystery. Regardless of its failures it is still an above average Hollywood production.

Track Team Needs Boost

LONNIE CRIES FOR HELP

Presbyterian College track teams through the years have been shown a great deal of attention to such an extent that colleges among the Carolinas have looked up to this little institution with tremendous respect. The power that brought acclaim by the five times winning of the State Meet held here in Clinton every year. Even the "Mr. Big" from Clemson and Carolina were featured in the shadows of the PC dynasty on the cinders.

With Athletic Director Walter Johnson clearing the way for a strong and competitive squad, these years were seemingly bright as we look back in the annals covering the outstanding Hose of the past.

However, in the past few years increasing emphasis on the so-called minor sport according to modern terminology, is beyond reach and unheard of. Since the war this has been quite apparent as the results are unveiled. Presbyterian trackmen have accumulated only a single triumph in the South Carolina Little Oympics. What has become of the top track teams that were once proudly performing and capturing State honors at will?

Coach Lonnie McMillian who has practically grown with the athletic plant along with Johnson while at PC, continues to serve as track mentor. As of late he has struggled to master together even a handful of participants to represent the college. It is obvious that football takes first cut on available funds in athletics, so track consequently offers very few scholarships as a result. With increased doings yet to come of the major sport, track will undoubtedly be set back on a scale with the intramural program.

A "limping" Blue Hose track team invaded South Carolina last week only to come out of the event with a slight deficit of forty points. No excuses can be offered in defeat for a team unconditioned and physically unready, of course, but the situation can be alleviated somewhat. The cindermen have been at a handicap due to the weather and poor condition of the track for the past month. The Gamecocks on the other hand appeared strong and ready in their initial meet but do have access to an indoor track, incidentally.

NO REPONSE BY STUDENTS

Coach Weems Baskin shot an appeal over at Carolina before the season got underway, for those interested students to try out for the colorful Gamecock track team. Baskin, as well as Carolina's Dean of Men contributed to print all the advantage a student would receive by going out for track. Consequently, the attractive inducements in their plea for help proved nothing more than a space filler in the school paper as the students showed little if no response whatsoever.

Nothing by way of a call has been issued by Coach McMillian, but it's high time something was done about the once dominant track power here at PC. That highly regarded spell has been broken and all the prestige has disappeared.

The situation looked bright for Coach Mac a little more than a month ago, but a lot of things have happened since then. The weight events received a shot in the arm with the departure of Ken Webb from school, and leaving only inexperienced personnel to fill in for him. Billy Benton was declared ineligible to pole vault and John Lucas is lost temporarily because of scholastic reasons. A hampering football injury has kept speedster Eddie Messer from any activity this spring. He will be sorely missed in the sprints and hurdles. Additional injuries sustained by freshmen Dick Shawn and William McLeod add to the coaches' worries. It is without a doubt the worst outlook for Coach McMillian in all his years of coaching track at PC. What hope can be of improving last year's subpar 2-3 record in dual meets and a third in the State?

Curtis Lindner and Wyatt Aiken seem to be carrying Presbyterian's only hope down to the Florida Relays in Gainesville this weekend. Both have proven themselves as Lindner scored a second in the Alabama Relays at Mobile, while Aiken was high point man in the Carolina meet.

JONES HELPS CAUSE

Head football coach Frank Jones may relieve some of McMillian's worries with an edict he released this Monday.

He called the squad together this week and desired of each member to go out for one of the spring sports. For several weeks now, a number of the gridmen have been undergoing workouts in either baseball or track. Jones pointed out that though none may be top point getters on the cinders, the third places in dual meets, and the fourth and fifth places in triangular meets win track victories. This late assistance to McMillian should prove to be quite a boost, especially in the field events.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

South Carolina Sports Writers picked Coach Prickett of Newberry as the top basketball coach in the state over the past season . . . Intramural volleyball competition begins this coming Monday . . . It was discovered this week that junior college transfer Bernie Eckert is ineligible to play tennis this spring . . . During spring grid drills, Oklahoma State found that extra points can be converted about twice as often by place kick as by running or throwing from the 3-yard line. However, the net result is about 50-50 with the same number of points scored, since the run or pass counts double . . . Not one southern player was picked on the 1958 Little All-America Basketball team by the Associated Press . . . Swimming pool hours were announced this week: College men, Tuesday through Friday at 3.00-5:30; College women, Monday only at the same hours.

Blue Hose Tennis Team Hits Road, Hope to Maintain Perfect Record

Good Neighbor Tournament Will Highlight Netmen's Tour

By ED GALLOWAY

With two perfect matches and two perfect wins, the PC tennis team heads for Flordia full of hope and enthusiasm to return still in the undefeated column. They leave this week and the first stop will be in Athens, Ga., against the University of Georgia Friday afternoon. On Saturday they visit Atlanta, and play Georgia Tech. This will be one of the toughest matches, as Tech boasts one of its best teams in ten years.

On Monday, March 31, they will be in the deep south to play in Miami's big Good Neighbor Tournament. This is not a team contest but individual all the way. This tournament is an annual affair, and many big names in the tennis world will be there. Australia's Warren Woodcock and Chile's Luis Ayala are two of the threats for the trophy.

The "Good Neighbor" lasts through Thursday, and on Friday Coach Leighton's men will meet powerful Miami. Miami already boasts of a 9-0 win over Georgia Tech, and are out for another win. Looking over the top six men, we see:

No. One—Jerry Moss, who has been to Australia as a member of the Davis Cup team.

No. Two—Allan Quay, a former member, and star, of the Davis Junior Cup team. He also won the Florida State Men's Tournament this year.

No. Three—John Capell, a strong player and also one who beat Harry Hoffman in a tournament between semesters.

No. Four—Andres Donnidiue, one of Mexico's highly ranked players.

No. 5—Dick Walsh, a returning letterman from last year's powerhouse.

No. 6—Bill Minnick, a former Coral Gables high school star.

The Blue Hose will have the support and interest of every student as they leave for these hard matches, and we all look forward to smiles of victory when they return home .

On the return trip, the team will stop in Winter Park, and play Rollins College.

Arriving back in Clinton, the Hose will play host to Kalamazoo on April 9. This will be the only game with Kalamazoo; it will be the second best match held on the home courts.

Netmen Defeat King In First Home Match

Most of the regular players rested as the eager reserve men took over, and downed King's College 9-0. The team from Bristol, Tenn., was greatly improved from last year, but they just couldn't get by the Blue Hose. It was impressive to see the team play, and credit goes to:

No. One—Bobby Daniels. No. Two—Jim Peck. No. 3—Jimmy Hentz. No. 4—Bill Roberts. No. 5—Archie Niven. No. Six—Jim Bender.

The Hose will play the University of South Carolina Thursday, at which time Coach Leighton will use the regular line-up. The Gamecocks usually have a fine team, and should be a threat to the PC racketeers.

Baseballers Will Face Mercer Club March 28

The Blue Hose baseball team faces a strong Mercer club March 28 with hopes of collecting their second win of the season.

Coach Ehrhardt stated that with the past experience and victorious results of the Blue Hose, hopes for victory are high. Bill Dobbins is slated to take the mound responsibilities for the game in Macon, Ga., with a competent team supporting him.

Catcher Jimmy Newsome and third baseman Tony Benson are the co-captains of the hard-working Hosemen. Results will be seen from one of the best teams produced in quite a while. The new material is excellent and is backd up by eight topnotch lettermen who are determined to have a superb season.

The game with Belmont Abbey proved to be a victory with a score of 5-0. George Akins pitched a three-hitter, and struck out twelve, while Ted Leahy batted a two for four and is expecting favorable results for the remainder of the season.

TONY BENSON

Benson Starts Third Season For Blue Hose

Tony Benson a rising senior from Chester, has started his third season for the Presbyterian College baseball team. Tony shows his leadership on the diamond in the fact that his teammates have elected him co-captain along with Jim Newsome of Decatur, Ga., for the 1958 season.

Earning four letters in baseball at Chester Hi, he was certainly a very important factor in his team winning the district championship for two years. In his senior year he was selected to be a member of the South Carolina All-State team.

Tony came to Presbyterian College as a highly regarded baseball prospect and has been able to maintain this recognition as he has been approached by several of the major league clubs. In his first season of baseball for the Blue Hose, he led his team in just about every important batting department and climaxed his freshman season by winning the Little Four batting title with a mark of .375. In his sophomore year, due to an injury which occurred during football, his batting average slipped below .300.

Tony seems to think that he will have a much better season this year. It was Benson's two singles and a double which led the Blue Hose to a 5-0 opening win over Belmont Abbey. Because of his quick hands, speed and good batting eye and the fact that he can play most any position, Coach Ehrhardt feels that Benson is the most valuable player on the squad.

Benson along with his teammates is looking forward to the 1958 baseball season with much enthusiasm and he thinks that this year the Blue Hose will have another successful season.

Ferocious Five Still Leads As Interamural Season Ends

On Monday afternoon the Alpha Sigs won over Vetville. The score was 40 to 35. Monday night the Pikas beat the KA's 37-34. However, the Pikas led through the whole game.

Tuesday afternoon the Alpha Sigs lost to the Shovines by a score of 43 to 38. High man for the Alpha Sigs was Jim Eller with 13. He was high man for the game. High men for the Shovines were John Gibson and Ernie Redd, both with 12. Tuesday night the Ferocious Five knocked down their last opposition. They beat the KA's 44 to 39. The game was pretty close all the way. The KA's took the lead and managed to hold it until the last few minutes of the first half.

The Ferocious Five led at halftime 20 to 19. The second half saw the lead change hands a number of times. In the last few minutes the Five forged ahead and managed to keep the lead. High man for the Five was R. Shrigley with 20 points. High man for the KA's was Brownlow with 14.

Wednesday night there was a playoff for second place. It was between the Pikas and the Pi Kappa Phis. The Pikas won out by a score of 31 to 41. High man for the Pikas and the game was Bob Waters with 26. High men for the Pikaps were George Banks with 12, Wilson Livingston with 11, and Bob Biggerstaff with 10.

This is the third year in a row for a Ferocious Five championship. Second place went to the Pikas. The Five came through with a perfect record, and as a matter of fact, they have not lost a game in three years. The Pikas came through with only two. Congrats to both teams.

Mark Clark Is Speaker For IRC Week

The Blue Stocking
Distinguished for Its Progress
Vol. XXXV Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., April 18, 1958 No. 19

Major Mahon and Dr. Oaks Also Will Deliver Addresses

International Relations Week begins Monday as the IRC brings three outstanding speakers to the PC campus. Addresses are slated for Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday. A luncheon is planned for Thursday noon at the Mary Musgrove Hotel for the faculty and members of the IRC.

On Monday, Major G. Heyward Mahon, Jr., will deliver the first address of the week in the Chapel of Neville Hall. At the Tuesday morning program the speaker will be Dr. David C. Oaks. The keynote address of the week will be delivered on Thursday morning by General Mark Clark. General Clark will be the guest of honor at the Thursday luncheon.

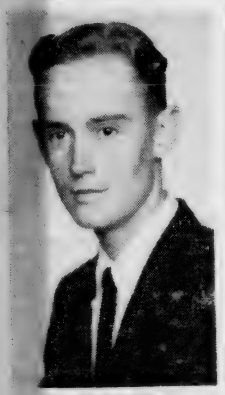
In an interview today, John Childers, president of the IRC, stated that much work had gone into the program to make it as interesting and varied as possible. He stated that speakers will base their talks generally around the theme of the week, "The Changing World of International Relations."

The Monday speaker, Major Mahon, is a businessman from Greenville and is an active civic leader, former congressman and retired army officer. He received his education at The Citadel, and is now President-Treasurer of the Heyward Mahon Company (Men's Clothing). Mahon was a member of the 74th and 75th United States Congress, and served in World War I.

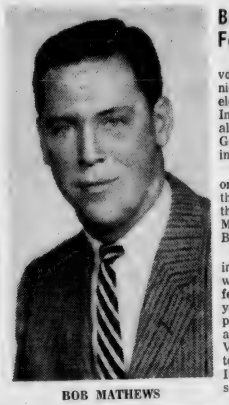
He has served as President of the Greenvile Chamber of Commerce for three terms, President of the Greenville Rotary Club, and is now a Trustee of Furman University, and is an honorary member of Blue Key National Honor Fraternity. He is a member of the First Baptist Church of Greenville and makes his home in Greenville. Politically he speaks of himself as an Independent Democrat.

Tuesday's speaker is Dr. David C. Oaks. He comes on the recommendation of the PC History Department, and as the Blue Stocking went to press no biographical material was available on Dr. Oaks. He is an Associate Professor of History at the University of South Carolina.

The final address of the week will be given on Thursday by General Mark W. Clark, President of The Citadel. General Clark is a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point. He is also a graduate of the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.



General Clark has fought in both World Wars, and during the Second World War he was Commanding General of the Fifth Army in the European Theater of War. When the war ended in 1945, General Clark was in command of the 15th Army Group, consisting of the Fifth (U. S.) and Eighth (British) Armies, and comprising all fighting forces in Italy.



GEN. MARK CLARK

In 1947, General Clark received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Oberlin College, Ohio, and in 1949 received honorary degrees from the University of Southern California and the University of San Francisco. In 1954 he received an honorary degree from the University of South Carolina.

General Clark was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Far East Command in 1952, and signed the military armistice in 1953 that ended the Korean War.

Turner Named PaC-SaC Editor, Mathews to be Business Manager

WILLIE TURNER

BOB MATHEWS

Bartlett Loses in Race For Top Annual Position

By a narrow margin of two votes, William Turner, a rising senior from Winnsboro, copped the election for Editor of the PaC-SaC. In the same election, Bob Mathews, also a rising senior, from Decatur, Ga., was elected to the post of Business Manager.

Turner defeated Ron Bartlett, the only other candidate for Editor in the race for the top position. In the race for Business Manager, Mathews defeated Toby Hunter, Bill Porter, and Paul Arrington.

Turner's past literary experience includes editorship of his award winning high school paper; news, feature, and sports writer for two years on the Blue Stocking; and his present position as Business Manager of the Blue Stocking. He is Vice-President of Sigma Nu Fraternity, the retiring secretary of the IFC, and a member of Tau Phi Pi science fraternity.

Mathews has been on the PaC-SaC staff for the last three years, and is Vice-President of the SCA, and an officer in Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. He is also a member of the Block P Club and the Methodist Student Union. An active sportsman, he is a member of the varsity football squad, and the baseball team. He has been Vice-President of his class for two years.

Both men will take up the duties of their offices after the dedication of the 1958 PaC-SaC in the middle of May.

In the election of cheerleaders on the same ballot the following were elected for the coming year: Carl Gibson, Greer; Carl Latham, Rock Hill; Harrison Clayton, Marietta, Ga.; Gayle Ring, Madison, Fla.; and Tom Collins, Pageland.

PC Chapter Plays Host For Theta Chi Reunion

By GEORGE SANBORN

PC campus becomes Theta Chi conscious this weekend when approximately ninety delegates will converge on Clinton for the 22nd Annual Rebel Reunion. It will be the first in the history of the college and for the local Greek letter group.

Undergraduate chapters at the Universities of Georgia, Alabama, Chattanooga, and Auburn, Georgia Tech, Birmingham Southern, Vanderbilt, and Furman will afford delegates.

Acting as host will be Beta Psi Chapter here at Presbyterian. The purpose of such a getting together will be for fraternity business, practices, and pleasure. Starting activities will be a banquet Friday night. Saturday morning will be devoted to instructions in fraternity practices. Plans will be formulated for the 102nd National Convention at the University of Michigan, Sept. 2-6.

Saturday night's speaker will be National Vice-President Joe Ross from Asheboro, N. C. Various awards will be presented visiting chapters. Beta Psi has been nominated for a most improved scholarship recognition. From 9-12 a dance will ensue with the Carroll Lee Combo.

Theta Chi Fraternity was founded at Norwich University in Vermont during 1856. From an early New England beginning it has spread nationwide until active chapters number one hundred twenty-seven. PC's chapter, along with Furman's came into being in early 1942 when the old Beta Kappa merged with Theta Chi. Of the national fraternities in existence today, only 19 are older and only seven or eight have larger rolls. The Fraternity is known as the Fraternity of Deans, having among its alumni many deans of leading universities.

Robert Taylor serves as President, James Faile as Vice-President, Dick Cushnie as Secretary, and Julian Butler as Treasurer.

Dr. Spears to Speak At Dean's List Dinner

Dr. R. Wright Spears, President of Columbia College, will be the main speaker at the annual Dean's List Banquet next Friday evening. Present at this banquet will be the members of the faculty, administration and all students who were named on the Dean's List either last spring or in January. The married students will also bring their wives to this occasion.

Dr. Spears received his A.B. degree from Wofford College, and his B.D. degree from Duke University.

In 1952, Wofford conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

A Methodist minister for twenty years, he has served until recently as President of the South Carolina Foundation of Independent Colleges and is now President of the Christian Action Council of South Carolina. He has been president of Columbia College since 1951.

Graduate Fellowship Goes to PC's Suttle

Presbyterian College Senior Jimmie Suttle of Clinton, is the winner of a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship for graduate study, it was announced today.

Suttle said he already has been accepted at Duke University, where he will continue his work in physics next fall. He heads towards June graduation with just six "B's" marring an all-"A" record over the past 3½ years at Presbyterian.

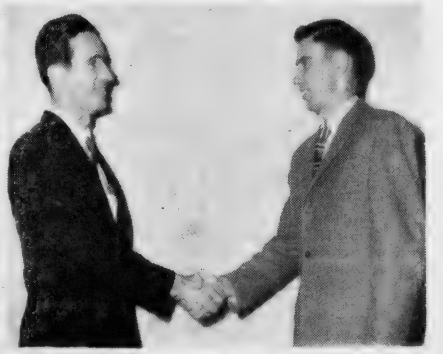
Suttle emerged as one of 46 fellows elected from among 221 nominees in the three-state Region 6 area encompassing South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. Each fellowship provides for tuition at the chosen graduate school plus $1,400 in expense money for unmarried fellows, with additional consideration for dependents.

News of Suttle's selection came from Professor Charles D. Hounshell of Emory University, chairman of Region 6. He said his committee evaluated each nominee's undergraduate transcript, letters of recommendation and statement of purpose. Final selections were made on the basis of personal interviews.

Hounshell pointed out the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation has as its purpose encouraging high quality young students with teaching potentialities to enter the academic profession. Acceptance of a fellowship carries no obligation except that this profession be given serious consideration as a career by each fellow.

Baptist Spring Retreat At Clemson This Week

The State BSU Spring Retreat is being held at the Clemson Baptist Church this weekend. PC's BSU is sending six delegates: Roscoe Lindsay, Jack Taylor, Ken Gardner, Evin Varner, Gerald Davis, and their advisor, Mrs. Rosalyn Martin.



This is an annual event held every spring. The theme this year is "So Send I You." Dick Flowers, the state president from Furman, will preside.

This retreat offers the members of all the BSU groups in the state an opportunity to meet together. They attend workshops together, with the various officers attending the workshop of their office, which is led by the state officer in their category. They listen to outstanding speakers, such as the Rev. W. W. Lancaster. The new slate of officers is also elected.

FLASH!!

As the Blue Stocking went to press, the PC netmen had split 3-3 with Miami in the singles matches, with Potter, Shakespeare, and Peck winning. In the doubles Brownlow and Hoffman won the first set 6-3. Potter and Shakespeare were leading in their first set, but Roberts and Peck were down 3-1 in games.

Congratulations...

JIMMIE SUTTLE is shown above being congratulated by Professor Charles P. Hounshell of Emory University upon his selection to receive a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship for graduate study. Jimmy, a senior at PC, plans to pursue graduate study in Physics at Duke University next fall.

Outstanding Speakers...

The IRC brings to the campus next week three outstanding leaders to speak in connection with International Relations Week. These will be men who have made great accomplishmnts in service to the nation and community.

It is increasingly important that college men and women be acquainted and concerned with the problems that the nation faces today. Progress in transportation and communication has brought the nations of the world into closer contact with each other. This naturally means that strife and misunderstanding are more easily started. It is therefore of great importance that we strive for better understanding in the realm of human relations and international affairs.

International Relations Week is an opportunity for the students of our campus to hear the thoughts of some of the leading men of the state in regard to "The Changing World of International Affairs."

No Better Choice...

In 1956 the PaC-SaC of Presbyterian College was dedicated with the following words, "We gratefully dedicate this book to Dr. John Stevenson, a man whose academic achievement is equalled only by his genuine interest in his students; whose wit, integrity, and warm sincere personality delight and inspire; and whose quiet wisdom is constantly sought and zealously cherished. This dedication, however, can only serve as a small symbol of tribute for his dynamic influence among us who know, respect and honor him.

This was indicative of the feeling of the students for Dr. John Stevenson, who is returning to Presbyterian College in September as head of the English Department. No better choice than Dr. Stevenson could have been made for a successor to Dr. Harris. His return to PC will be welcomed as he will be a tremendous asset to the Presbyterian College Community.

Triple Feature In Black Rock

By PAUL ARRINGTON

Mud Dillon had been on Chaster's back for quite some time and he was almost on his nerves. But he was justified in doing what he was doing the way he was doing it When a sheriff's deputy did the things Chaster was doing, well, anyone else would have been shot —Code of the West. But Mud liked old Chaster more than most sheriffs did their deputies, so everything was not too bad with Mud. What he didn't know was that Chaster didn't feel the same way about the whole thing.

One afternoon as they were riding back to town from rescuing two slim tomatoes from a stagecoach robbery, Mud looked over at Chaster and asked him why he had shot that gunman. Well, Chaster knew that he shouldn't have but he didn't like the way Mud asked him, so, he pushed Mud off his horse, moved his horse around and had him kick Mud in the face.

Mud got up, reached for his gun, and told his sidekick that he didn't appreciate that too much. His sidekick told him that he was sorry and helped him back onto his horse. These boys were real sidekicks.

They got a few more miles when Mud just couldn't take it any more. He pulled his gun and reached across to Chaster, busting him right in the mouth. Now what redblooded American deputy likes to get smacked in the mouth with the butt of a gun? That was the last straw.

Three days later, the news was that a man was in town looking for Mud Dillon—he found him. They stood on Main Street about 30 yards apart and looked intensely at each other, arms poised for the draw. Mud's gun handle gleamed evilly from its leather surroundings and it was loose, ready to be drawn. The stranger had a gun, too, but he wasn't traveling; he was ready. They slowly advanced toward each other with the jingle of the spurs the only sound in the mid-afternoon air.

They both seemed to move at the same time. Both dropped to a crouch and both shot—Mud never missed. Paladin sprawled in the dust-laden street, jerked once and was still. Mud reloaded and turned. He knew what he must do.

He hadn't taken five steps when Chaster stepped from the shadows of the saloon. He moved sidewise as he stepped into the street.

Things were ciking up; first time the town had had a double feature in years. Chaster knew that he had to make the first move. In this game of guns, a man didn't have a won-lost record; one mistake retired his uniform.

He drew quickly and expertly, dropped to one knee and pulled the trigger. He never heard the shot—his brains were making too much noise swishing around inside his head. Mud had done it again.

He reloaded once more and turned to go into his office. He needed a new deputy. What the townspeople didn't know was that they were

Farewell to Stack Arms

By LYMAN HARRIS

In the late spring of that year we lived in a building in the farce that looked across the plaza to the dorms, but we always thought we lived on the plain, because we couldn't see the plaza for the grass.

Sometimes people would come to the door and ask if we would like to subscribe to the Presbyterian Survey, but when we would answer the bell they would see we were only bearcats and go away.

Sometimes we would go for long walks along the campus and to the drill field and you could almost forget for a little while that you were a bearcat and not people.

Once when we were strolling for a very long time we came home and could see that someone had broken in and the door was open.

"La porte est ouverte," said Major Bearcat. "The  —— door should not be open." Major Bearcat had Toy Tiger blood on his father's side.

"It is all right," I said. "We will close it."

"Yes, it is all right. We will close it," he said. "But the —— door should not have been open in the first —— place, ——!"

"It will be all right," I said. "We will close it. Then it will be good like in the old days."

We walked in and closed the door. There were swagger sticks and Supertoy tanks and all manner of ego-inspiring utensils on the desk and you could tell that someone had been through the desk. We did not say anything for a long time.

"It is lovely here," I said finally. "But someone has been through my desk."

"Mine as well," said Major Bearcat.

"It is all right," I said "It nothing."

"Darling," said Major Bearca "do your really love military?" "Yes, I love military." "You really love Military?" "I really love military. I'm crazy in love with military."

"And the parade? How about parade?"

"That, too. I really love the parade, too."

"It was supposed to be a surprise. I made it as a surprise you. But someone did not dress right."

"You sweet. You made it surprise. Oh, you're lovely." "But it is ruined. Someone not dress right."

"It is all right," I said "It be all right."

Then I looked at my chair you could see that someone been sitting in it and Major Bearcat looked at his chair and some one had been sitting in that, and Captain Bearcat's chair broken.

"We will go downstairs," I said and we went downstairs to the mory but you could see the someone has been toying with the rifles and they had inspected them, too. Truly. And then looked on the table and there was.

"I went through your desks sat in your chairs and I broke of them," he said.

"It is all right," I said. "It be all right."

"And I have broken Captain Bearcat's chair."

"Captain Bearcat can take of himself."

"I mean that I am sorry. I have behaved badly and I am sorry for all this."

"Ca ne fait rien," said Major Bearcat. "It is nothing. Demerits will mend it." Outside it started to rain again.

"I will go now," he said "I am sorry." He walked slowly out the door.

I tried to think of something to tell him, but it wasn't any "Good night," he said.

Then he opened the door and went outside and walked all the way back to the dorm in the rain.

Movie Review . . .

'Run Silent . . .'

The story of lost and found torpedoes that has been circling theatres lately is a movie in which one can learn much in the field of aquatic life. "Run Silent, Run Deep" stars Burt Lancaster and Clark Gable who are forced to share the same spotlight together.

Each tries to outdo the other for the entire ninety minutes which is just about eighty-nine too many.

Burt, who had anticipated becoming Captain of a sharp sub crew, was outjockeyed by Clark who pulled strings on Hawaii to leave his desk and take comand. Naturally Burt feels belittled but shows his U. S. Naval loyalty by giving his captain the best months of his career. To see them together gives the idea that each has bad breath.

Captain Gable has a bad case of the shakes that he ad libbed well. Burt was his usual dynamic, swell fellow self, and could read the line "Dive" much better than his captain.

Adventure runs high as the author most likely was while creating this monster, during a few minutes of the picture. They somehow managed to perfect diving in such a manner that they could duck depth charges, aircraft, naval artilery, and anything else. Enough bombs fell within twenty feet of the human sardine can to blast Texas into infinity.

The best thing of the entire film flop was the use of the bow shot. Here the sub would run right down a Jap's throat, shoot a tube of torpedoes, submerge, and then somehow through the use of a crooked periscope watch the ship sink in pieces.

If you've never seen water, pictures of old submarines, and dirty fatigues—don't miss this one.

ALPHA PSI DELTA

Alpha Psi Delta held its regular meeting at Thornwell and plans for a skit to be presented at the campus-wide picnic were discussed

KAPPA ALPHA

The weekly meeting of Beta Chapter of Kappa Alpha Order was held Tuesday evening. Plans were made for several parties which are on the agenda for the next three weeks.

Brother Bob Richardson reported to the brothers that the pledges are giving the brothers another party Wednesday afternoon and evening. Music food and drink will be on hand for the big occasion.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting Tuesday night, Brother Jack Taylor and Brother Billy McElveen were chosen to attend the Leadership School to be held at William and Mary College, and the National Convention in Washington, respectively, this summer.

PI KAPPA PHI

At the regular Tuesday meeting the brothers and pledges commended pledge Neill Barnette for the fine work he did on the new card table for the fraternity suite. Other plans were made for the coming house party to be held at Ocean Drive Beach. Plans were also made for a "Shipwreck Ball" at Peck's ranch on May 17.

SIGMA NU

Plans were discussed Tuesday night for the forthcoming Masquerade Ball weekend. Details concerning this spring's house party at Cherry Grove Beach were also ironed out.

Congratulations were extended to Brother Willie Turner on his being elected to the PaC-SaC editor post.

THETA CHI

The elections for the officers of the brotherhood were held and the following were entrusted with the offices for the next term:

President—Dick Cushnie; Vice-President—James Camp; Secretary—Tony Gavalas; Treasurer—Frank Richbourg; Pledge Marshal—Richard Sanders; Chaplain—Bob Clark.

Miami Boasts Thirty-Three

For many years the University of Miami has featured a tennis team which has been a power to reckon with and in the past decade has been at the top or near the top of most national rankings.

Since 1930 the Hurricanes have continued to produce topflight racquet squads, but aggregations of the last nine years have won the widest recognition. The latest fame achieved by a Miami team started in 1949 and the win streak was extended into the 57th match before defeat finally came in 1952 from the University of Texas.

The 'Canes, after the Texas setback under past Presbyterian coach, Bill Lufler, started on another long winning streak and consequently the longest in the history of the school. The streak was extended to an almost phenomenal total of 72 straight victories before "little Presbyterian College of Clinton, S. C.," as the Miami Herald announced, came along and put a stop to a successful era of intercollegiate tennis at Miami with a resounding thump.

The Hose pulled this upset with possibly the greatest team ever performing for PC. As all students will recall, it took place last season on the 'Canes' home courts.

Coach Bill Lufler had high hopes of breaking the all-time consecutive winning streak held by William and Mary at 83 especially in his last year with Miami. As a result of their failing to defeat the Host last year and thus falling short of the all-time mark, University of Miami presented Coach Leighton and team with one of the decorative banners signifying their hopes of victory number 84.

Now under the leadership of new coach Dale Lewis this year, the Hurricanes seem to have responded from the Hose defeat a year ago, and currently sport another fine winning streak. Without the services of Kupferberger, Harum, and Rubinoff they have nevertheless compiled a goodly number of victories. At present the team has a 33-meet winning streak going into the all-important battle this afternoon.

New mentor Lewis predicted before the start of the campaign by calling this nothing more than a rebuilding year. The loss of the three top stars of '57 left the 'Canes with a big gap to fill but ample reinforcements gives Lewis terrific young talent. He has one top holdover in Allen Quay, picked up possibly the strongest netter Miami has had for many years in Jerry Moss, and acquired the services of Andres Donnadieu after scholastic ineligibility to make Miami a most formidable opposition.

Cocah Leighton took his charges down Miami way a week ago only to taste defeat for two straight days. The Hose netters appeared in the process of repeating history of 1957 as the singles were dominated by PC at one point. Brownlow went to set point three times, but was defeated after a spectacular rally by Jerry Moss, No. 1 for Miami, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5.

In another nerve-wracking duel, Potter had Quay 4-0 in the initial set only to lose in straight sets. Jim Shakespeare and Harry Hoffman each proved their consistency in Florida by winning their singles matches both days against Miami.

Still seeking a winning combination to beat the 'Canes, Leighton thinks the moving of Hoffman from the No. 4 position to No. 2 will produce the added punch to defeat the strong Florida team. Along with this change he plans to team Hoffman with Brownlow and also a Potter-Shakespeare combination in an attempt to bolster the Hose chances today.

Undoubtedly the PC netters had little regard for a big 72 a year ago down Miami way, and with the Hose at their best we look for Leighton's boys to send the 'Canes away minus a highly touted win streak.

PLAY BALL . . . INTRAMURAL

Lacking any presidential sendoff for a colorful spectacle, intramural softball made its debut this week and is making stride this spring to become a highly improved league than in past seasons. The organizational efforts of the SCA Athletic Committee and of Coach Redford, Intramural Director, have stirred keener interest in the league this year.

Coach Redford announces that a trophy will be awarded to the winning softball team in the league. This is an added extra this year and is put in attraction besides the one offered for All-Fraternity competition. The revisions stand for a much improved year and if each team cooperates to support the intramural program, the league will certainly receive more recognition.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Redford reports that North Greenville Junior College basketball star Mickey Long has accepted a scholarship to play with the Hose next year . . . Sophomore tennis standout Harry Hoffman outplayed and beat former PC star Allen Morris in an exhibition match with the Augusta Country Club last Saturday . . . Wyatt Aiken underwent an appendectomy operation over the spring holidays and will be lost for the last two dual meets. The senior captain hopes to be ready for the State Meet May 2-3.

Strong Miami Netmen Invade Presbyterian With Perfect Record

Hose Hope to Break Miami's Win Streak

By LARRY BROWN

Presbyterian College students who have complained about not seeing big league tennis on the home courts this year will have the opportunity today to witness the nation's two best college squads in action as Coach Dale Lewis brings his highly touted Miami Hurricanes to tangle with the Hose.

"The boys have worked hard the entire week preparing for this match. They haven't forgotten what happened last year and I believe they can do it again," commented Leighton.

A strong Miami tennis team invades PC with an impressive match win streak under their belts. The last time the Hurricane netters tasted defeat was last season at the hands of this same daunted Blue Hose aggregation as they snapped a 72-match consecutive win streak.

The Hose have met Miami twice this sring, losing on both occasions, 4-5 and 2-6, thus they are eyeing another upset of the nationally ranked Floridians. Coach Jim Leighton believes this Miami team to be somewhat weaker than the 1957 team, but nevertheless still holds high respect for the Hurricanes.

Pacing the well-balanced Miami attack will be Jerry Moss and Allen Quay. Both of these boys are capable of playing the number one position for the 'Canes.

PC hopes to counter the Miami racquet wieiders with John Brownlow, Harry Hoffman, Guice Potter, Jim Shakespeare, Jim Peck, and Bobby Daniels leading the way. The Blue Hose have compiled a 7-won, 3-lost record for the current season.

After the Miami engagement, Presbyterian swings north for a three-match stand against the Ivy League schools, Harvard, Princeton, and Yale.

Intramural Softball Begins With Week of Fast Action

Defending champion 'Rolling Stones' blew the lid off intramural softball despite a wet field with a 9-6 win over the Dodgers Wednesday afternoon. This marks the initial action of spring for the league.

Guy Blakely pitched a steady game, with Ralph Chambers and Bob Stratton supporting the cause with each blasting homers.

In the second game, fastballer Art Blackwelder scattered eight hits to hold the Alpha Sigs in plac as a KA aggregation rolled to a 15-8 triumph. Saunders Pinchard sliced a Blackwelder pitch for a three run homer in the last frame.

Thursday's single game saw the Pi Kappa Phi's keep a slim lead throughout the contest and decision the Sigma Nu's 5-3.

Next week's action:

Mon., 21—Pi Kappa Alpha vs Theta Chi.

Alpha Sigma Phi vs Dodgers.

Tues., 22—Kappa Alpha vs Pi Kappa Phi.

Sigma Nu vs Stones.

Wed., 23—Pi Kappa Alpha vs Stones.

Theta Chi vs Alpha Sigma Phi.

Thurs., 24—Dodgers vs Pi Kappa Phi.

Kappa Alpha vs Sigma Nu.

Fri., 25—Theta Chi vs Stones.

Alpha Sigma Phi vs Pi Kappa Alpha.

The Intramural Committee reminds everyone of several old rules and would like to introduce a few new ones. (1) Games will start on time—first game must terminate within one hour of starting time. (2) Official scorer determines hits and errors. (3) Each preceding and following team will furnish one umpire for other game of the day. (4) Umprie has complete charge of game.

Special attention to a few safety precautions: (1) Team managers be responsible for the base lines being free of obstructing bats. (2) Avoid contact in base running. (Touch outside corner of first base). (3) Positively no type of spiked shoes permitted. (4) No warming up of nonparticipants near the playing area.

In other Intramural news, the spotlight will alse be on the beginning of volleyball competition Monday, April 21. Managers are urged to comply with the same rule concerning an umpire for the other contest of the afternoon. At least six (6) players will be sufficient to field a team for a game. One match will consist of the best two of three games at 21 points per game.

The committee announces that the Intramural Track Meet will be held on Wednesday, May 7, and the Swimming Meet a week later on May 4. A complete listing of events of both will be printed next week.

Hose, Terriers Clash in L-F, Moundsmen Face Rough Week

Presbyterian resumes its baseball rivalry with the Wofford Terriers tomorrow in Spartanburg with hopes of pulling even in the Little Four competition. The home club wil carry a 2-3 record into the contest.

Clyde Ehrhardt's baseballers let five errors pave the way for Erskine to spoil the Little Four opener Monday in Due West in a 10-5 loss. Paul Chastain carried the big stick for the Hose with three hits in four trips to the plate.

Hurler George Akins sought his third straight victory after having previously stopped both Furman and Belmont Abbey, but proved ineffective for the first time this season as the Fleet clubbed him for eleven hits.

Shortstop Tony Benson who has been hitting at a most sensational pace this season, went hitless and thus ended his four-game consecutive hitting streak.

Next week the Presbyterian nine will have a rather crowded schedule and Coach Ehrhardt will be facing quite a problem with his shallow depth on the mound. Starting Tuesday the Blue Hose will entertain Little Four leader Newberry, then clash with Belmont Abbey on Wednesday, and a cancelled game with Lenoir-Rhyne will be made up on Thursday to complete a rugged three-day home stand.

After a day's rest, the Hose will journey down to Statesboro, Ga., to play a tough Georgia Teachers College team. A recent South Carolina tour found the Professors swamping both Furman and Wofford by decisive scores.

PC Golf Team Loses To Citadel, Mercer

Wind and rain didn't help the PC golfers when they met The Citadel Bullodgs here Monday. Three of our men broke 80, but still they couldn't prevent the Charleston boys from winning. Al Copelan was the best scorer on the links for us with a 75, while Taylor of The Citdel led with a hot 73. The scoring was as follows:

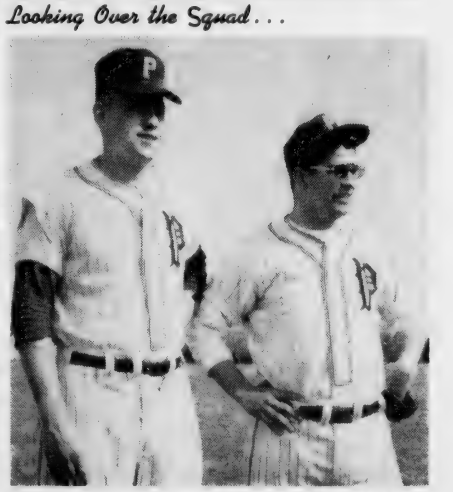
1. Sonny Bell—80-0-3.
2. Al Copelan—76-1½-1½.
3. Larry Ford—78-½-2½.
4. Mitch Mavromat—80-1½-1½.
5. Harry McDonnold—80-0-3.
6. Hexie McDonnold—77-3-0.

For the Bullodgs, it was Taylor, Dekel, and Patarini with 73, 74, and 76, consecutively. It ended 18-9.

On Tuesday, the Mercer Bears defeatde the Hose 12½-5½, in a nasty drizzle here at at the Country Club. PC used only four men against them, and the scoring was:

1. Sonny Bell—0-3.
2. Al Copelan—1½-1½.
3. Larry Ford—2-1.
4. Mitch Mavromat—2½-½.

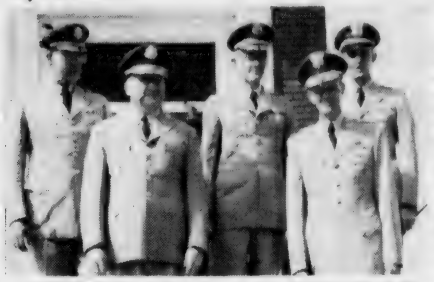
Sports Quiz



The Broadway Theater continues to offer one free pass for the winner in the Blue Stocking Sports Quiz.

1. Who has won more opening games than any other team in the National League?

2. Who was the only baseball manager to win pennants in both major leagues?



3. Jo Tinker was the shortstop in what famous baseball combination?

Federal Inspection Shows ROTC Unit Satisfactory

While no official results were announced, Lieutenant Colonel Henry J. Pierce indicated Tuesday that the Annual Formal Inpection of the ROTC program at Presbyterian College showed the training for the past year had been effective.

Colonel Pierce and Lieutenant Colonel Martin E. Davy spent Monday and Tuesday inspecting all activities of the local Military Detachment. As members of the Third Army team, both officers checked training, with Colonel Pierce also looking into the handling of administrative matters and Colonel Davy supply.

The formal inspection began Monday morning at 8 o'clock as the cadet corps formed on the drill field under Cadet Lieutenant Colonel James T. Richards for an inspection in ranks. Accompanied by Cadet Colonel Richards, Colonel Pierce checked A and B companies while Colonel Davy, accompanied by Cadet Major Robert R. Hill, inspected C and D companies. Besides observing the appearance of uniforms and the condition of rifles, both officers questioned students, emphasizing the military chain of command.

After sitting in on a small unit tactics class, Colonel Pierce called on Dr. Marshall W. Brown, President of the college, to get his views on the ROTC program from the college viewpoint. Colonel Davey in the meantime had visited a class in military justice.

Observation of Tuesday morning's drill was limited by weather to manual of arms movements under the command of cadet company commanders in classrooms of the Science Building. The inspecting officers then visited classes in gunnery and American military history to complete their inspection.

After a short critique of the results for the members of the military department, Colonel Pierce and Colonel Davy left for Headquarters Third Army. Colonel Davy is stationed there with the United States Army Reserve Command, while Colonel Pierce expected to return Wednesday to his home station at North Carolina State, Raleigh.

Dr. John Stevenson Returns In Fall to Head English Dept.

Dr. John W. Stevenson is returning to Presbyterian College as professor of English after spending the past year on the faculty of Millsaps College. President Marshall W. Brown announced today.

Dr. Brown said Dr. Stevenson will resume his position here at the start of the 78th session next September. He had taught in the PC English department for seven years before joining the Millsaps staff last fall.

President Brown also pointed out that on the recommendation of Dr. John W. Harris, Stevenson will assume the chairmanship of the English department upon his return. Dr. Harris, who has served as chairman since 1944, will continue to teach certain advanced courses in English.

Stevenson joined the Presbyterian College faculty in 1950,immediately after receiving his Master's degree from Vanderbilt University. He earned his doctorate from that institution in 1954. Undegraduate work was done at Wofford, from which he received his BA in 1948.

His main interest centers around literary criticism, and Dr. Stevenson has had two articles published in recent years in the South Atlantic Quarterly. Mark Clark's Address Concludes IRC Week

Distinguished Speaker Says Have Little Faith in Soviet Promises

General Mark W. Clark, famed military leader and now President of The Citadel, addressed a large crowd of students, faculty members, and visitors yesterday in the Chapel of Neville Hall as he delivered the concluding address of International Relations Week.

General Clark spoke vigorously on the topic of the United States' relations with Communism in the world today. Stressing the importance of having little, of any, faith in Soviet promises or pledges, he backed up his points with personal experiences with the Soviets in World War II, post-war disarmament, and Korean armistice conferences. In concluding his address, he expressed firm belief in the probability of not having another Wprld War, as long as the United States maintains ". . . such a powerful striking force is ready at all times."

Following the address, General Clark was given a thundering ovation, which served to express his popularity and respect in the eyes of the student body. At a luncheon given in his honor, members of the IRC were given the opportunity of participating in an interesting questioning period.

The first of the IRC speakers, Major G. Heyward Mahon, started the week with his address on "The Changing World of International Relations," the theme of the week. A colorful speaker, Major Mahon peppered his address with personal experiences in the past as well as in the present, which he contrasted in the light of International Relations.

The second of the speakers, Dr. Robert D. Ocks, spoke on "College Education and a Troubled World," basing his points on our need of other countries in order to better understand them and therefore work in harmony with them.

SCA Picnic is Slated Wednesday, May 7

The Student Christian Association anounced today that its annual campus-wide picnic will be held on Wednesday, May 7.

The schedule will be similar to those held in recent years, with the emphasis being put on better organized sports activities which will include softball, horseshoes, volley ball, and ping pong. For the polar bears in the crowd, a life guard will be on hand to supervise swimming and some people are expected to get a hook wet in the slews around the site.

Again being held at Camp Fellowship on Lake Greenwood, after an afternoon of sports activity, supper will be served by Mr. Powell which will be followed by a night program highlighted by skits from the Greeks on the campus.

In an interview with Sonny Embry, President of the SCA, he stated that much effort and planning was being put out to make this the best picnic yet seen by the student body and the faculty. He stated that the fraternities were also working hard to present skits that would be funny and full of good-natured humor, but not malicious or open to criticism.

Winners of the skit competition are to receive points towards the intramural cup. The families of the faculty, and administration are cordially invited to attend. To facilitate planning, Mr. Powell asks that the faculty fill out the form which they will receive, giving the number that will be in their party.

Synodical School Planned June 16-21

The 11th annual Synodical Training School of the Presbyterian Women of South Carolina will be held on the Presbyterian College campus on June 16-21.

Mrs. R. Grier Robinson of Charleston, state president of the Women of the Church and dean of the training school, has anounced that she expects another large attendance at this accredited school offering courses on religion. She and her assistants hope to exceed the record of more than 300 women in attendance last year.

Mrs. Robinson said an outstanding roster of religious leaders have been secured to serve on the faculty of the 1958 session. They include:

Dr. Vernon S. Broyles, Jr., pastor of Atlanta's North Avenue Presbyterian Church; Dr. I. M. Bagnal, pastor of the Bennettsville Presbyterian Church and moderator of the South Carolina Synod; Dr. Cecil A. Thompson, professor of evangelism at Columbia Theological Seminary; Mrs. R. M. Pegram of Louisville, Ky., faculty member of Montreat Training School; Miss Louise H. Farrior of Atlanta, Board of Women's Work; and Mrs. H. Dockery Brown of Wayeross, Ga., author, teacher, and former Presbyterian president.

FLASH!!

The dress for the Spring Dance will be bermudas for the Bermuda Hop Friday night and costumbres for the Masquerade Ball Saturday night.

General Eichelberger to Deliver June 2 Commencement Address

• Marks 78th Annual Exercises

General Robert L. Eichelberger, distinguished retired World War II Army commander, will deliver the commencement address at Presbyterian College June 2.

President Marshall W. Brown, in making the announcement today, expressed great satisfaction over the prospect of having the former commander of United States ground forces in Japan at PC's 78th commencement exercises.

Gen. Eichelberger retired from the Army in 1948 after an outstanding career dating back to his 1909 graduation from West Point. His last assignment was commander of Allied and U. S. ground forces in Japan (1946-48) and he received promotion to full general in retirement in 1954.

This much decorated officer served as superintendent of West Point in 1940-41. He moved into action in World War II first as commander of the 77th Infantry Division and later as I Corps commander (1942-44) during the hectic New Guinea and New Britain campaigns and in reoccupation of the Philippines. From 1944 to 1948 he directed the U. S. Eighth Army.

Robert L. Eichelberger's earlier career had found him serving on the Mexican border in 1911, as assistant chief of staff of the American Expeditionary Forces in Siberia in 1918, in China and Japan (1920-21), on the General Staff (1921-1924), adjutant general at West Point (1931-35), secretary of the General Staff (1935-38) and as commander of the Presidio, San Francisco, and the 30th Infantry (1938-40). Along the way, he was graduated from the Command and General Staff School and the Army War College.

His decorations include: Distinguished Service Cross with cluster, Distinguished Service Medal with three clusters, Silver Star with two clusters, other lesser ones and numerous foreign citations.

Dick Cushnie Named Theta Chi President

With completion of its Rebel Reunion activities, Beta Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity began new activities with election of officers. Brothers and guests alike witnessed installation of President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Pledge Marshall.

Executive actions will be rendered by Richard C. Cushnie, a rising junior from Vienna, Va. He replaces Robert Taylor. Assisting him will be New Vice-President James Camp of Clinton, taking over the former duties of James Faile. Tony Gavalas of Augusta, Ga., was elected to serve as Secretary. This office was vacated by Richard Cushnie. Frank Richbourg of Pinewood, replaces Julian Butler in the handling of financial affairs for the chapter.

Guiding the activities and education of pledges will be Richard Sanders of Woodruff. Jack Taylor formerly served in this capacity.

Summer Session to Open June 10 With 23 Courses

Summertime scholars will begin their work at Presbyterian College on June 10 of this year.

Registration for the annual summer school is set for that date, with regular classwork getting underway next morning. The eight-week session will extend through August 8.

The schedule just released by Academic Dean George C. Bellingrath calls for 23 courses to be offered in these eight departments: Bible, biology, economics, education, English, history, mathematics, and Spanish.

Nominations Monday For Student Council

Dates for nominations and elections of the Student Council for the coming year have been set by John Knox, Student Body President.

Monday, April 28, is the date set for nominations from the student body. These will include three rising seniors, three rising juniors, and two rising sophomores.

The election date has been set for Friday, May 2, and runoff date as Wednesday, May 7.

Knox, in making the announcement, stressed that candidates must meet the following qualifications: 1) Not more than two members from any social fraternity. 2) Candidates must have at least a "C" average for the preceding semester and no failing grade. 3) Candidates must have a clear conduct record.

Bob Bean Chosen by SCA To Edit Fall Knapsack

Bob Bean of Marietta, Ga., has been named by the Student Christian Association to be the Editor of the Knapsack, the student handbook published each fall by the SCA. Bean is well qualified for this job, having served as Class Editor and Assistant Editor of the 1958 PaCSaC.

Appointed by Bean, the following men will serve on his staff: Business Manager, Blue Currie; Managing Editor, Vernon Workman; Associate Editor, Toby Hunter; and Layout Editor, Frank Richbourg. Section Editors will include Buster Rollins, Activities; Rohe Eshbaugh, Military; Dave McGee, Fraternity; Hal McGirt, Sports; and the photographer will be Bobby Hafner.

Gardner to Represent Baptists at Ridgecrest

Ken Gardner of PC, is the new State Ridgecrest Representative of the Baptist Student Union. A rising senior from Greenville, Gardner was chosen at the state Spring BSU retreat held at Clemson this past weekend.

The retreat, an annual event, is held to train incoming officers of student unions in the state. Workshops, worship, and business sessions highlighted the meeting. The Rev. W. W. Lancaster, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Orangeburg, was the retreat speaker.

Also attending from PC were: Roscoe Lindsay, June Adair, Jack Taylor, Gerald Davis, Evin Varner, and Mrs. Roslyn Martin, advisor.

GERALD PITTS SANDERS REED

Top High School Seniors Win Founder's Scholarships

Presbyterian College has awarded its two top Founder's Scholarships to Gerald Pitts of Laurens, and Sanders Reed of McClellanville, Student Dean A. J. Thackston, announced today.

These two outstanding high school seniors each will receive a grant of $2,000 toward the next four years of study at PC. The scholarships pay $500 per year.

Col. Thackston pointed out the Founder's grants are awarded competitively on the basis of intellect, qualities of leadership and character. A group of 21 finalists visited the PC campus for additional tests and interviews last month, and the decision on the two largest scholarships has just been made by the scholarship committee.

Eight other grants of lesser amounts will be awarded by Presbyterian College under its Founder's Scholarship program. These recipients will be announced in the near future, Thackston said.

Both of the winners anounced today compiled superlative high school records academically and have been active in extra-curricular affairs. In entering Presbyterian College, Pitts will train toward a career in science, while Reed plans to become an evangelical missionary.

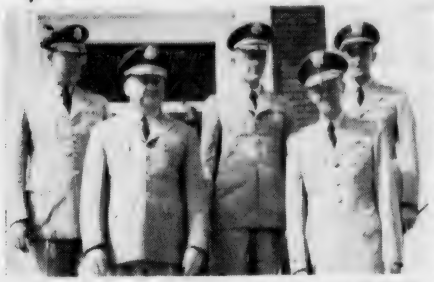
Rifle Team to Fire In SC Annual Meet

Presbyterian College sharpshooters will fire today in the South Carolina Annual Intercollegiate Smallbore Rifle Meet at the University of outh Carolina.

Six rifle team cadets will match shots against ROTC marksmen from five other colleges. At stake are first and seeond place team awards, individual score awards and the individual standing score award.

Captain Hal C. Bennett, assist-professor of Military Science and Tactics who directs the PC rifle team, listed the following riflemen to fire for Presbyterian College: Toby Hunter of Simpsonville; Matthew Smith of Fayetteville, N. C.; Charles Murphy of Decatur, Ga.; Dessie Durden of Columbia; Rohe Eshbaugh of Louisville, Ky.; and Gordon Sherard of Anderson.

Other institutions competing in the two-day event are The Citadel, Clemson, Furman, South Carolina, and Wofford.



Carter Is President Of PC Robed Choir

Dick Carter, a rising senior from Florence, was elected to head the PC Robed Choir next year. Carter, who served this year as treasurer and a reader, replaces Blair Baldwin of Blair, and will officially take office May 1 at the choir's annual banquet.

Selected by a vote of acclamation was Rutledge Durant of Manning, who will fill the shoes of Bill Cashwell of Fayetteville, N. C., in the vice-presidency. Mullins' own Cliff Stovall won the vote for secretary of the choir and will replace Tom Wise of Thomsaville, Ga.

Taking over the financial problems of the choir will be Ed Galloway, a native of Jacksonville, Fla., who replaces Carter in the office of treasurer. Brit Spann of McRae, Ga., will be cracking the whip over the freshmen next year as he succeeds Stovali as custodian of the choir.

General Mark W. Clark, famed military leader and now President of The Citadel, addressed a large crowd of students, faculty members, and visitors yesterday in the Chapel of Neville Hall as he delivered the concluding address of International Relations Week.

General Clark spoke vigorously on the topic of the United States' relations with Communism in the world today. Stressing the importance of having little, of any, faith in Soviet promises or pledges, he backed up his points with personal experiences with the Soviets in World War II, post-war disarmament, and Korean armistice conferences. In concluding his address, he expressed firm belief in the probability of not having another World War, as long as the United States maintains ". . . such a powerful striking force is ready at all times."

Following the address, General Clark was given a thundering ovation, which served to express his popularity and respect in the eyes of the student body. At a luncheon given in his honor, members of the IRC were given the opportunity of participating in an interesting questioning period.

The first of the IRC speakers, Major G. Heyward Mahon, started the week with his address on "The Changing World of International Relations," the theme of the week. A colorful speaker, Major Mahon peppered his address with personal experiences in the past as well as in the present, which he contrasted in the light of International Relations.

The second of the speakers, Dr. Robert D. Ocks, spoke on "College Education and a Troubled World," basing his points on our need of other countries in order to better understand them and therefore work in harmony with them.

SCA Picnic is Slated Wednesday, May 7

The Student Christian Association anounced today that its annual campus-wide picnic will be held on Wednesday, May 7.

The schedule will be similar to those held in recent years, with the emphasis being put on better organized sports activities which will include softball, horseshoes, volley ball, and ping pong. For the polar bears in the crowd, a life guard will be on hand to supervise swimming and some people are expected to get a hook wet in the slews around the site.

Again being held at Camp Fellowship on Lake Greenwood, after an afternoon of sports activity, supper will be served by Mr. Powell which will be followed by a night program highlighted by skits from the Greeks on the campus.

In an interview with Sonny Embry, President of the SCA, he stated that much effort and planning was being put out to make this the best picnic yet seen by the student body and the faculty. He stated that the fraternities were also working hard to present skits that would be funny and full of good-natured humor, but not malicious or open to criticism.

Winners of the skit competition are to receive points towards the intramural cup. The families of the faculty, and administration are cordially invited to attend. To facilitate planning, Mr. Powell asks that the faculty fill out the form which they will receive, giving the number that will be in their party.

Synodical School Planned June 16-21

The 11th annual Synodical Training School of the Presbyterian Women of South Carolina will be held on the Presbyterian College campus on June 16-21.

Mrs. R. Grier Robinson of Charleston, state president of the Women of the Church and dean of the training school, has anounced that she expects another large attendance at this accredited school offering courses on religion. She and her assistants hope to exceed the record of more than 300 women in attendance last year.

Mrs. Robinson said an outstanding roster of religious leaders have been secured to serve on the faculty of the 1958 session. They include:

Dr. Vernon S. Broyles, Jr., pastor of Atlanta's North Avenue Presbyterian Church; Dr. I. M. Bagnal, pastor of the Bennettsville Presbyterian Church and moderator of the South Carolina Synod; Dr. Cecil A. Thompson, professor of evangelism at Columbia Theological Seminary; Mrs. R. M. Pegram of Louisville, Ky., faculty member of Montreat Training School; Miss Louise H. Farrior of Atlanta, Board of Women's Work; and Mrs. H. Dockery Brown of Waycross, Ga., author, teacher, and former Presbyterial president.

FLASH!!

The dress for the Spring Dance will be bermudas for the Bermuda Hop Friday night and costumbres for the Masquerade Ball Saturday night.

General Eichelberger to Deliver June 2 Commencement Address

• Marks 78th Annual Exercises

General Robert L. Eichelberger, distinguished retired World War II Army commander, will deliver the commencement address at Presbyterian College June 2.

President Marshall W. Brown, in making the announcement today, expressed great satisfaction over the prospect of having the former commander of United States ground forces in Japan at PC's 78th commencement exercises.

Gen. Eichelberger retired from the Army in 1948 after an outstanding career dating back to his 1909 graduation from West Point. His last assignment was commander of Allied and U. S. ground forces in Japan (1946-48) and he received promotion to full general in retirement in 1954.

This much decorated officer served as superintendent of West Point in 1940-41. He moved into action in World War II first as commander of the 77th Infantry Division and later as I Corps commander (1942-44) during the hectic New Guinea and New Britain campaigns and in reoccupation of the Philippines. From 1944 to 1948 he directed the U. S. Eighth Army.

Robert L. Eichelberger's earlier career had found him serving on the Mexican border in 1911, as assistant chief of staff of the American Expeditionary Forces in Siberia in 1918, in China and Japan (1920-21), on the General Staff (1921-1924), adjutant general at West Point (1931-35), secretary of the General Staff (1935-38) and as commander of the Presidio, San Francisco, and the 30th Infantry (1938-40). Along the way, he was graduated from the Command and General Staff School and the Army War College.

His decorations include: Distinguished Service Cross with cluster, Distinguished Service Medal with three clusters, Silver Star with two clusters, other lesser ones and numerous foreign citations.

Dick Cushnie Named Theta Chi President

With completion of its Rebel Reunion activities, Beta Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity began new activities with election of officers. Brothers and guests alike witnessed installation of President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Pledge Marshall.

Executive actions will be rendered by Richard C. Cushnie, a rising junior from Vienna, Va. He replaces Robert Taylor. Assisting him will be New Vice-President James Camp of Clinton, taking over the former duties of James Faile. Tony Gavalas of Augusta, Ga., was elected to serve as Secretary. This office was vacated by Richard Cushnie. Frank Richbourg of Pinewood, replaces Julian Butler in the handling of financial affairs for the chapter.

Guiding the activities and education of pledges will be Richard Sanders of Woodruff. Jack Taylor formerly served in this capacity.

Summer Session to Open June 10 With 23 Courses

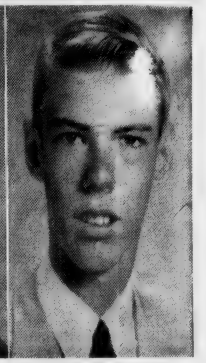
Summertime scholars will begin their work at Presbyterian College on June 10 of this year.

Registration for the annual summer school is set for that date, with regular classwork getting underway next morning. The eight-week session will extend through August 8.

The schedule just released by Academic Dean George C. Bellingrath calls for 23 courses to be offered in these eight departments: Bible, biology, economics, education, English, history, mathematics, and Spanish.

Nominations Monday For Student Council

Dates for nominations and elections of the Student Council for the coming year have been set by John Knox, Student Body President.



Monday, April 28, is the date set for nominations from the student body. These will include three rising seniors, three rising juniors, and two rising sophomores.

The election date has been set for Friday, May 2, and runoff date as Wednesday, May 7.

Knox, in making the announcement, stressed that candidates must meet the following qualifications: 1) Not more than two members from any social fraternity. 2) Candidates must have at least a "C" average for the preceding semester and no failing grade. 3) Candidates must have a clear conduct record.

GERALD PITTS

SANDERS REED

Top High School Seniors Win Founder's Scholarships

Presbyterian College has awarded its two top Founder's Scholarships to Gerald Pitts of Laurens, and Sanders Reed of McClellanville, Student Dean A. J. Thackston, announced today.

These two outstanding high school seniors each will receive a grant of $2,000 toward the next four years of study at PC. The scholarships pay $500 per year.

Col. Thackston pointed out the Founder's grants are awarded competitively on the basis of intellect, qualities of leadership and character. A group of 21 finalists visited the PC campus for additional tests and interviews last month, and the decision on the two largest scholarships has just been made by the scholarship committee.

Eight other grants of lesser amounts will be awarded by Presbyterian College under its Founder's Scholarship program. These recipients will be announced in the near future, Thackston said.

Both of the winners anounced today compiled superlative high school records academically and have been active in extra-curricular affairs. In entering Presbyterian College, Pitts will train toward a career in science, while Reed plans to become an evangelical missionary.

Rifle Team to Fire In SC Annual Meet

Presbyterian College sharpshooters will fire today in the South Carolina Annual Intercollegiate Smallbore Rifle Meet at the University of outh Carolina.

Six rifle team cadets will match shots against ROTC marksmen from five other colleges. At stake are first and second place team awards, individual score awards and the individual standing score award.

Captain Hal C. Bennett, assistprofessor of Military Science and Tactics who directs the PC rifle team, listed the following riflemen to fire for Presbyterian College: Toby Hunter of Simpsonville; Matthew Smith of Fayetteville, N. C.; Charles Murphy of Decatur, Ga.; Dessie Durden of Columbia; Rohe Eshbaugh of Louisville, Ky.; and Gordon Sherard of Anderson.

Other institutions competing in the two-day event are The Citadel, Clemson, Furman, South Carolina, and Wofford.

Carter Is President Of PC Robed Choir

Dick Carter, a rising senior from Florence, was elected to head the PC Robed Choir next year. Carter, who served this year as treasurer and a reader, replaces Blair Baldwin of Blair, and will officially take office May 1 at the choir's annual banquet.

Selected by a vote of acclamation was Rutledge Durant of Manning, who will fill the shoes of Bill Cashwell of Fayetteville, N. C., in the vice-presidency. Mullins' own Cliff Stovall won the vote for secretary of the choir and will replace Tom Wise of Thomsaville, Ga.

Taking over the financial problems of the choir will be Ed Galloway, a native of Jacksonville, Fla., who replaces Carter in the office of treasurer. Brit Spann of McRae, Ga., will be cracking the whip over the freshmen next year as he succeeds Stovall as custodian of the choir.

Bob Bean Chosen by SCA To Edit Fall Knapsack

Bob Bean of Marietta, Ga., has been named by the Student Christian Association to be the Editor of the Knapsack, the student handbook published each fall by the SCA. Bean is well qualified for this job, having served as Class Editor and Assistant Editor of the 1958 PaC-SaC.

Appointed by Bean, the following men will serve on his staff: Business Manager, Blue Currie; Managing Editor, Vernon Workman; Associate Editor, Toby Hunter; and Layout Editor, Frank Richbourg. Section Editors will include Buster Rollins, Activities; Rohe Eshbaugh, Military; Dave McGee, Fraternity; Hal McGirt, Sports; and the photographer will be Bobby Hafner.

Gardner to Represent Baptists at Ridgecrest

Ken Gardner of PC, is the new State Ridgecrest Representative of the Baptist Student Union. A rising senior from Greenville, Gardner was chosen at the state Spring BSU retreat held at Clemson this past weekend.

The retreat, an annual event, is held to train incoming officers of student unions in the state. Workshops, worship, and business sessions highlighted the meeting. The Rev. W. W. Lancaster, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Orangeburg, was the retreat speaker.

Also attending from PC were: Roscoe Lindsay, June Adair, Jack Taylor, Gerald Davis, Evin Varner, and Mrs. Roslyn Martin, advisor.

For Your Consideration...

Many fraternity men have been doing constructive thinking about the rush system on this campus and have suggested changes in the IFC Constitution that might help to lessen—note we do not say eliminate—certain evils of the present system.

Fraternities certainly have a valuable function on this campus, however, most students will agree that they are just a supplement to the educational process and should not detract from it. We would like to believe that many students on this campus aspire to more than the basic goal of 130 hours and 130 QP's and that many sincerely hope for higher academic standards at PC. Nevertheless, whatever your purpose may be, we assume that anything which prevents us from reaching this goal or hinders it to any appreciable extent is a detriment to the welfare of the student. We propose that a rush season which extends for a full semester is such a detriment.

Unquestionably inter-fraternity competition will always be keen, but when this competition builds up for over a semester the result is a prolonged struggle for survival. Can anyone find advantages in this lengthy competition. We sincerely doubt it.

If you are a fraternity MAN do you like to gear many of your first semester social activities only to your rushees? Do you like constant competition with other fraternities for over half of the school year? From close examination of these and other questions, we can see definite advantages to fraternity men in earlier affiliation by rushees. Quite simply we see savings in time, money, and effort which might be directed elsewhere.

If you were a RUSHEE we know that you enjoyed the free entertainment but did you like the constant pressure from fraternity men to swing their way? Did you find that false or uncomfortable associations tended to develop after several months? Without lengthy discussion we can discern positive advantages to rushees in earlier affiliation.

If you are a member of the FACULTY or ADMINISTRATION are you concerned that a shorter rush season might lower scholastic standards? We answer affirmatively. However, we believe that the present system has the adverse effect you would most avoid. Although it is impossible to compile statistics on the problem, students and administration alike would be surprised if not shocked by the amount of time spent on rushing or on being rushed compared with that applied to studies. It is important to realize that fraternity men feel that the time is necessary for the good of their brotherhood and rushees do not want to offend the brothers by refusing or they may naturally prefer entertainment to studies.

Fraternities and rushees alike might reasonably protest that a shorter rush season would prevent the close relationships necessary for sound judgment by both parties in their respective selection of men or fraternities. We do not suggest shortening the rush season to less than two months, but we believe that this amount of time is sufficient for men whom we assume to possess judgment to make the required decisions. We doubt if they will be any more prepared to make a better choice two months or so later.

Would a shorter rush season be a disadvantage to any parteicular chapter? If the period is not shortened unreasonably we doubt if any disadvantage that now exists would be appreciably exaggerated or that any new ones would be introduced.

Any chapter that proposes a reduction of the length of rush season might be accused of trying to introduce a "gimmick" for their own advantage but such a proposal on close consideration appears to be for the general good of all parties. We recognize, and grant without hesitation, the value of fraternities but we contend that the rushing process should not be such a dominant factor for such a long period. We make no concrete recommendations but feel certain that an equitable plan can be agreed upon by the fraternities and administration. For the good of the school and the individual student we urge action on this matter—this semester.

Plaza 500 The Biggest Race

By PAUL ARRINGTON

The day couldn't have been more perfect; not a cloud in the sky and the temperature at 75. The crowd was just beginning to line up around the Plaza keeping a respectful distance from the road. The excitement electrified the air and a constant drone of voices was heard from every corner of the front campus. Heads began peering out of dorm windows and Bailey's roof patio was packed with onlookers.

Suddenly, a voice came from the public address system announcing the participants and their cars. Car "1," a '8 black Impala, moved up smoothly onto the starting line as the announcer proclaimed the appearance of Joe "Zoom" Pracht. "Zoom" grinned, waved nervously to the crowd, and revved his motor. devil" Durden looking straight Car "2" moved up with Des "Dareahead, concentrating only on what he was about to do. As the motor of the '40 Ford roared steadily, car "3" took its position. Inside was Jukie "Juke It" Blake, who was grinnin' graciously for Shields and Nichols.

The flag was up for the start which would begin with car "1's" leaving the flag first, and 15 seconds later, car "2", etc. The flag was waving vigorously above the starter's head when suddenly it stopped. Everything had to be stoped for just a minute to clear the track. The sanitary "Sno-Jo" man was doing a thriving business in the first turn.

The trouble was cleared up speedily and the starter's flag was again raised only to be stopped once more. All eyes turned to the new entrant in car "42." Hans "Hell Driver") Walker moved up into last position, motor racing, windows up, and ready.

The flag was raised once more. It twirled and suddenly dropped; car "1" moved out and started into the second turn as car "2" got the high sign. He left, being quickly followed by the last two.

The race had been going for five minutes when one of the drivers thought it time to pass the front man. Over the curb he went, dodging trees on all sides, but he made it; it was part of the game. At the end of the fifth turn, "Hell Driver" Hans, by force of habit, went up the driveway of Neville, and before he could make the turn or stop, he had enlarged Judd's main entrance. One down, three to go.

Back on the track, another tragedy was about to occur. A black and white Plymouth was slowly and cautiously entering the main track from the drive beside the SCA building as "Joom" was reaching top speed after the fourth turn. He tried to stop but it was no use; over the curb he went, crashing into the SCA building. After the crash, a crumble; saved—one wreckingbill. Two down, two to go.

Des had just passed the Science building and was moving at full speed toward the library. At that same moment, out of the library door came the Col. U. S. A. Ret. He burst unhesitatingly through the crowd onto the street; he got there with Des a yard away. When he was retrieved from the tallest oak, R.I.P. was approriately added. Des was disqualified; rules were that you just couldn't hit the spectators. Three down, one to go.

"Juke It" had only to make the last lap to win, but in the first turn one of the local tree pruners inadvertantly dropped a leafy branch across his windshiled. He cleared the curb and bounced four times, shearing off Edward's boxwood. It was all over, not even a winner. Don't suppose it'll be an annual affair.

Profit is Good Not Raising Hogs

A farmer had just received a check for $1,000 from the Department of Agriculture for not raising hogs and this gave the farmers' neighbor an idea. He, too, decided to go into this not raising hogs business and in order to get more information he wrote a letter to the Department of Agriculture. This is an excerpt from his letter:

"Two things I want to know. What is the best kind of farm not to raise hogs on? What is the best kind of hog not to raise? I'd rather not raise razorbacks, but if this is not a good kind not to raise then I will not raise Poland Chinas or Berkshires. How do I keep track of how many hogs I'm not going to raise?

"My neighbor got $1,000 for not raising hogs. If I can get $1,000 for not raising 50 hogs, then I will get $2,000 for not raising 100 hogs. I will not raise 4,000 hogs to start with, which means I have $80,000 to start with. He tells me you also pay farmers for not raising corn. These hogs I'll not raise will not eat 109,000 bushels of corn. Do you pay me for not raising 100,000 bushels of corn not to feed hogs I'm not raising? If you don't have to have a farm not to raise these hogs and corn on, put me down for 4,000 hogs and around 100,000 bushels of corn and send check.

"Please answer soon, as business is very slow and this would be a good time of year for not raising hogs and corn."

Movie Review . . .

'Young Lions' Mixes Love, Courage, War

The Young Lions, one of this year's best movies, should bring actor Marlon Brando another Oscar nomination. Brando with his blond hair portrays an important young German officer. He is thoroughly integrated into his part, perusingly mumbling with a German accent...

Teamed with Brando are Montgomery Clift and Hope Lange, both previous Oscar nominees, and Dean Martin. A contrast is evident between the realistic overt style of Clift and the equally realistic philosophically retiring style of Brando. Dean Martin gloats across the screen in his usual haughty manner and Hope Lange adds sugar to the mixture.

Pre-war Germany is shown in unpropagandized fashion, and a slight character study is made of the various types of men that are about to be thrown into the international struggle. The same is done for the U. S., and throughout the picture there are switches from the U. S. to Germany and that comparison is available.

Brando, the German, and Clift, the American, have one thing in common: both go to war because their country is fighting; neither have questioned enough to have personal reasons. Martin is the only one of the three who realizes what war really is and he doesn't care to be in it. As the movie progresses there is also a comparison of character, perjudices, loves, suffering, and courage.

To keep the cinema from becoming a dull psychological encyclopedia, a story is inserted which boy meets girl, boy spats with girl, boy makes up with girl (in Brando's case, he makes girl), and boy and girl live happily ever after. (Brando and his girl die happily ever after, since they are the enemy).

Tennis Campaign Nears Climax

ALMOST, BUT NO ENOUGH

Now near the climax of another tennis campaign, we look back through the books and see the Hose were disappointing as far as the preseason predictions read. Nothing can be taken away form this spirited bunch of competitors as they fought the toughest in the country on occasions and lacked only a particle of pulling several upsets.

Miami coach Dale Lewis boasted in an interview to the Charlotte Observer last week that "the reason the Hurricanes have done so well in his rebuilding year is the fact they can play year round tennis down in Florida."

Even if we do have a touch of cold spells for a few months in the year, anyone who witnessed Friday's match with the potent Hurricanes will agree that they can be stopped and possibly it was a scant singles match which prevented the Hose from pulling another upset.

Regardless of the forecast by Lewis, definitely a characteristic of a coach to boast such a statement, but nevertheless a '58 aggregation came up with another fine squad this season after losing heavily via graduation. The Hurricanes definitely met their toughest opposition when facing the Hose netters three times during the season.

Harry Hoffman exhibited before the home crowd that he is capable of performing superbly on a given afternoon. The more experienced and strategic execution style tennis of Allen Quay found this sophomore Philadelphian one of the toughest he's faced the entire season. Coach Leighton nearly caught the Hurricane win by the shuffling of Hoffman to the No. 2 position.

FIELD JINX . . .

Baseball mentor Ehrhardt has had his share of troubles this season, especially with personnel—the use of an adequate home field is another worry. Several of his predecessors thought themselves doing the school a favor by dumping large amounts of clay over the surface of the infield, and thus constricting a first class diamond here at PC.

Through these obstinate efforts, a sufficient quantity of topsoil was never applied to the field and consequently games have been played on terrible field conditions all season.

How can the condition of the diamond receive criticism and the proper care to become a suitable layout if the Hose never play any home games? The field doesn't dry like the tennis courts, but if it wasn't for the huge bulge contained in the infield, drying would be a reality and a majority of the games might be played. To date only half the Presbyterian home games have actually been played.

OLYMPICS NEXT WEEK . . .

The State Track and Field Championships, South Carolina's own "Little Oympics," comence here at Presbyterian College next weekend, May 2 and 3. A record field is anticipated with all schools in the state sending entries. Some of the outstanding performers in the track world have shown their stuff right here at PC, and this year the state boasts several individuals capable of breaking some of these all-time records.

Two previously weak squads, Furman and The Citadel, have improved their squads and should show remarkable increase in their point totals this year.

If there is any extinct or noticeably fast decline in a team, the features claim a spot right in our own back yard. Coach McMillian has had considerable trouble with the team and as a result of sustaining injuries to top personnel, a pair of dual meets were postponed.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Tuesday was the first victory day for PC teams this spring—wins in both baseball and tennis . . . The Presbyterian College golf team is now participating in the state tournament down in Hampton. A third consecutive Little Four Championship is sought by the duffers . . . The intramural track and swimming meets will be held on May 14 and 15, respectively . . . Freshman hurler Alec Dubose pitched a creditable game for the Hose against Lenoir-Rhyne . . . Tony Benson currently leads the PC batters with a 440 average.

Hosemen Trounce Abbey With 13-3 Baseball Victory

By JIM ELLER

The Blue Hose rallied for 15 hits behind the 5-hit pitching of sophomore hurler Bill Dobbins to score a 13-3 victory over Belmont Abbey here Wednesday afternoon.

Dobbins held the Crusaders hitless until the top of the sixth when second sacker Bob Stewart stroked a single. The Abbey nine got their remaining 4 hits, all singles, in the seventh to bring across their three runs. The effective righthander claimed his first victory of the campaign with the help of 13 strikeouts . .

Fifteen Blue Hose hits provided good support for Dobbins' superb pitching. Paul Chastain, Tony Benson, and Dobbins collected three hits apiece. In helping his own cause, Dobbins lined two doubles into right center.

The Hose began the afternoon on the right foot by collecting three runs in the bottom of the first off the Abbey starter Wrenn. Nix led off with a hit to center; Benson, Chastain, and Bill Sease followed with consecutive singles, which along with a Crusader error, brought in three runs.

The home squad scored again in the fourth when first sacker Leahy walked to start off the inning, stole second and came home on Dobbins' single.

In the sixth, Jim Newsome reached first on an error, Bill Dobbins doubled and Ray Hodge brought them in with a line drive single to right field. The Blue Hose went on to score three runs on three hits in the seventh and four runs on two hits in the eighth.

The Hose made three errors in gaining the victory, while Belmont Abbey bobbled only two. Only one PC error was costly and enabled the Crusaders to score a single tally in the seventh.

PC 4—Lenoir-Rhyne 8

The Blue Hose pushed across two runs in their half of the tenth, but consequently the effort fell short and resulted in an 8-4 loss at the hands of Lenoir-Rhyne. This was the second loss of the season to the North Carolina team.

Alec Dubose pitched creditable ball for nine innings and gave up a scant five hits before the Bears got to him for six runs in the tenth. A homer by Bill Sease in the seventh locked the game at 2-2 till the hectic extra frame.

Outfielder Ed Jackson captured batting honors as he came out of a lengthy slump with three of the Hose hits.

Sports Quiz

The Blue Stocking Sports Quiz last week was a complete stumper and will be worth two passes for correct answers this week to the Broadway Theater. Last week's answers: Chicago Cubs, Joe McCarthy; Tinker, Evers, Chance.

1. William Howard Taft is credited with what baseball first?

2. What major league team scored 17 runs in one inning on June 19, 1953?

3. The "toe-board" is used by broad jumper? javelin thrower? shot putter?

The answers can be turned in to the sports editor in Bailey 215.

PC Netmen Favored to Capture State Tennis Matches Next Week

Blue Hose Aim For 18th Straight Title

Presbyterian College will be the heavy favorite to capture its 18th consecutive state net title in the South Carolina Intercollegiate Championship Tennis Tournament which opens here Tuesday and runs through Thursday

To be held in conjunction with this meet again this year will be the South Carolina Invitational, also limited to college play and open to all players on the state's six teams except Presbyterian.

The College of Charleston is defending champion in the Invitational which was originated four years ago because of the declining interest in recent years in the one championship meet. At that time, Presbyterian had won 15 straight titles, starting back in 1938.

Defending titlist in the Inivational, College of Charleston also boasts the individual champion of the past three years in the person of Jack Fischer. He is seeded first in the Invitational.

Invitational entries find the University of South Carolina, Furman,

PC's GUICE POTTER

Citadel, and the College of Charleston.

Favored Presbyterian has seven entries in the Championship tournament, to which it is restricted. Top players of the other teams, however, may enter both the invitational and championship meets, but the other five teams are limiting their entries, in the latter tournament, to two players each. Seedings for this meet give the top spots to Blue Hose players. John Brownlow, Guice Potter, Jim Shakespeare, Harry Hoffman, and Jim Peck comprise the top seedings.

Brownlow, who is captain of the Hose this year and is nationally ranked, should be expected to successfully defend his second straight state singles crown this spring. His winning double partner, Harry Hoffman, is back.

Play opens in the Invitational at 10 a. m., Tuesday; in the Championship, at 1:00 p. m. The action is scheduled to continue through next Thursday, with the singles and doubles winners in each meet determined on the final afternoon.

Tennis Team Trims Powerful Harvard

The Presbyterian College netmen fell short after coming so close to breaking nationally ranked Miami's highly touted win streak last week, but turned the tables on powerful Harvard 5-4, which is one of the strongest teams from the east.

Jim Peck pulled the victory out for the Hose with his win over Allen Goldman in three sets. The No. 5 racquet wielder for PC needed three hours to turn back Goldman 9-7, 3-6, 6-4, and thus enable the Hose to break even in singles.

Guice Potter and Jim Shakespeare rallied in the second set to turn back Harvard's Fred Vinton and Tim Gallway, 6-4, 7-5.

Presbyterian will also meet Yale in New Haven and Princeton in Action is fast and furious in Intramural volleyball as the above picture indicates.

Week Sees Torrid Action With Intramural Softball

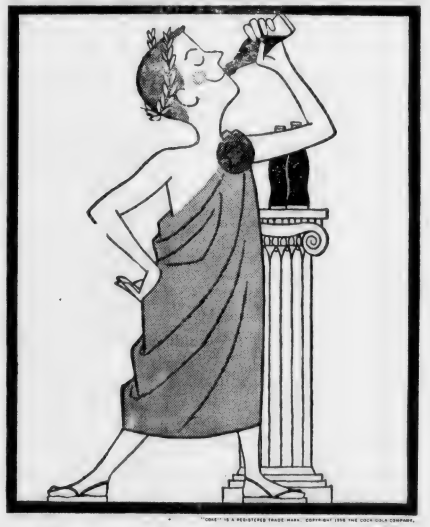
The intramural softball league began a torrid second week Monday as action saw both PiKa's and Alpha Sig's registering wins.

Ken Caswell twirled the most creditable pitching performance thus far with a one-hit 12-1 stunt over a spoiled his bid with a single in the third.

Alpha Sigma Phi put together nine base on balls and a scant three hits to measure the Dodgers, 11-8, in the other game of Monday's action. Charles Watts blasted a three-run homer for hitting honors.

Wednesday's action saw a defending champion aggregation of the Stones continue their winning pace with Guy Blakely setting the Sigma Nu's down 9-1. The champs got to Sig hurler Ken Fleisher for five hits and used a like number of walks in a seven-run first game. The victory gives the Stones a 2-0 record.

In the other game Mike Brown scattered fice Theta Chi hits to give the Alpha Sig's their second victroy of the season, 10-5.



Kappa Alpha's Jimmy Hentz drove across Paul Arrington in the bottom half of the 12th to nip the Pika's, 18-17.

Art Blackwelder knotted the contest at 17-all with a long homer and thus set the stage for the winning marker.

Pi Kappa Phi blasted the Dodgers in the opener to a 11-3 count. This win places them in a three-way tie with KA and tones for first; all at 2-0.

"COKE" IS A REGISTERED TRADE MARK. "COPYRIGHT 1958 THE COCA-COLA COMPANY."

Anachronism?

Not really. 'Cause if Coke had been around in Caesar's day, Caesar would have treated himself to the sparkling good taste, the welcome lift of Coke! Caesar's motto—"I came, I saw, I conquered." Pretty good motto for Coke too—the prime favorite in over 100 countries today!

Choir Recording Accorded With Enthusiastic Reception

The latest long play recording made by the Presbyterian College Choir is being accorded enthusiastic reception by those hearing the rendering.

The recording, made by the Choir under the direction of Dr. Edouard Patte, and recorded by RCA-Victor Custom Records Division, has only recently been released for sale through the college administration and the college book store.

Even in this short time many letters have been received by the college and director with flattering comments on the record. "A beautiful piece of work"; "The quality of the highest standards"; "The and the manufacturer—seem to be of the hgihest standards"; "The music is splendid indeed"; "a message of beauty and inspiration"; "The recording is one of the best that we have heard." These are excerpts from only a few of the many letters received by the college concerning the recording.

This, the fourth recording made by the choir in the past several years, is composed of thirteen numbers. Of these, six are spirituals, the most popular music done by the choir, and one number in particular, "He's Got the Whole World in His Hand," has been accorded much praise by those hearing the choir and the record. The other spirituals include "Go Tell It on the Mountain"; "There is a Balm in Gilliad"; "Steal Away to Jesus"; "Every Time I Feel the Spirit"; and "Ain't That Good News."

In addition to the spirituals, the recording includes a number of representative chorals, anthems, and motets. "With Heart Uplifted," Pastores Ait," "3EO God Our Help "Psalm LXVIII," "Angelus ad in Ages Rast," "Rejoice Ye Christians," "Sing To God O My Soul," "A Song of Joy," represent sacred interpretations from the 16th Century to the present day.

Election Today Names Student Council Posts

Arrington, Isger, Shakespeare Elected to Senior Positions

With 378 votes cast in today's election, Jim Shakespeare, Paul Arrington, and Ron Isger were elected as the senior representatives for next year. The runoffs for the president and vice-presidnt of the Student Government will be held Wednesday. The candidate receiving the second largest number of votes will become the vice-president.

The voting was evenly distributed among these three top men with Shakespeare slightly ahead. Other cendidates were Neil Bane, Dick Carter, and Don Chapman.

Jack Taylor, Tom Wise, and Reed Clark were the top men in the rising junior class. Jack Taylor pulled in the most votes, therefore he will serve as the secretary and treasurer for the coming year. The other candidates in the race were Frank Richbourg and Will Wallace.

Ron Boston and Marion Lee defeated Tom Collins and Rohe Eshbaugh in the race for sophomore representatives. Boston received 216 votes and Lee gathered in 195.

John Knox, President of the Student Government, urges all students to vote Wednesday for the student body officers.

Scholastic Society Is Chartered at PC

Last Wednesday saw the birth a Sophomore Academic Honor Society with the tapping of four charter members. Those tapped met the qualifications of having been enrolled at PC for at least three semesters, having a grade point ratio of 2.5 or better, and exemplifying evidence of leadership and character.

The men tapped were Ralph Chambers of Chicago, Ill.; Gene Floyd of Clinton; Billy Hagood of Easley; and Jim McGirt of Umatilla, Fla.

The new organization has as its purpose to recognize academic achievement among members of the sophomore class. Chambers has an over-all average of 2.85; Floyd, 2.62; McGirt, 2.59; and Hagood, 2.51.

The founding of the honor society was a project of the Blue Key, and was skilfully done under the guidance of Dr. Newton Jones. It is the hope of the Blue Key that this will lead to a senior organization of similar nature and will eventually result in a Phi Beta Kappa for PC.

Westminster To Install Officers For Next Year

At their annual elections last Sunday evening, the Westminster Fellowship elected its officers for the coming year. Leading the group as president is Glenn Gibson, a rising junior from Reddick, Fla. Serving as vice-president will be Gaye Maddox, a rising sophomore from Spartanburg. The Secretary will be Dorothy Chandler, a rising senior from Olanta; and handling the finances will be Herb Hamnett, a rising sophomore from Hogansville, Ga.

Prof. Baker Re-elected Province Commander

Professor Kenneth N. Baker was reelected Comander of Graves Province of the Kappa Alpha Order at its fourth biennial Council held last week at Presbyterian College.

PC's Beta Pi Chapter of KA played host for the meet at which four South Carolina collegiate chapters were represented. Delegates from Delta Chapter at Wofford were Edward Mitchell and Alvis Bynum. Iota Chapter at Furman was represented by John Bean and William Hart. Rho Chapter at the University of South Carolina was represented by J. V. Dunbar and E. K. Pritchard; and Presbyterian's Beta Pi was represented by Paur Arrington and R. W. Richardson.

Also at the meeting Julian S. Bolick was re-appointed Pronvince Secretary.

Gavalas Takes Helm As New IRC President

In the International Relations Club elections held Wednesday, Tony Gavalis, a rising junior from Augusta, Ga., was chosen to head the IRC next year. Gavalis is also the state IRC chairman, and served as secretary of the PC chapter during this past year.

The new vice-president is Evin Varner, a rising sophomore from Bennettsville. Taking account of the group's minutes will be Jim Monroe, a rising sophomore from Latta; and the treasurer will be Ebby Malfield, a rising junior from Greer.

These officers will be installed and assume their duties on May 6.

At the same meeting, Gavalis was elected to receive the Mendenhall International Relations Citation plaque which is presented each year at graduation to the student who has done the most outstanding work towards a better understanding of International Relations. The plaque presently hangs in the Administration building, and Gavalis' name will be engraved on it. This will be the third name placed on the plaque.

A Reminder!!

Students are reminded of the SCA picnic to be held on Wednesday, May 7, at Camp Fellowship on Lake Greenwood.

Gladiolas to Play . . .

Dances Tonight, Saturday Conclude PC's Social Season

The IFC Bermuda Ball will open tonight at 9:00 P. M. at the Clinton Armory featuring the music of The Gladiolas from Charlotte, N. C. It will precede the State Track Meet tomorrow afternoon and the always popular Masquerade Ball tomorrow night.

The popular Gladiolas are well known throughout the South, having played for numerous dances throughout both the Carolinas. They will present the music for both the Friday and Saturday night dances.

Tonight's dance is of a very informal nature with Bermudas, and spring and summer wear being the fashion for the occasion. The dance will end at 1:00 A. M., after which many fraternities will have parties and get-togethers.

The State Track meet will be held Saturday afternoon with a capacity crowd expected. Teams from all the major South Carolina colleges will compete with the University of South Carolina being favored to cop the first place honors. This is the thirty-first year of this colorful event sponsored by Presbyterian College.

The Masquerade Ball will be held from 8:00 P. M. until 12:00 P. M. on Saturday night at the Armory, and a wide variety of costumes and regalia is expected to be worn.

A prize will be given by the IFC to the couple judged most originally dressed.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Editorials : Features : Humor

Sock Congratulates...

The Blue Stocking sincerely congratulates the outgoing Student Council for the fine way in which student affairs have been managed this year.

To the retiring Student Body President, John Knox, we offer thanks for his representation of the Student Body during his term of office.

We offer congratulations to the incoming Student Council and wish you luck in your venture. The Student Body should be justly proud of the selection of leaders which were wisely made in today's election.

Next week the Student Body will again return to the polls as the three senior representatives vie for the top office on campus, that of Student Body President. We would not say "forget friendships and fraternities in choosing the man for this office" because we know it would be useless. We would say, however, to remember in casting your vote that the person who is elected will be the man upon whose shoulders will fall the most responsibility, and to make your voting decision wisely with that in mind.

A Shoulder Shrug...

(From The Duke Chronicle)

Be casual. That sentence could well be the by-word of the American college student. He worries about what kind of job he'll get when he graduates; he worries about making a C average; he worries about himself. But let the subject of the nation or the world or life in general come up—he can't do anything about it; so he doesn't bother to think. Let other people come to him with a problem—well, it's not his concern. He commits himself to neither principals nor people. He believes in nothing but getting himself through a decently comfortable life; for everything else he has only a shrug of the shoulders.

Historically, the college student has been the leader of his nation. In Hungary the students fought. In Russia the younger generation is the center of attention. But in Hungary and in Russia there stands an ideal for which to fight, a belief for which to live. A helpless uncertainty toward important things leads American students to turn to their immediate situation, accepting the status quo with apparent unconcern.

In keeping with college tradition, we must avoid committing ourselves. Let's just live along in our own little ways. We must be collegiate, be cynical, and above all—be casual.

Letter to the Editor

"Change Only What We Can Improve" Student Says Regarding Rush Syste

Mr. Editor:

Twice recently long editorials have appeared in the Blue Stocking which advocated changing the time of rush season. With the hope of provoking further thought regarding this question in the minds of your readers, I would like to present a few of my ideas for their consideration.

The pros have been stated; I believe the cons to be stronger arguments on the grounds that the benefits afforded by the present system supersede whatever practical value might be found in a rush season at or very near the start of the school year.

The core of my argument is the very purpose for which rush season is now held in the second semester. When a student enters college fresh from high school, he undergoes changes in everything from habits of dress to his attitudes toward his social surroundings. He is meeting not only new people but a new kind of people, whose ways he soon adopts. It is mainly after he adjusts to college and all that it means that he begins to fit himself in, to choose his tastes, his ways, his social likes and dislikes.

By seeing people here in their everyday surroundings, by going places and doing things, he chooses his crowd and is chosen. After seeing and trying, he settles into attitudes and ways that change but little except by maturing for the rest of his college life.

Tastes are a curious part of human nature. If a person is asked whether he likes blue better than red, for illustration, he does not consider one color better than another; he selects the one that suits him personally. Fraternities are like this. The important factor is knowing what each of them is like. Then, as far as the rushee is concerned, his taste makes the choice.

From the standpoint of the fraternity toward the rushee, too, a person is judged after he becomes settled in his ways. Anyone may shine for a short while; on the other hand some people are liked only after one becomes well acquainted with them.

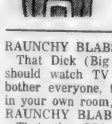
The significance and character of fraternities on this campus both depend and testify to the strength of good matching of rushee to fraternity. The fraternity, more than anything else on this campus, makes up the social life of the college.

As for the character of fraternities here, no one can deny the members of every fraternity bound together in the closest sort of brotherhood—a brotherhood that stems from common tastes and simply a common liking for each other among all men, however varied the brothers be in position on campus.

It is true that there are disadvantages to the present system, blamed for the intense rivalry among the fraternities. This is so much the result of rushing as is of the closeness of the men of each fraternity. Rivalry is bad if it is overdone. Otherwise it is a boost to the spirit of the campus.

Who can say that changing the time of rush season will eliminate or lessen the disadvantages? The problems would certainly increase. For example, rushing would be intensified with nothing else to which to sell the rushee. The fraternity would vie with each other for elaborate attraction—and probably resent the sneaky tactics of the others.

Brotherhood would suffer as some found out that things are not what they seemed during rush season, and as some pledges were not all what they would be with better selection.



Good selection on the part of the fraternity and rushee is the key to good fraternities, and rushing is not good selection, especially when alone is the grounds for joining.

Concerning the practical side, when to have rush season, there are few convenient times to have it. The first of the year would ruin the season. At other times there are weeks of tests, special events. This year rush season definitely arrived at an awkward time for some of us. It seemed as though all the professors had tests that week. My personal opinion, only two times are really suitable: the week before Christmas, and the first or second week of second semester. The latter is just about the least cluttered with studies of any time of the year.

As for the long period when rushees are played up to, there is certain rules to cover dirty rushing. The over-friendliness that stems from rushing but cannot be called dirty rushing is easily recognized for what it is and is therefore a most a negligible point, except for the bother to the studious rush.

With the present system, fraternity has an unfair advantage

Hear Ye, Hear Ye! Proverbial Proverbs

By SAINT JOHN SUMMERS

These proverbs that drift around are enough to make the average person thoroughly sick. Everything in the world has some highly moral proverb that supposedly is the answer to any and all problems that may arise.

Here are a few, for examples:

Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise. Why? A guy goes to bed early, misses social relationships that could go to benefit his business and really make him wealthy. Early to rise—He climbs out of bed at some ungodly hour, freezes to death, stumbles around the room in the dark, breaks his neck, and all this is really helping his health, unless he was dead before he started!

Naturally, the jerk works all day, comes home, and instead of reading or studying he sacks out. His IQ is growing by leaps and bounds from this mental void, so this must be the formula for wisdom. It should, therefore, read like this: Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man sickly, poverty stricken, and despised.

People in glass houses shouldn't throw stones. The author of this just blackballed criticism to keep the flies off his own neck. Who ever lives in a silly glass house is a simp anyway, so just forget the whole darn thing.

Do unto others as you would have them do unto you; only do it first!

There's no place like home! There sure isn't. Thank goodness.

You can't make a silk purse of a sow's ear. I've yet to meet anyone who even wanted a silk sow's ear purse. They're out of style, anyway.

You can't get blood out of a turnip. No, I guess not, and you also can't get fertilizer from a rock, but who cares. When you get a transfusion, are you supposed to check and see if it says turnip on the bottle?

Don't put your foot in your mouth. Don't sweat it. If your feet are like mine, it'll be easy to live up to this one.

Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow you may die. (You won't die)

Where there's smoke there's fire. Rot! Have you ever seen Glover?

A penny saved is a penny earned. In the first place who wants to earn a penny, when a dollar won't even buy you a handkerchief to blow your nose on.

Out of the mouths of babes, oft times comes gems. Right Babe!!

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. No comment!

All's well that ends well. That's wrong, too; just look at this mess.

HAVE A WORD

By DICK WOOD

PI KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting Tuesday night final plans were made for the coming weekend. It was announced to the brothers that a party will be held from 2:00 until 6:00 a. m., Saturday morning at the American Legion hut with the Hearts furnishing the music. Arrangements are also being made for the spring Stag Supper to be held either the 16th or 17th of May.

Finals for the fraternity ping-pong championship are underway and should be completed within a week.

Brother of the Week is Butch Woodward on his forthcoming marriage which will take place in June.

SIGMA NU

The brothers and pledges of Zeta Chapter met Tuesday night and discussed the house party to be held at Cherry Grove Beach the first week in June. Final plans were also discussed for the coming weekend, which include a breakfast at the Mary Musgrove Hotel following the dance Saturday night. Everyone is invited to the breakfast, the only qualification being an appetite and fifty cents a head.

THETA CHI

At the regular meeting of Beta Psi plans were made for parties during the coming dance weekend, and "the Shipwreck Ball weekend."

Brothers O'Neil Crocker and Toby Hunter were elected to represent Beta at the annual Spring Conclave to be held at Myrtle Beach. Brother Crocker was also elected to represent the chapter at the National Convention to be held at Atlanta.

Darkhorses Mark Colorful 31st

Goodroe, Lathem, Coates . . . all are big name stars who will assemble on the Presbyterian College track for the 1958 State Meet. Yet, from out of the pack each year the darkhorses spring to challenge the top favorites. This burning competition makes the occasion the colorful spectacle it is, as each performer bears down for individual and team glory and in the race against record holders of the past.

The average sports enthusiast claims his favorite trackman. Several of the most colorful performers are found behind the list of title holders—men who never excel their top stride in the state meet where records are actually formed.

Back in '33 Presbyterian held particular pride in a relay team composed of Osman, Graham, Clark, and Wood which completely outshone the field and also grabbed a second in the Penn Relays. University fans recall the accelerated McIver Riley of Allendale, who raced 100 yards in 9.5 against North Carolina State—fastest century mark ever posted in the state—yet failed to establish such a phenomenal time in the all-important test even though he won all his dashes during the course of the season.

Such a list stretches as the years go by.

Don Goodroe of Carolina, plays the favorite's role to dominate the hurdles, despite the fact that this is by far the most unpredictable race among the entire fifteen. Too many things can happen—bad start, hitting a hurdle, losing proper stride.

Such a title of dark horse could never have been given to anyone more deserving than to Wyatt Aiken. This versatile senior trackman displayed in early season meets that he was out to best the best in this, the May Classic. Unfortunately, after racking highly in a trio of dual meets, Wyatt underwent an operation and hasn't streamed a hurdle, high jumped or shown activity in over a month. A lanky Gamecock looms the pre-meet pick in his specialty, but the rested Hoseman, marked sheer determination, will attempt to foil the oddsmakers.

A fleet of South Carolina thinclads will toe the mark for the starting gun tomorrow, and all indications point towards the fuzz on the string catching the difference. Then as each winner is declared, he and those who place are acclaimed by the victory ceremony—receiving their medals on the victory stand amid a blare of trumpets.

This 31st annual state meet holds a special distinction for its favorites . . . watch the dark horses to prove themselves.

"OLD-TIME MENTORS"

Three coaches stand out above the field in any consideration of South Carolina track circles. Coach Lonnie McMillian of PC, boasts the longest tenure of service, having directed his squad through every state meet since the 1925 opener. "Lonnie Mac" credits with his long devoted service a total of five championships.

Clemson's former coach, Rock Norman, had been around almost as long as McMillian, and he won for the Cow College more track titles than any other coach in the state. The third coach is Weems Baskin, star Olympic performer himself while active on the cinders and now coaches the Carolina trackmen.

Presbyterian Coach McMillian, a man shrewd in his estimates after many years as a Blue Hose mentor, predicts a close meet as both Furman and Citadel have improved their cinder squads to make for strong opposition this year. These squads should push both Carolina and Clemson, which comprise the supposedly championship flight in the gala spectacle.

Fans can expect to see another thrill-packed sports drama in which the championship rides on the race horses of each school.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Fred Alderman of Atlanta, former Michigan State Univerity Olympic runner, wil be back again as starter and referee for the state meet . . . Clemson coach Banks McFadden still holds records in the 220-yard low hurdles and broad jump which he established in 1940. Don Goodroe broke the other record last year in the 120-yard high hurdles.

State Meet to be Held Here Today and Saturday

Carolina and Clemson Favored To Cop Honors in Annual Affair

By BUDDY MULLIS

State records stand in the danger of falling in the Thirty-first South Carolina Intercollegiate Track and Field Meet here at Presbyterian College this week-end. As track specialists prime themselves for the big show, the meet begins to take on added prospect of faster times and longer jumps than fans have seen in many years.

The South Carolina "little olympics" capture the spotlight of the entire spring season with the staging here in Clinton each year. More than a hundred athletes from six schools make their bid for team and individual glory in the two days of intense competition.

Opening day trials give a preview of the field and send the fastest and strongest forward to the championships on Saturday. The freshman meet will pull the lid off the 1958 spectacle today in a one-day affair.

The University of South Carolina produced three individual champions last year, good enough for 42½ points and second place, but boast these same men plus other outstanding performers and loom the meet favorite. This role is carried by the Gamecocks as they defeated Clemson a week ago, 69-62. They must place, however, finalists in several events to build up enough points to offset the other five teams.

Clemson, the defending champion, returns with a well-balanced squad capable to capure honors for the second consecutive year.

Ten of last year's winners in the fifteen events are back to defend their individual titles with six of these having shown they can better existing state records.

Don Goodroe, the lanky hurdler from South Carolina, has proven himself in meets this year that he can break his own 14.4 time in the 120-yard high hurdles. Just last year at the '57 state meet he knocked two-tenths off a Banks McFadden established record of 1940.

Another Gamecock, who answers to the call of Bill Lathem, could easily demonstrate the role of a real champion this year. The distance runner was clocked at 4:19 and 9:46 in the mile and two mile, respectively. Newman of Clemson, kicked a 4:26.7 mile to set a record last year, and The Citadel's Morton established a marathon 10:4 minute two-mile way back in 1938. Such a torrid pace on the cinders tomorrow would find no match for the outstanding runner.

Carolina's Dave Coates and Buddy Mayfield are two other performers who could have a good day and thus break a standing record for the meet.

Coates threw the shot 54 feet, 2¾ inches to set a new ACC indoor record in March, and far superior than a 19-year-old record of 48 feet, 1⅝ inches set by Curly Lambeth of Newberry in 1939.

Clemson boasts a pair of potential record breakers in Dunkelburg and Snyder. Snyder's heave of 214 feet, 4 inches in the javelin endanges the 1956 Dick Bartulski record of 213 feet, 8½ inches, and Dunkelburg's time of 48.5 in the 440 against Carolina last week would be good enough for a tie.

Furman brings over a more well-balanced squad this year and should increase the point total of 19 scored a year ago in the meet. Walter Bull, Marvin Starr, Juan Brown, and John Boudoucies should figure highly for the Purple Hurricanes. Brown will be defending his crown in the 880-yard run.

The host Blue Hose produced four individual champions last year and return this year with only broad jumper Curtis Lindner to defend his crown. Presbyterian last won the meet in 1952 and it will definitely be a few more years before the Hose will capture honors again.

The Hose should offer some strength in the freshman division, with Dick Shawn in the dashes and hurdles, Ed Browder in the shot put, Richard Elmore dashes, and William McLeod participating in the high jump and 440-yard dash.

Stones, KA Still Undefeated; Alpha Sigs Also Vie for Lead

Two unbeaten teams remained in the hotly contested intramural league at the end of the third week. Both the Stones and KA's share the position with only a single win separating the pair.

Alpha Sigma Phi continues to win at a torrid pace, triumphing in their last four outings. A three-run outburst in the seventh was needed to defeat the Pika's, 6-5, in the first game of the week.

The Sigma Nu's took a quick 7-0 lead, but the Alpha Sig's struck late with a rally to take the game at a 12-9 count.

The Pika's stunned a previously undefeated Pi Kappa Phi nine yesterday, 10-5. In other games this week, the powerful Kappa Alpha's rolled to impressive wins over Theta Chi and Dodgers.

Shandings:

Carolina Stars

Blue Hose Win Two In Ivy League Tour

The Blue Hose netmen closed out the 1958 campaign on the road with wins over Harvard and Princeton with 5-4, 6-3 scores. On the Ivy League tour, the netters suffered a lone defeat at the hands of a strong Yale team, 5-4.

Hose co-captain Guice Potter stood out with his remarkable pace of remaining undefeated throughout the tough three matches in both singles and doubles. His partner was Jim Shakespeare. Jim Peck pulled the 5-4 trim over Harvard with his victory in a lengthy singles match which lasted three hours.

John Brownlow, faced several of the best No. 1 competitors in collegiate tennis today. He defeated both Junta and Farrin of Harvard and Princeton. Against Yale, he bowed in his only loss on the tour to 23rd nationall ranked Don Dell in three sets. Dell has defeated famed Cooper during the course of the year.

Blue Hose Trip Newberry With 8 - 7 Baseball Victory

By "DON HYDE"

Presbyterian College behind the seven-hit pitching of George Akins defeated Newberry College 8 to 7. Four hits by second baseman Tony Benson and alert base running by Paul Chastain proved to be the deciding factor for Coach Ehrhardt's third win of the season.

After Newberry nicked Akins for two runs in the first inning, the Blue Hose in their half tied the score as Tony Benson hit a homer into the left corner scoring Bob Matthews ahead of him. Benson put the Blue Hose ahead by one run in the third inning with his second homer, a line drive to deep center, but this lead was short lived as the Indians scored three times in the sixth and once in the ninth inning.

With Presbyterian behind by two runs in the ninth, pitcher George Akins started the winning rally by drawing a base on balls and advanced to third on a double by Ray Hodge. After Benson delivered his fourth hit scoring Hodge, shortstop Chastain was purposely passed to fill the bases, and third baseman Sease grounded to deep short with Hodge scoring easily.

Chastain was forced at second base on the play, but it was his vicious slide which upended the Newberry second baseman eliminating the possibility of a double play and allowing Tony Benson to score the winning run.

Hitting stars for Presbyterian were Bill Sease with two singles and Ray Hodge with a double and single. Akins picked up his third victory of the year as catcher Jack Catoe was the only Indian to get two hits.

PC 7-GTC 12

Presbyterian suffered their sixth defeat of the year at the hands of a strong Georgia Teachers College team by the score of 12 to 7. The Blue Hose started off strong in the first inning as they scored five runs. This big rally was highlighted by a grand slam homer by Tony Benson. Georgia Teachers came back strong in their half of the first and scored four runs which started a wild and wooly game.

This four-run outburst by the Teachers led to the downfall of Presbyterian pitcher Bill Dobbins. Due to the shortage in the Blue Hose pitchnig staff, first baseman Ted Leahy had to pitch the rest of the game.

Presbyterian played a fine game against a strong Georgia Teachers club, who has met such powerful teams as Rollins and Ohio State University.

PC Sociology Class Visits Greenville County Camp

By BOB RICHARDSON

The Juvenile Delinquency Class recently visited the Greenville County Rehabilitation camp for Juvenile Delinquents. The camp, only one of its type in South Carolina, and one of the few throughout the South, was founded in 1953 by its present superintendent, Mr. Ellis McDougald, well known Criminologist. The institution is designed to segregate first offenders from those of a more serious nature and at the same time to help in the development of both their vocational and mental aptitudes, thus preparing them to assume a responsible place in society

All first offenders between the ages of 16 and 25 sentenced in Greenville County are referred to the Rehabilitation Camp. If after a two-week period of observation and testing by the qualified personnel, and it is believed that the offender may be helped, he is allowed to serve his time here rather than in the State Penitentiary.

It is unlike any other prison in that each offender is given personal attention and guidance and the maximum freedom that any prisoner could expect.

The institution is operated more like a model community than a prison. There are no bars, walls, guards or other prison-like features. The inmates are strictly on their honor. Also, they are self-governed and elect two mayors (one representing the white, and one representing the colored) who act as negotiators between the inmates and the administrator.

The institution is self-supporting and in the long run, proves to be an asset to the county. Each inmate is assigned regular work in some phase of the camp's operation. All concrete pipe for Greenville County is made here. Also inmates service and maintain county-owned equipment as well as raising all food for the camp.

They are allowed leisure time which they may use as they wish. Many work on projects in woodwork, art, crafts, and music, while some spend this time in the chapel or library. Much time is devoted to physical education in which all are required to participate. It is hoped that in the near future facilities for instruction in high school courses will become available thus enabling many to secure their diplomas.

The Sociology students agreed that the trip was very informative and enlightening, giving them a new outlook on modern penal systems.

They are joined according to what the individual sees in them—not just what they show him—and what the individual likes in what he sees. Why intensely rush to the point of a rush race? Let us instead keep our fraternities at high standards of brotherhood, activities, and excelence, and limit rushing to making ourselves known to the rushee. Let us change only what we can improve.

Blue Sock Rated All-American for Twelfth Time by ACP

The Blue Stocking, under the editorship of Lyman Harris of Birmingham, Ala., has been rated All-American for first semester 1957-58 by critics of the Associated Collegiate press, recognized as the best judge of collegiate journalism today. Last semester rating marks the twelfth time the student publication has been awarded the ACP's highest stamp of approval.

Having originated in January of 1920, with the now Rev. Carl W. McMurray as founder, The Blue Stocking first received All-American honors during the first semester of 1941 under the editorship of Charles McDonald. The All-American Pacemaker rating was awarded the staff of '41 for having one of the ten best newspapers in the nation regardless of size. The second semester of that same year also copped honors.

All-American fame came again in 1942, with Ben Hay Hammet, now public relations director of the college, as Editor. During the second semester, the weekly newspaper received the distinction of being rated one of the best seven collegiate newspapers in the nation, regardless of size, and again awarded the All-American Pacemaker.

Last semester's All-American Award is the first that the Blue Stocking has received since the first semester of 1955-56, when the paper, under the editorship of Richard Oliver, received the ACP's highest rating.

The criticism was divided into three general departments as follows: coverage, content, and physical properties. In the first division the Sock received 770 points; the second 1500 points; and the third 1250 points. Altogether the paper garnered 3520 points. The total needed for the top rating was 3500.

Out of a possible 23 superior ratings in regard to the different aspects of publication, the newspaper received the following six: Creativeness, Story Leads, Features, Editorial Page Features, Sports Coverage, and Editorial Page Makeup.

The Blue Stocking was entered in the 750-minus class for the judging. All papers in this class were judged by Duane Andrews, public relations staff of Minneapolis Honeywell, and formerly on the staff of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune. He particularly praised the publication for its feature material, saying that "your staff excels at features."

Since the Blue Stocking beginning many of the past editors and their staffs have made journalism their profession. Jake Penland of The State newspaper, Columbia, was sports editor for The Blue Stocking for three years.

Members of the staff at the time of judging were as follows: Lyman Harris of Birmingham, Ala., editor; Roger Godwin of College Park, Ga., managing editor; Ronald Bartlett of Atlanta, Ga., business manager; Mike Andrews of Charlotte, N. C., news editor; Bill Yearick of Miami, Fla., sports editor; John Summers of Charlotte, N. C., feature editor; and Joe Hardin of Greenwood, fraternity editor.

News staff was composed of Paul Arrington, Charlotte, N. C.; Britt Spann, McRae, Ga.; Jim Eason, Clinton; and Sonny Embry, Birmingham, Ala.

Sports staff included Roy Fowler, Spartanburg; Buddy Mullis, Jacksonville, Fla; Tom Spratt, Fredericksburg, Va.; Reed Clark, Winston-Salem, N. C.; and Willie Turner, Winnsboro.

The feature staff was Tom Golden, Fayetteville, N. C.; Ed Minus, Greer; and Jim Monroe, Latta. Circulation staff was Bryan Carr and Gene McKethan, both of Fayetteville, N. C. Staff photographer was Alan McKie of Alexandria, Va.

Ben Hay Hammet, director of public relations and alumni affairs, was adviser for the award-winning editions.

The Honor Rating certificate will be sent as soon as it can be printed and lettered, probably some time this month

Paul Arrington Wins Election To Student Body President Post

• Isger Claims Second Position

Prince to Direct IFC for Next Year

On the eighth ballot cast, Bruce Prince, a rising senior from Union, was elected to head the Inter-Fraternity Council next year. The vice-president for the coming year will be Joe Hardin, a rising junior from Greenwood. Handling the minutes and finances will be O'Neil Crocker, a rising senior also from Union.

Prince is a brother of Theta Chi fraternity; Hardin, Sigma Nu; and Crocker, Pi Kappa Phi

In addition to holding office in his fraternity, Prince is vice-president of Tau Phi Pi, a member of the Student Council and past Battalion Sergeant-Major. He is also a consistent member of the Dean's List, and was recently named for membership in Blue Key.

Paul Arrington, a rising senior from Charlotte, N. C., swept the election this week, to become the new Student Body president. Ronald Isger, also a rising senior from Clairton, Pa., copped the second largest number of votes, placing him in the vice-president's seat.

With 355 votes cast in the election, Arrington claimed 183 to his favor in gaining the coveted position. Isger's 138 gave him the second position, and Shakespeare received the remaining 72. This completed the slate of officers for the new Student Council, since the secretary-treasurer's job went to Jack Jacks, the Junior member who received the largest number of votes in last week's primary election.

Arrington, an active leader on campus, is well qualified to represent the student body, having a variety of interests that well crosssections the campus. He is president of three organizations Kappa Alpha fraternity, the Solons, and the Charlotte PC Club. He is a member of the track team. Feature Editor of the Blue Stocking, and is serving his second term on the SCA cabinet. He is also a member of Blue Key National Honorary Fraternity.

In an interview today, Arrington [illegible] sincerest thanks to the members of the student body for the confidence placed in me as a candidate for Student Body President. The [illegible] of the responsibilities and duties connected with this office are clearly evident in my mind, and I will, with the help of the other Student Council members, [illegible] appreciation for the students' selection of the excellent student council members with whom I will be working. I hope that, together, we will be able to do as satisfactory a [illegible] as the undersigned [illegible] will [illegible] on three years

PC Alpha Sigs Help Install Chapter at Atlantic Christian

Alpha Psi Chapter of Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity participated last weekend in the formal initiation and installation of a new chapter, Gamma Lambda, at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson, N. C.

A five-man initiation team composed of Charles Watts, Sonny Embry, Roscoe Lindsay, Tom Prewett, and Jim Monroe, was sent to the three-day ceremonies, and performed a large part of the fraternity's ritual installation. Present also were Ralph Burns, Executive Secretary; Jess Green, field representative; and Chuck Aucery, Grand Senior President of Alpha Sigma Phi. After the initiation, which lasted from 8:30 a. m. to 5:00 p. m. on Saturday, a formal banquet was held at which time the new members received their shingles, the charter was presented, and a dazzling array of gifts from chapters in the area was unveiled.

A formal dance completed the day's activities, and a sermon presented by the past Grand Senior President in the pulpit of the First Chrustian Church marked the end of the installation.

This was the third fraternity to go national in the last two weeks on the ACC campus. The Alpha Sig Chapter was formerly a local fraternity, Sigma Alpha.

Rock 'n' Roll...

The Gladiolas will supply music for the final dances of the year tonight and tomorrow night in the Clinton Armory.

PC Sociology Class Visits Greenville County Camp

By BOB RICHARDSON

The Juvenile Delinquency Class recently visited the Greenville County Rehabilitation camp for Juvenile Delinquents. The camp, only one of its type in South Carolina, and one of the few throughout the South, was founded in 1953 by its present superintendent, Mr. Ellis McDougald, well known Criminologist. The institution is designed to segregate first offenders from those of a more serious nature and at the same time to help in the development of both their vocational and mental aptitudes, thus preparing them to assume a responsible place in society

All first offenders between the ages of 16 and 25 sentenced in Greenville County are referred to the Rehabilitation Camp. If after a two-week period of observation and testing by the qualified personnel, and it is believed that the offender may be helped, he is allowed to serve his time here rather than in the State Penitentiary.

It is unlike any other prison in that each offender is given personal attention and guidance and the maximum freedom that any prisoner could expect.

The institution is operated more like a model community than a prison. There are no bars, walls, guards or other prison-like features. The inmates are strictly on their honor. Also, they are self-governed and elect two mayors (one representing the white, and one representing the colored) who act as negotiators between the inmates and the administrator.

The institution is self-supporting and in the long run, proves to be an asset to the county. Each inmate is assigned regular work in some phase of the camp's operation. All concrete pipe for Greenville County is made here. Also inmates service and maintain county-owned equipment as well as raising all food for the camp.

They are allowed leisure time which they may use as they wish. Many work on projects in woodwork, art, crafts, and music, while some spend this time in the chapel or library. Much time is devoted to physical education in which all are required to participate. It is hoped that in the near future facilities for instruction in high school courses will become available thus enabling many to secure their diplomas.

The Sociology students agreed that the trip was very informative and enlightening, giving them a new outlook on modern penal systems.

Letter To The Editor

They are joined according to what the individual sees in them—not just what they show him—and what the individual likes in what he sees. Why intensely rush to the point of a rush race? Let us instead keep our fraternities at high standards of brotherhood, activities, and excelence, and limit rushing to making ourselves known to the rushee. Let us change only what we can improve.

Blue Sock Rated All-American for Twelfth Time by ACP

The Blue Stocking, under the editorship of Lyman Harris of Birmingham, Ala., has been rated All-American for first semester 1957-58 by critics of the Associated Collegiate press, recognized as the best judge of collegiate journalism today. Last semester rating marks the twelfth time the student publication has been awarded the ACP's highest stamp of approval.

Having originated in January of 1920, with the now Rev. Carl W. McMurray as founder, The Blue Stocking first received All-American honors during the first semester of 1941 under the editorship of Charles McDonald. The All-American Pacemaker rating was awarded the staff of '41 for having one of the ten best newspapers in the nation regardless of size. The second semester of that same year also copped honors.

All-American fame came again in 1942, with Ben Hay Hammet, now public relations director of the college, as Editor. During the second semester, the weekly newspaper received the distinction of being rated one of the best seven collegiate newspapers in the nation, regardless of size, and again awarded the All-American Pacemaker.

Last semester's All-American Award is the first that the Blue Stocking has received since the first semester of 1955-56, when the paper, under the editorship of Richard Oliver, received the ACP's highest rating.

The criticism was divided into three general departments as follows: coverage, content, and physical properties. In the first division the Sock received 770 points; the second 1500 points; and the third 1250 points. Altogether the paper garnered 3520 points. The total needed for the top rating was 3500.

Out of a possible 23 superior ratings in regard to the different aspects of publication, the newspaper received the following six: Creativeness, Story Leads, Features, Editorial Page Features, Sports Coverage, and Editorial Page Makeup.

The Blue Stocking was entered in the 750-minus class for the judging. All papers in this class were judged by Duane Andrews, public relations staff of Minneapolis Honeywell, and formerly on the staff of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune. He particularly praised the publication for its feature material, saying that "your staff excels at features."

Since the Blue Stocking beginning many of the past editors and their staffs have made journalism their profession. Jake Penland of The State newspaper, Columbia, was sports editor for The Blue Stocking for three years.

Members of the staff at the time of judging were as follows: Lyman Harris of Birmingham, Ala., editor; Roger Godwin of College Park, Ga., managing editor; Ronald Bartlett of Atlanta, Ga., business manager; Mike Andrews of Charlotte, N. C., news editor; Bill Yearick of Miami, Fla., sports editor; John Summers of Charlotte, N. C., feature editor; and Joe Hardin of Greenwood, fraternity editor.

News staff was composed of Paul Arrington, Charlotte, N. C.; Britt Spann, McRae, Ga.; Jim Eason, Clinton; and Sonny Embry, Birmingham, Ala.

Sports staff included Roy Fowler, Spartanburg; Buddy Mullis, Jacksonville, Fla; Tom Spratt, Fredericksburg, Va.; Reed Clark, Winston-Salem, N. C.; and Willie Turner, Winnsboro.

The feature staff was Tom Golden, Fayetteville, N. C.; Ed Minus, Greer; and Jim Monroe, Latta. Circulation staff was Bryan Carr and Gene McKethan, both of Fayetteville, N. C. Staff photographer was Alan McKie of Alexandria, Va.

Ben Hay Hammet, director of public relations and alumni affairs, was adviser for the award-winning editions.

The Honor Rating certificate will be sent as soon as it can be printed and lettered, probably some time this month.

The Blue Stocking is printed by The Chronicle Publishing Co., Clinton.

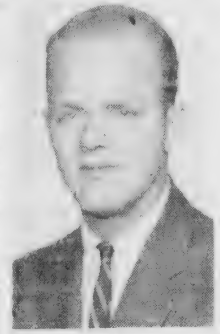
Paul Arrington Wins Election To Student Body President Post

• Isger Claims Second Position



Paul Arrington, a rising senior from Charlotte, N. C., swept the election this week to become the new Student Body president. Ronald Isger, also a rising senior, from Clairton, Pa., copped the second largest number of votes, placing him in the vice-president's seat.

With 395 votes cast in the election, Arrington claimed 184 to his favor in gaining the coveted position. Isger's 138 gave him the second position, and Shakespeare received the remaining 72. This completed the slate of officers for the new Student Council, since the secretary-treasurer's job went to Jack Taylor, the Junior nominee who received the largest number of votes in last week's primary election.

Arrington, an active leader on campus, is well qualified to represent the student body, having a variety of interests that well cross-sections the campus. He is president of three organizations: Kappa Alpha fraternity, the Solons, and the Charlotte-PC Club. He is a member of the track team, Feature Editor of the Blue Stocking, and is serving his second term on the SCA cabinet. He is also a member of Blue Key National Honorary Fraternity.

In an interview today, Arrington stated, "I would like to express my sincerest thanks to the members of the student body for the confidence placed in me as a candidate for Student Body President. The realization of the responsibilities and duties concerned with this office are clearly evident in my mind, and I will, with the help of the other Student Council members, act at all times in the best interests of the students. I also extend my appreciation for the students' selection of the excellent student council members with whom I will be working. I hope that, together, we will be able to do as satisfactory a job as the outgoing council under the fine leadership of John Knox."

Isger, the new vice-president, will serve as Arrington's right hand man, relying on three years of student council experience. Isger, likewise a campus leader, is the retiring secretary-treasurer of the Student Council, a three-year letterman in football, and secretary-treasurer of Tau Phi Pi, and is serving his second tearm as president of his class. Igerı ılo a member of Blue Key National Honorary Fraternity.

Prince to Direct IFC for Next Year

On the eighth ballot cast, Bruce Prince, a rising senior from Union, was elected to head the Inter-Fraternity Council next year. The vice-president for the coming year will be Joe Hardin, a rising junior from Greenwood. Handling the minutes and finances will be O'Neil Crocker, a rising senior also from Union.

Prince is a brother of Theta Chi fraternity; Hardin, Sigma Nu: and Crocker, Pi Kappa Phi.

In addition to holding office in his fraternity, Prince is vice-president of Tau Phi Pi, a member of the Student Council and past Battalion Sergeant-Major. He is also a consistent member of the Dean's List, and was recently tapped for membership in Blue Key.

Sock Posts Dashes...

As the end of the school year draws near, The Blue Stocking editors wish to pause and say

CONGRATULATIONS TO JIM BARKSDALE AND BLUE KEY FRATERNITY for the splendid work they have done in serving the college in the past year, and particularly for being instrumental in organizing the new Sophomore Honor Fraternity. This may well prove to be an academic milestone for our campus toward the ultimate formation of a Phi Beta Kappa Chapter here.

THANKS TO THE ROBED CHOIR for another year of "Sermons in Song" in many churches throughout the South. The Word of God has truly been related in the programs which they have presented.

THAT THE POLIO SEASON IS DRAWING NEAR and remind PC students of the importance of getting the shots in order to be immune from this crippling disease.

LET'S KEEP DORMITORY AND LIBRARY NOISE TO A MINIMUM as exam time is near and this is a particularly important time of year for many students who will be trying to do well on final examinations.

The Whole Thing Was A Game

By PAUL ARRINGTON

Four thousand people around, and I had to see him. I had been running for three months for nothing. He had already seen me; I couldn't hide. I saw him slip his hand into his coat pocket—he motioned; I followed. I walked through the crowd not bothering to look back because I knew he was still there. I reached the street and it was then that I first noticed the black limousine. Its motor roared and it jerked toward me. As it pulled beside me, the rear door opened, and I felt the pressure on my back; I got in—reluctantly. It got me a smack in the back of my head.

When I came to, I found myself on the floor with a foot resting leisurely on my chest. It was hooked onto a leg which was about as trim as an elephant's trunk. If he were trying to show it off, he was doing a good job, but I hope he wasn't expecting any applause. I asked him if he would be so kind as to let me up when the trunk and its attachment caught me in the jaw—Mr. Friendly.

The car began to slow down when I was finally let up. I hadn't gotten the blood off my mouth good when we stopped. The door opened on my side; an "ape" reached in and dragged me up to the door. I reminded him that I had two feet, and he returned the reminder by stomping on one of them. The door opened; I was dragged further into the darkness.

The lights came on. I found myself in a small foyer which opened into a large, comfortable-looking room. I don't know what happened to the fat slob who used me as his footstool but I had more than him to worry about when she walked in. Her left arm was extended and on it perched a game rooster. Her right arm was extended as well; the hand held a game gun. I should have painted myself with bullseyes—it would have made me feel more in place.

The "ape" made the introductions, and I told him that I had already met Miss "Baldhead." She assured me that I had. It seems that I had left just a little too quickly the last time I saw her and her goons in Mexico. She didn't mind my leaving too much, but I had her champ rooster under one arm and the biggest pot of the night under the other. She wanted both—I had neither.

She asked me where both were, and I informed her that the rooster had jumped from my car near a Mr. B. O. A'lot's farm; the money I had donated to policemen's benefits. The top of her head got red and her finger began tightening on the trigger when a square-jawed cop burst in.

He had saved the day for me; I'm glad I originated him.

CHESTER GHOUL

Where are My Tranquilizers?

By JOHN SUMMERS

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In this article, the author had some difficulty in gaining the co-operation of his subject, and the bold-faced paragraphs are areas in which the two exchange ideas. You know, kinda like the UN.)

The warm damp air rising from the lake's clear water blew gently against Girard's face. It was around midnight, and the large yellow moon cast shimmering reflections in a path that led like a carpet to the far-off sandy shore.

"The devil take it!" cried Girard. "I'll never get this ridiculous chain up."

"Cheer up. Cheer up," came the rasping sounds of a frog chorus as they tried to encourage poor Girard in his moment of need.

"Cheer up, heck!" Things like that teed him off, and it was not uncommon at all for him to become angry. "Wait until I've got a gig in your white bellies, then you give me that silly cheer up line. Gad, how I hate frogs!"

The water lapped against the side of the large cabin cruiser and sounded, tinkling as it slipped up, then down the smooth side of the craft.

"Listen, you jerk, if you're gonna write about MY adventure, how about cutting out all this descriptive nonsense, and getting on with it. (water lapping on the side.) Man, that stuff's for Winchell or somebody. Can it, George, can it!!"

Alright, Girard, get back to pulling the chain so we can continue. We're lucky to have anyone reading this far, with your yelling at frogs and absurd things like that."

"O. K., here we go again."

"Come unto me, dearest chain. Hold not thy slimey links beneath me. My temper soareth when you lodge thyself on pebbles and seaweed located at the bottom of this water-filled depression."

"Hey, George, how's this? Any better?"

"Girard, it's simply magnificent, but what say you forget that 'Thy' stuff. From the ridiculous to the sublime, from the ridiculous to the sublime. Get serious one time. You're too unstable. As a matter of fact, you'd make a good couch warmer. Let's go again."

Girard grasped the chain in his grubby hand and again began pulling.

"Hey, George, my darned hand's sore. What you want me to do, pull all night long? I don't wanna go nowhere, anyhow. (what you have to do to get in the newspapers nowadays!!)

Girard, just quit. Give up, Fini. Through. Get yourself another writer. You're sick, fellow, you're real sick. You need a good medicine to get you out of the mess you're in. Tell you what, don't pull it out. Just pretend like you're cranking it.

"O. K., Mr. Perfection! (why didn't I sign with Paramount?)

The next few gutteral sounds you will hear is our boy Girard grunting over a winch. Watch that reading, boy, and check the spelling before you shake your ugly fat fin in my face.

"Ughh. Unhh. Ahreeeeguuuuuu Boy ,this is absurd. The chain going to come up for nobody NOBODY. Where are my Tran lizers? WHERE IN THE DE ARE MY, get that MY—MY TRAN QUIL I ZERRS?"

Girard boy, you're getting gry again. You're gonna ruin story. Here, take a handful, get your dead ace back chain routine. What a sioux!

"Listen, George, you big-ea thick eyebrowed, kinky-hea Mau-Mau. I'll get back to chain when I'M ready. hey, George, I'm ready."

"This chain is really stuck won't come up. It thinks it belo down there. That's what gets my chain thinks it BELONGS the bottom of a smelly old You stupid chain. You don't k where you belong. You are chain and YOU belong when want you to. Now get out of the ter and get up here. NOOOWW

That's doing it, Girard, it w be long now. The column is ning out. Go, Girard boy, Fight, fight. Rah-Rah, Rah-Rah.

"What's all this Rah-Rah st George? You sound like a fool I've ever heard one, and belie me I've heard some of the BI GEST fools you've ever heard

"This is it. After this time it's over. I quit, regardless. One m try. One stinking long more try then. Poof, I'm through." Gir was still annoyed and angry. grasped once again the meta serpent and pulled with all might.

"George, I did it. I tried and wouldn't come up. I did what said I would, and now I'm THROUGH!!!"

Alright, Girard, so am I. hope you never get it up. I be you bob up and down on th smelly lake forever. (man, th Girard fellow annoys m George. Come back."

I didn't.

That's All After Thirty-One

Presbyterian College fans hung their heads in shame after the squad's miserable showing in the State Meet, but they couldn't have carried a more wounded expression than did Dr. Walter Johnson, old-time athletic director and dean of college athletic men in the state of South Carolina.

The near permanent resting place of the "Little Olympics" at PC, established through the efforts of Dr. Walter Johnson, found a temporary shift to the University of South Carolina in Columbia for 1859. The announcement was brought forward by Johnson himself, as he delivered the surprise to the large throng of track enthusiasts Saturday. After 31 long years of hosting the meet, he made evident in his address how he regretted to see the spectacle depart from Presbyterian College. The new change in location will be rotated among the state schools with a different host each year.

DR. WALTER JOHNSON

Since the outset in 1925, the State Meet has been run on the best track in the state; hence, being the one here at PC, Dr. Johnson was responsible for developing the top cinder terrain in the state and even went so far as to install the first lighted oval in South Carolina track circles.

An addition to that fact streams the establishment of a good many "firsts" by this aging sportsman; nevertheless, the Games Committee voted to take away from him a development which is now the pride and joy of Carolina trackmen.

Presbyterian has long claimed an excellent runway and has compared to many throughout the South; however, with several state collegiate tracks wide enough to carry eight lanes on the curves, extending to cover the 220-yard dash in a single straightaway, plus quarter-milers running only two curves, such a move for the "Little Olympics" was necessary for its progress.

WILL IT COME BACK?

The Gamecocks secured the meet for next year and other schools, mainly Furman and The Citadel, await eagerly to grasp the spectacle in the coming years. Clemson has made tentative plans for the immediate future to construct an entirely new track, but at the present time boasts no more than an average path. Both Furman and The Citadel have improved their facilities and should in a few years be able to host the event.

The main point is, at least as far as Clintonians and PC students are concerned, "Will the event ever come back to Presbyterian College?" Sports writers throughout the Carolinas have already given their forecast as to whether the gala spectacle will return to PC, and their beliefs seem to lie negatively. This is definitely true and will remain so until the involved authorities take some prompt action to improve conditions of the track as well as the overnight facilities—a detrimental factor used in criticizing our athletic plant.

No, the state meet won't be at its birthplace next year, but everyone can be assured that Dr. Johnson's handiwork of 31 years will be a contributing factor in the future success of the state meet. His precedence established at Presbyterian College will hardly find an equal.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

John Dunkelburg of Clemson, failed to best Mayfield in the 440-yard dash, but grabbed his chance again in the mile relay and nipped the Gamecock at the tape . . . Baseball scouts are reported to have particular interest in three Hose players. Benson, Chastain, and Akins are being given the eye from several major league clubs . . . With Auburn winning the Southern Intercollegiate sailing regatta recently, it's probably only a matter of time until the NCAA starts investigating the sailors . . . One college coach who isn't fretting over the new PAT rule is Michigan State's Duffy Daugherty. Says Duffy, "I have a book of Chinese proverbs and my favorite is, 'Confucius say if you score plenty touchdowns you don't worry about extra points' " . . . Hudson of Carolina, the discus thrower who was injured last week in the state track meet, is reported to be in good condition .

Georgia Teachers Stop PC As Baseball Season Nears End

By DON HYDE

Freshman righthander Alex Dubose gave up twelve hits and PC was defeated by Georgia Teachers College 8 to 5. The Teachers started early as they scored twice on a two-run homer by Womack. The Blue Hose tied the score in their half of the inning as Bob Matthews beat out a bunt down the first base line. Matthews stole second and advanced to third on a wild throw and scored the first PC run on a sacrificed fly to right field by Tony Benson. The second run scored on a walk to Paul Chastain followed by a double to left field by Ray Hodge.

Coach Ehrhardt's men continued their assault on the Georgia Teacher pitcher with four straight singles and two runs in the fifth inning. The big blows struck in this inning were by Benson and Chastain.

The Teachers scored their third and fourth runs in the sixth inning as third baseman Mallard drove in two runs with his third straight hit. Mallard drove in three more runs in the eighth with a home run over the right field hedge.

Leading Presbyterian in defeat were Bob Matthews and Tony Benson with two hits each. Third baseman Bill Sease executed the fielding gem of the game when he stabbed a wicked line drive in the second inning.

USC Wins State Track Meet As Hose Thinclads Fail to Show

In Annual Event Four Records Set

By LARRY BROWN

THE ABOVE LEAP gave Curtis Lindner a winning jump and the lone first place to PC in the State Meet held in Clinton last week. A 22 foot, 1¼ inch jump was good enough to defend his state broad jump crown.

Four records tumbled and another one was tied as South Carolina edged Clemson for top laurels in the 31st annual state college track meet at Clinton last Saturday.

The Gamecocks displayed tremendous depth and power as they swept to seven first place finishes and a 57½ to 50 point spread over the second place Tigers.

The Citadel's rapidly improving cindermen were third with 26 2-3 points, followed by Furman with 23, and host Presbyterian came in with 7 1-3 points.

Pacing one of the greatest arrays of tracksters ever to assemble at Clinton was USC's Billy Latham of Columbia, who erased both the mile and two-mile records. Latham was clocked at 4:17.6 in the mile, and he scampered home ahead of the field in the two-mile with an uncanny 9:44.

Big Gamecock Dave Coates heaved the shot put 53 feet, ¾ inches to claim a new record by some 5 feet.

USC's Buddy Mayfield also tied the existing 440 mark with a fast 48.5 effort.

Clemson's well-balanced mile relay team surpassed the old record with a speedy time of 3:20.7, as anchor man John Dunkelburg cut down Mayfield at the wire.

PC's Curtis Lindner captured the broad jump with a leap of 22 feet, 1¼ inches to keep the fading Blue Hose hopes alive.

Pre-meet figures had pointed to close battle between Clemson and USC and it was just that with Clemson leading on a couple of occasions despite the fact that they only took three first places.

PC showed up well in the freshman division, with Richard Elmore, Mac McLleod and Dick Shawn giving notice that the Blue Hose future track hopes look brighter.

Summaries:

Pole Vault—1, Snipes, USC, and Van Trump, Citadel (tie). 3, Macedon, USC, Carver, Clemson, and Metsker, Citadel (tie), 12-6.

Kappa Alpha Gains Lead In Fast Intramural League

Kappa Alpha gained undisputed possession of first place in the intramural softball league with rain holding action to a single day in the fourth week of play. The KA's remained idle during the week.

Ken Caswell's line single to center broke a 7-7 deadlock in extra innings and enabled the Pikas to knock the defending champion Stones from the undefeated ranks by a 9-8 count.

The Pikas held the Stones to their lowest run total of the season as the winners registered their third win. Caswell stood out as he checked the champs with eight hits.

Herby Entrekin led off the game with a single, stole second and third, and set the stage for the winning tally. Hoot Gibson contributed to the cause with two hits for the Pikas. Malcolm McKeithen and Bub McConnell netted two each for the Stones.

The Pi Kappa Phi's kept in the running with a 11-3 barrage on the Alpha Sigs.

Roy Fowler scattered eight hits during seven innings to claim his third victory of the season. Marion Lee and Tommy Middleton were big guns in the victory with both accounting heavily in the attack with homers. A seven-run third inning gave the Pi Kaps a lead never to be relinquished.

Warren Lower and Ed Galloway each gathered in two hits for the losers.

Thackston Lists Winners of Founder's Scholarships

Seven more outstanding high school seniors have been awarded Founder's Scholarships to Presbyterian College, Student Dean A. J. Thackston announced today.

They are: Tom Carlisle of Lyman; Robert L. Bethea of Louisville, Ga.; Miss Mary Jo Sistrunk of Jacksonville Beach, Fla.; Andrew C. McCaughey III, of Marietta, Ga.; Jimmy Thompson of Manning; Miss Alice Frances Watkins of Augusta, Ga.; and Carl W. Adame of Shaw Air Force Base.

Col. Thackston said these recipients complete the group to receive four-year Founder's awards for the session beginning next September. He earlier had announced Gerald Pitts of Laurens, and Sanders Reed of McClellanville, as the winners of the two top grants in this program.

The largest scholarships provided each recipient with $2,000 toward the next four years of study at Presbyterian College, at the rate of $500 per year. Grants to the group announced today range up to $1,600 each for the four years.

Thackston pointed out the Founder's Scholarships are awarded competitively on the basis of intellect, qualities of leadership and character. A group of 21 finalists, selected from among scores of applicants, visited the PC campus last month for additional tests and interviews. Recipients were chosen from among these seniors.

PC Golf Team Defeats Wofford

Led by medalist Sonny Bell, freshman from Macon, Ga., with a low of 74, the Presbyterian College golfers downed Wofford on the home course yesterday by the score of 15 to 12.

The Blue Hose strokers have been playing with the victory column all season long, only to taste defeat in eight consecutive matches, but found the right combination to win their initial match of the current campaign.

Following medalist Bell were Larry Ford with a 75, and Al Copelan finishing with a 76. Also shining for the Hose in his first round of collegiate competition was Bill Hagood, who added two points to the Presbyterian score.

Results:

Al Copelan d. Randy Mahaffey 2-1.

Larry Ford d. Risher Brabham 2½-½.

Copelan-Ford (PC) d. Mahaffey-Brabham (W) 2-1.

Sonny Bell d. Reddick Still 2-1.

Jim Fleming d. Hexie McDonald 2-1.

Bell-McDonald (PC) d. Fleming-Still (W) 2-1.

Bill Hagood d. Ruben 2-1.

Bill Stokes d. Harry McDonald 2½-½.

Ruben-Stokes (W) d. Hagood-McDonald (PC) 2-1.

AL McKIE

Al McKie Elected Blue Key President

Alan McKie of Alexandria, Va., was elected to the presidency of Blue Key National Honor Fraternity this week. He takes over the leadership of the fraternity from Jim Barksdale who has led the organization for the past year.

The vice-president for next year will be Ron Isger of Clairton, Pa. Recording secretary-treasurer will be Bruce Prince of Union. Holding dwon the position of corresponding secretary will be Dick Carter of Florence, and the new alumni secretary is Roger Godwin of College Park, Ga.

McKie is one of nine rising seniors who were recently tapped for membership in the honor fraternity. He is an active leader in school affairs, as well as having an outstanding scholastic record. McKie is a member of Alpha Sigma Phi Social Fraternity, and is the past vice-president. He is the associate editor of The Blue Stocking, fraternity editor of the PaC-SaC, a past member of the Westminster Fellowship Council, a past member of the Student Christian Association Cabinet, and secretary of Solons Law Club. He is also a consistent member of the Dean's List, and won the Fraser Bible Award during his freshman year.

Blue Key is responsible for several important projects on campus. The oganization in the past year took charge of the campus polio campaign drive, and was responsible for the sportsmanship trophies competition between PC, Wofford, and Newberry.

McElveen Chosen President of PiKA

At the regular meeting of Pi Kappa Alpha last week Billy McElveen of Kingstree, was elected president to replace the graduating John to office was Bob Matthews of Decatur, Ga. Also elected Knox of Atlanta, Ga. Also elected catur, Ga., as vice-president; Jimmy Elliott of Georgetown, as secretary; Ron Bartlett of Atlanta, Ga., treasurer. Ron Isger of Clairton, Pa., sergeant-at-arms; and Butch Woodward of Graniteville, as chaplain.

McElveen has been very active in Fraternity work over the last three years and is this year the Pi Kappa Alpha IFC representative. McElveen is the official delegate to the Pi Kappa Alpha National Convention to be held in Washington, D. C., the latter part of the summer.

First Semester Rushing Approved

Fraternity Membership Limited To Fifty in Entirely New System

An entirely new system of first semester rushing has been given approval by the faculty, it was announced today by Kenneth N. Baker, chairman of the faculty committee on fraternities.

The new system, presented by the Inter-Fraternity Council, and approved by the faculty, moves Rush Week up to the first week after Thanksgiving of each year. Eligibility for pleging will depend upon mid-semester grades, and admittance into the brotherhood will depend upon attaining a "C" average for the entire semester.

Also included in the new system is a clause that provides that membership will be limited to fifty, or 10% of the fall enrollment for men.

The amendment to the IFC Constitution, as approved by the faculty, is presented in its entirety below:

That the Rushing of students will begin in the first semester and continue to Pledge Day.

That each Fraternity will have one Open Social beginning the fourth Wednesday of September and continuing each Wednesday thereafter until all Fraternities have had one Open Social. No Open Social will be postponed unless approved by the IFC. (Subject to Faculty rule and Artcile IV, Section 2)

All dances, open socials, or closed socials, when ladies attend, come under the Faculty Rule. The IFC has the right, if necessary in the interest of Rushing, to control same, even when ladies do not attend, subject to the approval of the Faculty Committee on Fraternities.

That quiet period will begin at midnight of the final Smoker and continue until 6:00 p. m. on Pledge Day. The last Fraternity having a Smoker will be granted permission to give out their bids under supervision of the IFC.

Pledge Day will be Friday following the last Smoker and pledging will be from 2:00 p. m. to 4:00 p. m. at a place designated by the IFC.

That mid-semester grades will determine the eligibility for pledging of first-year men. A total of ten (10) quality points is required for pledging for regularly enrolled students.

A list of students prepared by the registrar of students eligible to be pledged will be furnished the Fraternity by the Faculty Committee on Fraternities before the first Smoker. This list will be given to the president of the IFC.

The Faculty Committee on Fraternities will approve at the the first of each semester a list prepared by the registrar of old students who have eight (8) quality points and eligible at any time thereafter for pledging and those who have a "C" average and eligible for intiation, according to rules of the constitution.

In the future no fraternity shall have as brother and pledges, whether inactive or not, a membership greater than ten per cent (10%) of the fall enrollment (men only) or fifty (50), whichever is greater. Provided fur-

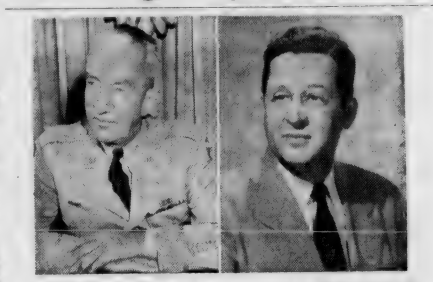
Outstanding Seniors To Receive Awards

The Student Activities Committee today announced the special awards to be presented at graduation to outstanding members of the senior class. These awards are voted upon each year by the faculty from nominations presented by the above named committee, and further nominations come from the floor of the faculty meetnig.

GOLD P AWARDS

Elected to receive Gold P Awards are John Knox of Decatur, Ga.; Blair Baldwin of Blair; and Tommy Richards of Heath Springs.



Gold P's are awarded to those seniors who, in the opinion of the faculty, have performed outstanding meritorious service in extra-curicular activities other than athletics.

OUTSTANDING SENIOR

This year the Outstanding Senior award will be presented to John Knox of Decatur, Ga. It is given by the Charlotte chapter of the Alumni Association "to the member of the graduation class who, by his conduct and character, physical fitness, and mental stability, most nearly approximate the institution's ideals for young manhood."

AMERICAN LEGION AWARD

Tommy Richards of Heath Springs, will receive the American Legion Award which is conferred "in further recognition of the possession of those high qualities of Honor, Courage, Scholarship, Leadership and Service which are necessary to the preservation and protection of the fundamental institutions of our government and the advancement of society."

Eighty-Five are Candidates For June 2nd Graduation

Three to Receive Honorary Degrees; Eichelberger and Jones Will Speak

Eighty-five PC seniors expect to receive their diplomas on June 2 as the highlight of Presbyterian College's 77th annual commencement exercises.

Along with the awarding of the undergraduate degrees will be the awarding of three honorary Doctor of Divinity Degrees. These will go to the Reverends Ernest Arnold of Atlanta, Ga.; Lynn T. Jones of Columbia; and Allen Jacobs of Talladega, Ala.

Rev. Arnold is president of the Protestant Radio and Television Center in Atlanta, Ga.; Lynn Jones is pastor of Columbia's Eastminster Presbyterian Church; and Allen Jacobs is president of the Alabama Presbyterian Home for Children.

Exercises will get underway on Sunday, June 1, as Rev. Lynn Jones, one of the honorary degree recipients, delivers the Baccalaureate sermon in the Clinton First Presbyterian Church.

The commencement is the following day, Monday, June 2, and will also be held at the First Presbyterian Church. General Robert L. Eichelberger, distinguished World War II Army Commander, will deliver the commencement address. General Eichelberger retired from the army in 1948 after an outstanding career dating back to his 1909 graduation from West Point Military Academy. At the time of his retirement he was commander of all United States Army ground forces in in Japan.

Mary Keith Adair Wins Award in Mathematics

Miss Mary Keith Adair of Clinton, has been named to receive the Annual Award given by the Mathematics Department for outstanding progress in mathematics for the year. The award was presented today in class by Professor Martin, head of the department.

The award is a book of mathematical tables with the winner's name engraved on it.

New REW Plan Given Faculty Approval

In its monthly meeting last night, the faculty voted to permit the Student Christian Association to carry on a Religious Emphasis Week similar to the one held this year. Classes will be suspended for two days during the second week of March, 1959, so that students may participate in the seminar-type classes planned by the SCA cabinet.

In an interview today Sonny Embry, presdient of the SCA, stated that, "The faculty has been most cooperative in helping us with our plans, and we, the members of the SCA, should be very grateful for the understanding and confidence that they have placed in us. They expressed that they were doing this in the interests of the students, and thought that the plan, although still experimental, should be tried once more."

New Officers...

Twenty-Three Senior Cadets Expect to Be Commissioned

Twenty-three senior ROTC cadets are expected to be commissioned at the Commencement exercises on June 2, it was announced today by the PC Military Department. These men will be sworn in as Second Lieutenants on the morning of graduation by Col. W. W. Barnett, PMS&T of Presbyterian College and will be offically presented with their commissions at the graduation exercises immediately after receiving their diplomas. All are receiving commissions in the Reserve.

Receiving commissions in the Infantry are the following: William D. Bowman, James T. Faile, Lyman H. Harris, Robert R. Hill, James L. Newsome, James R. Poole, C. H. Ragsdale, Robert W. Taylor, Thomas W. Westmoreland, and William H. Yearick III.

Artillery commissions include Kenneth R. Fleischer, Melvin H. Little, Grady G. Livingston, Joseph R. Miller, E. Guice Potter, Charles L. Prickett II, and William H. Roberts.

Chemical Corps commissions will go to Alex C. Moorhead and James T. Richards. William C. Davison, Jr., is to be commissioned in the Quartermaster Corps and Blair Baldwin in the Signal Corps. John F. Thames will be commissioned in the Armor, and William J. Fulton in the Army Security Agency.

Editorials : Features : Humor

Progress and Failure...

Editorials, by newspaper standards, are judged by their timeliness, and in this last issue of the year it seems timely to the editors that we should have a look at the year that is now gone, to see where we have made progress, and to see where we have failed.

This has been a year of outstanding progress on our campus. We came back to school last fall to see trees cleared away and the porch torn down on the decrepit canteen to make room for the construction of a new Student Activities Building. Then as the year has gone by we have seen the progress of the construction and complained about the mess and mud, but actually we were glad to see the work going on. The building isn't finished yet, but it is well on the way to completion, and in the fall it will be ready for occupancy, undoubtedly to become the center of campus activities.

Plans for a Chapel-Auditorium are also in the making. A date has not as yet been set, but the College Administration is working out the preliminary plans, and announcement of a construction date will probably soon be made.

Other progress has been made in the revamping of Religious Emphasis Week. The SCA can be justly proud of their efforts and the results in the new REW this year. The speakers surpassed any similar selection in past years, and interest, despite the statistics, was at a new high, because it was sincere, voluntary interest, and not of the kind that would have been present had attendance been required.

The place where our campus has experienced failure is in regard to the Honor System. To what can we lay the blame for our failure to make the Honor System work? The blame cannot be placed with any particular person or group of persons. The Student Council can certainly not be blamed, because they could not properly carry out the Honor Code without the full support of every student on campus—and this support has definitely not been given.

We must do something about the Honor System. It is all too apparent that it is not working. As the cliche expression puts it, "the professors have the Honor, and the students have the system." This leaves our Honor System in the position of being a mere farce. There are only two courses of action that we can take. O which has been suggested is the elimination the Honor System. This would mean a treme dous sacrifice in prestige that a "workin Honor System carries. It would also place t burden of responsibility on the professors. T shortcomings of not having an Honor Syste are numerous, but even so, it would probabl be superior to, or at least equal to, our pres situation.

The other solution is one that is not easy, b cause it places the burden of responsibility up the students. It is to make the Honor Syste "work." To make it work means to give it t fullest support of every student on the camp —this is what it will take to have a worki Honor System of which we can be proud.

The Blue Stocking as a separate entity ch lenges the students who will be returning to c campus next fall to give serious consideration what they want to do about the Honor Syste and to return determined to support the Hon System and return it to a position of respect our campus.

Letters to Gabby

By GABBYGAIL VAN SUMMERS

DEAR GABBY: Two months ago my boy friend left me. He said he didn't love me any more. People are talking. Am I right. VIRGO.

DEAR VIRGO: You should have written ole Gabby earlier. Chances are he doesn't love you any more, so throw in your towel and find someone a lot less handsome, then you might be able to hold him. P. S.—Try the new Mum Mist under those little shoulders of yours, sweety.

DEAR GABBY: Two months ago I fell in love with a married woman who said she loves me, too. Should I believe her, and what should I do? A WORRIED THIRTEEN YEAR OLD BOY.

DEAR A WORRIED THIRTEEN YEAR OLD BOY: Obviously if you both feel the same way about each other there is no reason why you shouldn't see each other. Try to really snow her, and arrange to avoid her husband's wrath. Sometimes they become angry when they find out.

DEAR GABBY: All the girls in our club love the same boy. He is only twenty-eight, but he makes up for it in other ways. GOLDEN YEARS GANG.

DEAR GOLDEN YEARS GANG: Share and share alike girls, and remember the Platinus rule: Do unto others as you would have them do unto you, just do it first!

DEAR GABBY: My B. F. and I quarreled last night. He took back his anklet he gave me for my dancing school graduation, and tore my hose. Should I make him pay me for the damage. JILL THE RIPPER.

DEAR JILL THE RIPPER: Yes. It is legal. Have him consult his family doctor or clergyman and find out how to remove anklets without tearing hose. He must be a brute, anyway, dearie, so forget him. (What's his address?)

DEAR GABBY: I really have the hots for this girl. but she said we were through when I yelled something out loud when she backed over my fingers in her car. How can I get her back? SMASHED CARPELS.

DEAR SMASHED CARPELS: Talk it over with her, and if she doesn't agree, count to ten twice. Then you should leave her because she most likely doesn't love you, anyway. Psychologists tell us that girls who run over their B. F.'s don't usually feel very deeply for them, anyway, so take your cast and find someone else who owns just a motor scooter.

Movie Review...

'GERVAISE'

By AL McKIE

If you are attracted to anything more than the raw sex dished out by many recent foreign films such as "And God Created Women," then you might find "Gervaise" worthy of your attention. Be forewarned, this flick is in French but the sub-titles are well done and do not detract from the fine acting of Maria Schell, who was brought to the attention of American cinemagoers in "The Brothers Karamazov."

Based on Emile Zola's "The Dram Shop"—which was a bitter harangue against drink tending toward the crude if not revolting—the film is a somewhat more refined but still powerful glimpse into the lower depths of Paris. The heroine, who bravely tries to rise above her environment, is thwarted by her lackadaisical husband, who refuses to work after an accident and becomes a frequent customer of a neighborhood dram shop drinking up the meagre savings of his hard-working wife. The old man doesn't help the situation when he invites Gervaise's former lover to come and live with them, especially since he is the father of one of her children. Maria Schell finds a third antagonist in the person of a scheming woman who not only seeks to drive the heroine out of her small laundry—her only hope for advancement—but also attempts to steal the heroine's lover.

This import has won numerous awards abroad, and was given the New York Drama Critics and the "Best Foreign Film of the Year." You will have to look for this one in the various art theatres of the largest cities, but it is a welcome change from Hollywood and raw sex.

South of the Border!

A fetching young lady from New York was tripping down a street in Bogota, Colombia, minding her own business when a star-struck "bogotano" picked up her trail. He followed her for a block or two, breathing gentle compliments. She became angrier each moment, and at the end of the third block flounced over to a traffic policeman. "That man on the corner has been following me!" she announced indignantly.

The cop looked up at the man, then surveyed the seething young lady. He took off his cap and bowed. "Senorita, if I were not on duty, I would follow you, too."

Grid Talk In May

If there are any top-heavy favorites for next fall's Little Three Conference football championship, Presbyterian's coach Frank Jones isn't pin-pointing them for the time being, at least.

Although the baseballers are hogging the spotlight these days, audiences still want to know, "What will the Blue Hose have next season?"

A good question.

The answer, of course, won't be forthcoming for another three months but we peek a panoramic sneak preview in this our last column of the spring season. Much therefore has been written and uttered on the strength of what was seen and heard, but exactly how much influence—if any—the spring drills will have on next fall's won-lost record is open to conjecture.

To get back to the Hose, however . . . They lose a handful of talent and have some prize beef returning. Offhand, I would say that center, halfback and guard personnel will be scrutinized most closely come fall workouts.

The departure of players like Ken Webb,, Bill Bowman, Jim McLaughlin, Jackie Powers, and Mitch Mavromat—involved in the three positions—presents a problem to say the least.

Few of us know exactly what Jones and his aides have in mind at this stage of the game, but part of their ideas must present some sort of format in September. A winnnig team . . . who knows?

As things stand now Tony Benson and John Lucas are the only returning lettermen at right half. At left half, Ed Messer is the only varsity holdover.

Billy Benton, a newcomer to the Hose lineup, stood out in spring drills and could possibly be a 'swing man' and play both positions. The coaching staff has high regard for this speedster, whom they believe to be one of the best blocking halfbacks on the team.

HEAVY LOSS AT CENTER

Facing up to the problem at center, where losses have been exceptionally heavy, the Hose mentor exposed the fact that extensive recruiting has been done at the pivot position.

As of now, Mac Copeland is the only returning letterman at center, with veteran Rich Shrigley returning after a year's absence to take up the slack left by two graduating seniors.

But, if there are positions worrying Jones, there are a few which are pretty well fortified for the coming season. At end, Ted Leahy and Paul Chastain are a couple of strong holdovers, with Jim Kolb, Ken Gardner, and John Vastine suppoting a strong reserve.

The guards are solid and deep as returning John Firby, Don Bridges, Ed Anderson, and Ken Nix, plus junior college transfer Tommy Boney providing the group.

Lettermen Marion "Bull" Parrish, James Walker, and Hardy Ledbetter, plus Ron Bartlett and Bob Biggerstaff return to give the Hose muscle at the tackle posts. Newcomer Cecil Morris shows considerable promise to aid the hefty linemen.

At fullback looms a troubled spot as to who will fill the large shoes of Ken Webb, a powerful runner for four straight years here. Senior Bob Matthews, who lettered as an end in 1957, along with Bill Sease are available experienced returnees to plug the existing hole.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Third baseman Bill Sease came up with the fielding gem of the afternoon when he faked a throw to first and nabbed an Erskine runner rounding third . . . Ray Hodge proved too much for his brother as he greeted the Fleet fireballer in the bottom of the ninth with a sharp single to right . . . W. C. (Red) Myers, Alumni Director at Erskine College for past years, will succeed Gene Alexander as head basketball coach. Alexander will move over to neighboring Wofford to assume a football-basketball coaching job . . . It is reported that ex-Hose Danny Bridges is now performing for East Tennessee State at Johnson City, Tenn., in spring football sessions . . . Athlete Director Walter Johnson was appointed track committee chairman in District 26 of the NAIA this week . . . Robert Lacy ("Red") Stone wishes to inform all concerned that Nat Cole has been given full reign of his Stone Athletic Teams upon his graduation this year.

Hose Trim Erskine Flying Fleet, Wofford Claims Little Four Title

DuBose Picks Up Initial Win

By DON HYDE

Presbyterian College behind the strong right arm of Alex Dubose defeated Erskine 3 to 2 for their second Little Four conference win. With runners on first and second and no outs in the ninth inning, catcher Ken Nix got his second hit of the game which brought in the winning PC run.

Dubose, who scattered six hits in winning his first game of the year, didn't have any trouble until the third inning when the Flying Fleet filled the bases with only one out, but the PC righ-hander proved equal to the occasion as he struck out McCarter and then got Adams, the Fleet's leading hitter to fly out to Jackson in left field.

Erskine threatened to score again in the fourth, but Dubose forced their shortstop to hit into a quick double play to end the inning. The only Erskine runs came in the fifth and ninth innings.

Jackson walked in the first inning and later scored the first run for the Blue Hose on a wild pitch. PC picked up its second run in the eighth inning on a walk to Bob Matthews. The Fleet-footed outfielder stole second and came home on Paul Chastain's long triple to left center.

With the score tied at two-all in the ninth, Ray Hodge led off with a single to right field. First baseman Ted Leahy advanced Hodge to second with his second hit of the game and catcher Nix delivered the game's winning run.

It marked the second time this season that centerfielder Hodge has contributed heavily to the Blue Hose winning attack.

WOFFORD WINS TITLE

Wofford took the Little Four crown Tuesday by defeating the Presbyterian Blue Hose 5 to 1. John Boozer, the ace Wofford hurler, lived up to all advance notices and gave up only 3 hits to the losers.

Tony Benson proved to be the Hose stalwart by collecting two of the three PC hits. His first blow came in the fifth when he lined a Boozer fast ball into left field.

Stones Tromp KAs In Intramural Softball

Ralph Chambers and Guy Blakely shone in the fifth week of IM action as The Stones belted previous unbeaten Kappa Alpha, 18-2, Tuesday to highlight the week's activity of play.

Knocked from the ranks a week ago by the Pikas, The Stones utilized a 15-hit slugfest to wallop the challenging KA's.

Stone hurler Guy Blakely held the opposition to a scant four hits and struck out eight as he pitched his fifth victory against a lone setback. Chambers belted his fourth homer of the season and struck for a long triple to help the cause.

Bobby Mayfield and Jackie Powers shared the four hits, with one of Mayfield's going for a triple.

Pi Kappa Alpha pushed across two desperate runs in the last frame to nip the Dodgers 7-5. The Bums' Lynwood Poston claimed hitting honors with 3 for 3.

Medford Rockstroh throttled Sigma Nu with a scratch single to enable the KA's to win 4-1. Jackie Powers drove in two of the runs with his two hits.

Kappa Alpha also managed to squeeze by Pi Kappa Phi 4-3 in their other game of the week. Rockstroh and Roy Fowler hooked up into one of the best mound deals of the season.

Ed Galloway's single to right ruined Guy Blakely's bid for a no-hitter as the Stones decisioned Alpha Sigma Phi, 4-2. Ralph Chambers homered in the second to knot the score at 1-1.

George Banks' sidearm delivery completely baffled the Theta Chi's, as Pi Kappa Phi routed to a 13-2 triumph. Mel Little collected two of the 10 Pi Kap hits for honors.

An 8-7 win over Theta Chi enabled the Dodgers to climb out of the cellar in IM play. Three hits in the first frame accounted for five of the runs and enough lead for the victory. Charles Taylor's homer was the longest blow of the game for the losers.

The Pikas' 8-2 victory over the Sigma Nu's pushed them up into third place in the league. Bobby Hodge drove in three of the runs with his long homer.

Standings:

Kappa Alpha	6	1
The Stones	5	1
Pi Kappa Alpha	5	2
Pi Kappa Phi	4	2

In the seventh, he hit a change-up to the left center hedge for a triple. With Benson on third, Bill Sease smashed a long double over the Terrier center fielder's head to score Benson and the only Blue Hose run.

George Akins, the starting Presbyterian hurler, gave up five hits and four runs before being relieved by Bill Dobbins in the top of the seventh. Before being relieved, Akins posted 11 strike-outs to his credit while Dobbins fanned two, bringing the total to 13 strike-outs for the Hose.

The outstanding Hose double play combination of Paul Chastain and Tony Benson continued to function smoothly in its one effort. This combination, which has been referred to as the best in the state, has been a consistent fielding aid to the Hose defense all season.

This game concluded the Presbyterian 1958 schedule leaving the Hose with a 5-12 won-lost record.

Three New Profs Join College Faculty

Three new professors have joined the faculty of Presbyterian College, beginning with the fall semester. They are Jack Durant, Earl B. Halsall and John Madden.

Jack Durant leaves the staff of Maryville College to become instructor in English at PC. Durant will begin his duties at the start of the fall semester on September 8. He replaces Bill Toole, who has a leave-of-absence to work on his doctorate at Vanderbilt University.

Durant taught at Maryville College during the past year and prior to that spent two years with the U.S. Army in Europe. A native of Birmingham, Ala., he attended Alabama Polytechnic Institute for two years (1948-50) and was graduated from Maryville with his A.B. degree in 1953. He received his Masters from the University of Tennessee in 1955, after giving particular emphasis to English drama.

He is married to the former Judy Johnson, and they are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Earl B. Halsall of Charleston, assistant professor of political science, will begin his duties at the start of the fall semester next September. Besides his political science courses, he will teach some work in economics.

Halsall comes to PC after spending the past seven years with the DuPont Company in Aiken in connection with the Savannah River Atomic Project. His positions there included training supervisor with construction, and training specialist and administrative assistant with operations.

Prior to that, he was with the Veterans Administration in Charleston and Greenville for six years as

SCA Publishes New Activities Calendar

In the registration line today, the Student Christian Association made available its first Student Activities Calendar. The calendar, it is hoped, will eliminate as many conflicts as possible, and permit better future planning in the field of extra-curricular activities.

Dick Carter, chairman of the campus affairs committee of the SCA, did the primary work for the calendar and made the first rough of the Administration this summer, draft. Bill Cashwell, an employee worked closely with Col. Thackston in bringing the publication to its final form.

A master copy of the calendar will be kept in the game room of Douglas House and any group who makes plans which are not already on the calendar is requested to add to the calendar and to put the new date on the large poster labeled "New Dates to Add to Your SCA Calendar."

Ground Breaking to be Tuesday

Bailey To Remove First Earth On Site of Chapel-Auditorium

Ground-breaking ceremonies for Presbyterian College's proposed new chapel-auditorium will be held next Tuesday morning, September 16, President Marshall W. Brown announced today.

He said P. S. Bailey, Clinton textile executive and chairman of the trustee building committee, will remove the first shovel of earth on the site where the $500,000 structure is to be built.

Other trustees, the Presbyterian College student body, faculty and staff will be present for the brief ceremonies. Alumni and friends also are invited to attend the 10:45 a. m. program at which Dr. Brown will preside.

The PC board of trustees recently gave unanimous approval to the base construction figure of $376,310 turned in by C. Y. Thomason Co. of Greenwood, bidding against 11 other contractors. Work is expected to get underway in the next few weeks.

President Brown said the new chapel-auditorium will fill a long-felt need at Presbyterian College. Not only is it to provide for the expanded student body, but the facilities will enable the college to offer students and local residents a broader program of cultural activities.

He pointed out that this building was the second major objective of PC's recently successful $1,000,000 develpoment program. The other goal, a new student center, has just become a reality with the completion of the $250,000 Douglas House.

The chapel-auditorium will be erected directly across the plaza from the library building, adjacent to Bailey Hall dormitory on one side and South Broad Street on the other. It is to be of colonial Georgian design with large limestone columns in keeping with the architectural theme of the campus.

Dean Bellingrath stated today that the Monday chapel would be postponed to Tuesday for the ground-breaking ceremony which will convene at 10:45 directly across from the Administration building.

Montgomery Directs Student Activities

Irvin Montgomery, formerly of Greenville, is joining the Presbyterian College staff as director of student activities, President Marshall W. Brown announced today.

Montgomery's duties will include the supervision of PC's new $250,000 student center and the direction of the intra-mural sports program. He also will cooperate in various activities sponsored by the Student Christian Association.

Montgomery comes to Presbyterian College with a background of experience in Young Men's Christian Association work. He served for two years as program secretary of the Culver Palms YMCA in Culver City, Calif., before returning to South Carolina.

A native of Greenville, Montgomery attended Greenville High School and Clemson College prior to entering YMCA work. He is married to the former Mis Carolyn Outz of Columbia, and they have a young daughter. The new PC staff member is a Presbyterian, and his mother serves as a matron at Thornwell Orphanage.

Thirty-two Achieve Dean's List Honors

Six all-A students head the Dean's List for the second semester of Presbyterian College's 1957-58 session, the registrar's office announced today.

A total of 32 are included in this select group ofs cholars on the basis of academic achievement at PC during the four-month period which closed with June commencement exercises.

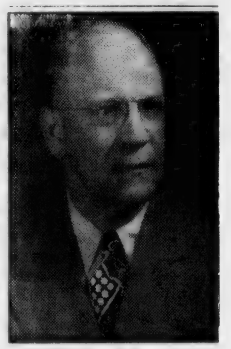
The six all-A students are: Guy Blakely and Mrs. Laura Jo King, both of Clinton; John Hamby of Simpsonville; Mrs. Peggy Kemp of Augusta, Ga.; Alan McKie of Alexandria, Va.; and Tommy Richards of Heath Springs.

Other Dean's List members include: Miss Mary Keith Adair, Miss June Adair, Mrs. Nettie Murphy Young, Gene Floyd, Jimmie Suttle, Ed Johnson, and Jimmy Tinman, all of Clinton; Ralph Chambers of Chicago, Ill.; Bill Aycock of Fayetteville, N. C.; Hugh Burns of Piedmont, Ala.; Miss Anne Kirkpatrick of Greenville; and John Knox of Decatur, Ga.

Dewitt Briggs of Lexington; Mike Brown of Albany, Ga.; William Claude Davison of Rock Hill; James Faile of Kershaw; Bob Hill of Mayesville; Harold McGirt of Maxton, N. C.; Miss Brenda Gay Maddox of Spartanburg; Samuel Masrh of Hemingway; Ed Minus of Greer; Bong Ho Park of Seoul, Korea; Bill Porter of Anderson; Jim Shakespeare of Hollywood, Fla.; Tommy Wise of Thomasville, Ga.; and Herman Dun of Andrews.

Dr. Brown Reappointed To Education Board

Dr. Marshall W. Brown has been reappointed to represent South Carolina on the Southern Regional Education Board.



Governor George Bel Timmerman, in taking the action, announced this latest term will extend through June 30, 1962.

President Brown has served continuously on this board since it was first formed in 1948 as an interstate compact to promote educational advantages of the South. He is one of the few non-tax-supported school officials serving on the board.

DR. WALTER JOHNSON

Walter Johnson Dies Unexpectedly In July

Walter A. Johnson, Presbyterian College's beloved athletic director since 1915 and the man behind the famous "PC Spirit," died of a heart attack at his Clinton home in the early mornihg nours of July 23.

At 65 his death ended one of the longest tenures of service at a single institution in the nation. He was affectionately known as the Dean of Southern Sportsmen and last December was named to the Hall of Fame of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

Presbyterian College broke its own long-standing rule of never awarding an honorary degree upon one of its faculty members and awarded Johnson an honorary doctor of laws degree.

"Coach Johnson," as he was affectionately called by all, was not satisfied to let his contributions remain at only one institution. He served as director of South Carolina Boys State for the past 12 years, and served as a Brigadier General in the South Carolina National Guard until five years ago.

Sister institutions also paid him tribute. The student body of the University of South Carolina presented Johnson with a sterling silver service cup in appreciation for an influence to college sports far beyond the campus of the institution he directly served. Clemson shifted its annual game with PC to Clinton in 1940 on his 25th anniversary. The cadet corps contributed to an engraved desk set presented him at halftime in 1949 Greenville named Walter Johnson honorary mayor of the city.

Let's Keep it That Way...

"Tremendous" is one of many adjectives that have been used by students and visitors to describe Douglas House, the new showplace of the Presbyterian College campus. It is a "tremendous" building, not only because of its interior decoration, but also because of the extensiveness of its facilities.

Last year the students of PC witnessed the steady progress of the work on the new Student Activities Building. Now we return to the campus to see the results of the past year's construction work, and most everyone has been very pleasantly surprised at the beauty and facilities offered by Douglas House.

The student center, which was one of the prime objectives of PC's recent $1,000,000 development program, is a building of which we can be justly proud. Douglas House will provide a new focal point for social and organizational activities on the campus. It is well adapted to fill the needs of the students, and in addition to its functional role, will prove to be a source of tremendous pride to the students of our campus.

Such beauty as this naturally carries with it certain responsibilities to those who will be using it, if it is to remain a source of pride on the campus.

No extensive rules or regulations have as yet been set up regarding the use of the building. The only requests that have been made are that no food be taken into the main lounge, and that the coffee tables not be used as foot rests.

This is the very least that can be asked of college students. Much more should naturally be expected of men who will in a few short years be entering professional careers with liberal arts backgrounds.

Damage has already been done to a piano in the music room. This was a very regretable incident so early in the year, and so soon after the opening of the new building. It was the first such occurance and we earnestly hope and urge that it will be the last.

No individual or group can adequately carry the responsibility for the proper upkeep of Douglas House. It must of necessity be a joint effort by the entire student body.

Douglas House is indeed the showplace of the Presbyterian College campus. Let's keep it that way!

Blue Stocking Editorial Policy

The Blue Stocking has received twelve "All American" citings by the Associated Collegiate Press and twice has been rated among the top ten college papers in the U.S. It is our firm intent to maintain this tradition by complete, accurate and unbiased news and sports coverage, supplemented by entertaining and enlightening features. We also propose to continue an equitable editorial policy. The opinions expressed in our editorials will of necessity reflect the opions of the staff. We shall support programs which we consider beneficial to the school and student body and oppose those contrary to the best interests of he same.

However, we fully realize the probability of opposing opinions and will print the same in our "Letters" column. Limits of space preclude lengthy letters; however, longer letters will be printed if the subject justifies such treatment. We favor signed letters except under unusual circumstances. We discourage petty gripes and encourage constructive thinking. We feel certain that all our readers will agree to the necessity of such a policy. We encourage this means of expressing your interest in campus affairs.

All letters should be delivered to the office of the Editor by 6 P.M. Tuesday for consideration in the Friday issue of the paper.

BB Comes of Age

By AL McKIE

B Squared finally comes of age in a funny and entertaining French farce in Le Parroissse neither Brigitte Bardot, Henri Vidal, or Charles Boyer are exceptional comedians and the plot is ordinary—girl chases boy, boy not interested, girl marries chases prince, boy interested—but top performances by pros Vidal and Boyer coupled with BB as a most delightful straight man results in one of the most sprightly of recent comedies.

BB, daughter of the French Prime Minister, wants a man as usual, particularly Vidal as Chief of Foreign Affairs. Rebuked, BB hides in Vidal's bed only to be caught by Dad who, happily for BB, demands marriage to save his own political skin.

Vidal maintains his own personal foreign relations so BB chases Boyer (the prince bored by officialdom and his stuffy queen) to arouse hubby's jealousy. Prince and Prime Minister's daughter jet down to Nice for a swim. Vidal is upset—what man wouldn't be—at their mutual disappearance

The jet age is too fast for the French Chief of Foreign Affairs. The Queen knowing of her husband's escapade, stalls Vidal at the front door while Prince slips in the back to appear before Vidal in support of his Queen's story. Vidal rebuffed, returns to Brigette to laugh at his wife's tale of her shenanigans with the prince. Papa Prime Minister and hubby demand the truth. B Squared invents a story. Both men are satisfied and BB has some exciting memories plus a more faithful husband.

Bardot has possibly found her best medium in this cinema by United Artists, and Vidal and Boyer offer needed relief from stereotyped Hollywood heroes.

What You've Been Waiting For

This appeared in the Tennessee Tech Oracle, reprinted by Pageant Magazine. It's called "10 Ways to Get Through College Without Even Trying."

1. Bring the professor newspaper clippings dealing with his subject. If you don't find clippings dealing with his subject, bring in clippings at random. He thinks everything deals with his subject.

2. Look alert. Take notes eagerly. If you look at your watch, don't stare at it unbelievingly and shake it.

3. Nod frequently and murmur "How true." To you, this seems exaggerated. To him, it's quite objective.

4. Sit in front, near him. (Applies only if you intend to stay awake.)

5. Laugh at his jokes. You can tell, if he looks up from his notes and smiles expectantly, he has told a joke.

6. Ask for outside reading. You don't have to read it. Just ask for it.

7. If you must sleep, arrange to be called at the end of the hour. It creates an unfavorable impression if the rest of the class has left you and you set there alone, dozing.

8. Be sure the book you read during the lecture looks like a book from the course. If you do math in psychology class and psychology in math class, match the books for size and color.

9. Ask an questions you think he can answer. Conversely, avoid announcing that you have found the answer to a question he couldn't answer, and in your younger brother's second reader at that.

10. Call attention to his writing. Produces an exquisitely pleasant experience connected with you. If you know he's written a book or an article, ask in class if he wrote it.

These suggestions, incidentally, were put down by a professor. Robert Tyson of Hunter College —(ACP)

"Jazz Jots"

By PAUL WILLIAMS

The many faces of the blues—so often contemplated as a rigidly simple form—encompass more than the masks of comedy and tragedy. In the new Blues Anthology "Have Blues, Will Travel" (World Pacific Jazz 509) there are a number of varied approaches to the blues, however, it is obvious that the improvisional challenge of blues playing is great.

There are eight approaches to the blues in this album. Vamp's Blues, described as an attempt to capture the "20's", reflect more of Charlie some of the frenetic qualities of Parker in the altos of Charlie Mariano and Jerry Dodgion. Pickin' is a guitar blues, basically containing some evidence of the country blues guitar tradition in both conception and technique, with Wes Montgomery indicating his tremendous ability.

The closing track groups Bud Shank, Art Pepper, Chet Baker, Leroy Vinnegar, and Shelly Manne in a stalking number titled Fire.

The performances vary in quality —as they tend to do in a collection of this sort, but Vinnegar, Shank, and Wes Montgomery's great guitar work lend value to this album.

Hot O. Rudy Comes Home

By Lyman Harris, Alumnus

I was in my room in my usual prone position when I heard goofballs in the hall. It sounded like there was more than the usual mob out there, so I took a look to see if they were lynching a professor or something, because I did not want to miss out on any fun.

Coming up the hall was Hot O' Rudy with a safari of freshmen. Two were toting his trunk, one his water cooler, another was carefully carrying his Jayne Mansfield calendar. (He explained to me when she got married). Four more later that he had gotten it on a trade-in for a Marilin Monroe one freshmen were carrying Hot O. He hollered, "Easy with that calendar, new boy! She's got to last She's my house mother for this year."

They came on in the room, Hot O. making sure they squared the corners. I figured Hot O. would be rough on freshmen that hibernated in his room until Thanksgiving, his freshman year.

Hot O said, "O. K., rats, set m stuff over there and me on the bed. Be careful with that leg, new boy. The girls would never forgive you if you messed up my physique. You can go when you finish unpacking my clothes. Just ne on call when I need you."

After the freshmen left, Hot O. noticed for the first time that I was in the room. We shook hands and went through the usual greetings. I asked, "Well, Hot O., did you have a good summer?"

He said, "Yeah, man, the greatest."

I said, What did you do?"

He said, 'Nothing. That's why ti was so great. I slept and ate and gave the girls a thrill every once in a while. I laid in bed so much this summer, I have a plateau on my back."

I asked him if he had a good many dates. He said, "Yeah, I dated lots at first, but finally I gave it up. Girls are too hard to understand. The confuse me."

Hot O. kept on talking, "Seeing as how the fartherest west I had ever been was to the Laurens County Fair, I decided I'd take a little trip west."

I asked how far west he went.

He answered. "Georgia. By the time I got there I was homesick, so I headed on back. Say, did everyone come back to school this year?"

I said, "Yes, just about everybody came back. There may be a few missing or a few stragglers. Your pal, Freddy Freeloader, is back, so you had better eat your food as fast as you get it."

Hot O. didn't too much like Freddy, so when he found out that Freddy was back, he said, "Man, that bum is a talking tapeworm. He's the laziest loafer on the campus. He must have bribed the administration, so he could come back."

I said, "Now, Hot O. Remember, you should have brotherly love. Father Fraser might hear you and have you excommunicated."

He looked down at his watch and said, "Hey, Man, it's 5:30. Ptomaine time. We'd better head on over to the chow hole."

We did.

Grid Talk Begins Again

A somewhat spirited warhead flies over the Presbyterian College football camp now after two weeks of pre-season drills by 29 returnees and 33 recruits who compose the 1958 squad. The rather large assembly eagerly awaits the opening tussle up in Greenville, N. C., with the Buccaneers of East Carolina.

Coach Frank Jones starts his second year at Presbyterian and actually the first go with his own findings—actually a fine assortment of top caliber freshmen and transfers.

Comparitively, Jones states that "the squad stands in better shape than this time a year ago." Not bracing on any optimistic attitude, he tends to refer to the outlook supported by tremendous improvement shown thus far in drills.

JONES

The bad taste of the 1957 season still hangs and a hopeful rejuvenated feeling of encouragement and confidence is stimulated enough to get them fired up for this year's torrid ten-game schedule. Possibly the colorful prestige of raising the lid with Clemson will no longer exist, at least for this campaign anyway, and consequently the 'Androceles vs the Lion' feeling has disappeared.

Coach Dick Voris of Virginia, being quoted commending on his opener regrets having to shoot PC out of the saddle in the "Death Valley" of Clemson a week from Saturday.

NEW TALENT FILLING GAPS

While commenting on this year's squad Jones finds reasonable time to praise the crop of talent playing for the first time at Presbyterian. The Hose Junior varsity lost every game, so a rebuilding program is before the coaching staff. These new recruits will fill the shoes of fourteen seniors at the conclusion of the '58 campaign.

New faces in camp are making it rough at several positions at this time, only the completion of the second week of practice. Little Tommy Boney one of several transfers from South Georgia College who showed up well in spring practice, leads the newcomers and currently holds a first team guard spot.

The Blue Hose improvement shows up noticeably at halfback where several new boys are pushing lettermen for starting berths. Another South Georgian, Bobby Pate, hailing from Fitzgerald, continues to eat up yardage in scrimmage along with Clairton, Pa., freshman William Hill.

The coaching staff also praised the work of tackle Bill Schofill, center Charles Marler, and guard Billy Ogden.

INJURIES REPORTED HURTING

The injury bug which hampered the Blue Hose tremendously last season still continues its plague according to Presbyterian trainer Herb Entrekin.

Some of the team is out with the virus and minor injuries including ends Ted Leahy, Ken Gardner, Paul Chastain, tackle Bob Biggerstaff and halfback Billy Benton.

Tackle Bill Schofill from Fort Valley, Ga., is counted on heavily to bolster the Hose forward wall this season, but is slowed at present by a leg injury. Halfbacks Dave Morgan and Dan Phillips of Greenville, and Marietta, Ga., respectively, have been held out of contact work for the last week. Both are fine prospects and stand to help the PC backfield this year.

The list of injuries number about sixteen, but Entrekin hopes to have most of these in top condition for the opener on September 20 with East Carolina.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Bill Bowman and Mitch Mavromat, 1958 graduates and members of the football team for the last four years, are now serving as assistant coaches . . . Charles Malpass posted a 15-11 won-lost record for Class D Decatur, Ill., in his first year of professional baseball . . . Ex-Hose footballer Harry Hamilton of a few years back, is now head coach in Seneca . . . Ken Webb survivied the last squad cut by pro team Detroit Lions. He performed several plays for the pro club in the All-Star game in August . . . Harry Hoffman and his father successfully defended their National Father-Son title by defeating the Frank Froelings of Coral Gables, Fla., in the finals. . . Jim Shakespeare played Barry Mac Kay in the National singles and bowed out 6-2, 6-1, 62 . . . Tony Benson and Rich Shrigley will co-captain the Blue Hose this fall.

Shakespeare, Hoffman Play Summer Tennis Tournaments

A pair of the sparkling Presbyterian tennis squad was quite active and busy winning tournaments this summer. In fact, Jim Shakespeare and Harry Hoffman are only two of three 1953 varsity returning to participate this spring.

In the Alabama State Open Jim Shakespeare upset first seeded Harry Caton, 6-1, 1-6, 6-2. In the finals Harry Hoffman defaeted Shakespeare 6-3, 8-6. Hoffman and Shakespeare won the doubles over Caton and Chapman 6-3, 6-3.

Hoffman lost to former P.C. great Allan Morris in the South Carolina Open. Again the doubles team of Hoffman - Shakespeare proved formidable in defeating ohTmpson of Georgia Tech and Hopkins of eorgia in straight sets.

Shakespeare, who was unseeded, upset third seeded Ray Stauffer in the Eastern Pennsylvania Championships and moved on to defeat second seeded Lowell Latchaw. Jim bowed to Harry in the finals 7-5, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. The P.C. doubles team again took lal the honors defeating the Eastern Intercollegiate Champs 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

Hoffman won the Eastern States Championship defeating Bill Scarlet in the finals 6,2- 6-3, 6-3. Harry and his father also won the doubles.

Shakespeare turned the story in the Keystone State Championship by trouncing teammate Hoffman, Sr. in the semi-finals and then beat Hoffman, Jr. in the finals 11-9, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4. The Hoffmans teamed to win the doubles.

In the Drexelbrook Invitational, Shakespeare defeated Lex Beck of Duke in the finals 10-8, 6-3.

Sixty-Two Candidates Working To Build Rugged Gridiron Squad

Eighteen Returning Lettermen Will Provide Backbone of Team

By MARTIN CHITTY

Every afternoon sixty-two eager candidates can be found working hard in an effort to make the 1958 Presbyterian College football campaign an improvement over last year. Head Coach Frank Jones plans to build his team around eighteen returning lettermen, but valuable aid will be received from twenty-nine new men.

Four lettermen plus several good-looking newcomers make Coach Jones optimistic about his end positions. Ted Leahy and Paul Chastain look like the top men at the flanks, but Jim Kolb, Wilson Vastine and Ken Gardner will also see a lot of duty. Recently switched from fullback was Roger Foster who hails from Belton.

A problem arose at tackle with Hardy Ledbetter the only returning letterman. The moving of team co-captain Richard Shrigley from center and the fine play of the old candidates plus promise from four new men give reason to believe that the problem has been corrected.

Shrigley and Cecil Morris are presently running first string; however, Ledbetter, Bob Biggerstaff, Ron Barnette, James Walker, and Bill Schofill a 250-pound South Georgia Junior College transfer, are giving rough competition. Three freshmen, James Heath of Warner Robbins, Ga., Dargan Watts of Bishopville, and Joe Davis of Lawrenceville, Ga., have natural ability to make fine linemen.

Guard offers excellent depth potential with twelve candidates vieing for a starting berth. Lettermen John Firby and Don Bridges, along with Tommy Bony, who starred at South Georgia last year, give valuable experience. Alex Dubose and Ken Nix are the other veterans. Freshman Troy Mathews of Decatur, Ga., brother of fullback Bob Mathews, and Billy Ogden, a rugged defender from Macon, Ga., are great looking prospects.

Ed Browder, a sophomore in his first year of college football, and freshman Cecil Drake of Gaffney, Don Hunt, also of Gaffney, Franklin Sinclair of Laurens, Charles Marler of Clinton, and James Chaney, also of Clinton, only need experience to develop into capable guards.

Reporting to center are two hard-hitting linemen who lettered last year; Mac Copeland and big Marion Parrish, who was brought in from tackle, will make the Blue Hose pivot position one not to be taken lightly. Alex Mills of Sylvania, Ga., Glen Leverette of Macon, Ga., are two spirited freshmen who add depth to an already strong post.

A look into the backfield shows Bob Waters battling it out with Nat Cole for the starting quarterback nomination. Waters, last year's first string quarterback, has been looking exceptional on his passes. Cole is an excellent ball handler and leader and only needs to sharpen up on passing.

TONY BENSON

Next in line is Ron Isger, who lettered last year. The other returnee is Pat Malone, a great little competitor in his second year of varsity ball. Possible stars of the near future are freshmen Bobby Joiner of Macon, Ga., and Joe Nixon of Carrolton, Ga.

Co-captain Tony Benson, a great all-around ball player, returns to his halfback post where he led the team in rushing last year. Backing up Benson are John Lucas and Freshman Dan Phillips of Marietta, Ga. Gordon Stanley has been Benson's running mate at left half during the first two weeks of practice. Freshmen Bobby Pate of Fitz-

TED LEAHY will be on the receiving end of many of PC's passes this season.

Grid Schedule Lists Ten Tough Opponents

The Presbyterian Blue Hose football schedule will consist of ten games, four games being played at home and six away.

The Blue Hose opens its annual football card away from home against East Carolina September 20. Last year's opener with Clemson was dropped.

The first home game for the Blue Hose will be Davidson, being played on October 11. Homecoming festivities for the Hosemen will be celebrated on October 18 against Elon. The Parent's Day game is next on the schedule of home games, matched against Appalachian on November 15. The fourth and final home game will be on November 27 against arch rival Newberry. This is our Thanksgiving game and also closes the season.

The Blue Hose have six games away from home. After opening with East Carolina, Presbyterian takes on the Lenoir-Rhyne eleven at Hickory, N. C. Wofford, our opponent for the next week-end, will be played away October 25 the Hose travel to Florida to take on Tampa. The Hose next off game will match them against Catawba on November 1. The Citadel closes our away games on November 8 in Charleston.

Quarterback . . .

BOB WATERS' field leadership will be one of the mainstays of the PC offensive machine.

Ping Pong Tourney Begins Intramurals

The Student Christian Association will begin the fall intramural program Monday, September 15, with the signing of entries for a ping pong tournament. The winner of the tourney will receive an individual key chain trophy. On the same date a bridge tournament will also be set up on a permanent partner basis. Points for these events will not be given towards the large intramural trophy awarded at the end of the school year. Students who are interested may sign the entry list posted in the Douglas House game romo.

Tuesday at chepal period representatives of all teams interested in intramural football will meet on the second floor of Douglas House with the SCA intramural committee to set up the rules and plans for intramural footbal lwhich is slated to begin later in the week. Freshmen who are interested in forming teams should see Mr. Montgomery no later than 3:00 p. m., Monday, September 15.

Benson, Shrigley Are Grid Team Co-Captains

Two rugged individuals—one a back, the other a lineman—will lead the Presbyterian College football team as co-captains this season.

They are Halfback Tony Benson of Chester, and Tackle Richard Shrigley of Clinton, whom teammates elected by poular vote. Both men are seniors playing their last season of ball for the Blue Hose.

Benson is a knotty 175-pound ball carrier who paced the PC running attack in 1957. A spirited performer, he broke into the starting lineup as a freshman to earn his varsity letter then, and he has been a regular ever since. Benson also is considered an ace defensive player, both in the tackling department and on pass defense.

Shrigley missed football with a shoulder injury last season but returned to actiou in spring practice. A versatile lineman, he has played every position in the line well except end. The big 215-pounder nailed down a starting varsity guard assignment as a freshman, played first string center his sophomore year and then was shifted to tackle in the spring workouts. It is hoped he will help stabilize this question mark post of the Hose forward wall.

In announcing the captains, Coach Frank Jones said he was pleased with the selections made by the team. He pointed out that both Benson and Shrigley are unusually capable gridmen with capacity for strong leadership.

Scenes from the Student Lounges

Douglas House is Showplace of Campus

Presbyterian College's now completed new student activities building was officially opened this week as returning students began to make use of its fine facilities.

It is proving to be the show place of the campus.

President Marshall W. Brown said special ceremonies over the building will await PC's 1958 Homecoming activities on October 18 when hundreds of returning alumni can take part.

A two-pronged salute is planned for that time. The structure will be officially named the Douglas House in honor of Dr. D. M. Douglas, one of the institution's foremost presidents. And it also will be dedicated as a memorial to Presbyterian College alumni who lost their lives in World War II and the Korean War.

The new student center is a two-story structure of colonial Georian design, with portico and four large limestone columns, in keeping with the architectural theme of the campus. It stands next to Bailey Hall dormitory, completed three years ago, and directly across from Spencer dormitory.

STUDENT LOUNGES

On the terrazzo tiled first floor are situated two large student lounges, snack shop, post office, book store, recreation room, faculty lounge, office and ladies lounge. The second floor includes the college vocational guidance center, three guest rooms with private baths, two large meeting rooms, a sound-proof music room for band and glee club practice, a day students room and seven offices. Self-service laundry, heating and storage facilities are located in the basement.

A Carolina bluestone terrace extends to the rear of the building, opening off from the main lounge, snack shop and recreation room, and overlooking PC's all-weather tennis courts.

TENTATIVE SCHEDULE

A tentative schedule for the hours of operation in the new student center, Douglas House was today released by Mr. Irving Montgomery, Director of student activities. The hours of the main lounge were set to coincide with the opening and closing hours of the canteen, 8:00 a.m and 10:00 p.m. Tentatively, the hours of the game room have been set on a twenty-four hour basis. Mr. Montgomery stated that these hours were on a trial basis and the conduct of the students would determine their permanency.

A variety of magazines have been subscribed to for use in the main lounge, and two additonal ping pong tables have been ordered to expand the facilities of the game room.

The only rules that have been set so far concerning the new student center are the prohibition of food and beverages in the main lounge, and the use of the coffee tables as foot rests. Mr. Montgomery explained, that "while these rules may be provoking at this time, when the first dance week comes and the students are able to show off the furniture with pride, they will realize the worth of the rule."

Dr. John Steveson Returns As English Department Head

Dr. John W. Stevenson has returned to Presbyterian College after spending the last year on the faculty of Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss. He is assuming the duties of Head of the English Department.

Stevenson joined the Presbyterian College faculty in 1950, immediately after receiving his Master's Degree from Vanderbilt University. He earned his doctorate from that institution in 1954. Undergraduate work was done at Wofford, from which he received his BA in 1948.

His main interests center around literary criticism, and Dr. Stevenson has had two artices published in recent years in the South Carolina Quarterly. One dealt with "The Literary Reputation of Stephen Crane," and the other analyzed "The Patoral Setting in the Poetry of A. E. Housman."

He holds membership in the Modern Language Association and South Atlantic Modern Language Association.

During his previous stay in Clinton, the PC English professor was active in church affairs, serving as teacher in the First Presbyterian Church and singing in the church choir. He is married to the former Miss Russell Allen of Spartanburg, and they have a young son.

Twenty-three Seniors Attend ROTC Camp

Twenty-three Presbyterian College cadets attended the 1958 ROTC Camp conducted at Fort Benning, Ga.

This six-week period of practical college program which leads to training was part of the four-year in the Officer's Reserve Corps commissions as second lieutenants

Those Presbyterian College students who trained at Fort Benning included: Frank P. Ballenger, Camden, S.C.; Ronald M. Barlett, Atlanta, Ga.; Richard D. Carter, Florence, S.C.; Kenneth A. Caswell, Paris, Ky.; Donald R. Chapman, Lincolnton, N.C.; Albert H. Copeland, Jr., Mooresville, N.C.; Aaron O. Crocker and Russell B. Prince, Union, S.C.; Marion W. Dowdle and John P. McGee, Clinton, S.C.; John B. Childers and Olice H. Embry, Jr., Birmingham, Ala.; James E. Elliott, Georgetown, S.C.; John H. Firby, Belvelege Park, Ga.; Robert R. Hafner, dere, S.C.; Roger D. Godwin, Col-Chester, S.C.

PC Students Attend Montreat Conference

Six PC students attended the regional Westminster Fellowship conference held at Montreat, N. C., August 25-30. These students, Glenn Gibson, Sonny Embry, John Roberts, Ann Gettys, Mary Virginia Neil, and Clara Montgomery, participated in a week of fellowship and learning under the theme of Worship and Prayer.

Morning periods were devoted to Bible study, the afternoon to free time and workshops, and the evening to a worship service and recreation. Each evening service was organized into one of the many different ways that corporate worship, srevices can be conducted in the Presbyterian Church.

gerald, Ga., and Jerry Lucas of Struthers, Ohio, run behind Stanley, respectively. Billy Benton, Fred Stanley and, and Ed Messer, a speed merchant, add experience to the halfback points.

Another fine looking group of freshmen are at halves, from the excellent recruiting crop. Along with Pate, Lucas, and Phillips are Dave Morgan of Greenville, Bobby Beddingfield of Columbia, and Bobby Sherrill of Atlanta, Ga.

A converted end, Bob Mathews, leads the field at fullback, with Bill Sease and Bill Hill, who played freshman bal at Pittsburgh before entering service, giving close support. J. W. Drew and Bruce Barnes are also experienced at this position. Harold Raeford of Fayetteville, N. C., Lynn Gorman of Atlanta, Ga., and Ed Foscter of Woodruff, a group of hard-running freshmen, add more depth, making fullback a nine-man deep position.

Campus Shows Results of Summer Improvements

Final flourish of summer improvements mark the beginning of P.C.'s 78th session this week.

Completion of the new $250,000 student center represents the biggest change on the campus landscape. But college maintenance crews under Plant Superintendent O. F. Beatty have been busy througout the summer months renovating existing facilities and making improvements geared to the general comfort of the student body.

Business Manager S. Edward Campbell said that all dormitories have had their floors reworked and new furniture added. Smythe Dormitory, largest on campus with a 144 capacity, has been remodeled throughout much of its interior. Classroom floors in Neville Hall also receiving refinishing work, and the Jacobs Science Hall were while LeRoy Springs Gymnasium given a sprucing up of exteriors. The addition of new pressure reducing systems, meanwhile, is designed to improve heating to all buildings including faculty homes.

Two large parking areas, now under construction, will provide space for more than 150 automobiles and will eliminate parking on the one-way avenues leading to and from the center of the campus. One is located behind Spencer Dormitory and the other behind Bailey Hall dormitory. Grading work is being done through the office of County Supervisor Bennie Blakely.

The City of Clinton is cooperating toward improving the drainage of PC's indoor swimming pool. Campbell pointed out the college had purchased drainage pipe, and city workers laid it.

Vol. XXXVII Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., September 19, 1958 No. 2

Bruce Prince Earns Top Rank As ROTC Group Commander

Jackson Holds Number Two Slot As Executive Staff Officer of Unit

Bruce Prince, a science major from Union, is the Cadet Battle Group Commander for the 1958-59 school session it was announced last week by Lt. Col. W. W. Barnett, PMS&T of the Presbyterian College ROTC detachment.

Prince is the first cadet officer to hold the title of Battle Group Commander. He heads the new organization which replaces the Battalion of previous years, and holds the rank of Cadet Major.

Assisting Prince as Battle Group Executive Officer is Herman Jackson who holds the rank of Cadet Captain.

Named to the top staff position of S-1 was Phil McGee, who will serve in the capacity of staff personnel officer. Roger Godwin is S-2, and as such is the Intelligence Officer of the Unit. S-3 is John Childers, who has the duties of staff training officer. Assistant S-3 is Jimmy Elliott. Joe Negley is the Battle Group S-4 and is the officer in charge of clothing and equipment.

These staff members all hold the rank of Cadet First Lieutenant, except Elliott who is a Cadet Second Lieutenant.

Commanding A Company is Fred Stanley with the rank of Cadet First Lieutanent. Assisting him as Executive officer is Charles Quinn, and the platoon leaders are Don Chapman, and Toby Hunter. These three are Cadet Second Lieutenants.

Robert Hafner is Company Commander of B. Company. He also

John Osman Named For Alumni Gold P

Presbyterian College will present its coveted Alumni Gold P Award for 1958 to John Osman, vice-president of the Ford Foundation for Adult Education.

Dr. Osman will receive his award at homecoming on October 18. It will be presented at the Alumni luncheon before his fellow classmates of PC's class of 1933 assembled for their silver anniversary reunion.

The 1958 recipient was chosen by the Presbyterian alumni board of directors for his achievements with the Fund for Adult Education. He has been connected with this organization for the past six years and prior to that was professor of philosophy at Southwestern at Memphis. His wife, the former Mary Williams of Charleston, also attended PC.

IRC Will Show Film At Monday Meeting

"Desert Horizons," a film on the East as timely as today's headlines, will highlight the first meeting of the International Relations Club, scheduled for Monday night.

Oil has almost become the touchstone to higher standards of living in Saudi Arabia. This color film, beautifully photographed and informative, tells of the past 30 years and the growth of this fabulous land —and its problems—including the important part American industry is playing there.

The meeting is to be in the meeting room of the Douglas House at 7:30, September 22. This event is scheduled for members and nonmembers alike, with freshmen invited particularly.

Every interested person is urged to attend this short, but informative program.

Robed Choir Chooses Tentative Candidates

In tryouts held Monday night in the Music Room of the new Douglas House, seventeen candidates were placed on the tentative lists of members for the 1958-59 Robed Choir season. Applicants were selected on the basis of tests given for their voice range, pitch memory, and tonal memory.

First tenors chosen were Luther Bell, Frank Sells, and Mike Jarrett. Second tenors are Paul Layton, Dave Lee, Doug Miller, Hal Roberts, and Paul Williams. Bob Stevens, John Collins, Dick McGaughey, Ted Burn, and Charles Cook are new first basses. Pounding out the new candidates are Paul White. Dick Curnow, Dave Waters, and Graham Edmunds in the second bass section.

A big year is seen for the PC Choristers as they bring their message in song to countless hundreds of Presbyterians. Highlight of the year will be the spring tour down through Florida.

Dr. Edouard Patte is back for his twelfth season as director of the choir. During that time the choir has presented almost five hundred performances throughout the South.

Officers of the choir include Dick Carter, Florence, president: Rutledge Durant, Manning, vice-president; Cliff Stovall, Mullins, secretary; Tom Wise, Thomasville, Ga., chaplain; Lonnie Love, McColl, treasurer; and Brit Sparn, McRae, Ga., custodian.

Alpha Sigs to Open Fall Social Activities Wednesday

PC's season of fall social events gets underway Wednesday, September 24, as Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity holds the first of six open socials to be given by the fraternities during the coming weeks.

The purpose of these "Open Socials" is to acquaint new students with fraternity life as it is found here at PC. All freshmen, non-fraternity men, co-eds and the college faculty are cordially invited to attend these functions.

Each Wednesday night for the next six weeks there will be one of these open socials, all beginning at 7:30 p. m.

Following the Alpha Sigs will be Pi Kappa Alpha on October 1; Theta Chi on October 8; Kappa Alpha October 15; Sigma Nu October 22; and Pi Kappa Phi on October 29.

In addition to the open socials the Inter-Fraternity Council Calendar lists four topnotch dance weekends, beginning with Homecoming on October 17; the Christmas Dance December 12-13; Military Ball March 6-7; and the Spring Dance at a date to be announced later Fraternity smoker dates have been set for December. Sigma Nu leads off on December 3; Alpha Sigma Phi is December 4; Kappa Alpha December 5; Pi Kappa Phi December 8; Theta Chi December 9. and Pi Kappa Alpha on December 10.

Enrollment Near Record As Registration Completed

PC's Seventy-Eighth Annual Session Rejects Greatest Number of Applicants

A total of 538 students enrolled at Presbyterian College for the start of the fall semester, Registrar Rosalyn Martin announced today.

She said a few scattered late registrations continue to come in, with the result the final tally may exceed the record of 541 of two years ago.

Actually, PC had more applicants this year than ever before—rejecting more than two of every three—and a longer waiting list of qualified students. But a number of boarding students lived with Clinton residents in 1956, and this policy no longer is followed.

General registration for all students was completed last Friday afternoon. The first classwork of the 78th session began on Saturday morning and will follow the regular schedule until Thanksgiving holidays on November 26-30.

Fourteen states and Korea are represented among the Presbyterian College student body this year.

South Carolina, of course, leads with a vast majority of 310 students. Georgia, the state whose Presbyterians also support PC, runs second with 96. North Carolian has 71; Florida 18; Virginia 9; Alabama 7; Pennsylvania 7; Kentucky 5; Tennessee 3; Mississippi 2; New York 2; Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia, 1 each.

The Republic of Korea has five yuong men attending Presbyterian College this session.

Taylor Martin Secured To Direct SCA Bridge

Taylor Martin, an imminent bridge player, has secured for the SCA's bridge tournament the equipment necessary for 13 tables of duplicate bridge

Mr. Martin explained that duplicate bridge, which is used for all tournaments, is played a little differently than the regular bridge presently played in the dormitories.

The SCA is also presently looking for a bridge teacher to teach beginning bridge in the afternoons at Douglas House.

PC Alumni Chapters Plan Fall Meetings

Chapter meetings of Presbyterian College alumni in four areas are scheduled for the coming weeks, Alumni Director Ben Hay Hammet announced today.

Kicking off the series of fall assemblies is the alumni group of Richland County, which will meet this Thursday night at Morrison's Cafeteria in Columbia. John Montgomery, managing editor of The State, serves as chapter president.

The Augusta-Aiken alumni will meet on September 25 at the Amber House near Augusta, with George Ewing of Augusta, as president. Former Presbyterian College students of Clarendon, Lee and Sumter Counties will assemble on the evening of September 30 in the educational building of the Sumter First Presbyterian Church. Pitts DeLorme of Sumter, heads this group.

And the Charlotte area alumni have set October 9 for their next meeting. It is to be held in Kuester's Restaurant there, with Jim Banbury as president.

Dr. Marshall W. Brown, president of PC, and Head Coach Frank Jones will speak to most of these groups. Color slides of the PC campus will be included in some of the programs.

Even as these meetings get underway, other alumni chapters of Presbyterian Colege make plans to join the fall series.

Ultra-Casual . . .

From an aesthetic point of view, we can be justifiably proud of the campus, especially the addition of the Douglas House and the prospects of a new auditorium. The former provides a new focus for social and organizational activities, while the latter will afford facilities for the chapel and cultural programs needed to supplement our academic and social activities.

Thus we envision a gradual metamorphosis in campus life if the student body will accept the challenge. Lest we be misconstrued, may we state that certain aspects of PC —its informal and friendly atmosphere among many others—should be maintained. They are both typical of our campus and desirable.

However, the "custom" of ultra-casual attire—more pointedly, sloppy dress—practiced at times is neither becoming to the students in particular or the college in general. Aside from the impression made on visitors, we would stress the point that dress often reflects our personal attitude to our surroundings, in this case our campus.

We do not propose a code, but we would discourage inappropriate dress particularly in class and in the dining hall; for example, sweat suits and shower slippers among others. When dating, attending fraternity meetings, etc., most students appear as the epitome of the college undergrad.

We certainly do not propose coats and ties other than at Sunday dinner, but we see no reason to appear our worst at other times.

We would remind our readers, whether they subscribe to the notion or not, that appearance is an important factor for acceptance in present American society, at least in those fields which most of us will enter. Also, we observe that a good majority of students already practice a simple code of decorum.

Thus, as we are justly proud of the PC physical plant, may we individually and jointly demonstrate pride in our appearance.

THE SWINGING BRASSIE

A bag of clubs, a flask of Scotch, and Thou
Beside me caddying in the Wildnerness
Ah, wildnerness were Paradise enough.
The swinging brassie strikes; and having struck, Moves on. Nor all your wit or future luck shall lure it back to cancel half a stroke
Nor from the card a single seven pluck.

LITTLE JACK HORNER

Little Jack Horner sat in an angle meditating. Before we go farther please clearly understand this is blank verse.
If it reads strangely, and the accent falls in unexpected places, don't dare to criticize. Remember once for all, that I and Milton judge questions like that—so much said, I start again.
In a corner he sat, remote from comrades. Resolutely his hand clutched a delicious pie Anon his thumb
from the pasty depth produced a currant (Excuse another interruption, but observe the beauty of that ultimate line!)
With equal ease I might have written it
"produced a currant from the pasty depth," but I prefer to be originial.. In his soul the obsession of his own superior virtue grew and prevailed, till at the last he cried
"I am a paragon of Excellence." Happy Jack Horner, thus fully convinced of his remarkable superiority and happy readers who peruse his tale retold in such maginificent blank verse.

Chapter One: The Meeting

Late one afternoon, as Nan Baker, the beautiful rancher's daughter, was returning to the beautiful ranch, she spied two riders riding down the trail toward her. As they drew even with her buckboard they made their horses stop.

"Now we're even with you," said the taller, leaner of the two, who was wearing chaps and a fancy trail blazer. "I'm Rex King and this here"—he patted his horse's head—"is my trusty steed, Fella. And this here"—he patted the other man on the head—"is my sidekick, Al Pine."

"And this here," said Al Pine, "is a pal o' mine, my palomino, Sal Mineo."

"I'm Nan Baker, the beautiful rancher's daughter," said Nan, with a coy toss of her yellow curls. "What can I do for you boys, men?"

"Well, ma'm," said Rex, "we'd surely be mighty obliged if you could kindly tell us how far it is to Sundown, please."

"Well, I reckon Sundown's a good five-hours ride from here, mister," said Nan. "And it's not long 'til sundown."

"We're surely mighty obliged to you, ma'm," said Rex, and turned to his companion. "Looks like we'll have to bed down on the prairie tonight," he said, and turned to Nan. "You see, ma'm, we're working our way through Colorado, and we ran into a little trouble back up in the canyon; we had planned to get to Sundown this evenin'."

"If it's work you're lookin' for," said Nan, with a coy toss of her yellow curls, "I'm sure my father, Rancher Baker, could help you out. Come on over to the ranch; it's just beyond that ridge beyond that ridge beyond that ridge."

"We're mighty obliged to you, ma'm," said Rex. "I hate sleepin' out here on the prairie."

Jazz Jots

By PAUL WILLIAMS

Just about two years ago there was a performer singing in night clubs for a few hundred dollars a week. This year that same performer expects to earn more than $250,000. The singer in point is no other than Johnny Mathis.

Johnny's first release, Wonderful Wonderful, was first released in the fall of 1956 and sold over one million copies. Since that time Columbia Records has released eleven single records, eight of which have sold more than a million copies. Columbia has also released five Mathis LP's which have all been tremendous sellers.

Johnny is an exceptional singer because he doesn't alienate the mass market. He sings songs, not ditties. And he sings every bit of a song. Johnny does not fit the role of the current pop singer. He prefers listening to Miles Davis and Stan Getz rather than listening to or singing the current rock 'n roll.

At the age of ten, while growing up in San Francisco, Johnny first began to develop an early interest in music. At the same time, however, he began developing an interest in sports. He made the all-city high school basketball team and became a track star at a colloge in San Francisco.

After college Johnny began singing in small clubs. He listened attentively to the singing styles of Ella Fitzgerald, Lena Horne, and Nat Cole. One night Johnny was singing at the Blackhawk Club in San Francisco and was heard by George Avakian of the Columbia Record staff. After hearing only two songs, he immediately signed Johnny to a contract.

Since then, Johnny's climb up the ladder of success has been unequalled. He says that his ambition in life is to work 20 weeks a year and spend the rest with his family or someone that he could convince to marry him. Also, in 20 years he would like to be an advisor to a record company, for advisor to a record company, for he feels that he has learned more of the inner workings of the business. His goal is one of executive responsibility.

It is this sense of responsibility that may sustain Mathis' success where other young singers fail. He knows what he is doing and what he wants to do. He speaks and thinks intelligently, with confidence in his ability and potentials.

Chances are he'll make it.

A Buffalo man dug through three and one-half tons of refuse at the incinerator before he found his wife's wedding and engagement rings which she had accidentally thrown away. The work took him 45 minutes.

Then five city workers took over and shoveled the same three and one-half tons of refuse into a pit. It took them two hours.

World Travelers . . .

Moslems, Shrines, And General Motors

By SONNY EMBRY

From America, to Europe, to the Holy Land in troubled Asia Minor, and back. Such was the itinerary, in the briefest form expressable, of Doctors T. Layton Fraser and Joseph Gettys this past summer.

Dr. Gettys, accompanied by Mrs. Gettys, toured the Holy Land in a short nine weeks stopping enroute in London, Paris, Geneva, Florence, Athens, Rome, Frankfort, and Cologne to name only a few.

Dr. Fraser, who traveled in a group headed by Dr. Louis C. LaMotte, President of Presbyterian Junior College, Maxton, N. C., visited in several of the above named cities and also enjoyed the scenery in Instabul, Cyprus, and Lebanon. Dr. Fraser landed in Lebanon one day after the Marines.

It would be impossible in an article of this size to capture on paper all of the interesting events, the impressionable scenery, and the deep emotions felt-by the travelers; however, certain high points can be mentioned while the remainder is left to further questioning and to the imagination.

In an interview today, both men remarked of the deep impression made in their minds of the barren land, the rocky country, and the undercurrent of unrest which seemed present during most of their stay. In contrast, however, was the liberal hospitality which the Arabs displayed.

Even in this hospitable surrounding, Dr. Gettys felt that the people, deeply rooted in their Moslem faith, were always trying to discover the "angle" that the Americans had behind their generous foreign aid program. He explanied this in the light of the fact that their religion is not one of redemptive love. Therefore, it is natural for them to question motive and to fight with each other.

Dr. Fraser felt that a large majority of the people did not know the isues behind the tensions towards the West, but that the antagonism was a product of their leaders.

Both men expressed sympathy towards the Jordan side of the Israe-Jordan conflict. The contrast between the two countries in the fertility of the land is almost completely in favor of Israel. Israel seemingly could ask for no richer land, while Jordan is barren except for one small part of the Jordan valley.

In Jerusalem, which is divided into the old and new sections, the tourists enjoyed the striking buildings, and all modern comforts. The old section one had to tour on foot due to the narrow streets, the crowded conditions, and the terraced evenues.

Dr. Gettys stated that in Jerusalem, the worship is dominated by a number of orthodox groups that condemn each other as being wrong if they differ. They dress differnetly, and even believe that when

Hose to Attack East Carolina Tomorrow

Team Set to Use Wing-T In Initial Gridiron Contest

By MARTIN CHITTY

Fall is here and it's time for that opening whistle again. The Battlin' Blue Hose of Presbyterian will get their grid season underway Saturday night at East Carolina. East Carolina has already met Emory and Henry, defeating them by a 12 to 0 score.

Giving good reason to believe that East Carolina will see a more versatile attack than last year is the brilliant passing of Quarterback Bob Waters, a hard-running backfield led by Co-Captain Tony Benson, and a rugged line averaging 200 pounds.

Although several players have been on the injury list the team has been in excellent spirits. Even the scrimmages in pre-season workouts were most peppy.

Competition has been keen at all posts making every man work to the best of his ability.

The PC'uns will be out for revenge since last year's East Carolina-Blue Hose clash ended in a victory for the North Carolinians. A better brand of football than was seen in last year's meeting will be played Saturday as both teams are considerably improved over last year.

The Blue Hose will use a Wing "T" type of offense while their opponents will run from a regular "T" offense. The PC first team backfield features hard-running backs in Benson, Gordon Stanley, and Bob Mathews; however, scatbacks Bobby Pate, Ed Messer, and John Lucas will see plenty of action. These three boys can break loose at any time. Quarterback Waters will have as his targets two excellent receivers in ends Ted Leahy and Paul Chastain. Both are also fine defensive men.

This game will be especially important to Coach Frank Jones, as it is felt that an opening win would mean a great deal to team morale.

A traveling squad of 42 players is expected to make the trip to Greenville, N. C. They will leave Friday morning.

BUDDY MULLIS—Sports Editor

New Life To Gridiron

This year something new has been added to college football—an ingredient the gridiron expert had in mind when referring to the game as our autumnal madness. Seemingly fearful to many coaches and to the enjoyment of spectators, football is now more unpredictable than ever before.

The prestige once held by a so-called point after touchdown has suddenly seen its decline. Very seldom will it hold the spotlight in a tightly matched contest in 1958. Just what will provide a verdict in a close game?

The authorities have conceived a variation of the theme. A rule involving two points after a touchdown has been stamped, sealed and approved.

Let's picture an exciting battle between two evenly matched teams. They enter the final quarter in a scoreless tie. One of our players shakes a halfback loose and he goes all the way. Now comes the moment of decision. Will the quarterback call for a place-kick (one point) or attempt to run or pass (two points)?

If our philosopher elects to convert, his club will emerge ahead, 7-0, that is when we assume the kick is good. The other team, however, ties the score in the waning moments and attempts a running play after the touchdown which will bring a reward of two points. They are successful and the final score reads 8-7. Football USA will most likely see this type of situation week after week and the sports pages will be crammed with these somewhat odd-sounding scores.

For the man calling the play, football always has been a gambling sort of game. With the addition of the rule involving the point or points after touchdown, the quarterback now assumes the role of a master gambler. On the high court of his judgment will hang the story of many an anxious afternoon.

Whether the aristocrats of the game will be affected in any marked degree by the rule is pure speculation. No doubt an unheralded squad, here and there, will poke its head above the storm to receive acclaim in Sunday's headlines.

Yes, it's going to a fun year, a year when the quarterback and the coach will be second-guessed by all the Monday morning experts in the land.

SOCK PREDICTS

The Blue Stocking Sports Staff put their heads together this week and came up with a few picks in and around this neck of the woods—namely the Little Three.

Wofford opened with fireworks last week as the Bradshaw and Co. aggregation saw little Western Carolina tougher than Coach Snidow anticipated. This week the Terrier runs into someone more their size in Lenoir-Rhyne at Spartanburg. The Terriers should win this one but we see the margin at only one point.

Newberry and Citadel both encounter each other in an interesting opening clash this weekend. The Bulldogs carry the edge by one touchdown.

Now to the all-important opener for the Blue Hose up at Greenville, N. C. PC could be in better shape physically, but this corner sees a Hose victory at long last. This one we call by a 20-8 count.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Guard Tommy Boney quit football this week due to personal reasons. He plans to reside in Jacksonville, Fla., with his wife and attend Jacksonville University . . . Senior Al Copelan of Mooresville, N. C., finished fourth in the ROTC Golf Tournament at Fort Benning, Ga., this summer . . . It has been the opinion of many a sports-minded bystander for years that baseball would be doing not only itself but all the fans a favor by cutting down to a season of four months' duration, running from opening day on May 1 and ending on the last day of August, with the World Series held during the first 10 days of September, not October . . . Coach Leighton points toward another winnng year with newcomers Tom Elliott, St. Petersburg, Fla.; David Greensiade, Bermuda; Bill Stone, Henderson, N. C.; Beansie Frampton, Charleston; Ed Cavenich, Charlotte, N. C. . . . Six new football rules which will be in effect this fall: (1) new two-point system after a touchdown; (2) one-arm blocking rule; (3) lineman downfield when the ball leaves passer; (4) new substitution rule; (5) changing five timeouts per half to four; (6) out of bounds on kickoff will result in 5-yard penalty and another kickoff.

Co-Captains . . .

Little Three Conference Dates From Year 1916

The so talked about little three conference of today had its first taste of athletic competition in the year of 1916. At that time people in this section of the country referred to the conference as the big four since they played some of the best gridiron teams in the South.

They not only played the giants on even terms but many times won close games with the big schools. This was seen in the season of 1930 when Presbyterian defeated N. C. State 2-0 and Wake Forest 12-0.

With the exception of the war years when the Wofford Terriers were idle, the competition has become faster and tougher and the interest among the coaches, players and spectators in this area has increased each year.

Throughout the history of the little four conference, Presbyterian College Blue Hose have the best record. Under the leadership of the late Walter Johnson, the Blue Hose won 53 games while losing only 18 and tying 5, and capturing the Little Four championship 14 times.

The fighting Hose have won 22 and lost only 16 against the present powerful Wofford Terriers and a very respectable 26 wins and only 14 losses against the Newberry Indians.

Sports Quiz

The Broadway Theatre again offers a free pass to the PC student who can correctly answer this week's sports quiz. The first student to bring the correct answers to Buddy Mullis, 215 Bailey, will be declared the winner.

1) What is the lowest score by which a football game can be won?

2) Joe Tinker was a member of what famous baseball combination?

3) What position on a football team is most vulnerable to injury?

Flashy Back . . .

BOBBY PATE, a junior college transfer from Fitzgerald, Ga., holds down a first string position on the Presbyterian grid squad.

December Pledging . . .

Mid - Semester Standings Will Determine Eligibility

A new system of first semester rushing will be used for the first time this year, it has been announced by Bruce Prince, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

The new system, presented by the Inter-Fraternity Council, and approved by the faculty, moves Rush Week up to the first week after Thanksgiving of each year. Eligibility for pledging will depend upon mid-semester grades, and admittance into the brotherhood will depend upon attaining a "C" average for the entire semester.

Also included in the new system is a clause that provides that membership will be limited to fifty, or 10% of the fall enrollment for men.

The amendment to the IFC Constitution, as approved by the faculty, is presented in its entirey below:

That the Rushing of students will begin in the first semester and continue to Pledge Day.

That each Fraternity will have one Open Social beginning the fourth Wednesday of September and continuing each Wednesday thereafter until all Fraternities have had one Open Social. No Open Social will be postponed unless approved by the IFC (Subject to Faculty rule and Article IV, Section 2).

All dances, Open Socials, or Closed Socials, when ladies attend, come under the Faculty Rule. The IFC has the right, if necessary in the interest of Rushing, to control same, even when ladies do not attend, subject to the approval of the Faculty Committee on Fraternities.

That quiet period will begin at midnight of the final smoker and continue until 6:00 p. m. on Pledge Day. The last Fraternity having a Smoker will be granted permission to give out their bids under supervision of the IFC.

Pledge Day will be Friday following the last Smoker and pledging will be from 2:00 p. m. to 4:00 p. m. at a place designated by the IFC.

That mid-semester grades will determine the eligibility for pledging of first-year men. A total of ten (10) quality points is required for pledging for regularly enrolled students.

A list of students prepared by the registrar of students eligible to be pledged will be furnished the Fraternity by the Faculty Committee on Fraternities before the first Smoker. This list will be given to the President of the IFC.

The Faculty Committee on Fraternities will approve at the first of each semester a list prepared by the registrar of old students who have eight (8) quality points and eligible at any time thereafter for pledging and those who have a "C" average and eligible for initiation, according to rules of the constitution.

In the future no fraternity shall have as brother and pledges whether inactive or not, a membership greater than ten per cent (10%) of the fall enrollment. (men only) or fifty (50), whichever is greater. Provided further, that a fraternity whose membership is greater than ten per cent (10%) of fifty (50), shall be allowed to pledge twelve (12) in order not to skip a year with no pledges and be ineligible to compete for senior honors, etc.

Passed by the IFC and recommended for adoption by the Faculty Committee on Fraternities.

the Messiah coms He will be in their particular dress. Some allow no women inside heir places of worship, while others permit them in special corners of the place of worship.

Most every place that was in any way connected with the life of Christ had a church built on top of it. About the only place they didn't build a church was the Sea of Galilee. Dr. Gettys stated that most of these, if not all, were not places of regular worship as are our churches, but are shrines.

Dr. Fraser, somewhat disappointed with shrines covering many points of interest, was particularly impressed and inspired with the hill Golgotha, and the tomb excavated in the last century by General Gordon.

Here one can see the possible tomb of Christ in the side of the hill, cut out of stone. Although this tomb is much disputed as to being the tomb of Christ, it was still a very wonderful experience to go inside, and to see it as it was thousands of years ago.

The tomb is cut longer on one end as though it was hastily done to accommodate a taller man. An analysis of the soil showed that human remains were in the soil. Whether it is the true tomb or not, it at least did give one a picture of how it might hvae been.

In this land of the old and the new many things have been changed, but "Though many things have changed, many scenes are natural and reminiscent of the life and teachings of Christ," Dr. Fraser said.

Dr. Gettys stated as side remark later in the interview, the interesting fact that the Jordan people (who have the old side of the city) drive Chrysler products and the Israel people tend towards General Motors products.

Th tourists are now back at school with enough film and slides to provide many interesting hours of armchair travel and sightseeing

Homecoming Speakers to Dedicate Student Center

• Special Event Set For October 18

Three distinguished leaders of the Southern Presbyterian Church will participate in special ceremonies dedicating Presbyterian College's new student Center, President Marshall W. Brown anounced today.

Taking a lead in this homecoming highlight for Oct. 18 will be: Dr. John McSween of Clinton, former Presbyterian College president; Dr. Marshall S. Woodson, president of Flora McDonald College; and Col Powell A. Fraser, featured religious speaker. Woodson and Fraser are PC alumni.

Plans for homecoming are being built around these three speakers, class reunions and the Presbyterian Elon football game scheduled for that night. All indications point to one of the largest homecoming occasions to be held on the PC campus.

The special exercises will serve to dedciate the new $250,000 building to Presbyterian College alumni killed in World War II and the Korean War, and officially to name it the Douglas House in memory of former president Dr. Davison M. Douglas. This program is scheduled for 3:30 p. m. on October 18.

President Brown, in announcing the three speakers, expressed deep satisfaction over being able to secure them for this occasion. He pointed out that each has had intimate ties with PC through the years.

Dr. McSween served as president of Presbyterian College from 1928 to 1935, later was pastor of the Chester Purity Presbyterian Church, president of Tusculum Col-

PC Science Students Doing Graduate Study

Dr. Neil Whitelaw, head of the physics department,, today announced the enrollment of three students in graduate school. The four men, all of Clinton, have received excellent scholarships and-or fellowships.

Jimmie Suttle is attending Duke UUniversity on a Woodrow Wilson scholarship, the first awarded to a P. C. student. He has no teaching duties, and receives $1,400 per year plus tuition with extra benefits for a wife and children.

George Jacks is a graduate assistant in math and phys at Clemson, receiving $1,400 per year for teaching remedial algebra. He will major in Nuclear Science and spend next summer at the Savannah River Plant of the Atomic Energy Commission where he will do research on a $1,000.00 summer scholarship.

Paul Chandler is at the Textile Research Institute in Charlottesville, Va., on a $1,125.00 scholarship. It is a two year program leading to a master's degree in textile technology.

Oops, Pardon Our Goof

In the feature article, "Moslems, Shrines, and General Motors," which appeared last week in the Blue Stocking, the "no" was left out of the sentence which should have read, ". . . a chemical analysis of the earth showed that no body elements were present in the soil." To all those who read the article in amazed horror, we humbly apologise.

Vespers Are Held On Wednesday Night

Vespers are being held each Wednesday night at 7 o'clock in the Douglas House meeting room. These short devotionals are intended for students of all demoninations

They are sponsored by the Interdenominational Council, which is composed of representatives from the three prominent religious organizations on campus — Baptist Student Union, Westminster Fellowship, and Methodist Student Union. Members of the IDC are Roscoe Lindsay, chairman; Don Kay, Evin Varner, Glenn Gibson, Gayle Robertson, and Penn Ballenger.

Each of the unit groups is responsible for a certain number of programs. These vespers serve to acquaint the student with his religious affiliation and to awaken an interest for participation in his group.

Flu Shots Are Free Wed. and Thurs.

Asiatic Flu Immunization shots are being offered free of charge to students of Presbyterian College, Dean of Students indicated today.

Wednesday, October 1, and Thursday, October 2, are the days set aside for the administering of the shots.

Mrs. Neal, a registered nurse from Clinton, will be on hand in the Douglas House game room from 10:00-12:00 and 2:00-5:00 Wednesday, and from 3:00-5:00 Thursday. Col. Thackston indicated that this should give every student an adequate opportunity to take advantage of this service being offered by the college.

The project is being sponsored by Blue Key National Honor Fraternity under the leadership of President Al McKie. Blue Key men will be in charge of all arrangements for the project and will assist Mrs. Neal in giving the shots. Also assisting will be Jimmy Elliot and Don Segrest, regular employees of the college infirmary.

Col. Thackston said also that the shots are being given in Douglas House so as to be more convenient for students.

1959 PaC-SaC Will Undergo Face-Lifting, Editor Turner Says

• Beauty Section Will Replace Sponsors

By SONNY EMBRY

Basic changes in design and policy for the 1959 PaC-SaC were announced today by Wiliam Turner, editor of the publication.

These changes, Turner indicated, would not be radical, but are designed to keep abreast of modern trends in college yearbooks and to eliminate several dificulties faced by PaC-SaC editors of the past.

Cardinal among the changes will be the addition of a beauty section and elimination of the military and activities sponsors section, including the full page picture of the PaC-SaC Editor's sponsor. The sweethearts of the individual fraternities, how ever will continue as in previous years.

Those offices who, in previous years, were given space for a sponsor's picture will turn into the PaC-SaC office candidates for the beauty section of the annual. As soon as all pictures are collected, the Student Council will hold a general election by the student body to name a "Miss PaC-SaC", and a court of seven girls from among those entered. Each student will vote for eight girls, the most popular of which will receive the coveted title.

All eight girls will then come to Clinton for a sitting with the photographer some time before Christmas. These pictures will then make up the beauty section of the annual A full page will be allotted to each girl, and double page with informal shots for Miss PaC-SaC.

Turner explained that a great criticism of previous PaC-Sac's by rating officials has been the large percentage of mother and younger sisters in the sponsors' section.

The other changes will be principally in the lay-out, general design of break pages, subdivisions, and editorial write-ups. The staff is keeping quiet about these, as have editors of the past.

The only other change that he would comment on at this time was the changing of the fraternity section to a Greek section to include Alpha Psi Delta sorority.

Assisting Turner is Associate Editor Henry Tindal, who was on the staff of three All-American yearbooks at Clemson. The business manager is Bob Mathews, and the assistant editor is Sonny Embry. Editing the different sections are: Will Wallace, Class Editor; Joe Hardin, Military Editor; Lonnie Love, Activities Editor; Bill Mc-

Varner Takes Reins As IRC President

Evin Varner, a sophomore from Bennettsville, this week took over the reins of the International Relations Club. Varner, who was elected vice president of the organization last spring, takes over for Tony Gavalis, the president. Gavalis was unable to return this fall due to a serious ulcer, which caused him to undergo major surgery earlier in the month to remove a portion of his stomach.

Varner also holds office in the Baptist Student Union, is a news reporter for the Blue Stocking, and served on the steering committee for the IRC programs last year.

Scholarship Fund Established To Honor Late Coach Johnson

A memorial scholarship to perpetuate the name of Walter Johnson, beloved athletic director who served 43 years, is being established at Presbyterian College.

President Marshall W. Brown announced that some funds already have been received for this purpose.

He invited other interested persons to contribute to the endowed scholarship in memory of Dr. Johnson, whose death on July 23 closed a lifetime of service to Presbyterian College and to the youth of South Carolina.

The college administration and the executive council of the Walter Johnson Club, alumni athletic organization, agreed that the primary prerequisite of a scholarship recipient should be "a young man who most nearly represents those principles of leadership, good sportsmanship and christian integrity that will be forever associated with the memory of Walter Johnson."

President Brown said money contributed to this purpose will be invested with other endowment funds of the institution. Income from the principal is to be awarded annually to a qualified PC student (or students) chosen by the Johnson Club.

Although an athlete will be given preference, any recipient must have proved his capacity academically by graduating in the upper 50 per cent of his high school class and he must meet all entrance requirements.

Dr. Brown said it is hoped this Walter Johnson Memorial Scholarship fund eventually will provide for several grants running simultaneously. It is to be incorporated as part of the alumni giving program.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

No Excuse . . .

A significant event took place in Greenville, N. C., last Saturday night as the Blue Hose gridmen claimed a resounding victory in the initial game of the season. It was indeed a splendid way to begin the year.

This victory is particularly significant in that it puts the students of our campus on the spot. It eliminates our favorite excuse for not having enthusiasm toward the football team. No longer can we blame our lack of school spirit on the lack of victory.

The team has supplied us with a victory in the very first grid tilt of the season. Victory has been long in coming to the Presbyterian College football team, and this initial win has been a happy occasion for all concerned.

Saturday PC's gridmen will be at it again, doing their best to add more victories to their credit. It remains for the student body to get behind the team, not only this Saturday, but every Saturday of the season, and let them know we are there rooting them on, win or lose.

In the past this thing of school spirit has been largely a matter of "ginning" freshmen. It ought to be much more than that, involving every student on campus, rather than just the freshmen.

Only time can tell whether or not other victories will come for PC this season. But the Blue Stocking wishes to congratulate and thank the coaches and team, not only for this victory, but for all their efforts.

We urge every student to support the team in the coming weeks, and to strive to build up school spirit for which Presbyterian has been so long known.

He Never Loved the Limelight

Ferdinand the Lipstick Smeller

By EVIN VARNER

Once there was a little student, a little college student, named Ferdinand Bull. Sometimes his fellow students called him Ferdinand Bullshooter; this wasn't nice, but they didn't know it, so what difference did it make?

Now Ferdy (as he was affectionately known to the girls) was a lackadasical sort of fellow. He liked to sit in his seat, the third from the front, second row from the window, smelling the powder and lipstick. Ferdy didn't like the limelight, he never said anything; he just sat.

The teachers all had conniption fits with him; for he was usually so engrossed in smelling the lipstick, that he didn't even say "Dunno." All the other students would galavant about, butting their heads against mistakes, but not Ferdinand; he merely sat, glasy-eyed and indifferent, smelling the lipstick.

Now, one day the dean, who had a bald head, came into one of Ferdy's favorite classes followed by a train of professors, janitors, and students. He was all in a fluster because the flag had stuck atop the flagpole. He was rubbing his bald head as though it were a bowling ball—oh, he was a complete jitterditter. He asked for a volunteer to get the flag. Many of the students ran to and fro, butting their heads together for a chance to die. But not Ferdy; to avoid attention, he knelt silently in the aisle, smelling the lipstick.

Now there was a rather naughty boy behind Ferdinand. He noted with relish his indelicate posture. This boy had a pin, a nice, long pin. What would you have done? Well, that's exactly what he did. Ferdinand leapt up with a cry and bounded out of the room with the dean plodding swiftly behind.

When the new-found hero realized what he was in for, he shrank like a violet, only much faster. His superiors, however, unwilted him, and had him all ready to slide up the pole. Just as he finished his speech "He who is about to die," etc., he spotted to his great joy, an abandoned lipstick. He seized it immediately; he sat down and listlessly began to smell it.

For half an hour the principal pled, but, alas! all in vain. Ferdy was in his seventh heaven, going on the eighth. At last they (the cheerleaders had been called on to imbue Ferd with school spirit) and gave it up and Ferd was sent back to his classroom.

And there he sits now, on the third seat from the front, second row from the window, smelling the lipstick.

That is the story of Ferdinand Bull, the boy who never learned to love the limelight. And wouldn it be nice if a lot of other people never learned.

"Jazz Jots"

By PAUL WILLIAMS

Ella Fitzgerald, a name synonymous with jazz itself, has recently recorded another milestone in her career. The album I am referring to is Ella Fitzgerald at the Opera House (Verve MGV-8264).

Here, in a Jazz at the Philharmonic (JATP) set cut in performance at Chicago's Opera House, is some of the best jazz singing Ella has done in years. Captured with quite good sound quality was a performance which only those who are able to see Ella in person at a club or concert are liable to catch.

She roars. She sings ballads with a fine jazz feeling. She scats like a tenor man digging in and waiting on a night when everything breaks just right.

If for no other reason, jazz collectors should have this LP for the final two tracks (which consume one full LP side), Lady Be Good and Stompin' at the Savoy.

The first seven tracks are not to be ignored. These include These Foolish Things, a misty Ill Wind, a driving All Right With Me, and a Goody Goody with a bop break that seems to rock the audience.

Ella has recorded LP on LP of wonderfully tasteful pop singing. Those who have been lucky enough to catch her in a jazz performance such as the one captured on this LP know she can, and quite often does wail. But there must be many to whom Ella is until now largely a great ballad singer.

This LP should help explain why she keeps knocking over poll after poll as a jazz singer.

She works both in the pop and jazz field extremely well, with no loss to her prestige in either.

And those first four choruses of Stompin'. . .

Adult Cowboy and Pioneer

The Story:

In the first episode of our epic of the old west, as you undoubtedly recall, practically nothing at all happened. We sow, however, that a writer's subtle, analytical insights into the motivations of strong-willed characters can be just as exciting as a barroom brawl or a stampede. The second chapter of our tale promises to be just as lively.

When we left Rex (an adult cowboy) and Al (his side-kick), Nan (the beautiful rancher's daughter) had just assured the pair of a job on her father's ranch. As we rejoin them, they are jogging down the dusty trail toward the Bar Fly Ranch; Nan is speaking . . .

Chapter Two: The Pan

"Just what sort of trouble did you men run into up in the canyon, boys?"

"Well, ma'm," answered Rex, "we'd been up in the canyon about two months, prospectin', pannin' for bedrock, when one evenin', bout a week ago, we chanced to spy an injun sneaking aroun' the camp. Well, we chased him off in short order and thought no more about it, but that night he snuck back into the camp and stole the pan that we use to pan with. Well, ma'm, without our little pan we wuz lost, we couldn't do nothin', so we just decided to break camp and head on down this way."

"But what would an injun want with a little ol' pan?" asked Nan, with a coy toss of her yellow curls.

"That's just ezsactly what we been tryin' to figger out." sighed Rex, scratchin' his sombrero. "It was just a plain little ol' tin pie pan."

"That injun must've had some loco motive," said Al Pine.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Wednesday night Alpha Psi Chapter held its annual open social. A McKie, social chairman, was incharge of planning the event. The party was a fine success, with young ladies attending from various colleges throughout the state, in addition to our own Co-eds.

At the meeting Tuesday night, plans were discussed for purchasing a ping pong table and renovating the pool table. The brothers were honored in having alumnus brother Ted Freeman at the meeting.

KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting of the Beta Pi Chapter final plans were made for the closed social on Saturday night and further suggestions were discussed concerning the re-decoration of the lodge. All the brothers cordially welcomed into the chapter Brother Bruce McPherson, a transfer student from Georgia Tech.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

PiKA held its first stag supper at the Panorama Lodge Wednesday night. The brothers and pledges enjoyed fish and steak suppers.

At the regular meeting Monday night, Social Chairman Oochie Gibson stated that work had already begun in preparation for the open social which will be October 1.

Brothers of the Week were Bob Bean, for gift of a crest to the fraternity; Hexy McDonald, Bob Bean, Tene McKethan for pinning their girls and all brothers who play on the football team.

SIGMA NU

At a special meeting Wednesday night, the brothers and pledges of Zeta Theta Chapter welcomed Eddie Coker, John Drew, and Bob Sallie into the brotherhood, and also initiated three new pledges, Martin Chitty, Jack Fallaw, and Don Girwan.

Plans were also begun for Homecoming festivities.

THETA CHI

At the regular meeting of the Beta Pi Chapter final plans were made for the closed social on Saturday night and further suggestions were discussed concerning the re-decoration of the lodge. All the brothers cordially welcomed into the chapter Brother Bruce McPherson, a transfer student from Georgia Tech.

One other fraternity, Pi Kappa Phi, and Alpha Psi Delta Sorority, failed to turn in any information, but it is believed that they did have regular meetings this week.

Victory at Long Last

Gridiron happiness raced over the campus this week as the Presbyterian Fighting Blue Hose won their 1958 opener with East Carolina and thus snapped a losing streak extending from the '56 campiagn.

Head Coach Frank Jones beams to a favorable note for once, and for reason especially after his winless drought since arriving at PC. After his spirited club walked off the field in Greenville, N. C., with a more decisive win than the 24-16 score indicated, Jones commented, "This victory may prove to give the lift so badly needed for us."

No matter what achievement was gained last Saturday in the opener, the surprising Hosemen have a night cut out for themselves against the powerful single-wing attack of Lenoir-Rhyne up in Hickory, N. C. The Bruins proved that the Bradshaw to Richardson passing machine was capable of being stopped, that the Terriers' running game could be contained, and thus placed an unfamiliar goose egg on the scoreboard for the Wofford followers.

What additional color could be desired for Saturday's scrimmage—scribes mustering together a poll and coming up with the Bruins holding seventh spot among small colleges in the country, an opinion by the experts the Hose are a 27-point underdog, and that the host club plays in its backyard adds to a list of pre-game betting strength.

According to the experts everything is set for the scribes' 'Little PC' to take the field as a perfect underdog Saturday night. Set also is the potent wing-T offense of the Blue Hose pointing for an upset tomorrow night.

DO YOU, THE PC STUDENT BODY, WANT IT AS BAD AS THE TEAM? I WONDER!

SOCK PREDICTS

Venturing this predicting game last week proved fatal at one look, but still quite succesful on the other hand. Picking football winners is a most hazardous profession at any stage of the season, and especially until a game or two has been played to see really the strength and weaknesses of the various teams.

Consequently, this corner lost out on the first round last week.

Presbyterian's game with East Carolina proved to be our only win, as both Lenoir-Rhyne and Newberry upset the apple cart on Wofford and The Citadel.

This week in the Little Three:
Wofford over Elon by 20.
Catawba over Newberry by 8.

The big test for the Blue Hose comes in their encounter at Hickory, N. C., against the highly-touted Lenoir-Rhyne eleven. Here we go sticking ourselves out on a limb for the second week by forecasting a 21-20 Hose victory.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

In a five-game series with Lenoir-Rhyne, PC has been victorious three times while two have deadlocked . . . The ball usd in last Saturday"s game with East Carolina and so deservingly owned now by PC, will be presented by the team to Mrs. Walter A. Johnson in memory of her husband . . . Ex-Tampa Spartan ace halfback Don Hearndon was recently cut by the pro New York Giants . . . Lenoir-Rhyne was listed as the seventh among small college elevens in the country this week . . . The golf team seems to be on their way to improve last year's record as fall tournaments have been planned to keep the squad on a par game . . .The SCA ping pong tournament is underway with the finals set next week . . . The bride tournament is tentatively set for Monday night, Septembr 29. Professor Martin will officiate.

Coaches Bill Bowman and Mitchell Mavromat carried a twenty-five man traveling squad to Barnesville, Ga., this morning for a clash between the PC junior varsity and Gordon Military College.

The yearlings open their season tonight with the Cadets in hope of breaking a two-year losing streak. Back in 1956 the young Hose put together a 19-0 score to defeat Gordon here in Clinton.

Freshman quarterback Bobby Joiner of Macon, Ga., will lead a formidable squad down to the Georgia city. Jerry Lucas, Pat Malone and Harold Raeford round out the first tema backfield.

A strong forward wall supported by hefty linemen Joe Davis, Dargan Watts, and Jim Heath should provide the Hose with strength up front.

The junior varsity squad also has two more games scheduled for this year. On October 16 they will journey to Lyons, Ga., and meet defending Georgia State Junior College Champs, South Georgia College Tigers. The young Hose hope to gain retaliation from the defeat suffered at the hands of South Georgia last season.

The last game of the season will pit the PC yearlings against Middle Georgia in Dublin, Ga.

Hose Overwhelm East Carolina, Battle Lenoir-Rhyne Tomorrow

Pirate Rally Fails To Stop Blue Socks

By MARTIN CHITTY

The Presbyterian Blue Hose presented a hard-running and speedy bevy of backs to trounce the East Carolina Pirates 24-16. The running of halfbacks Bobby Pate, John Lucas, and Tony Benson, coped with sharp defensive play by Center Mac Copeland and Pate served to give the Hose their first win since 1956.

The first quarter was a scoreless duel, but on the second play of the second quarter Lucas took a handoff from quarterback Bob Waters and sped around left end for 21 yards and a touchdown. The point try failed. Moments later Co-Captain Benson intercepted a Ralph Zeshring pass and streaked 55 yards to pay dirt. Again the try for extra points was unsuccessful.

The Blue Hose opened up a potent ground attack in the third period taking hte bal on their own 25 and driving all the way to EC 5 behind the running of Waters, Fullback Bob Mathews and Pate. Mathews plunged over from the five. A running attempt for the extra points was no good.

With the Blue Hose third and fourth units in action the Pirates began to move after taking the kickoff. From the PC 13 Halfback Bob Perry swept end for the final yardage.

In the closing seconds of the game Perry again scored on a 23-yard pass from Zesrding. End Joe Holms caught both Zeshring passes on the conversion attempts.

BILL SCHOFIELD, a transfer from North Georgia, should see a lot of action this week as the Hose fight for their second victory.

Initial Pace Rapid In Intramural Ball

Intramural football moved at a rapid pace in this, the initial week of action. On Monday Kappa Alpha defeated the Frosh, 13-2. The same afternoon Pi Kappa Alpha triumphed over Alpha Sigma Phi, 6-0.

In Tuesday's action, Pi Kappa Phi went into the winning column with a 7-0 win over Sigma Nu. Alpha Sigma Phi went down at the hand of Kappa Alpha. This was the K. A.'s second win of the week.

Rounding out a fast week of football for the I-M League on Tuesday saw Kappa Alpha win their third game in a row and definitely take a stride toward the cup with a 1-0 victory over Sigma Nu.

Pi Kappa Phi nosed out a spirited Pi K. A. team with a 60-0 trimump, giving them two wins against no losses.

Second Win Sought Against Tough Bears

By BOB STEVENS

The Blue Hose will square off against Lenoir-Rhyne for their second footbal encounter of the season this Saturday night up in Hickory, N. C.

A host Bear eleven presently is rated among the top ten small colleges in the nation. The Bears showed good reason for this rating last Saturday night over in Spartanburg as they gave the Wofford Teriers a resounding 20- thrashing.

Against East Carolina PC escaped with only minor injuries. Co-Captain Richard Shrigley and Mac Copeland have nearly recovered and should be in the starting lineup opposing the Bruins.

Head Coach Clarence Stasavich, of the mighty touted Bears, employs the always fearful single wing attack. Minus their great tailback Fred Bullard through graduation, Bill Ackard has proven to be an excellent replacement. He gained consistently against Wofford and will definitely present a problem for the Hose defense.

Stasavich brings a formidable line into the clash and with considerable strength at every position. The forward wall was a determining factor in the Bruin win over Wofford.

The new Wing-T offense, now used by the Blue Hose, should offer the Bears a few headaches. It was not until the second half that East Carolina could muster any kind of defense to stop the potent PC offensive.

Bob Waters will be barking signals for the first unit again this week, surrounded by Co-Captain Tony Benson RH, Bob Pate LH, and Bob Mathews at FB.

John Lucas, Bill Bell, and Dan Phillips supply enough depth at right half.

A good team effort could definitely bring Presbyterian a second victory in a row and a stride closer to a luxurious Tampa trip.

The Four Horsemen . . .

THESE FOUR will be in the limelight Saturday night as the Blue Hose face the powerful Lenoir-Rhyne team. They are, left to right: Gordon Stanley, Bobby Pate, Tony Benson, and John Lucas.

Playboy...

Buying Guide Presented For Best Collegiate Dress

How does your wardrobe rate? Playboy Magazine's special September Back-to-School issue presents "a practical buying guide for the man who would be dressed with the best on the campus," in the first factual report on today's college wardrobe.

Based on an extensive survey, taken in cooperation with the magazine's 300 campus representatives, who polled their fellow classmen on what clothing today's collegian owns and what he plans to purchase, and, in addition interviewed managers of major campus men's wear stores an what students buy, Playboy finds that "not even in the business world is attire more significant in establishing social acceptance than in college."

Here is Playboy's list of basic needs for the well-dressed college man: Suits—4; Slacks—3 or 4 pairs; Sports Jackets— 3 sports jackets and 1 blazer; Shoes—4 pairs; Dress Shirts and Neckwear—9 shirts, 2 evening shirts, 10 neckties; Socks—7 pairs regular, 6 pairs white athletic socks, 2 pairs black silk or nylon for formal wear; Sweaters—4; Active Sportswear—2 pairs tennis shorts, 1 pair tennis sneakers, 6 T-shirts, 1 golf jacket, 1 golf cap; Topcoats, Raincoats, etc.—1 topcoat, 1 raincoat, 1 heavy weather coat (optional); Sport Shirts—7; Hats and Caps—1 hat, 1 cap; Formal Wear—1 tails (optional), 1 dinner jacket.

Playboy finds that the Ivy style still dominates the campus scene. "This is interesting to note," the magazine points out, "for it was the young college men who established Ivy as a national mode of masculine attire, and it is college men who are resisting attempts to woo them to Italianate and draped Continental fashions despite their acceptance by some older men."

Frat Rooms "Off Limits" to Freshmen

Unanimous Approval Given To Latest IFC Regulation

A new set of rules governing the rushing of freshmen has been drawn up by the Inter-Fraternity Council, it was revealed today by Bruce Prince, IFC president.

The formal proclamation, given unanimous approval by all six fraternity representatives, prohibits freshmen from entering any of the six fraternity suites except for several specified exceptions.

The purpose of the new rule, as explained by Prince, is to seek to provide fairness to all concerned, while maintaining a friendly competitive spirit.

It was stated further that the new rule should eliminate several unfavorable practices which were present in last year's rush season The new ruling as approved is shown in its final form:

All fraternities will be closed to first year men during rush period. Rush period is to run from the beginning of school to the pledge date, Dec. 12, 1958.

The following exceptions will be made. 1. During the World Series Ball Games. (One hour prior to the game and one hour after). 2. Following the PC-Davidson football game, October 11, 1958, with the limitations set forth in the minutes of the IFC meeting of September 23, 1958. 3. Homecoming weekend, beginning at 3:00 p. m., October 17, and ending at 7:00 p. m., October 19. There will be no limitations during this period. 4. Parents Day, all day Saturday and Sunday until 7:00 p. m., November 15 and 16. 5. Any other time decided upon by the IFC. This would apply to any special situation which may arise in the future.

The penalties for breach of this new rule will be as stated in the IFC Constitution, The minmum penalty is one week suspension of the guilty fraternities' operations and/or $25.00 fine, and the maximum penalty is six weeks weeks suspension and/or $50.00 fine.

Fellowships Offered For Graduate Study

Competition for two graduate study fellowships has been announced this week by Dr. Newton Jones, head of the graduate studies committee.

The Danforth Foundation offers a fellowship for the first year of graduate study in any field of specialization to be found in the undergraduate college. This award is for students preparing for a career of college teaching, who plan to enter graduate school in 1959.

Two nominations will be made from PC.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation is also designed to encourage students to follow college teaching careers. This fellowship supports students for a year's graduate study in the fields of natural and social sciences and in the humanites.

Nominations for both of these fellowships will be made by the faculty. The Wilson fellowship nominations must be in by October 31, while the Danforth program closes in January of 1959.

Any students interested in these or other fellowships should contact Dr. Jones as soon as possible.

COL. BOSWELL, Chief of the South Carolina Military District, is shown, above left, as he visited the Presbyterian ROTC Detachment this week. Also pictured is Col. Scott, above center, a member of the visiting team, and Col. Barnett, PMS&T of Presbyterian College.

Class Officers Elections Will be Held Wednesday

Freshman Student Council Will Also Be Named on Same Ballot

In nominations held Wednesday by the Student Council, some fifty-three men and women were nominated for the sixteen class offices, and freshmen representatives to the Student Council. The date set for the election is Wednesday, October 8.

Every student will be eligible to vote for the offices of his particular class and for two freshmen representatives to the Student Council. Student interest is running highest in the senior offices and in the freshman president, who becomes an ex-officio member of the freshman control board immediately upon election.

SENIORS

Nominated for the senior class officers were: Jim Shakespeare, Bob Mathews, and Don Chapman for President; Ron Isger, Al McKee, and Marian Parrish for Vice-President; Herb Entrekin and Bill Porter for Secretary; Sonny Embry, Ron Bartlett, O'Neil Crocker, and Dick Carter, for Treasurer.

JUNIORS

Those receiving the highest number of nominations for the Junior class officers were: Jack Taylor and Tom Wise for President; Dick Wood, Joe Hardin, and Larry Wood for Vice-President; Ebby Mayfield, Tony Benson, and Ben Donaldson for Secretary; and Billy Hagood, Read Clark, and Harvey Wittchen for Treasurer.

SOPHOMORES

The Sophomore nominations included: Marian Lee, Paul Ard, Bill Beachman, and Jim Eason for President; Ron Boston and Tom Collins for Vice President; Gay Maddon, Gail Ring, and Tommy Middleton for Secretary; and Dick Faulkner and Rohe Eshbaugh for Treasurer.

FRESHMEN

Chosen by the freshman class to run were: Carter Redd, Dick Carr, and Bob Bethea for the top office; Ed Loring, Paul Neill, and J. W. Spiney for Vice-President; Tom Elliott, Dee Ring, and Bob Williams for Secretary; and for Treasurer were Bland Quantz, Ted Abernathy, and Gerry Pitts.

Nominated by the student body for the freshman representatives to the Student Council were: Troy Matthews, Paul Layton, Bobby Joiner, Doug Miller, Jerry Chitty, Ted Hentz, and Dick McGauhey.

Notification Only In Case of Class Overcut

A new procedure concerning student class cuts was announced this week by Miss Iona Blakely. Under the new procedure students will be notified only of an overcut class. This is in contrast to last year's procedure of notification when the last cut had been taken.

Also in regard to the posting of excuses it was noted that only rejected excuses will be posted on the Neville Hall bulletin board.

Class absences may be checked during afternoon hours from 1:45-5:00 at the information desk in the Administration Building. It was noted excuses may be checked only during these hours and not in the mornings.

Three Speakers

Campus Career Day Program To Feature Business, Ministry

The first career day program, sponsored by the SCA, Ministerial Club, and the Solons jointly with the Administration, will be held on the campus next Friday, October 10.

Three speakers will be present on campus for the occasion, and will be meeting with groups interested in Business Administration, the Ministry, and law.

Cecil M. Webb, president of the Dixie Lily Milling Company, of Tampa, Fla., and former chairman of the Florida State Road Board, will speak in chapel on Friday, and will be present for an informal question-answer period in the Science hall lecture room with the business administration students. While on the Florida State Road Board, Webb conceived the unprecedented $32 billion highway construction program and presented it directly to President Eisenhower in 1954. It received Congressional approval two years later.

CECIL M. WEBB

Speaking to the ministerial students at a 4:30 informal meeting will be Rev. Lawrence Sthreshly, Jr., pastor of the Time Memorial Presbyterian Church of Lutz, Fla. The meeting will be held in the Douglas House music room. Sthreshley will also be guest minister at the First Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning.

PC alumnus, Joe Eaton of Miami, one of Florida's youngest state senators, will meet with the Solons law club in the Radio Forum room for the same type of informal discussion.

All three men have been sent questions prepared by the sponsoring organizations, and will discuss these during their stay.

Free Admission to Fair Tuesday for PC Students

PC'uns have been issued a personal invitation to the Greenwood fair, to be held in Greenwood October 6-11.

E. B. Henderson, manager of the event, advises that all Presbyterian students are to be admitted free on Tuesday, October 7. The student is only asked to present his atheltic card and pay 5c tax. This holds true only before 7:30 p. m.

The Greenwood fair is billed as one of the best fairs of its kind in the state. As well as the usual exhibits and midway attractions, the fair is featuring this year one of the largest railroad shows in the world.

IRC Plans Underway For Topnotch Events

Plans are already underway by the International Relations Club for several events sponsored by this organization.

Presbyterian College will be the scene of the state IRC convention scheduled for early spring. The new Douglas House will be the site of this meeting which is expected to bring representatives from most colleges in the state.

The annual International Relations Club Week, held in April, is also in the early planning stages. This event brings outstanding and well-known personalities to the campus to speak on subjects of international interest.

Work is also being done, President Varner stated, to sponsor chapel programs with outstanding speakers, at various times during the school year.

The club is sponsored by Mr. George Clark of the history department.

Wofford Blue Key . . .

A COMEDY TEAM with the Wofford Blue Key is shown above as they presented a program in chapel Monday to promote better relations between the schools. PC Blue Key also presented a prgoram at Wofford on Tuesday.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Editorials : Features : Humor

Why Were Nominations Not Told?

It came rudely to the attention of the Blue Stocking Wednesday night as we were compiling the week's news that nominations for class officers and freshmen representatives to the student council had been held.

We must confess that we were surprised to hear of the nominations; which brings us to the subject of this exposition. Why was advance notice not given that the nominations were to take place? We feel certain that any number of students on the campus did not know of the nominations, because no publicity was made concerning them.

Certainly this should not have been carried out in this manner. With due respect to those who were nominated, we go on record as saying that this manner of nomination was at best an undesirable procedure. The Blue Stocking does not blame any one in particular. This is simply another recurrence of the same old problem on this campus. Several times in the past nominations and elections have been protested, thus resulting in a lot of useless red tape and re-running of elections.

Something ought to be done to see that this does not happen in other elections as they come up during the school year.

It will be much better for the Student Council to plan ahead for the entire year, so as to be able to give adequate notice of all nominations and elections.

The advantages of this can obviously be seen. It will eliminate much wasted effort on the part of those conducting the elections, and more important, will not allow any resentment or dissention to arise between groups and factions on campus in regard to how the elections are carried out.

Of all the inventions that man has availed himself of in the displaying of his mechanical genius, the radio has become one of the most widespread and most enjoyed throughout the world.

Practically everyone owns a radio, because they are inexpensive and offer the owner much in the way of entertainment and enlightenment.

Presbyterian College students are no exception to this generally accepted practice in our modern society of owning a radio. It could well be estimated that fully three-fourths of all students claim one among their possessions.

Practically all these have excellent range in stations and excellent range in volume. They are played frequently throughout the day and evening by their owners. This is well and good.

But there are also those who seem to think the radio is intended for continuous playing, even during the wee hours of the night.

For those who apparently have not located it, we offer this choice bit of information. The "off" switch is located on the front left of most all radios.

So when the clock strikes midnight, those students who have the strange compulsion to hit the sack would certainly appreciate it if you night owls would please turn off, or at least turn down, those radios.

A Poet, and Don't Know it!

"A Rat's Nightmare"

Ah! At last the day is done!
Slumber comes, oh tortured one.
Out of the calm comes a sound,
Bells are ringing all around.

Words and statements I should censor,
The bell calls all rats in front of Spencer.
The noises quiten, hearts fill with fear,
As Chambers, Duncan, and Carter appear.

As upperclassmen start shouting commands,
All rats stand with trembling hands.
After circling the Plaza, pretending to be birds,
We return to our rooms with more harsh words.

Finally, back to bed, back to snore,
Dreamed I was holding the chow hall door.
Upperclassmen far as I could scan,
Nowhere did I see a fellow man.

Until looking through the door,
I see rats by the score.
While at the piano a Co-ed plays,
My fellow rats are carrying trays.

Goof-off signs flash all around,
And then I hear a dreadful sound.
As in come Hardin, Shawn, and Love,
I am awakened with a great shove.

Hey, Look!

Rex King...

Adult Cowboy and Frontier Pioneer

The Story:

In the last chapter of our stirring serial a feverish pitch of excitement and mystery was achieved by Rex King's dramatic account of the baffling "purloined pan" incident. As chapter three gets underway, Rex, his side-kick, Al Pine, and Nan, the beautiful rancher's daughter, have arrived at the Bar Fly Ranch; just now they are sitting on the front porch of the ranch house with Nan's father, the beautiful Rancher Baker, a red-faced old man with a heart of gold. Let us join them . . . Come along . . .

Chapter Three: Uncle Wiggly's Birthday.

"I'm hungry," said Al Pine, more or less to make conversation.

"Well, my boy," replied Rancher Baker, "I reckon as how you might be a mite hungry after such a long hot ride. Nan, honey, run on inside and rustle up a little grub for Mr. Pine and Mr. King here."

"You betcha," said Nan.

"Rancher Baker," said Rex, as Nan went into the house, "you certainly have yourself a fine little place here."

"Well, thank you, son," smiled Rancher Baker. "I reckon as how I've spent most of my life buildin' up this place, and I can tell you, it's been no easy job. And ever since Mrs. Rancher Baker passed on, I've had to be both father and mother to Nan and her younger sister, Tess. And I can tell you, it's been no easy job."

"I reckon as how not," agreed Rex.

Just then Nan came back into the porch.

"I'll have some grub for you boys directly, men," she said. "I reckon you can wash up and dry up upstairs."

"Thank you kindly, Miss Nan," Rex said. "Won't you join us, Rancher Baker?"

"No, no," sighed Rancher Baker, "I'll leave you young folks alone. Besides, I can tell by the sun that it's almost sundown. I'd best be seein' to waterin' the livestock and the horses and cattle."

As Rex and Al, having washed up, came into the dining room, Nan was bringing a large tray of food to the table. She was followed by a young Indian servant girl with another tray.

"Well, boys, here's a nice big bowl of grub, and a bowl of grits, and a steaming platter of corn," said Nan. "Just set right down."

'This certainly looks mighty temptin'," said Al Pine, his eyes on the Indian maiden. Nan soon noticed his preoccupied gaze.

"This is our Apache servant girl, Ethel," she said, nodding toward the maid. "Ethel, this here is Mr. Pine and Mr. King."

Ethel shyly ducked her head.

"The only good Injun's a dead Injun," said Rex King. "Or maybe a little baby Injun."

At that poor Ethel burst into tears and hurried from the room.

"Now look what you've done," exclaimed Nan. "Servants are hard enough to keep as is."

"Yeah," exclaimed Al.

"Gee whizz," apologized Rex, "I never dreamed she could understand English."

"Never mnid," sighed Nan. "Go ahead an' eat up 'fore it gits cold."

There were several minutes of embarrassed silence. Then Rex spoke.

"Miss Nan," he said, "I was just tellin' your father before supper that you all certainly do have yourselves a fine little place here."

"Well, Mr. King," Nan replied, "a heap of mighty hard work has gone into this place. We've seen good times and bad times, but we've stuck it out somehow. Course since Ma passed away, I've had to be both wife and daughter to father, and both sister and mother to Tess. I can't say it's been an easy life."

PC Eleven Dominates Play To Overwhelm Bears, 8-6

Tony Benson Plunges Over to Score After 57-Yd. Presbyterian Drive

By MARTIN CHITTY

With a terrific display of spirit and determination the Presbyterian Blue Hose overpowered the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears by an 8 to 6 score Saturday night.

From the opening kickoff PC was in command and completely outplayed the heavily favored L-R squad.

The Blue Hose score came from one yard out on a plunge by halfback Tony Benson after a drive of 57 yards, kept alive by the powerful running of Bobby Pate, Benson, and Bob Mathews, coupled with the dead-eye passing of quarterback Bobby Waters. A Waters to Ted Leahy pass was good for the two points.

Lenoir-Rhyne's touchdown was scored in the fourth quarter when tailback Bill Ackard picked up a fumbled punt return and streaked 62 yards to paydirt. An attempted pass for the extra points was no good. The touchdown play was the Bears' only serious threat of the game, while the Blue Hose had two more scoring chances, one ending in a fumble on the five-yard line and the other on the one-yard line as time ran out in the fourth quarter.

A hard-charging line kept the L-R offense stymied all night. Defensive stars of the night were end Paul Chastain, center Mac Copeland, and guard John Firby.

Time and again the Blue Hose opened holes which enabled the PC backs to amass almost twice as much yardage as the opposition. Four intercepted passes came at opportune times to stop L-R drives almost before they were started.

As the final whistle sounded the 27-point underdogs walked off the field victories in a game in which there was no doubt as to whom had the better team.

BOB WATERS

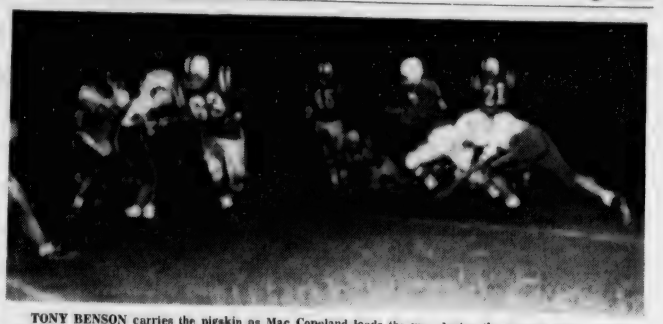
Quarterback Waters Is Player of the Week

By JIM ELLER

One of the reasons the Blue Hose have shown a vastly improved team this year is found in lanky, 180-pound quarterback from Sylvania, Ga., Bob Waters. Consistent practice on Bob's part has turned him into one of the most feared passing threats in the state and has enabled him to lead the Hose in two straight triumphs.

It was Waters' pass that gave the Hose the extra points needed to upset the highly regarded Bears of Lenoir-Rhyne.

This week the South Carolina Association of Sportswriters took note of his greatly improved ability and gave him the nod as college football player of the week in South Carolina. Waters won the honor over such performers as Charlie Bradshaw of Wofford, Bill Thomas, Doug Cline, and Jim Payne, all of Clemson.



Bob has turned out to be a capable field general for the Hose by taking the reigns in many difficult situations. He has also displayed his outstanding ability as part of the tight Blue Hose defense. With the addition of his ball-handling, passing and running, Bob also has a hidden talent just recently revealed as a threat to any opposition, his punting. Bob certainly emerges as a true triple-threat.

Our salute in the Hose Spotlight goes this week to a competitor who has demonstrated that hard work and determination pay off in improved football.

Third Straight Victory is Sought As Hose Gridmen Face Wofford

Intramural League Hits Second Round

Presbyterian's fast intramural football league rolled into its second round of play this week with each team participating in at least one scheduled contest.

Most of the teams fielded an improved and better organized ball club as compared to last week. Perhaps the most improved team in the league is that of the Freshmen, who on Monday defeated a previously undefeated Pi Kappa Phi squad by the score of 13-0. Also in Monday's action, a spirited PiKA team bested Sigma Nu, 12-0.

The following day the PiKaps dropped their second in as many days, falling to powerful Kappa Alpha, 6-0. Tuesday's contest between the Frosh and the Sigma Nu's consisted of a fine passing attack by both teams. However, once again the Frosh proved too tough, outscoring them to the tune of 15-0.

Thursday's games saw both Sigma Nu and Pi Kappa Alpha taking 6-0 games from Alpha Phi and the Frosh.

Dazzling Sock Offense Should Prove Trouble for Coach Snidow's Terriers

By DON HYDE

When the Presbyterian College Blue Hose meet Wofford College tomorrow night at Snyder Field in Spartanburg, it will mark the 42nd game in a series which dates back to the year 1916.

Coach Snidow, since arriving at the Wofford campus, has made a very impressive record including two consecutive "Little Three championships. On the other hand, PC coach Frank Jones, in the process of rebuilding, has come up with a dazzling offense and a tough offensive unit which should spell trouble for the coaching staff of the Wofford Terriers.

It was this same offense and defense which overpowered East Carolina College 24 to 16 in the season lid-lifter, and the following week held a powerful Lenoir-Rhyne eleven in check, while winning 8 to 6.

Wofford will be counting heavily on the great passing arm of Charlie Bradshaw, and the glue-tipped fingers of end Jerry Richardson. Between the two, they have personally accounted for three touchdowns and have formed one of the most deadly passing combinations in the state.

The Terrier ground game will mainly consist of the running of halfbacks Jack Drawdy and Denny Richardson with the latter having scored three touchdowns this year.

When the Blue Hose invade the Methodist flat, they will be seeking their third straight win, and first over Wofford since 1953. Leading the fighting Hose will be seven seniors including Co-captains Tony Benson of Chester, and Richard Shrigley of Clinton. The Presbyterian forward wall has been stingy in allowing yardage to their opponents; and although there are several individuals who stand out, it has mostly been a team effort.

BUDDY MULLIS—Sports Editor

"Best Year For Hose"

All around the Carolinas are heard echoes of victory for the once defunct and winless Blue Hose of Presbyterian College. A pleasant feeling rests in the PC camp now after two games have elapsed and a third straight victory is at stake in Saturday's forty-second meeting with our Methodist brethren from Spartanburg.

Things couldn't look better for Coach Frank Jones' crew at the moment, especially after the 8-6 triumph over Lenoir-Rhyne. A drastic rule change authored by Michigan's Fritz Crisler initiated the new "two-point conversion" for PC and a sparkling sight on the scoreboard up at Hickory.

Up until this game the Hose were yet to break the ice from the three-yard stripe in as many attempts. Versatile Bobby Waters, who quarterbacked the Hose to two victories and won himself the distinction of being named 'Player of the Week in South Carolina,' lofted an easy completion into the arms of end Ted Leahy for the narrow margin.

We need to glance at the record to discover what has occurred during our stay here at PC in gridiron clashes with Wofford. I speak for fifteen senior members of the Hose varsity football squad over the concern of a very distasteful trio of setbacks at the hands of the Terriers.

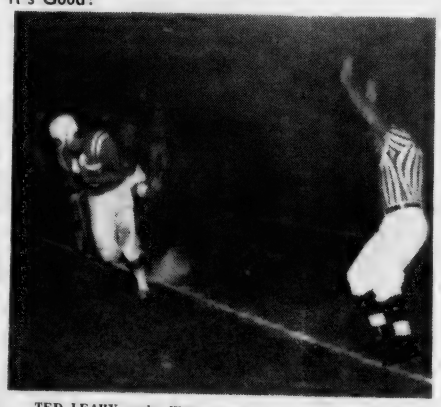
With the Terriers holding big guns in the Charlie Bradshaw to Jerry Richardson passing combination, the Spartanburg club could be awfully tough in their own back yard this Saturday night. The Hose must continue to show the offensive spark to keep the Terrier from annexing their third straight Little Three crown.

The boys want this one as bad as that skyward bounce to the Sunshine State.

"THAT . . . FLU BUG"——SHRIGLEY

Veteran lineman Richard Shrigley, who can practically play every position in the line with no trouble at all, was the first player of the season to fall before the most dreaded opposition during the course of the '57 season.

Starting the last two ball games of the current season, this husky tackle and reliable captain of the squad has proven himself in many tight situations. When the starting whistle blows against Wofford, more than likely Shrigley will be absent from the first unit. The left stickle slot is capably filled by a reserve, but we can chalk up another one for the flu bug.



SOCK PREDICTS

We pulled the average up considerably this week with a clean sweep of pigskin predictions within the Little Three. Burning the scores up now, we have 4 wins and 2 losses.

Action this week around the circuit calls for only two games, but with the three teams all being represented. Lenoir-Rhyne

Chairmen Named . . .

Faculty Committees are Chosen for School Year

Faculty Committees for the 1958-59 session have been named, it was announced this week by the college administration. These committees deal with all phases of college activity and are composed of most of the college faculty.

Heading up the absence committee is Dr. Newton Jones. Other members of the committee include Mr. George Clarke and Col. Thackston. The Academic Advisory Committee is composed of Dr. Bellingrath as chairman, along with Dr. Carter, Dr. Fraser, Mr. Glover, Mr. Martin, Dr. Purdum, and Dr. Stevenson.

The Athletic Committee is headed up by Mr. Martin, and includes Mr. Baker, Col. Barnett, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Hammet, Mr. Frank Jones, and Dr. Harris. Dr. Whitelaw heads the Discipline Committee, along with Capt. Bennett, Dr. Stump, and Col. Thackston.

The Graduate Study Committee is composed of Dr. Newton Jones, chairman, and Dr. Carter, Dr. Scheele, and Dr. Whitelaw. Guidance Center is under Dr. Pope, along with Dr. Gettys and Dr. Stump.

Mr. Baker again heads the Fraternities Committee along with Mr. Howard and Major Lowman. The Library Committee is under Mr. Glover and includes Mr. Cannon Mr. Durant, Mr. Hay, and Dr. Newton Jones.

Placement is headed by Col. Thackston, along with Dr. Bellingrath and Mr. Ehrhardt. Religious Activities Chairman is Mr. Hay, and the committee is composed of Mr. Adams, Dr. Fraser, Dr. Gettys, and Dr. Gray.

Student Activities chairman is Mr. Ben Hay Hammet, and the committee includes Mr. Campbell, Mr. Erwin, Mr. McIntyre, and Dr. Patte.

Col. Thackston is chairman of the Committee on Lectures and Entertainment, and Dr. Harris and Dr. Stevenson comprise the remainder of the committee.

"Yes," replied Nan; "have you heard of him?"

"I don't know of no one who don't know of the Masked Lash," exclaimed Rex.

"Best Year for Hose"

carries its forces over to Newberry this week to see how they can finish with the Little Three Conference teams of South Carolina.

Ordinarily Newberry could show off its offensive which upset The Citadel in their opener, but with multiple injuries hurting the 'skins, we look for a Bruin victory. The L-R Bears will turn loose their fleet backs and run away from the Indians by a 27-8 count.

The Hose are pre-game favorites in this one with most experts waving a 4-point spread for the Blue Hose. We'll go along with victory No. 3, and by a 22-6 score.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Presbyterian and Catawba are the only undefeated teams among small colleges in the Carolinas . . . Citadel's freshman halfback sensation, Angelo Coia, is now wearing University of Southern California colors . . . Western Carolina College back, Bob Cooper, has taken over the scoring lead in District 26 with 26 points . . . Jerry Richardson, Wofford end, is close behind with 23 points . . . Billy Baker of Furman, who led the nation practically all last season in passing, will finally get a chance in '58 after an ankle injury in the PC-Furman scrimmage during pre-season drills . . . Head Coach Bill Dole of Davidson, hopes to initiate a safe equipment clause into the rules committee which will call for leather helmets, absorbent pads and rubber cleats . . . Guard Alex Dubose from Oswego, suffered a shoulder injury this week in practice and will be lost to the Hose for several weeks .

Jazz Jots . . .

Dave Brubeck in Europe

By PAUL WILLIAMS

Columbia Records has recently released, according to their publicity department, another "great" jazz LP. The album to which they refer is Dave Bruebeck in Europe (CL-1168).

Recorded last March in Copenhagen at a Bruebeck quartet concert, this material is not Bruebeckian fare.

Although the audience appears to be enthusiastic, the group's performance is not. The first four tracks are generally bland in nature. On Wonderful Copenhagen, both Paul Desmond and Bruebeck contribute aimless, segmented solos—the track itself consists of two solos. Bruebeck's Folling is a frail, miniature ballad. Desmond plays with little inspiration and Bruebeck follows with a percussive series of patterns on Tangerine. Groove is a vehicle for Eugene Wright, with solos by Bruebeck and Desmond.

The final two tracks contain the most productive efforts. Someone is a stunning ballad, with Desmond contributing a particularly moving solo and Bruebeck adding one that is equally appropriate; Desmond's simple statement of melody is a thing of beauty, too. The final track, Watsul, is based on rhythmic ideas Bruebeck heard on an African recording 10 years ago, then heard in Iraq this year. A fascinating drum solo by Joe Morello consumes most of the track. Since most people find it difficult to maintain interest during an extended drum solo, it would be suggested that when hearing this track, to listen for the different explorations that Morello does with his instruments so remarkably well.

Apart from these two tracks, however, this LP contains little to enhance Bruebeck's stature.

"Battle of Presbyterians" is Tomorrow As Hose Seek Victory in Home Opener

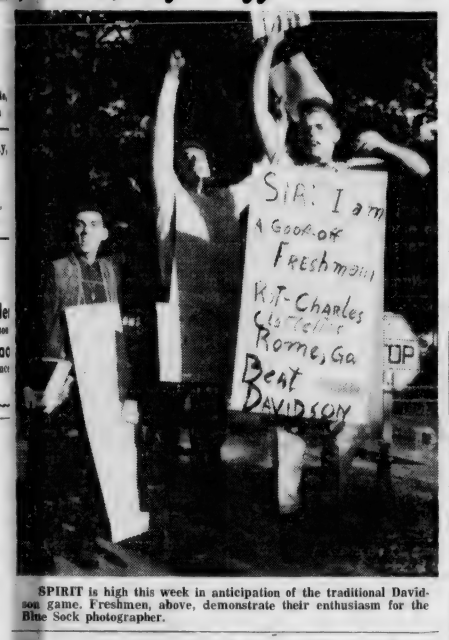
By JIM ELLER

When Davidson and Presbyterian meet on Johnson Field at 8:00 Saturday night, it will be the 17th clash for the traditional Presbyterian foes. Davidson has come out on top in eight of the games with the Blue Hose taking seven. The Hose, riding the crest of a three-game winning streak, will be out to make the series all even and are generally favored to do so by a touchdown.

The Wildcats were highly regarded before the season began on the strength of an abundant number of returning lettermen. Davidson possesses experienced performers in almost every position, especially in the backfield. Pre-season polls picked the Wildcats to rank high on the Southern Conference ladder.

Coach Bill Dole took his team to Charlotte for the opening game with Catawba ranked as heavy favorites, but when the dust had cleared, the Wildcats were on the short end of a 22 to 17 score. After recovering from the shock with an open date and two weeks of practice in inclement weather, the Wildcats journeyed to Charleston to meet The Citadel. Davidson came out victorious in a close game that Coach Dole referred to as a team effort.

The high-flying Blue Hose have come through with three wins against no losses in the young season, but coach Frank Jones and his Hosemen are not ready to let up yet. After coming from behind last week to trounce Wofford, they are looking forward to a record that could be an exact reverse of last year's disappointing season.



Davidson has several outstanding stars that the Hosemen will have to contain if they expect to keep a perfect record. The Wildcats are strong at the ends with Danny House and Craig Wall ably holding down these positions. Their effectiveness is further enhanced by the flashy passing of quarterback Charlie Benson. The Davidson passing attack will be a real threat to the Blue Hose defense as will the tricky running of Wildcat halfback Paul Barbee.

The Presbyterian line coach, Clyde Erhardt, has molded one of the strongest lines that has been seen at PC in several years. Led by Mac Copeland and Richard Shrigley, it has limited its opponents to only about 100 yards rushing per game and the Cats' slick offense should find it no less yielding.

Tony Benson, John Lucas, Bob Pate, Bob Waters, and Bob Mathews head up a backfield that should prove whether or not the Wildcat line has improved since it was riddled by Catawba.

If PC can continue to display their exceptional team effort, Davidson will have to return to North Carolina with their second loss of the season, and the Hose will be closer to a flying trip to Tampa. The Hose spirit has been tops this year and there is no reason for it to falter before their arch rival, the Davidson Wildcats.

Gin, Goof - Off!

SPIRIT is high this week in anticipation of the traditional Davidson game. Freshmen, above, demonstrate their enthusiasm for the Blue Sock photographer.

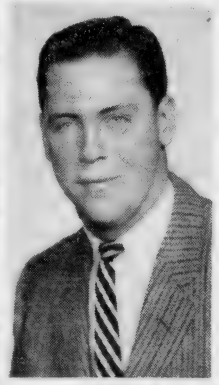
Mathews Claims Top Position As 1959 Senior Class President

Isger, Porter, Bartlett Also Elected; Will Direct Affairs of Graduating Class

In class elections held Monday, Bob Mathews, a senior from Decatur, Ga., won the coveted honor of Senior Class President. The versatile Mathews, an athlete as well as student leader, will be assisted in his duties by Ron Isger, vice-president, Bill Porter the new secretary, and Ron Bartlett, winner of the treasurer's race.



Selected to lead the junior class were Jack Taylor, president; Dick Wood, vice-president; Ebby Mayfield, secretary; and Billy Hagood, treasurer.

The sophomores chose for their officers, Paul Ard, president; Ron Boston, vice-president; Miss Gay Maddox, secretary; and Dick Faulkner, treasurer.

In the freshman race, Dick Carr, Ed Loring, Miss Dee Ring, and Bland Quantz won the offices of president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively.

Paul Layton and Troy Mathews were elected by the student body to fill the freshman slots on the student council. These men will perform duties in running the remaining elections of the campus and judicial cases that arise in student government.

The election rallied only a little over fifty per cent of the student body to the polls in Neville Hall; however, each of the persons named above copped a majority of the votes cast thus eliminating the usual runoff which has occurred frequently in past elections.

BOB MATHEWS

Ten Are Selected For Frosh Cabinet

Ten men and women were elected this week to serve on the freshman SCA cabinet. The election, which was held in a regular meeting of the Senior SCA cabinet, elected Ted Burns, Byron Hollingsworth, Paul Layton, Miss Ina McDonald, Troy Mathews, Heyward Nettles, Carter Redd, Frank Sells, J. W. Spivey, and Dave Waters for the positions.

In their first meeting held Tuesday, J. W. Spivey was elected to the office of president, Dave Waters to the vice-president slot, and Miss Ina McDonald to the secretaryship.

The duties of the cabinet shall be to assist the senior cabinet in the affairs of the SCA and in particular to help with the Student Directory, the United Fund Variety Show, and the Religious Emphasis Week programs.

Lonnie Love, a junior from McColl, was selected by the senior cabinet to be advisor of the group.

Converse Girl to Reign As Homecoming Queen

Miss Lydia Willard, a sophomore at Converse College in Spartanburg, will be the Homecoming Queen for 1958. Announced today by student body president Paul Arrington, Miss Willard won the title over forty-one other candidates in the election held last Tuesday by the student body. She will be presented in the halftime festivities on October 18, and her escort for the weekend will be Chris Hunter, a freshman from Charlotte, N. C.

More Flu Shots Set for This Week

The second round of Asiatic Flu immunization shots, which are being offered free of charge to PC students under the sponsorship of Blue Key, will be administered on Wednesday, October 15, and Thursday, October 16.

A registered nurse from Clinton will again be on hand in the Douglas House game room from 10:30-12:30 and 2:00-5:00 Wednesday, and from 1:00-3:00 Thursday.

Members of Blue Key and student employees of the college infirmary will assist with the program.

The second shot is a follow-up of the first given two weeks ago, since two shots are needed to give complete immunization.

Lockers Are Available For Day Student Use

Lockers in the day student lounge of the Douglas House are available to male day students, according to announcement by G. Edward Campbell, business manager.

Rental for these lockers is $1.50 per semester. Any male student interested in securing a locker is asked to contact the business office.

Baptist Students Hear Speaker from Nigeria

John E. Mills, evangelist secretary of the Nigerian Baptist Convention in Africa, was the featured speaker at the Baptist Student Union meeting on Tuesday night. He told this group of the work going on in Africa and of the opportunities for service which exist there.

Accompanying the speaker on his statewide speaking tour is Mr. Charles Horner, State BSU secretary.

Outstanding Men Speak For Career Day Program

• Guests Introduced in Chapel Today

The administration today rolled out the red carpet for four distinguished guests who are on campus in connection with the new career day program. The guests, Mr. Cecil M. Webb, Senator Joe Eaton, and Reverend Lawrence Sthreshly, Jr., and Mr. Sam Bissett, all of whom were introduced in the chapel exercises this morning will undertake a busy schedule during their stay on campus.

Last evening, the four men were accompanied by Dr. Brown, Mr. Campbell, and Mr. Oeland to Roebuck. Mr. Webb was the main speaker at a fall rally for the Men of Enoree Presbytery. Mr. Webb also spoke in chapel this morning after introduction by Senator Eaton.

Today at 4:30 p. m. informal discussion groups were held for ministerial students, pre-law students, and business administration majors. Mr. Webb spoke to the business students in the science lecture room, Senator Eaton to the law students in the radio forum room, and Reverend Lawrence to the ministerial students in the Douglas House Assembly room.

The visitors will be honored at a banquet this evening at which time all faculty members, the administration, four trustees, several other guests from the state will be present. On Saturday the men will be seated on the fifty-yard line for the "Battle of the Presbyterians" on Johnson Field.

College 'N' to Play . . .

Festivities Set for Homecoming

PC's 1958 Homecoming will get underway Friday night at 8:00 p. m. as Newberry's College 'N' Orchestra supplies the music for the Inter-Fraternity Dance at the Clinton Armory.

The dance will kick off a weekend of colorful events as students and alumni celebrate this year's edition of the annual affair. IFC president Bruce Prince indicated that the dance is scheduled to last from 9-12 p. m., and is to be of a semi-formal nature with appropriate dress being suits for men and street length dresses for the young ladies.

The College 'N' Orchestra is well known throughout South Carolina, having played for numerous events in the state, including at least one previous engagement at Presbyterian. Fraternity assessment and admission for the dance has been set by the IFC at $1.50 per couple.

Miss Lydia Willard, the Homecoming Queen, will be presented at the dance Friday night and is to be officially crowned during the halftime festivities of Saturday's game.

Another highlight of the Homecoming weekend is the dedication of the Douglas House. It will be dedicated in memory of the Presbyterian College alumni who lost their lives in service for their country. Dr. McSween, a former president of PC, will be one of the speakers for this occasion.

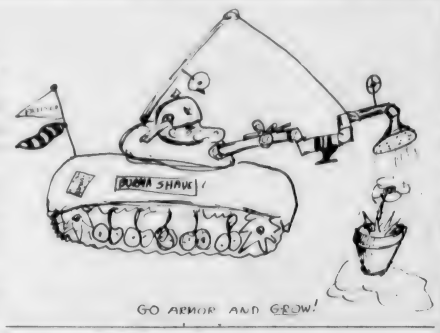
Re-Orient Yourself...

It would seem that a very valuable institution to have on a college campus would be an "orientation application" period, where we can take the "catalog generalities" that we heard during orentation week and evaluate them in the light of the actual situations that we have found on this campus.

When we came here, we were all loaded up with handbooks, handshakes, and patriotic cliches about "the friendliest little college in the South." We were awash in exhortations to "get that ol' PC spirit that fights clean and never gives up!"

Familiarity with the campus and the students did away with the necessity for the handbooks; upperclassmen did away with the handshakes and cliches, and painting parties tarnished that ol' PC spirit. There you are, just like we were three years ago, with all the propaganda stripped off, naked in the realization that your real identity as a student and as a man must come from within your own self.

This is the real difference, socially, between high school and college. When you go away to college, you lose your home identification. You are inspected and evaluated for the person that you yourself are, not for what your father does or who you ran around with at ol' "Harry High." So it is for the best that you become disillusioned about some of your first impressions, and realize that you are, above all, an individual, responsible to yourself and to those who depend on you to utilize your opportunities and talents; your benefactors and your fellow students.



This done, we come to the crying need of any campus claiming to propagate Christian education, and that is, Christians who will take advantage of and practice the education offered them.

Grand Old Custom...

The Freshman Control Board deserves a pat on the back for its work this year of directing frosh "enthusiasm" in support of a winning football team. And we concur with the practice of giving the freshmen a break from their "rat" duties in recognition of their spirit.

However, we believe that the purpose of rat signs has been largely to aid upperclassmen in learning the names of the freshmen. If so, why are so many rats running around without the insigna of their rank? As any anthropologist knows, most societies tenaciously cling to those criteria which distinguish the headmen from the initiates. Upperclassmen—and you on the Board—we are losing our status!

We jest—but seriously, let us not permit an old campus tradition to slowly dwindle away. Freshmen, you will understand what we mean next year.

Rex King...

Adult Cowboy and Pioneer

The Story:

In chapter three of The Adventures of Rex King we met, as you may recall, Rancher Baker and the Indian servant girl, Ethel. More about those two later. Just now, as we look in once again on the Baker household, supper is over, and we find Rex King on the front porch, roling a cigarette. He is rolling it back and forth on the floor, quite preoccupied when Nan Baker enters. He gets up off his knees and says:

"That was certainly a mighty fine meal, Miss Nan."

"Thank you, Rex," she replied, "but I've got something more important to talk about. I think you and your side-kick better get outa this part of the country while the gettin's good."

"But we just got here," said Rex. "And besides, me and Al kinda like it aroun' here. Don't we, Al?"

"Al's still inside," Nan told him, as she sat down in the swing.

"Oh," Rex said, sitting beside her.

"Haven't you ever thought of settlin' down, Rex?" Nan asked. "Wouldn't you like ot have a place of your own?"

"I reckon as how it would be right nice, at that," said Rex. "If I could find the right girl to be my wife."

"Well, don't look at me," said Nan. "I'm engaged to marry Marshall Marshall Martin."

Profit Is Good Not Selling Hogs

A farmer had just received a check for $1,000 from the Department of Agriculutre for not raising hogs and this gave the farmer's neighbor an idea. He, too, decided to go into this not raising hogs business and in order to get more information he wrote a letter to the Department of Agriculture. This is an excerpt from his letter:

"Two things I want to know. What is the best kind of farm animal to raise hogs on? What is the best kind of hog not to raise? I'd rather not raise razorbacks, but if this is not a good kind not to raise then I will not raise Poland Chinas or Berkshires. How do I keep track of how many hogs I'm not going to raise?

"My neighbor got $1,000 for not raising hogs. If I can get $1,000 for not raising 50 hogs, then I will get $2,000 for not raising 100 hogs. I will not raise 4,000 hogs to start with, which means I have $80,000 to start with. He tells me you also pay farmers for not raising corn. These hogs I'll not raise will not eat 100,000 bushels of corn. Do you pay me for not raising 100,000 bushels of corn not to feed hogs I'm not raising? If you don't have to have a farm not to raise these hogs and corn on, put me down for 4,000 hogs and around 100,000 bushels of corn and send check.

"Please answer soon, as business is very slow and this would be a good time of year for not raising hogs and corn."

KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting of the Beta Pi Chapter plans were made to obtain a real "get up and go" combo for Saturday night following the homecoming game.

Re-decoration of the lodge is now underway and is hoped to be completed before the dance weekend.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

We would like to correct a mistake made in last week's Greek column. Miss Martha Brannon was crowned National Dream Girl of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity at the National Convention in Washington, D. C.

The regular meeting of Mu Chapter was held Tuesday night. Plans for open house to be held the night of the PC-Davidson game were made and Non-Fraterniyt men and their dates are invited.

Brothers of the Week were Earl Miles for pinning Miss Kay Revell and the PiKA members and the football team for their excellent job in last week's game.

PI KAPPA PHI

At the regular joint meeting of Beta Chapter the main topic was Homecoming. Final plans for the Homecoming display were made. Also in connection with Homecoming, plans were made for the use of Peck's Marl Lou Ranch for Friday and Saturday nights.

Also discussed at the meeting were plans for improving the appearance of the Fraternity rooms.

Brother Wilson Livingston (Beta, class of '58) was welcomed back as a visitor at the meeting.

SIGMA NU

Tusday night the brothers and pledges of Zeta Theta Chapter made final plans for the open social to be held October 22.

Plans were made for holding an open breakfast at the Mary Musgrove Hotel after the Homecoming Dance. House decorations and the exhibit for Homecoming were also discussed.

'It's a Bore'

By AL McKIE

MGM predicted a winner in GIGI. The ingredients: A story with possibilities, by Colette; Leslie Caron, Maurice Chevalier, Louis Jourdan, Eva Gabor; A good supporting cast; a topnotch director—Vincente Minnelli; and music by Lerner and Lowe (of My Fair Lady fame). $3,000,000 later this cinemafeast was served in the finest Broadway tradition of first-nighters, white ties and all that jazz.

The ingredients are Grade A and the resulting production is garnished in grand style but sadly lacking in spice; colorful but flat. A couple of marionettes and the never-aging playboy Chevalier sports his sickly-sweet grin from end to end.

Young innocent Gigi prefers a more orthodox marriage than the one proposed by her aunt and grandmother who suggests that "Instead of getting married at once, it sometimes happens we get married at last." Gigi and her ideal triumph, but Jourdan adeptly sets the tone for this flick when he intones, "It's a bore."

Passing Moments

It was at the funeral of a woman who had been thoroughly disliked in a rural community—and for cause. With a sharply barbed tongue and a violently explosive disposition, she henpecked her husband, drove her children mercilessly and quarreled with her neighbors. Even the animals on the place wore a hunted look.

The day was sultry, and as the minister's voice droned on the sky grew darker. Just as the service ended, the sotrm broke furiously. There was a blinding flash followed closely by a terrific thunder clap. In the stunned silence a voice was heard from the back row of the crowded room: "Waal, she's got there!"

Blue Socks Blast Wofford Terriers 18-14

STARTING LINEUP in Saturday's home opener for the Blue Hose will include the names of end Paul Chastain and guard Mac Copeland. Coach Jones' changes in the line involved Copeland shifting from the pivot position.

Halfback Lucas Grabs Terrier Lateral, Streaking 48 Yards for PC Touchdown

By MARTIN CHITTY

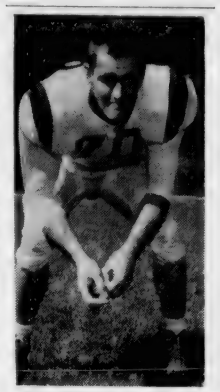
An intercepted lateral by Halfback John Lucas, who streaked 48 yards to paydirt, gave the Presbyterian Blue Hose an 18-14 victory over the Wofford Terriers.

Lucas' run up the middle climaxed a come from behind battle that saw PC effectively check the vaunted Charlie Bradshaw to Jerry Richardson passing attack on which Wofford counts heavily.

Wofford drew first blood, taking the opening kickoff and moving 76 yards in ten plays. Gary Whitlock took it over from there, after a 41-yard Bradshaw to Richardson pass set it up. Whitlock's run for the two points failed.

The Blue Hose roared back after the ensuing kickoff, moving 80 yards in eight plays. Runs of 28 and 32 yards by Halfback Tony

JOHN LUCAS



Benson featured the drive. Halfback Bobby Pate scored from the seven. The extra point kick was blocked.

Wofford end Boyd Allen intercepted a Bob Waters lateral on the Wofford 35 and carried it back 25 yards. The Terriers moved it to the one, where Joe Sickle plunged over. Sickle passed to Richardson for the two points, and the Methodists went ahead 14-6.

Presbyterian came right back when Pate intercepted a Bradshaw pass and streaked to the Wofford seven. From here PC plunged over for the TD but the attempted conversion was wide, and it was 14-12 at halftime.

Then in the third period came Lucas big play and the Blue Hose took the lead to stay in front. How-

Lucas Comes Through!

Presbyterian halfback John Lucas was the toast of Clinton this week as excited PC'uns rehashed the senior's magnificent play that sparked the Blue Hose to a narrow 18-14 victory over arch-rival Wofford.

The lanky Pennsylvanian turned into a capable college performer and Saturday night's tilt indicated little doubt whatsoever in anyone's mind that this football player had "found himself." It was ole Luke who put the voltage in the shocker.

A large throng looked on in astonishment as Lucas intercepted two of Mr. Bradshaw's tosses and virtually made the All-Everything a goat for the evening as one of his pitchouts fell right in the arms of Lucas to set the way for a climactic sail to paydirt.

But Wofford, which stunned a listless-appearing PC team last week, almost sent the Hose chances for an unblemished record into foggy oblivion. We cannot deny the fact that the Terriers were a fired-up bunch and came within a hair of doing just that. Coach Snidow and his fleet of speed merchants very ably filled in for a suspected bombardment of Bradshaw heaves.

But this was clearly not the same Hose which swept by East Carolina and Lenoir-Rhyne in the previous two encounters. The score at halftime was unexpected enough to stun the Blue Hose followers, the players themselves and perhaps the coaches, who had warned the players all week that Wofford would definitely be up for this one. Apparently they failed to heed the warning.

This is a fine Presbyterian team which will undoubtedly go down as the most improved aggregation ever performing after such a poor season. Nevertheless, the slim win over the Terriers should be used to an advantage; not as an array of roses, but as a warning to redeem themselves after playing below par last week.

The stage is set for a clash with Southern Conference Davidson in a 'Battle of the Presbyterians' tomorrow night. Let's hope the favorite's role heeds some warning this week.

PC OPPONENTS

Presbyterian College football opponents in the current campaign saw heavy action as five games carried the entire Blue Hose slate of opposition last weekend.

Improved East Carolina threw a jolt to a powerful and previously undefeated Catawba eleven by a 8-0 margin. Coach Jack Boone's Pirates threw a potent passing attack at Catawba, the same that dented a defensive Hose backfield for two scores in the opener. The Hose victory over Wofford coupled with this surprise enables PC to emerge the only undefeated small college team in the Carolinas.

A little band of Indians at Newberry found Ackard and rough Lenior-Rhyne too much to defend against. The Bears ran at will against the helpless 'skins, 28-6.

Western Carolina nearly pulled the string in the waning moments of play down in the Sunshine State as the Catamounts fell before Tampa, 19-12. Tampa will be seeking their third straight this week at Arkansas State. PC will journey down to the Florida city and meet the Spartans on October 25.

It was quarterback Charlie Benson's run for the extra points which enabled Davidson to post their initial win of the campaign over The Citadel, 8-6. According to Head Coach Bill Dole, the Wildcats will bring a most formidable outfit to Clinton this week to meet the Blue Hose.

SOCK PREDICTS

Last week: 2 right, 0 wrong
Total for season: 6 right, 2 wrong

This week:

Newberry will be trying hard this week in an attempt to get back on a winning way. Coach Harvey Kirkland's crippled forces were outmanned last week by Lenoir-Rhyne, but should perk up enough to win their second game of the season against Carson-Newman. The 'skins by a 19-12 score.

In 'A Battle of the Presbyterians' will loom a closer ball game than Davidson will bring a healthy line to Clinton this weekend but must combine a vastly improved ground game that they displayed against The Citadel last week.

The Hose on the other hand are definitely capable of playing better than they did against Wofford. Another loose game with the same amount of mistakes might prove fatal to a respectable winning streak. It will take more than Davidson to stop PC's offensive machine as we see the Hose margin at 6 points, in a 20-14 game.

Cagers Get Early Start To Prep for Rigid Schedule

Five Returning Lettermen Will Give Blue Hose Good Prospects for Season

By DON HYDE

Official basketball practice has yet to start, but due to the rigid schedule the Blue Hose face this year, some of the players are working out early and are trying to sharpen their eye on the basket.

Coach Courts Redford in his first year at PC compiled an outstandnig record of 16 wins and only 8 defeats. The Blue Hose under his leadership defeated such teams as Furman, Mercer, Georgia Teachers twice and Belmont Abbey.

The Abbey ran up a string of 22 wins and later went on to sweep through the NAIA only to lose out to a fine Lenoir-Rhyne five. Presbyterian's defeat of the Abbey last year was just one of the many inspired team efforts.

Through graduation PC lost a good rebounder in Wyatt Aiken and a fine floor man in Clayton Adams, but the 1959 season looks bright as five lettermen who saw plenty of action will be returning.

Leading the list will be Ralph Chambers, 6-3 forward from Portsmouth, Va., who led the team in scoring last year and was one of the key men in Coach Redford's highly successful defensive system.

Co-captains Ken Caswell of Paris, Ky., and Bill Sullivan of Frankfort, Ind., are two back court men with plenty of experience and on many occasions have baffled the opposition and thrilled the spectators with their dribbling ability. These two flashy guards should get plenty of assistance from lettermen Harvey Blanchard and Paul Ard.

Bob Stratton, a junior from Lawrenceville, Ky., returns to his forward spot and a great deal of the Blue Hose success will depend on him. Stratton, who was picked as a member of the Little Four Tournament team, dropped in 400 points during the season and was

Again the Blue Stocking offers you the chance to match wits with the experts in picking the winners of South Carolina football games.

Five passes to the Broadway Theater will be given the person who picks correctly the winners in all the games and also the total number of points in the PC game.

If no one turns in a prefect ballot the person coming closest to doing so will be awarded one pass.

Ballots must be placed in the ballot box in Douglas House by NOON SATURDAY, OCT. 11.

Earl Halsall Will Address IRC Group Monday Night

Earl B. Halsall, new professor of Political Science, will be the speaker for the second meeting of the International Relations Club, to be held at 7:30 Monday evening, October 13, in the Douglas House assembly room.

Speaking on the impact of integration, particularly from the standpoint of foreign relations, Halsall will draw upon his experience as a military government officer in North Africa, Italy, France and Germany during World War II.

The meeting is open, with all non-members invited to attend.

The competitive examination for membership in the IRC will also be held next week. Tuesday, October 14, and Wednesday, October 15, at 2 o'clock has been set for the testing. It will be given both days in the assembly room of the Douglas House.

The test is being given at these times in the hope that those with labs and other conflicts will be able to take the test on one of the afternoons.

Sponsored by the Carnegie Endowment for World Peace, the International Relations Club is designed to stimulate interest in international affairs. The over-all theme for this year is "learning to live in our changing world."

All interested persons are urged to attend the meeting Monday night and to take part in the testing on either of the two dates.

The center position is wide open with Junior Sonny Wells seeming to have the outside track. Wells will be pushed hard by Ernie Redd, a junior from Columbia, who worked hard all summer and has shown improvement.

Two transfer students who should really help the Blue Hose are 6-4 Mickey Long of Greenville, and 6-3 Mickey Flynn of Greer. The two were former members of the highly respected North Greenville college team which went to the National Finals in Junior College competition two years in a row.

There are many other prospective players giving the Hose plenty of depth this year, but the competition is much keener as can be seen in the schedule on this page.

'Jazz Shots'

By PAUL WILLIAMS

Jonah Jones, a name that has become quite popular in the last few years, has come up with another fine LP, Jumpin' With Jonah (Capitol T1039).

Jonah himself has a successful formula and he's using it to brighten the hit charts with a succession of bouncy LPs.

I find each Jonah Jones LP very relaxing and pleasant listening, rarely stimulating in a jazz sense, but always done with wit and with verve. The tunes are fine, and they fall immediately under the spell of his style.

The appeal here is very strong to pop fans, teenagers, (Night Train, for instance, I would rather hear on a juke box than some of the abortions that pass for music), and the "hip" set, which digs the show tunes and likes the Jones approach.

Hank Jones' piano is heard here and ther throughout. He can play just about anything with taste.

Jonah sings a couple, too. A Sinatra he's not, but he does have a charm of his own.

For album collectors, this is a must. For others, you'll be missing something if you by-pass it.

Center Named to Honor Former President Douglas

• Recognizes One of Greatest Leaders

Presbyterian College will honor an outstanding former president by officially naming its new student center in honor of the late Dr. Davison McDowell Douglas as a Homecoming highlight tomorrow.

The $250,000 structure, completed just before the start of the current session last month, is to eb known as The Douglas House. It peretuates the memory of the man whose 15½-year administration marked one of the most dramatic periods in the development of Presbyterian College.

Dr. Douglas, a native of Blackstock, came to Presbyterian College in the summer of 1911 from the pastorate of the Maryland Avenue Presbyterian Church of Baltimore. When he left on December 31, 1926, to become president of the University of South Carolina, he had almost completely transformed this little institution.

The PC student body and faculty had more than tripled under Dr. Douglas' direction. The college had made tremendous strides culturally, having gained the respect and support of churchmen and edcators alike. Property and assets increased ten-fold, and these four new buildings were added to the campus plant: Spencer Dormitory in 1912; William P. Jacobs Science Hall and Library in 1915; Smyth Dormitory, still the largest on campus, in 1924; and LeRoy Springs Gymnasium, also in 1924.

It was Dr. Douglas also who brought in a notable landscape artist to design a well laid out campus plan that is still being followed in the present building program. This president planted the Presbyterian College will stage its 1958 Homecoming, amid special Douglas House ceremonies, when hundreds of alumni return to the campus this Saturday.

All indications point to this occasion being one of the biggest Homecomings yet staged at PC, according to Public Relations and Alumni Director Ben Hay Hammet.

A highlight is the two-pronged ceremony to name Presbyterian's new $250,000 student center in honor of former president Dr. Davison McDowell Douglas and to dedicate it in memory of the 70 PC alumni killed in World War II and the Korean War. This feature is set for 3:30 p. m.

The schedule also features: an alumni board of directors meeting at 11 a. m.; class reunions at 1 p. m.; the Alumni Luncheon at 1:30 p. m.; the President's reception at 4:30 p. m.; and various meetings leading up to the 6:15 p. m. supper and the PC-Elon football game under lights at 8 p. m.

Five outstanding Presbyterian leaders will participate in the Douglas House program.

Col. Powell A. Fraser, army battle group commander and religious speaker, will deliver the dedication address. Dr. Marshall S. Woodson, president of Flora McDonald College, will speak on "Dr. Douglas as I remember Him." Dr. John McSween, former president of PC, will lead the litany of dedication. The invocation will be handled by the Rev. Russell W. Park, Sr., of Olanta, moderator of the South Carolina Synod; the prayer of dedication and benediction, by Dr. Harry K. Holland, PC trustee and pastor of the Marietta (Ga.) First Presbyterian Church.

All of these participants except Dr. McSween are Presbyterian College alumni.

John Holland Hunter, Clinton businessman and former business manager of PC, will serve as master of ceremonies at the Alumni Luncheon where John Osman will receive the 1958 Alumni Gold P. He's cited for his work as vice president of the Ford Foundation Fund for Adult Education.

Presentation of Queen is Highlight; Other Events Slated For Week-end

The IFC Dance tonight will open the initial dance weekend of the year, featuring Newberry's College "N" Orchestra. It will precede the Homecoming game slated for tomorrow night when the Blue Hose of Presbyterian face the Elon College Christians.

The popular Newberry Orchestra is well known in college circles, having played at numerous affairs throughout the state, including at least one previous PC dance weekend.

Presentation of Miss Lydia Willard, the Homecomnig Queen, will be one of the highlights of the dance tonight in the gaily decorated armory. Miss Willard, a freshman at Converse College, Spartanburg, was elected to the coveted position last week in balloting by the student body. Her official crowning as Queen will take place during the halftime of the football game. She will be escorted at the dance and game by Chris Hunter, a PC student from Charlotte, N. C.

Dress for the dance is to be of an informal nature with appropriate dress being suits for men and street length dresses for the young ladies. For those attending who do not get tickets through their fraternities, tickets will be available at the door for $1.50.

A variety of events are on slate for the weekend, in addition to the dance and ball game. Parties are planned by the fraternities following the dance, and picnics and outings are planned for Saturday. Also, following the game Saturday night, fraternities wil hold open house in their suites to welcome returning alumni and friends of their chapters.

Naval Recruiters Will Visit Campus

Representatives from the Office of Naval Officer Procurement in Raleigh will visit Presbyterian College on Tuesday, Nov. 4, 1958 for the purpose of explaining the Navy's commissioned officer programs to interested personnel. Interviews will be conducted in the Douglas House.

Openings are available for assignment in Aviation, General Line, and in numerous speciality categories. Most of the programs are available only to the college seniors who expect to graduate, however, undergraduates who have completed 60 semester hours of accredited work may apply for appointment as a Naval Aviation Cadet.

In order to avoid delay in being ordered to active duty, applications may be initiated several months prior to attaining the required academic qualifications, but final acceptance will depend upon successfully completing these qualifications. Candidates who meet the required standards may take the qualification tests and make application with the visiting Navy Procurement Officers if they desire. Those who take the qualification test or who make application and subsequently change their mind are not obligated in any way.

Candidates for General Line, Supply, Civil Engineering, and the Medical Service Group receive initial training at the Officer Candidate School located at Newport, Rhode Island. Aviation Officer Candidates and Naval Aviation Cadets start flight training at Pensacola, Florida.

Attention!

Mr. Powell requests that the students please check the bulletin board in the dining hall because the serving hours will be changed this weekend in order to serve both the band and students.

Seniors To Meet Tuesday, Thursday

A meeting of all seniors who will graduate in January, June, or August, has been called by Senior Class President Bob Mathews. Due to the amount of business to be covered and the limited amount of time available on the social and academic calendar, the meeting will be split into two sessions, the first at chapel period Tuesday, and the second chapel period Thursday.

The primary business will be election of senior superlatives. Nominations will come from the floor in a "town meeting" type of election. The superlative slots include: Friendliest, Most Athletic, Wittiest, Best Looking, Best All Around, and Best Dressed.

Mathews stated that a vote and discussion will be held concerning the addition of a Most Likely to Succeed category or the use of this as a replacement for Best Looking.

The second important point of business will be the PsC-Sae forms which William Turner will hand out for the seniors to fill in their stay at PC.

The meetings wil be held in the schol honors achieved during their chapel.

Montreat-PC Week-End Planned For October 25

The Student Christian Association next weekend, Oct. 25, will sponsor a PC-Montreat weekend at Montreat, N. C. Fifty students will leave the campus at 1:30 next Saturday in private transportation and journey to the mountain retreat for a weekend of activities sponsored by the girls of Montreat College.

Those students who are interested can sign up by seeing Sonny Embry or Rohe Eshbaugh. The list will be completed by Tuesday of next week and will include the men's names and heights; it will then be sent to the college where the SCA there

The group will return to the campus early Sunday evening.

Homecoming Speakers

THREE outstanding leaders who will participate in the Douglas House program are pictured above. Mr. John McSween, left, will lead the litany of dedication; Col. Powell Fraser is to deliver the dedication address; and Dr. Marshall S. Woodson, right, will speak on "Dr. Douglas As I Remember Him."

SCA Will Direct . . .

Annual United Fund Drive To Begin on Campus Monday

The United Fund will officially kick off its campus campaign in connection with the Clinton-Laurens campaign next week. The fund drive will give students and faculty an opportunity to contribute to the many worthy causes supported by the United Fund.

A committee appointed by representatives in the Clinton organization to direct the drive includes G. Edward Campbell, L. V. Powell, and Irving Montgomery. Mr. Campbell will handle the faculty contributions, while Mr. Powell and Mr. Montgomery will work with a committee appointed by the SCA to carry out the drive among the students.

In a special United Fund Chapel program Monday, Mr. Powell will present trophies to the social organizations who last year had 100 per cent contributions by their members.

The SCA had originally planned a variety show for October 24 to benefit the fund drive, but it has been postponed until November 14, due to schedule conflicts. All proceeds from this will be given to the United Fund as the climax of the three-week campus drive.

Second Meeting . . .

Earl Halsall Will Address IRC Group Monday Night

Earl R. Halsall, new professor of Political Science, will be the speaker for the second meeting of the International Relations Club, to be held at 7:30 Monday evening, October 13, in the Douglas House assembly room.

Speaking on the impact of world affairs particularly from the standpoint of foreign relations, Halsall will draw upon his experience as a military government officer in North Africa, Italy, France and Germany during World War II.

The aim is basic study of these times in the hope that these students and others contacted will be able to take their place as leaders in these times.

Col. Powell A. Fraser, army battle group commander and religious speaker, will deliver the dedication address. Dr. Marshall S. Woodson, president of Flora McDonald College, will speak on "Dr. Douglas as I remember Him." Dr. John McSween, former president of PC, will lead the litany of dedication. The invocation will be handled by the Rev. Russell W. Park, Sr., of Olanta, moderator of the South Carolina Synod; the prayer of dedication and benediction, by Dr. Harry K. Holland, PC trustee and pastor of the Marietta (Ga.) First Presbyterian Church.

All of these participants except Dr. McSween are Presbyterian College alumni.

John Holland Hunter. Clinton businessman and former business manager of PC, will serve as master of ceremonies at the Alumni Luncheon where John Osman will receive the 1958 Alumni Gold P. He's cited for his work as vice president of the Ford Foundation Fund for Adult Education.

College 'N' Blasts at Armory For PC's Social Season Opener

Presentation of Queen is Highlight; Other Events Slated For Week-end

The IFC Dance tonight will open the initial dance weekend of the year, featuring Newberry's College "N" Orchestra. It will precede the Homecoming game slated for tomorrow night when the Blue Hose of Presbyterian face the Elon College Christians.

The popular Newberry Orchestra is well known in college circles, having played at numerous affairs throughout the state, including at least one previous PC dance weekend.

Presentation of Miss Lydia Willard, the Homecomnig Queen, will be one of the highlights of the dance tonight in the gaily decorated armory. Miss Willard, a freshman at Converse College, Spartanburg, was elected to the covetposition last week in balloting by the student body. Her official crowning as Queen will take place during the halftime of the football game. She will be escorted at the dance and game by Chris Hunter, a PC student from Charlotte, N. C.

Dress for the dance is to be of an informal nature with appropriate dress being suits for men and street length dresses for the young ladies. For those attending who do not get tickets through their fraternities, tickets will be available at the door for $1.50.

A variety of events are on slate for the weekend, in addition to the dance and ball game. Parties are planned by the fraternities following the dance, and picnics and outings are planned for Saturday. Also, following the game Saturday night, fraternities wil hold open house in their suites to welcome returning alumni and friends of their chapters.

Naval Recruiters Will Visit Campus

Representatives from the Office of Naval Officer Procurement in Raleigh will visit Presbyterian College on Tuesday, Nov. 4, 1958 for the purpose of explaining the Navy's commissioned officer programs to interested personnel. Interviews will be conducted in the Douglas House.

Openings are available for assignment in Aviation, General Line, and in numerous speciality categories. Most of the programs are available only to the college seniors who expect to graduate, however, undergraduates who have completed 60 semester hours of accredited work may apply for appointment as a Naval Aviation Cadet.

In order to avoid delay in being ordered to active duty, applications may be initiated several months prior to attaining the required academic qualifications, but final acceptance will depend upon successfully completing these qualifications. Candidates who meet the required standards may take the qualification tests and make application with the visiting Navy Procurement Officers if they desire. Those who take the qualification test or who make application and subsequently change their mind are not obligated in any way.

Candidates for General Line, Supply, Civil Engineering, and the Medical Service Group receive initial training at the Officer Candidate School located at Newport, Rhode Island. Aviation Officer Candidates and Naval Aviation Cadets start flight training at Pensacola, Florida.

Attention!

Mr. Powell requests that the students please check the bulletin board in the dining hall because the serving hours will be changed this weekend in order to serve both the durant and students.

Seniors To Meet Tuesday, Thursday

A meeting of all seniors who will graduate in January, June, or August, has been called by Senior Class President Bob Mathews. Due to the amount of business to be covered and the limited amount of time available on the social and academic calendar, the meeting will be split into two sessions, the first at chapel period Tuesday, and the second chapel period Thursday.

The primary business will be election of senior superlatives. Nominations will come from the floor in a "town meeting" type of election. The superlative slots include: Friendliest, Most Athletic, Wittiest, Best Looking, Best All Around, and Best Dressed.

Mathews stated that a vote and discussion will be held concerning the addition of a Most Likely to Succeed category or the use of this as a replacement for Best Looking.

The second important point of business will be the PaC-Sac forms which William Turner will hand out for the seniors to fill in their stay at PC.

The meetings wil be held in the schol honors achieved during their chapel.

Montreat-PC Week-End Planned For October 25

The Student Christian Association next weekend, Oct. 25, will sponsor a PC-Montreat weekend at Montreat, N. C. Fifty students will leave the campus at 1:30 next Saturday in private transportation and journey to the mountain retreat for a weekend of activities sponsored by the girls of Montreat College.

Those students who are interested can sign up by seeing Sonny Embry or Rohe Eshbaugh. The list will be completed by Tuesday of next week and will include the men's names and heights; it will then be sent to the college where the SCA there

The group will return to the campus early Sunday evening.

Homecoming Speakers

THREE outstanding leaders who will participate in the Douglas House program are pictured above. Mr. John McSween, left, will lead the litany of dedication; Col. Powell Fraser is to deliver the dedication address; and Dr. Marshall S. Woodson, right, will speak on "Dr. Douglas As I Remember Him."

SCA Will Direct . . .

Annual United Fund Drive To Begin on Campus Monday

The United Fund will officially kick off its campus campaign in connection with the Clinton-Laurens campaign next week. The fund drive will give students and faculty an opportunity to contribute to the many worthy causes supported by the United Fund.

A committee appointed by representatives in the Clinton organization to direct the drive includes G. Edward Campbell, L. V. Powell, and Irving Montgomery. Mr. Campbell will handle the faculty contributions, while Mr. Powell and Mr. Montgomery will work with a committee appointed by the SCA to carry out the drive among the students.

In a special United Fund Chapel program Monday, Mr. Powell will present trophies to the social organizations who last year had 100 per cent contributions by their members.

The SCA had originally planned a variety show for October 24 to benefit the fund drive, but it has been postponed until November 14, due to schedule conflicts. All proceeds from this will be given to the United Fund as the climax of the three-week campus drive.

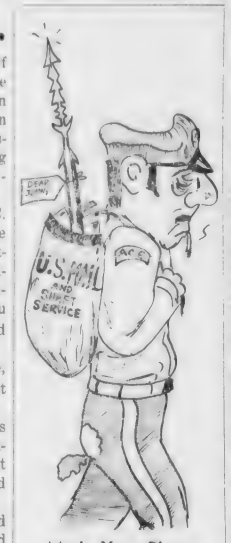
New and Changing...



We remember but vaguely the last PC Homecoming of two years ago. Since that weekend when we danced to the music of Tony Torre and met Catawba on the gridiron much has changed on the campus. Two new freshmen classes have registered, new profs have entered the classroom, entrance requirements have been raised, a winning football team has been created, and the campus itself reflects the growth of the college.

Alumni, we welcome you to a new and changing PC. We invite you to join in our weekend of activities; the dance, the dedication of Douglas House, the alumni meetings, the fraternity parties, and especially the homecoming grid match. We want you to renew friendships, to reminisce—"Back When . . ." Tell us how it was when you were here. And as we share memories with you, we would have you share our hopes for the future.

Each undergraduate has a pet gripe about the college, yet each holds to a favorite hope. They may be varied, but all aspire to a greater college.

As we join together for a weekend of festivities and as we share hopes and memories, may we as alumni and undergrads both be proud of the accomplishments of the past and determine to help in every way possible the continued progress of PC.

True, such an editorial as this tends to the idealistic and by nature is vague. We believe that a slap on the back and a hearty handshake are justified, but at the same time we challenge you to lend your efforts to an ever growing institution.

Made Your Plans For Homecoming Yet?

Passing Judgement . . .

Northern Editor Sees Southern Point of View

(From the Freehold (N. J.) Transcript)

How would you like to be a member of a Board of Education south of the Mason and Dixon Line and be faced with the problems which judges without judgment have inflicted upon that area?

It is fine for us in editorial chairs in the North to pass comment about the South. It would be something else again if we had the responsibility for children in the schools down there. For instance, what chance did a child in the Little Rock High School have last year for a good education—when soldiers were daily patrolling the corridors, when smart kids who wanted to start something behind the backs of the teachers and armed guards, were hurling insults at a token force of eight or nine Colored students?

The Supreme Court of the United States has made mistakes before. Abraham Lincoln roundly scored the court for its Dred Scott decision. On platform after platform he demanded that the decision be changed. Eventually it was.

Enforcement by armed might won't make the people of the South obedient to the law which denies them rights to manage their own schools—rights which the Constitution specifically reserves to the states and to the people. All the troops with bayonets that the President can muster will not force parents to send children to schools not run to their liking nor collect taxes from people who don't want to pay for such schools. Whether or not these people are bigoted and ignorant is beside the point. There are many Negroes who want their own schools and churches as one writer in a Jackson, Mississippi, Colored newspaperper testified in an editorial.

We get a bit tired of the solemn declaration of editorialists who talk about obedience to "the law of the land." The same mouthpieces with, in memory were openly denying a prohibition law which, mistakenly no doubt, was adopted by constitutional legislative processes. How much more sacred is law made by nine men, most of whom were picked for political service rather than for their ability as lawyers, when such law was picked out of the air after discarding decisions that had stood up for generations?

It would be well for all of us to put ourselves in the position of a parent or a school board member in the South before we pass judgment on what is happening at Little Rock and in Virginia.

Progressing Wonderfully Well

Penetrating Analysis of Campus Life?

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

Dear Mom,

Well, I thought I'd better write and tell you what's going on up here at this joint, since I haven't done so yet.

I finally got unpacked and everything like that. It seemed such a shame to unpack everything though, after you had packed it so neatly in my suitcase.

We had a lot of speeches at first, one of the better being by "Smiley" Stevenson, an English professor, who spoke on "What Are We Here For" and, Mom, I don't know yet.

Everything is progressing just wonderfully well (college sentence) and everyone is so friendly. Would you believe it—it was my English teacher, "Bushy" Couch, who got the most well groomed teacher award.

So far the food has been pretty good, that is, if you like roast beef, jello, and chicken. One time I noticed a feather on my fried chicken and since I was so hungry I went ahead and ate it and am glad I did because it was good and it really tickled my appetite.

Well, let me tell you about military, Mom. Monday we had our first drill. When I finally fought my way through the fog and arrived at the drill field, I didn't know where to go. I happened to run into a guy named Prince Hardin or something like that, who said he was the Major Sergeant, and he introduced me to his understudy, a Sergeant Lowman.

Hardin told me where to go, but instead I just kept on moving through the fog and stopped when a hand touched my shoulder. In the distance I heard someone shouting commands, so I followed them as best I could. About this time the sun came out, and looking around, there was no one near me. At first I thought I either had halitosis or had forgotten my WD-9, but Hardin, seeing me, gigged me into the right position, and I discovered that the hand was that of one of the yard crew who were busily cutting grass.

These here Hose have a pretty good record going in football, and as it stands now they've won three and dropped one. Last Saturday was our first home game and although the team turned in a great show, we lost by one point. I noticed, when I arrived in my sport shirt and Levis, that everyone else had on a coat and tie. The way these big three boys dress you'd think they were the Big Ten or the Ivy League Seven or something.

We really had a lot of pep at the game mainly because everyone was in good spirits—Kentucky Tavern, Ole Crow, Four Roses, White House, and Budweiser, not to mention that new brew, Sudden Discomfort. Before the game, the band took the field and gave a great performance, especially the drummer.

Well, Mom, I'm doing great in my studies; in fact, I'm third in my Biology class—yes, I sit on the first row, third seat. Some extraordinary people plan to graduate Cum Laude as such, some of the seniors will be lucky to graduate Thank the Laude.

Mom, that's about all from here, so I guess I'll go shine some shoes or something real educational like that, and I'll write you again when I have some time out from my busy schedule.

Your loving son,
Ralph R. Kweger, Jr.

Welcome Alumni!

On behalf of the Student Body of P. C., I wish to extend to all alumni a most cordial welcome to the campus for Homecoming festivities.

Each fraternity has been assigned a particular spot on campus on which it will place a colorful decoration as an entry in the Inter-Fraternity Council sponsored competition. Many long hours of planning and working have gone into each of these to add to the color of the week-end.

The IFC has done much in decorating the Armory for the Friday night, Homecoming Dance, where the College "N" Orchestra of Newberry College will provide the evening's music and entertainment.

Saturday afternoon will be the first time for drop-ins at Douglas House and each of the fraternity rooms. This will also be the time for all alumni to meet old friends and enjoy the old "Southern Hospitality" of P. C.

The football team is having an excellent year, and after much hard work and sweat, will certainly provide an exciting Saturday evening.

After the game there will be parties at the fraternity rooms where everyone will certainly find a fine late-evening's entertainment.

Again on behalf of the Student Body, I extend to you a Hearty Welcome.

Jazz Jots . . .

Newport Jazz Festival

By PAUL WILLIAMS

The Newport Jazz Festival of 1957 was brought to a triumphant close by William "Count" Basie, his band and several of his more illustrious alumni. That night some 8,000 jazz fans had the opportunity to hear the best of Basie's original band together with the swinging unit that is the top big band playing jazz today.

This nostalgic performance has been caught and preserved on record by Verve Records (MGV-8243), American Recording Society (ARS-G-435), and Jazztone Society (JT-435) for the world to hear.

Willis Conover, the official master of ceremonies, introduces each of the alumni, the current Basie band, and then the Count himself. The Basie style blues, which then was band opens with a medium-tempo "so new it doesn't even have a title!" It has now, however; it's "Swingin' at Newport."

There is a free, rough, moaning vigor to this opening number which will recall to collectors, the smaller Basie band of the '30's. Lester Young is introduced for the second number with Basie's original drummer, Jo Jones. The tune is the ballad, Polka Dots and Moonbeams, which Lester plays in his lazy, soulful freely phrased melodic style.

This is followed by the old flag waver, Lester Leaps In. Jo Jones presence is most obvious in this selection.

Lester and Jo stay with the band as Jimmy Rushing, the original Basie vocalist, comes on. Jimmy begins with his old staple, Sent For You Yesterday, which closes with the whole band shouting behind him. His encore is an old "wailer, Evenin', which was done with more enthusiasm than before.

As I sad at the opening, this record is available from any one of three sources, one retail outlet and two record clubs. No matter which you prefer to buy, you will still be getting the same great record. because the same man is at the head of all three companies.

This is truly one of the best records of the year.

Cats Top Presbyterian As Fumbles Prove Costly

Fourth Quarter Pass Misses By Inches As Davidson Breaks Sock Winning Streak

By MARTIN CHITTY

Three costly fumbles and 80 yards lost by penalties told the story as the Presbyterian Blue Hose were upset by Davidson 7-6. The Hose played one of their best games in recent years, but bad breaks kept them from taking their fourth straight.

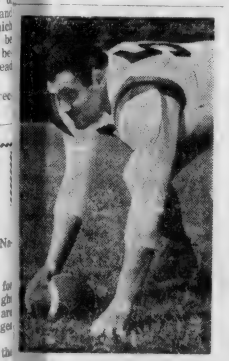
The PCun's hit paydirt in the second period when fullback Bill Hill went over from the two. The score had been set up by a 55-yard pass play from quarterback Waters to halfback Bobby Pate, which carried to the seven.

A penalty took the ball back to the 22. Then Waters hit end Jon Vastine with a pass on the two and from there Hill went over. Waters tried to pass for the extra point, but his attempt fell to the ground.

Paul Barbee on the trap play which was executed perfectly, raced 44 yards for the Wildcat touchdown. The ball was booted perfectly between the uprights for the game-winning extra point.

The Hose, behind the hard running of Pate, Hill, and Tony Benson, moved the ball almost at will after the kickoff to the ten-yard line. There Waters attempted a pass but had the ball knocked out of his hands and the Wildcats recovered. Another drive carried to the five, and Benson, whose running was the feature of the night, had a fumble intercepted in midair.

Late in the fourth quarter, Waters found Pate with a pass two steps in the end zone, but the speedy little halfback was unable to hang on to it and Davidson took over, running three plays into the line to kill the clock and end the game.



STATISTICS

	PC	Davidson
First Downs	19	10
Rushing Yards	280	91
Passing Yards	100	118
Passes Attempted	16	22
Passes Completed	7	10
Punting Average	41	47
Penalties	80	60

The Presbyterian backfield has several good broken field runners in Co-captain Tony Benson and Bob Pate. If the Hose need power, John Lucas and Bill Hill have demonstrated in the past that they can do the job. Lucas raced 55 yards to score the winning touchdown against Wofford, and Freshman Hill in his first starting assignment led the team in rushing with 80 yards against Davidson.

Directing the PC eleven will be quarterback Bob Waters, who has completed 56.8 per cent of his passes this season. Waters, who was hurt in the Wofford game and saw limited action against Davidson should be fully recovered giving the Blue Hose a well balanced attack.

A big attraction of the Homecoming game will include a half-time performance by the Chester High Schol band and the crowning of the 1958 Homecoming Queen, Miss Lydia Willard of Converse College.

Marion "Bull" Parrish, pivot man from Chester, plays an important role in the formidable Blue Hose Line.

High Flying Hose to Face Elon For Homecoming Gridiron Clash

Blue Stockings Favored Over Christians; Crowd Of Nearly 4,000 Expected At Game

By DON HYDE

An estimated crowd of nearly 4,000 is expected to be at Johnson Field tomorrow night when the Presbyterian College Blue Hose take the field in their Homecoming clash with Elon College.

Coach Jones and his players will be seeking their fourth victory in five games against a tough Elon squad, which is rated highly among small colleges in North Carolina. The spirits are flying high at PC, and nothing would suit Coach Jones and his staff more than to avenge last year's 37 to 14 loss to the Christians. This is the third in a series with each team having won one game.

Head Coach Varney of Elon, who at this time last year had won six straight games, will field a team of nine lettermen. After opening the season with a 14 to 7 victory over Guilford, the Christians have lost their last three ball games to Wofford, Appalachian, and this past week to East Carolina. Except for making costly mistakes at crucial times, Elon could have reasonably been undefeated at this time and will definitely try to play the part of a spoiler in Presbyterian's Homecoming.

Key men in the Elon attack are quarterback Maidon, a fine passer and end Tony Carcaterra, who is the leading pass receiver in the North State Conference this year. The Elon forward wall will be anchored by tackle J. B. Vaughn, who is being boomed for Little All-American honors.

The PC line, a tremendous improvement over last year, has been the key factor in the present success. It will be strengthened considerably if guards Mac Copeland and John Firby can shake the injuries obtained in the Davidson game. If these two are unable to play, most of the burden will fall on Jim Walker, Richard Shrigley, Ted Leahy, and "Bull" Parrish, with the latter three playing in their Homecoming game.

The PC eleven will be looking for its fourth straight win in the Homecoming game.

BILL HILL, freshman fullback who was one of the top ground gainers against Davidson, will again be displaying his skills against Elon in tomorrow's game.

Three Teams Vie For Championship

As the final week of I-M football play is nearly completed, the first two positions in the tournament are already decided. The Kappa Alpha squad has held onto an undisputed first place in regular scheduled play by winning eight games and tying one. The second seeded position is handled capably by the Pi Kappa Alpha team who possesses a fine record of five wins, one loss and two ties. Rounding out the seeded positions, we find a torrid battle still going on as the Blue Sock goes to press between the Freshmen and the Pi Kappa Phi unit.

Looking ahead to the tournament one can not deny the Kappa Alphas the role of favorite. They have shown a superior passing attacks and a stiff defensive unit. Then again, it is not easy to count out Pi Kappa Alpha who has been superb at times. Whoever the winner may be cannot be foretold, but they will nave had a rugged time besting opponents due to the spirited play of each of the teams.

Monday, October 20, the top three teams in the Intramural Football League will have a single elimination playoff. The second and third place teams will play Monday at 3:30 p. m. The winner of this game will meet the first place team on Wednesday, October 22, at 3:30 p. m. This game will determine the Intramural Championship for 1958.

Any group wishing to enter a team in the Intramural Soccer in Mr. Montgomery's office during League will have a representative Chapel Period Thursday, October 23. League play will begin Monday, October 17, at 3:15.

Sock Statistics Show Definite Improvement

By JIM ELLER

With a three and one record for the season, the Blue Hose statistics show a definite improvemnet over last year. The Hosemen have scored a total of 57 points after four games this season compared with only 42 for all nine games in 1957.

Bob Waters has held up the PC passing attack with 25 completions for 44 attempts enabling him to boast a 56.8 passing attack. The Presbyterian team total shows 65 passing attempts with 34 completions.

Hose co-captain and halfback, Tony Benson, continued to eat up the yardage in rushing and totals for the year give him 296 yards in 45 carries. A newcomer to the starting lineup, Bill Hill, led the Presbyterian rushing attack against Davidson with 80 yards gained on 17 carries. All Hose backs have picked up approximately 760 yards to the opponents' total of 490 yards.

Presbyterian has collected a total of 190 yards in penalties, with 80 coming last week against Davidson. Penalties contributed to the Hose defeat by stopping them when it appeared that they were on the move.

The Blue Hose kicking department has been consistent even if it has lacked the spectacular. All Hose punts have netted a 35-yard average. Wilson Vastine has been the leader with a 37.5 yard mark for 13 punts.

The defenses of the Hosemen continued to hold as they stopped Davidson with only 91 yards total rushing. For the season the Blue Hose have held their opponents to a total of 43 points, while they have tallied 57.

Statistics Don't Count

Almost complete silence captivated the dressing room last Saturday night after it was all over.

The post-game winning fever seemed to have lost its grip on a usually triumphant and joyous aggregation. What words did summarize the House outcome, bar the trite 'We enjoyed this one' phrase, and any conversation whatsoever after a 7-6 loss to Davidson ran at a low ebb.

What does it feel like to lose? Actually, it isn't very likely in the first place for a ball club to go on the field and gain nearly three times as many yards as its opponents, completely dominate the game in almost all departments, then fall to the short end of a 7-6 count. Its' mighty important to compile the percentages high, but when we get down to it, statistics don't mean a thing! At least, not in the sense of us carrying four victories into the Homecoming clash and thus riding in style to Tampa.

The Monday-morning-quarterbacks have been heard all week and we do no more now than sit on a colorful moral victory. By the way, we do get recognition though losing a ball game, even if from the opposing coach himself.

Davidson coach Bill Dole lauded, "They have a truly wonderful team." He went on to say that his "cats were lucky—real lucky to get off the field with a margin as the contest finally ended."

We'll vouch for that. If the Hose were inferior in any respect to the visiting North Carolina eleven the situation might present no reason to squabble, but PC was capable of pushing Davidson around and did just that in practically all departments—except the score which told the tale.

HOSE OPPONENTS

Results of the most recent round of play involving the PC football opponents for the remainder of the season may change a few opinions as to how the Blue Hose will fare the rest of the sason.

East Carolina continued their winning ways in the North State as they won their fourth conference game of the year against a stubborn Elon team, 14-6. The Pirates sit atop the standings in the NS Conference with one more win than Lenoir-Rhyne.

Appalachian pushed across the initial tally of the game against powerful Lenoir-Rhyne, but failed to contain the Bears as they rolled to a 28-6 onslaught.

Pigskin Predictions

Again the Blue Stocking offers you the chance to match wits with the experts in picking the winners of South Carolina football games.

Five passes to the Broadway Theater will be given the person who picks correctly the winners in all the games and also the total number of points in the PC game.

If no one turns in a prefect ballot the person coming closest to doing so will be awarded one pass.

Ballots must be placed in the ballot box in Douglas House by NOON SATURDAY, OCT. 11.

trees which today give PC its oak-shaded beauty.

Among the faculty members he brought to Presbyterian College were Dr. Marshall W. Brown, now president, and Dr. Walter A. Johnson, whose death last July closed a 43-year association with the college. Through Johnson, Dr. Douglas launched the Blue Hose teams into intercollegiate sports activity.

President Brown said in announcing the trustee decision to name PC's most recent building the Douglas House:

"The genial, dynamic Dr. Douglas dedicated the best efforts of his life to the developmnt of Prsbyterian College. It is altogether fitting that we name our new student center in his memory; for the entire college is, in large measure, his monument."

Statistics Don't Count

Next week's foe, the Tampa Spartans, threw a potent offense at Arkansas State and came out on top, 20-14. The Hose eagerly await their journey to the Sunshine State.

Wofford and Newberry kept the Little Three on a winning note as the Terriers dropped The Citadel to their third straight defeat, 18-6, and Newberry measured Carson-Newman, 14-8.

SOCK PREDICTS

Injuries have been mounting and it looks like the Hose are below full force for the contest. Elon, on the other hand, will be seeking a second win in five starts and would like nothing better than to ruin a PC Homecoming. They have suffered losses from both Wofford and East Carolina, whom the Hose have beaten. The Hose machine to roll once again, 26-8.

Blue Sock Rated All-American By Associated Collegiate Press

Sports Coverage Accorded Praise As Outstanding Aspect of Publication

The Blue Stocking has been rated All-American for the second semester 1957-58 by critics of the Associated Collegiate Press, recognized as the best judge of college journalism in America today. Last semester's rating marks the second consecutive time the student publication has been awarded the ACP's highest stamp of approval.

Out of 371 collegiate newspapers entered from all over the nation in the 59th All-American critical service, 46 received the ACP's highest rating. Honor ratings for colleges and universities are divided into five classes as follows: All-American (superior), first class (excellent), second class (good), third class (fair), and fourth class (no honors).

The recognition given The Blue Stocking marked the thirteenth time in the history of the publication that an All-American honor has been bestowed upon the staff. Having originiated in 1920, with the now Rev. Carl M. McMurray as founder, The Blue Stocking received All-American honors during the first semester of 1941, under the editorship of Charles McDonald. All-American Pacemaker rating was awarded the staff of '41 for having one of the ten best newspapers in the nation, regardles of size. The second semester staff of that year also copped A-A honors.

All-American fame again struck The Blue Stocking in 1942, with Ben Hay Hammet, presently serving the institution as public relations director was editor. During the second semester, the weekly newspaper was raised to heights unknown, being judged by ACP as one of the seven best collegiate publications in the U. S., regardless of size and was awarded the All-American Pacemaker.

After four years of silence during the war years, The Blue Stocking began rolling off the presses in 1946. In 1947, the student paper gained its fifth All-American. James Banbury was editor at that time. Other All-American editors have included Ray Lord, Richard Oliver, and Lyman Harris.

The criticism was divided into three general departments as follows: coverage, content, and physical properties. In the first division, the Sock received 730 points; the second, 1540; and the third, 1240. Altogether, the paper garnered 3510 points. The total needed for the top rating was 3500.

Out of a possible 23 "superior" ratings in regard to the different aspects of publication, the newspaper gained six. The next category, "excellent," had ten, while the third category, "very good," had seven. All the papers entered in the 750-minus enrollment were judged by Duane Andrews, a member of the public relations staff of Minneapolis Honeywell.

Andrews accorded particular praise to the sports coverage, calling it "very extensive in all areas," and labeling the sports page as the "best in (the) paper."

Members of the staff at the time of judging were as follows: Roger Godwin of College Park, Ga., editor; Billy Hagood of Easley, managing editor; Bill Turner of Winnsboro, business manager; Al McKie of Arlxandria, Va., associate editor; Sonny Embry of Birmingham, Ala., news editor; Paul Arrington of Charlotte, N. C., feature editor; and Buddy Mullis of Jacksonville, Fla., sports editor.

Also Dick Wood of Greer, Greek editor; Charles Taylor of Shreveport, La., Evin Varner of Bennettsville, Roscoe Lindsay of Marion, and Britt Spann of McRae, Ga., news staff. Jimmy Howell of Elerbe, N. C., feature staff.

Sports staff included Ed Galloway of Jacksonville, Fla., Dick Carter, of Florence, Tom Spratt of Fredericksburg, Va., and Warren Lower of Roanoke, Va. Circulation manager was Sid Faress of Charleston, and the staff photographer was Bo Jeanes of Easley.

Senior Students Honored With Superlatives Election

• Nine Are Chosen in Class Meeting

In the first senior class meeting held last Tuesday and Thursday nine seniors received honors by being selected as the 1959 Senior Superlatives.

Cited as "Most Intellectual" was Al McKie. McKie holds an over-all 2.94 average and is planning to do graduate study in history.

Noted for his outstanding work in athletics, in the SCA, the PaC-SaC, and in his fraternity, Bob Mathews was elected to receive the title of "Best All-Around."

John Lucas won the comedy slot by being selected as "Wittiest," while Ron Bartlett copped the vote for the "Best Dressed" title.

Football and baseball player Ted Leahy was selected as "Most Athletic" for his skill shown on the intercollegiate and intramural athletic fields.

Richard Reid was given the "Friendliest' honors, while Ron Isger was hailed as "Most Popular."

Roger Godwin goes down on the records as the man voted "Most Likely to Succeed" by his classmates.

Pictures of these men will appear in the opening pages of the PaC-SaC under the above mentioned titles. Their pictures will be taken for the publication within the next two weeks.

The election was held in two sessions to eliminate the necessity of hurrying and thereby causing hasty decisions based on too little discussion. The candidates were discussed and the titles voted upon in a town meeting type election.

Study Course Held For Baptist Students

Mrs. Helen Davis of Spartanburg, was the instructor for a special study course held earlier this week by the Baptist Student Union. The city-wide director of BSU for the four schools in Spartanburg, Mrs. Davis taught the "Baptist Student Union Manual," a book which she helped revise.

The Manual, a methods study for the student union work, was studied and a number of BSU members took a test in order to receive credit for the study.

Robed Choir Tells Theme And Posts Season's Schedule

"The Apostles Creed" has been chosen as the theme of the Presbyterian College Robed Choir's program this year. The program, which is based upon scripture and sacred musical renderings, will center around the thought of how the faith of Christian people is expressed in the various portions of the creed.

The choir, under its twelfth year of direction by Dr. Edouard Patte, also this week posted its schedule for the 1958-59 season of concerts. A total of twenty-eight concerts is planned over the school year and these will be presented in weekend trips throughout South Carolina and Georgia. The annual spring tour will be in April and will carry the choir into Florida for a week of "sermons in song."

Dr. Patte indicated this week that he is well pleased with the responses from the churches. He said further that the schedule had been completed much sooner than in earlier years, and that ". . . the boys in this year's choir are shaping up quite nicely, and I believe will continue in the choir's tradition of presenting the finest in religious music."

This year's schedule is as follows:

November 23 — Hemingway, Indiantown Church, morning; Cayce, Congaree Church, evening.

December 6-7—College Park, Ga., First Church, morning; Marietta, Ga., First Church, evening.

January 11 — Florence, First Church, morning; Chester, Purity Church, evening.

February 1—Camden, Bethesda Church, morning; Newberry, Aveleigh Church, evening.

February 8 — Hartsville, First Church, morning; Fort Mill, Unity Church, evening.

February 22—Atlanta, Ga., Gordon Street Church, morning; LaGrange, Ga., First Church, evening.

March 1—Columbia, Eastminster Church, morning; Summerton, Summerton Church, evening.

March 15 — Charleston, First Church, morning; Mayesville, Mayesville Church, evening.

Guidance Center Offers Service to PC Students

By ALICE WATKINS

The Presbyterian Guidance Center on the second floor of Douglas House is amply equipped as a testing and counseling program for college students of all denominations. Appointments for testing and conferences can be made in the general receptionist room with Mrs. Goldsmith, secretary, from 8:30 a. m. to 5:00 p. m., Monday through Saturday. The fee for the tests of vocational interests, abilities, and personality traits is only time, work, and interest.

Interpretation of the tests and any problems discussed in the counseling room with Dr. Louis Pope are highly confidential. Counseling is given in such well known fields as business, pre-law, pre-medical, pre-ministerial, teaching, and so forth.

In addition to occupational information, the counseling room contains undergraduate and graduate college catalogs essential in planning a higher education.

The guidance program, in operation for the individual, provides the means of making clear his aptitudes and interests; the counselor presents the assets and liabilities of the individual in a tactful manner.

The purpose of the Presbyterian Guidance Center is to emphasize that God is not only interested in a person's character, but also in his career: in order to make a wise choice in his life's work, a Christian should seek God's plan for his life.

Guidance Officer Will Visit Campus

Captain Lydia M. Bray, a career guidance officer from the Third Army Headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., will visit the PC campus on October 30 for the purpose of promoting interest in the WAC Officer Program.

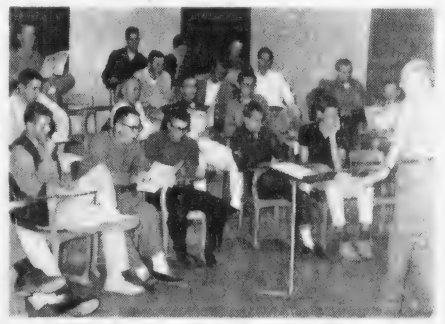
She will speak formally to female students at chapel period Thursday morning in the Radio Forum Room. Captain Bray will also be available Thursday afternoon for informal talks with students in the Douglas House lounge, and will answer any questions that interested female students may have at this time.

Captain Bray is well qualified for the position she holds, having studied at Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City, Tenn., and Wesleyan Conservatory in Macon, Ga. She was commissioned in the Woman's Army Corps in 1949, and since that time has held such interesting assignments as Commanding Officer of the WAC detachment at the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.

Eighteen Added . . .

Students Compete For IRC Membership

Eighteen new members have been added to the rolls of the International Relations Club, according to announcement by president Evin Varner.



These students took a competitive examination for membership the past week. The test was on current events. The following men have become members of the PC chapter of this national organization:

Robert L. Bethea, Louisville, Ga.; Fred Meade, Beaufort; Tom Spratt, Fredericksburg, Va.; Paul Layton, Elizabethton, N. C.; Roy Bower, Kingstree; Maurice Schwartz, Laurinburg, N. C.; Ted Taylor Newnan, Ga.; Rohe Eshbaugh, Louisville, Ky.; Byron Hollingsworth, Tampa, Fla.; and E. W. Goodwin, Clio.

Also Graham Edmunds, Decatur, Ga.; Sandler Read, Mcclellanville; Paul Williams, Atlanta; Thomas Ott, Bowman; Mike Brown, Albany, Ga.; Dave Lee, Bishopville; Alan Pitts, Langley; and Gerald Pitts, Laurens.

These members will be officially welcomed into the organization during the monthly meeting to be held Monday night at 7:30 in the Douglas House assembly room.

trees which today give PC its oak-shaded beauty.

Among the faculty members he brought to Presbyterian College were Dr. Marshall W. Brown, now president, and Dr. Walter A. Johnson, whose death last July closed a 43-year association with the college. Through Johnson, Dr. Douglas launched the Blue Hose teams into intercollegiate sports activity.

President Brown said in announcing the trustee decision to name PC's most recent building the Douglas House:

"The genial, dynamic Dr. Douglas dedicated the best efforts of his life to the developmnt of Presbyterian College. It is altogether fitting that we name our new student center in his memory; for the entire college is, in large measure, his monument."

Next week's foe, the Tampa Spartans, threw a potent offense at Arkansas State and came out on top, 20-14. The Hose eagerly await their journey to the Sunshine State.

Wofford and Newberry kept the Little Three on a winning note as the Terriers dropped The Citadel to their third straight defeat, 18-6, and Newberry measured Carson-Newman, 14-8.

SOCK PREDICTS

Injuries have been mounting and it looks like the Hose are below full force for the contest. Elon, on the other hand, will be seeking a second win in five starts and would like nothing better than to ruin a PC Homecoming. They have suffered losses from both Wofford and East Carolina, whom the Hose have beaten. The Hose machine to roll once again, 26-8.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Editorials : Features : Humor

"We the Peoples..."

"We the peoples of the United Nations . . ." That's the way the Charter of the United Nations begins. Does that make you a part of the UN? It certainly does. You and about 160 million other Americans, for the United States belongs to the United Nations.

October 19-25 has been set aside as United Nations Week with the clamix being UN Day today, October 24 This is a time when in the turmoil of world events, religious and peace loving people throughout the world are asked to pray for the United Nations.

The UN is sometimes called a mere debating society where its delegates talk and talk and accomplish nothing, and the query is heard as to whether our faith in it is justified. But those who would question the work of the UN have only to look at its record and at the opinions of the world's distinguished leaders to find the answer.

President Eisenhower had this to say in endorsing the work of the UN: "By its accomplishments in 1958, the United Nations again justified our often expressed faith in it as an effective instrument for preserving the peace and improving the well-being of mankind. We shall continue to give it our vigorous support."

This year the International Relations Club is sponsoring UN Week on the Presbyterian College campus. The United Nations program deserves our attention and support. This is a noble purpose, the seeking of a better world.

With this thought in mind, we might well make the Unison Prayer for the United Nations our prayer.

"God of the measureless universe . . . Creator of men's conscience . . . to Thee in this our fervent prayer for pace, we lift our voices in unison.

"We . . . people of every faith . . . of every creed . . . join together . . . pleading for truth, justice and charity among men. We pray for Thy omnipotent aid in this hour of imperiled civilization . . .

"That Thou shalt cast out forever from human thought that flaming intolerance which makes for war and breeds bloody aggression . . .

"That the advocates of war shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks.

"We pray to Thee for the restoration of concord and amity among all the peoples of the earth . . .

"That all persons recognize the liberty due religion, and for the renewal of the way of life that is friutful of great and good works.

"This O Lord is our fervent prayer, and this is our mingled tribute to Thy everlasting mercy. Amen."

"Fine thanks, how was your dance week-end?"

Letters to Gabby

By GABBY VON GOSSIPPE

DEAR GABBY:

I've been dating only the best girls al my life, now I seem to have lost my charm. This past dance week-end I went through my entire list of 25 girls and finally had to date an "outsider." I don't know what to do since I'm known as something of a casanova on campus. Please help me since my reputation is at stake.

RICKY

DEAR RICKY:

Have you tried some of those new roll-on deodorants?

DEAR GABBY:

I am a freshman at a small institution of higher learning. I'm really quite good at everything but no one seems to appreciate my talent. My charm and wit don't seem to impress them at all, but I'm sure that they are really amused, they just will not laugh or be nice. I overheard someone say the other day that I was stupid, and why didn't I leave them alone; I'm sure he was kidding. Please help me.

DICKY

DEAR DICKY:

Why don't you leave them alone?

DEAR GABBY:

I have a very perplexing problem. I had a blind date this past dance weekend and since them I've received three letters and one phone call. Tell me if you think this will get serious.

ALBERT

DEAR ALBERT:

Serious? Either you've snowed or been snowed, or both.

Jazz Jots . . .

Erroll Garner's Soliloquy

By PAUL WILLIAMS

Erroll Garner is considered by many to be the top jazz pianist arou today. To keep this idea in the minds of its listeners and customers, C lumbia Records is constantly releasing Garner's great work. The late of these fine releases is Soliloquy (CL-1060).

The six tracks here were recorded about a year ago, just before G ner left on a tour of Europe. The LP is a one-man Garner display. Included in this collection are two originals: Time and the title tune, Soliloquy.

Garner is a strong stylist and one of the very few unique stylists in jazz today. This piano playing, with obvious, meaningful roots in jazz tradition, is brought into focus by Garner's splendid conception and his moving sense of time. When he stretches out, as he does in this album, each performance becomes a string of related ideas, instead of the cliches that are often substituted for inspiration.

Garner, however, is not without faults. He suffers on occasion from an inability to get on and get off appropriately, but in between, he is much of a whirlwind.

One-Spot Record Reviews said in reviewing this album: "The romanticism basic to his approach can lead Garner to the border of a marshmallew-filled Never - Never land, but he usually manages to return to the straight and narrow paths of full-blooded jazz." At times he succumbs to sentimentality, which is damaging to the essen- trially swinging heart of the ma ter.

At times, too, Garner sacrifice dynamics for percussively em phatic effects. But before thi comes too oppressive he usuall returns to the solid, airy swing that is so much the directio force in his playing.

Essentially, Garner's playing pr sent a delightful challenge for th listener. And in this respect, Soli oquy is another display of remark able ability. The listener who a cepts Garner's challenge will pro greatly.

A Most Heinous Crime . . .

Failure to Report to the Assigned Place

It was a bright Wednesday morning, as a matter of fact too bright to be six-thirty, especially when a few of the lucky seniors are teaching weapons classes to the freshmen and sophs. One of these men out of a group of two glimpsed at the worthless alarm clock on the battered down desk and sent up a wail of distress that would have affected the sex life of a dead elephant.

"Slymy, Slymy, it's ten minutes to eight and you're teaching this morning." Sixteen pairs of shoes were thrown at the timepiece for failing to report at the proper time at the proper place, and the fellow continued to go through the precedure to wake up his roommate who was an ancestor of Rip Van Winkle by birth.

"What, huh, who is it. Coming Mom. Go ahead and put my eggs on, I'll be there in a minute—What! It's 0750. Great Eisenhower, I'm teaching this morning."

The two men acted as if they were performnig the 440 around the room in a noble effort to meet their subordinates in the field of education. Very decisive plans were formuated as to who would do what in order to save time. The "teach" for the day had to clad himself in his Class "A" uniform which is like getting the fat lady at the fair into a size thirteen preteen girdle.

"Do me a favor. Go get the class underway with a review, and I'll be over there by 0800." Suddenly a cold chill ran through the fevered room.

"Slymy, it's 0810 hours now. Besides failing to ring, the clock lost twenty minutes."

(At this time the clock was disassembled in a military manner on the floor of the room without the use of taps, or even faucets for that matter. It had developed into a Benedict Arnold trying to prevent these two loyal men from instructing those who need and who are required to receive these valuable lectures.

The AI, or assistant instructor to those who are illiterate to military terminology, went forward into battle to face his weary audience with a few brief moments of reiteration. On the way he was cut off at the pass by a snickering sergeant who was gibbering about an unleashed tiger on the way to meet the gladiators. At the intersection of Horrow Street and Misfortune Boulevard the meeting occurred.

"Cadet Menoscranieum, I hope you have a "%!!&& excuse for your absence from instruction. It was a heinous crime to fail to report to the assigned place at the assigned time."

The cadet's head bent with shame, as he truly knew of the terrible offense which had been handed him by Lady Fate.

"Sir, my alarm clock was shut off during the night by a communist sympathizer."

"Cadet, that is no "!!$%& excuse. You are a highly incompetent, worthless, slob of a person, and I have to see you daily which in itself is more than the average human being can stand."

"Yes sir."

"This is a disgrace to the third army. Turn yourself and all the other idiots in your committee in for 8,000 demerits."

"Yes sir."

Worn from heavy battle and mentally fatigued the limping cadet made his way back to his hole. "It's done, roomo, thunder has fallen.

The finely robed instructor wept as he crawled up the stairs back to the den where hung the pictures of the PMS&T, the Asst. PBS&T, the First Lieutenant, all the sergeants and civilian employees of the local ROTC Unit. All the portraits were reversed as the two men could not look any of them in the face.

The formal execution of the three men will be held on the plaza next Wednesday afternoon by a firing squad commanded by the Battle Group CO.

Socks Invade Tampa Saturday

Both Schools Boast Impressive Records; Spartans Rated As Toughest Foe of Season

By JIM ELLER

When the Presbyterian Blue Hose journey to the University of Tampa today, they will meet what will probably be their toughest foe of the season in the Saturday night game. Coach Marceloni Huerta's Spartans have compiled a notable record in dropping only one game. They have numbered such teams as Troy State, Western Carolina, and Arkansas State among their vanquished foes.

The Florida school's only loss came at the hands of VMI, who has gone through 15 games without a defeat. The Spartans could have easily taken a win or a tie if they had not run for the point after touchdown and failed on both of their scores.

The Tampa squad agreed before the game to go for two points rather than kick. It was a do or die game for them.

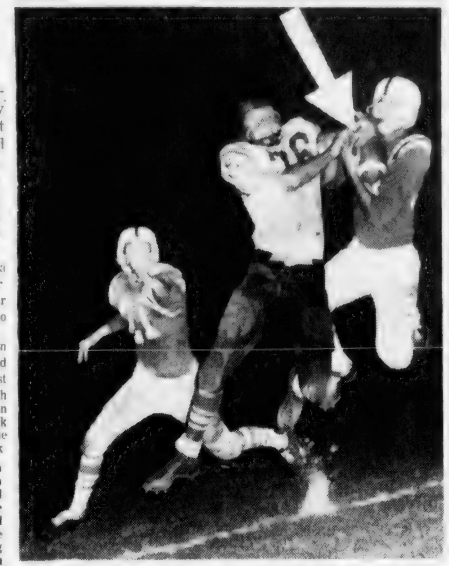
Presbyterian also goes into the game with an impressive record of four wins against just one defeat. Like Tampa, the PC loss was a one-pointer at the hands of a Southern Conference foe, Fresh from a 34-6 trouncing of hapless Elon, the Hose will be out for an upset.

The game will be part of Tampa's homecoming celebration. After last week's game, Huerta said, "Right now we're interested in our homecoming game. We play the best Presbyterian College team ever to appear here Saturday night."

Outstanding players for the Spartans this year have been quarterback Bill Nuznoff, halfback Buddy Williams, fullback Fred Cason, and end Ken Belliveau. Williams' 68-yard sprint scored the second Tampa touchdown against VMI.

The Florida team displayed a well-rounded offense in having scored 90 points for the season. Their defense has held four opponents to only 45 total points.

The Blue Hose looked sharp in the victory over Elon that Head Coach Frank Jones called the best Hose game of the year. Line coach Clyde Ehrhardt hopes that his men continue to hold the rushing attack of opposing teams and stop the powerful Tampa offense this week.



PC is beginning to show depth in just about all positions and a number of new performers could be Morgan, Bil Hill, and Bob Pate since they showed that they could run the ball against Elon and are expected to continue by battering the Tampa defense along with Bob Mathews, John Lucas, and Tony Benson.

The Hose fell short of the flying trip to the Sunshine State, but they should be ready to fight the Spartans on even terms and come out with their fifth victory of the present campaign.

Strongmen of the PC lineup against Tampa this week will be Ken Gardner, above top, and Dave Morgan, above bottom. Gardner plays end and Morgan is a halfback.

Next Order of Business

After gaining a 34-6 romp over Elon on the strength of a supporting bench, the Presbyterian Blue Hose permitted themselves one last shudder and looked ahead to the next order of business—Saturday's skirmish with once-beaten Tampa University at Tampa, Fla.

What is thought to have been somewhat of a discouraging Homecoming crowd saw several performers come into their own for the first time this year. That Coach Frank Jones played his second, third and fourth unit performers almost entirely throughout the last half shot havoc into the arm of Elon's head mentor, Varney.

Finally given a chance to exert his tremendous speed, reserve halfback Dave Morgan from Greenville, took a fourth quarter kickoff following the lone Christian tally, picked up a fleet of blockers and raced 90 yards for a Hose score. Morgan has been sidelined off and on this season due to injuries but has now reached his peak performance. He should see considerable action down in Tampa.

Back to this fellow Varney. We can recall last year's game up at Elon, and needless to say right in the midst of a flu epidemic which plagued the team throughout the '57 campaign. The Christians biult up a considerable lead and were comfortably resting on at least a four-touchdown margin in the final quarter. Did Varney jerk his first unit? I'll say not! He was long and determined to get any revenge possible for a previous year's beating received at the hands of the Blue Hose. I suppose he received all the satisfaction in the world for his conscientious fair play.

Varney expressed himself quite well in a pre-game visit with the Presbyterian coaching staff. "Frank," he said, "we're gonna beat you." This was quite a statement within itself.

Just how serious this former PC coach was will never be known, but it did arouse somewhat of a boiling fever to fall from the Hose mentors, enough consequently to fire PC up to desire nothing less than an overwhelming victory on Homecoming. The Hose did just that.

SOCK PREDICTS

Last week: 2 right, 1 wrong
Total for season: 9 right, 4 wrong

This week:

Newberry entertains a vastly improved East Carolina eleven Saturday night. The Tribe appears somewhat stronger now after two wins in a row, while the Pirates, presently leading the North State Conference, sporting a 3-0 record, have been improving every week now since being dropped by the Hose. In a close one, EAST CAROLINA.

Conley Snidow's possibility of a first losing season since taking over the reigns at Wofford might well hinge on this week's game with East Tennessee State. The Terriers will be seeking to rebound after a wild Furman game last week which by the way cost them the services of quarterback Charlie Bradshaw. WOFFORD, in their fourth win of the season.

The Blue Hose journey down to Florida to face probably one of the best teams all season, namely the Tampa Spartans. It will undoubtedly require another top performance to cope with a stout line and an offense built around their big 250 lb. fullback, Fred Cason.

For two years in a row the home club has made the long trip only to fall in the Cigar City both times. In the battle of two once-beaten elevens the Hose will spoil a Tampa Homecoming celebration, 20-12.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

By virtue of last week's burst over Elon coupled with Tampa's fall to VMI, both of these once-beaten teams enter the contest with about the same ranking among the top small colleges in the nation . . . The North State Conference is definitely feeling the knocks from our "Little Three" this year. Wofford has come out on top against two in their league, while the Hose have measured three against no setbacks . . . Figures on the

I-M Victory Goes To Pi Kappa Alpha

Pi Kappa Alpha squeezed through two games this week to win the playoffs and close out intramural football for the year with close decisions over both Sigma Nu and KA.

Monday afternoon the Pikes found it hard to penetrate the strong Sigma Nu pass defense. In the second half PiKA got a break on an intercepted pass deep in the Sigs' territory. On the first play passer Don Denning threw a long pass to Billy Hagood which put the Pikes ahead 6 to 0. Denning's pass to Chief Segrest was good for the extra point.

The PiKA-KA game Wednesday was a defensive battle in which neither team was able to push the ball over the double stripe. Ed Jackson's punting kept the KA's deep in their own territory most of the game. During the first of the second half, Byron Carr broke through the strong KA line to touch passer Larry Wood in the end zone. In the last minutes of the game, the KA's drove down in the PiKA territory only to lose the ball on downs. The Pikas were then able to run out the clock with the score ending 2 to 0 and an I-M footbal championship for 1958.

Blazing Blue Hose Offense Smothers Christians 34-6

PC Gridmen Break Loose Against Elon; Thousands Witness Homecoming Thriller

By MARTIN CHITTY

Presbyterian College Blue Hose combined a blazing offense with staunch defense and completly smothered the Elon Christians, 34-6. The first quarter ended in a scoreless duel, but in the beginning of the second Bobby Pate took 10 and streaked 90 yards to score. The extra point try failed.

Several plays later Freshman guard Billy Ogden intercepted a pass and raced forty to the Elon three-yard line. Two plays later, quarterback Joe Nixon sneaked over. Fred Cook booted the point, Shrigley, and James Walker, along leaving the score PC 34, Elon 6.

Tackle Bill Schofill, Richard with ends Ken Gardner, Jon Vastine and quarterback Nat Cole, stood out defensively.

Another PC score came later on in the second period when Pate took a Waters pass on the five and went into the end zone. The play covered 29 yards, but the point try was no good.

In the third quarter, behind the running of halfback and fullback Bill Hill, the PC'uns moved to the one-yard line where Hill bulled over. Richard Shrigley booted the extra point.

Elon began moving the ball against Blue Hose reserves late in the third quarter and fullback Tony Moskivich went over from the five for the Christians' only score. The try for the extra point failed.

On the ensuing kickoff halfback Dave Morgan took the ball on the pass to Leahy was good for two points.

Again the Blue Stocking offers you the chance to match wits with the experts in picking the winners of South Carolina football games.

Five passes to the Broadway Theater will be given the person who picks correctly the winners in all the games and also the total number of points in the PC game.

If no one turns in a prefect ballot the person coming closest to doing so will be awarded one pass.

Ballots must be placed in the ballot box in Douglas House by NOON SATURDAY, OCT. 11.

Coaches Mold Line Into Best In Years

By DON HYDE

Under the guidance and patience of Head Coach Frank Jones and line coach Clyde Ehrhardt, Presbyterian College has molded together one of the finest lines in the state. The Blue Hose really took a beating last year and could only salvage a scoreless tie with Lenoir-Rhyne but this year the PC forward wall with a year of experience has improved tremendously in every phase of the game.

The PC line, which averages over 200 pounds, is leading the state in rushing defense by allowing their opponents only 103 yards per game. The line has performed capably on offense, too, as they have broken loose Blue Hose backs for 1,051 yards, a team average of 4.1 yards per carry. The biggest factor in the team's outstanding record has been the hard tackling and blocking on offense

Alumni Given Reception In Homecoming Activities

Some 500 Presbyterian College alumni returned last Saturday for 1958 Homecoming activities that many reported to be "the best ever attended."

They participated in a full program that included dedication of the new student center as a memorial to alumni war dead and the naming of this building for former President Davison McDowell Douglas.

A total of 251 arrived early enough to pack the Alumni Luncheon. Among the features of this occasion was the presentation of the Alumni Gold P Award in absenteeism to John Osman, vice-president of the Ford Foundation Fund for Adult Education, and accepted for him by classmate Dr. Bothwell Graham III of Columbia. William Shields of Clinton, presented a colored portrait of Dr. Walter A. Johnson.

President Marshall W. Brown presented the Gold P and accepted from Shields the portrait.

Walter Johnson Club members re-elected J. J. "Peck" Cornwall of Clinton president of this alumni athletic organization for the fourth year, with J. E. Means, Jr., of Greenville, vice president, and Coach Frank Jones, secretary-treasurer.

And these candidates were nominated for mail ballot consideration for these offices of the PC Alumni Association.

For trustee representative—J. M. Thompson of Olanta, and Bynum Poe of Rock Hill; for Assocation president—Ross Templeton of Charlotte, and D. F. Kriven of Sumter; for Association secretary-treasurer, Al Brice of Greenwood, and Arnold Marshall of Rock Hill.

The alumni board of directors selected John Montgomery of Columbia, managing editor of The State newspaper, to receive the 1958 Alumni Service Award. He was cited for his work both as vice-president of the Association and as president of the Richland County Alumni Chapter.

Five leading Presbyterians headed the student center dedication program.

The Rev. Rusell W. Park of Olanta, South Carolina Synod moderator, gave the invocation; Dr. Marshall S. Woodson, president of Flora McDonald College, spoke on Dr. Douglas; Col. Powell A. Fraser, army battle group commander, gave the dedication address; Dr. John McSween, former PC president, led the litany of dedication; and Dr. Harry K. Holland, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Marietta, Ga., and a PC trustee, gave the prayer of dedication.

and defense.

A few injuries have hampered key players this season, and the one felt the most was the knee fracture Don Bridges acquired in the L-R game. Mac "Old Reliable" Copeland, who won the starting center position was shifted to fill the gap left by Bridges and has proven his value to the team by leading the big blue with 33 individual tackles and assists.

Other factors which have played important roles in the success of PC have been the return of Co-Captain Richard Shrigley to the tackle position after a year's absence and the successful adjustment made by Jim Walker in switching from end to bolster the other tackle position.

John Firby with three years of experience behind him has established himself as one of the better PC linemen as he ranks second in individual tackling and assists with 25. Other men who have supported the line are Biggerstaff, Marler, Schofill, and Parrish, with the latter having equaled Firby in defensive statistics. These players have brought a gridiron power once again to PC.

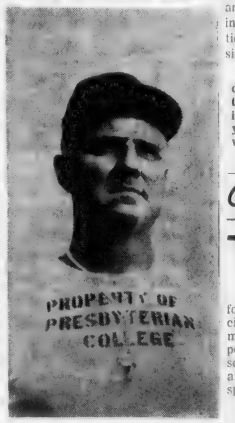
Miss PaC-SaC Judging Slated For Next Week

Next week the PaC-SaC will hold the judging of the pictures entered by the various organizations on campus for the selection of the 1959 "Miss PaC-SaC." Also to be selected will be a beauty section of six girls.

The new section, introduced for the first time this year, is designed to take the place of the sponsors sections and pictures of the previous PaC-SaCs, with the exception of the fraternity sweethearts which will remain unchanged. The deadline for entry into the judging is 10:00 p. m., Sunday night. The pictures may be given to William Turner, Sonny Embry, or Will Wallace.

Jones Named Athletic Director By College's Board of Trustees



• Will Continue As Head Coach

Coach Frank Jones is the new athletic director at Presbyterian College, President Marshall W. Brown announced today.

He said the board of trustees, meeting Tuesday, gave approval to his recommendation that Jones be named to the position left vacant by the death of Dr. Walter A. Johnson last July.

Dr. Brown pointed out that Jones will continue in his role as head football coach while also assuming direction of the athletic department.

Frank Jones came to Presbyterian College in August, 1957, as coach of the Blue Hose gridmen.

COACH JONES

He brought with him for his start in the college field a reputation as one of Georgia's outstanding high school coaches. This acclaim he had earned as athletic director and head football man at Decatur High, where his teams won championships six of the last eight years in fast AAA competition.

A native of Macon, Ga., where he was a star athlete at Lanier High, Jones attended Middle Georgia College and was captain of the football, basketball and baseball teams before leaving to serve in the army during Word War II. He entered the University of North Carolina after the war, receiving his BA (1948) and his Master's (1949) from this institution, and he has done additional work toward his doctorate since that time.

The new PC athletic director coached at Cordele (Ga.) High for two years before going to Decatur in 1951. Undaunted by his first-year record at Presbyterian, which saw the Hosemen tie one

College Prohibits Parking On Plaza

Effective immediately, all parking on the plaza is being prohibited by the administration. The announcement of the new policy was originally planned to be effective at the beginning of the current school year, but was delayed until the construction of the two new parking lots which were opened recently.

Harold Simmons has been designated as the campus "policeman," and will receive scholarship aid for his work.

First offenders will be given a warning, second offenders a $2.00 fine, third offenders a $5.00 fine, fourth offenders a $10.00 fine, and fifth offenders will have their privilege of having a car on campus revoked.

Failure to register or maintain a sticker on the car will invoke a $3.00 fine.

Evangelistic Teams Ready to Serve Churches

Evangelistic teams, composed of Presbyterian College Pre-ministerial students, are available again this year for religious services in churches of the Synods of Georgia and South Carolina.

These groups made more than 50 appearances before congregations of the two states last session. They conducted a variety of programs ranging from morning services, to men's meetings, to young people's assemblies and evening worship. The work was well received by every church in which the teams appeared.

This evangelistic program is sponsored by the Presbyterian College Ministerial Club under the guidance of Dr. T. Layton Fraser, professor of Bible and the author of several religious workbooks.

Arrangements for scheduling appearances of the evangelistic teams may be made through Dr. T. Layton Fraser at Presbyterian College.

Community Concerts

Ticket Drive Will Close Saturday

At twelve noon tomorrow, the membership drive for the Community Concert Series will close and officials of the drive will begin making plans for the remaining concerts to be scheduled in Clinton. Metropolitan opera star Nadine Conner will appear with the series some time in February. If enough memberships are sold, two other concerts will be planned for the spring.

These concerts will probably be of a different nature than that given by Miss Conner in February, and could be anything from an outstanding choir to ballet or a piano concert.

The series is sponsored by a national organization and the nearby towns that are included in this series are Greer, Greenville, Anderson, Greenwood, and Columbia. Membersiips bought in Clinton entitle the bearer to concerts of the series in these cities also.

This year the concerts will be held in the Thornwell High School auditorium. In future years it is possible that the new chapel-auditorium presently under construction will be utilized for this and similar programs.

The total cost for membership in the Community Concert Series is seven dollars for adults and three dollars for students. Persons not buying tickets before Saturday of this week will not be able to buy tickets at any other time unless they were out of town during the membership drive. On campus the drive is being conducted by the Blue Key National Honor Fraternity in cooperation with the faculty.

Reception of the series has already showed advancement with the selling of a considerable number of tickets on campus. With this cooperation of the town and college, it is hoped that in future years the program may be extended to include a larger variety of stars and a greater number of concerts for the Clinton area.

Is Noise in the Dorms a Problem?

Many students have occasionally or regularly complained about noise in the dormitories. Thus in the interest of our readers, we propose two questions. Is there a real problem? What is the remedy? We will discuss these questions in a series of two editorials, and we strongly invite your comments. If this situation is as serious as certain students claim, then some responsible student organization or the administration or both should attempt a solution.

Because of frequent complaints last year and again this semester, we are convinced that at least a substantial minority of the student body considers that noise in the dorms is both unpleasant and undesirable. They are annoyed because they are unable to study, and disgusted because a remedy seems impossible.

Undoubtedly few men purposely intend to annoy their classmates, and if they create a racket they do so without realizing the effect on others. Also, most students hesitate to call down their neighbors on the matter, and, as a result, there is no individual responsible to remind the thoughtless of their violation of the supposed quiet hours.

The ability to concentrate is easily disrupted by excessive noise. Except for a few fortunate individuals who get so "wrapped-up" in their work that they could probably study on Little Quemoy (and to some this analogy is not absurd), most students will quit studying and either do something else or join in the ruckus.

We feel that if a substantial minority of the student body objects to this situation, it is the clear duty of student leaders and the administration to take action. This opinion is based on the belief that any individual paying for a room at PC should have the right to use that room for studying and that he should not be forced to look elsewhere for a quiet place. If you do not concur with this supposition, we can only assume that you lack respect for your cla mates.

However, those who can do something abo this problem naturally and properly need yo support. No reform movement (and we do want to imply that we are carrying on a m sade) has been successful without the suppo of "public opinion." Thus to ascertain if noi in the dormitories is a real problem, we ask yo to WRITE A NOTE to the Editor of this pape We will deliver the same to the President of t student body, the Dean of Students and other sponsible student leaders.

If you support action on the problem, and is not forthcoming, then you may hold the abo mentioned leaders fully responsible. We sugge that you draw this editorial to the attention your friends and fraternity brothers.

In our next issue we will discuss possible s lutions. LET US HEAR FROM YOU before the and please note if we may publish excerpts fro your letter.

PC - 1981, Things Have Really Changed

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

After returning from the PC Homecoming of 1981, I was sitting in my easy chair relaxing, and picturing the new campus which I had seen. Neville Hall, which was burned by the class of '80 in honor of "National Be Kind To the Freshmen Control Board Day," had been replaced by an illustrious member of the '61 class and dedicated as Reid Hall, named in honor of the '61 alumnus

Reid Hall is a two story structure housing the language, math, and Bible departments. Each language had its own respective room. The Spanish room is the most unique in that it's in a bull ring design, where the students sit in a circle around the professor who shoots the bull. The French room is wall papered with a design of lovely French architecture and figures by BARDOT. Two new languages, Interlingua and Interplanetary Sign 101-102, have been added, being taught respectively by a Gechi from Charleston, and Melvin Cog Mu.D., from Rogers Institute.

The math room is appropriately arranged in various geometric shapes and the seats are upholstered in a white leather with black print of formulas and question marks.

Directly behind Reid Hall is the new fully air conditioned Dudd Dining Hall featuring, instead of the old intercom system, a fifty-three piece band.

To order food, one simply presses the button on his table corresponding to the delicacy desired. The food is just out of this world, which is a new deal at PC.

The old dormitories have been torn down, and five new ones erected in a horseshoe design around Reid Hall. These new dorms are Long, Stokes, Marshall, Franklin, and Thomas Halls (respectively known as LSMFT). They have all the latest conveniences, including room service. The rooms are equipped with built-in chests, private baths, wall-to-wall carpets, TV, Hollywood beds with Simmons mattresses, and five GE sixty watt bulbs.

The halls are well lighted with transitorized filaments, and contain sofas for lounging, the latest issues of Gent, Jem, and Casanova, and irrigation ditches on both sides.

The only two buildings in need of repair are Douglas House and the Chapel-Auditorium, which, after twenty-three years, are finally infested with wasps.

A new student center is planned and will feature a twenty-girl chorus line in the cauteen, which will be under the able direction of Charlie, Jr., son of a man well known to PC alumnus. Anothe outstanding feature will be a modern Guidance Center, equipped with all the latest electroni devices to direct PC..Moon reb tions by means of a rocket r cently purchased from the Pi gly-Wiggly.

Although Col. Childers, PMS& is the only new faculty membe many additions have been made the curriculum. Some of those ar Buck Chaucer's Canterbury Flig 303-304, Old Earth Survey 101, P chology of Moon Watching 2 Southern Mars: Economic and S cial 306, and Cosmic Dust Comp sition 405-406.

It was good to hear that the cha was still active. The director sa the choristers are shaping up je fine, and he was sure they wou be ready for the first big test of t season against the First Church Florence, Italy.

Yes, things have really chang at dear old PC since I was a st dent.

The New Harry James

By PAUL WILLIAMS

A little over eight months ago, Capitol Records released an album titled Wild About Harry. This album was the re-birth of a new era for Harry James and band. His album sold and his dance dates became more frequent. Harry was playing a new style of music and the public went for it in droves. Capitol decided to release another album to see if this success would continue, the title— The New James.

Actually, this new James is a lot like the present Basie. The album is a set of well played originals that have everything but the identification of Basie. The scores by Ernie Wilkins (Fair, One On the House), Neal Hefti (Bells), and Jay Hill (Walkin', Lucky, Air) are in the current tradition of open, free-blowing writing of the Basie bands, rather than of Jones.

The sections play with a smack and a precision that is very fine to hear. The solos by James and Willie Smith are good but not outstanding. The best track in the album is Warm Blue. It has a fine warm feeling throughout.

Fair and Warmer, while sounding "a la Basie," is a catchy theme that is hard to forget. Harry plays with a rich brassy sound and with an ease on which he made his early reputation. He does a lot of neat muted work in this album, but there is some hard driving work with the open horn, too.

This is a really terrific buy for anyone whether you want to dance or just listen.

Pop Album of the Week—A better-than-average pop collection is found in Ray Ellis' new work, Let's Get Away From It All (CL-1097). Gene Quill's lively, ripping alto sax is heard on the title tune, Let's Get Away From It All, Mountain Greenery, and Wang Wang Blues. The fine fine trumpet of Mel Davis and the mellow trombone of Lou McGarity are heard throughout.

Blue Hose Invade North State Tomorrow Seeking Fifth Victory Against Catawba Indians

COPELAND AND SHRIGLEY are only two of PC's tough forward wall.

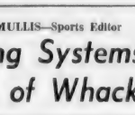
Sock Offense Primed for Salisbury Tilt; Odds Makers Favor PC by Ten Points

By JIM ELLER

The Blue Hose will be seeking to get back on the winning track Saturday night at Salisbury, N. C., where they meet their arch North State Conference foe, Catawba. After last week's 18-6 loss to Tampa, the Hose are expected to be up for a victory. The odds makers give the nod to PC by ten points.

The Catawba Indians will prove to be no pushover. They demonstrated their ability as giant killers in trouncing highly favored Davidson 22-17, in their first game of the season. Since then they have compiled a record of 3-2-1. Games with Newberry and Elon are numbered among their wins. The two Indian losses came at the hands of East Carolina and Appalachian, both by identical scores of 6-0. Catawba fought to a 6-6 deadlock with Western Carolina.

After the loss to Tampa last Saturday, the Hose record stands at four wins against two defeats. Coach Jones called the winners the best team his Hosemen have faced all year.



The Indians will display several outstanding individual performers against the Hose. Sophomore quarterback Ronnie Ball has shone for the Indians all season, and especially in last week's Catawba win over Elon, when he darted for 60 yards and a score. He also passed for the two points. Powerful Ray Oxendine enhances the Indian ground attack along with Sam Morrow and Larry Gilliersleeve. Morrow plowed for five yards through the Elon line to assure Catawba of a comeback victory in the closing half of the Indian-Christian combat.

The Hose have displayed a good offense and staunch defense so far this season. Injuries have caught up with several key men, but it is hoped that the team will be at full strength for the Catawba contest.

Comparing the Hose and Indian records against common foes, it would appear that Coach Frank Jones' men have a distinct advantage. PC defeated Elon 34-6 while Catawba could only pull a come-back 14-8 win. The Indians were defeated by East Carolina, against whom the Hose racked up their first win, but they managed to upset PC's conqueror, Davidson.

The Hosemen have proved that they are capable of a stout defense by allowing their foes little total rushing yardage. Bill Schofill, Richard Shrigley, James Walker, and ends Ken Gardner and Jon Vastine have been stingy to the opposition's running plays.

Catawba's Indians, too, have made defensive showing this year, but if the speedy Hose backs can find the holes Saturday night, the Hose should come out with their fifth victory of the present campaign. Realizing that comparative records mean little in football, the Hose will be ready to meet the upset-minded Catawba Indians.

Rating Systems Out of Whack

Unless the experts have their wire service polls and the rating systems out of whack, things could get considerably worse for Presbyterian, record-wise, before they get better.

As of now, the Blue Hose have won four, lost two and tied none. It could well be that they'll be 4-4-0 before they chalk up one in the win column again, since both Catawba and The Citadel— the next two opponents—are tough and vastly improving to pre-season expectations.

The way things have been going this crazy football season, it hardly pays to look ahead more than one day at a time, if that much, but off past performance PC could lose both its next two games and still wind up with a highly creditable 6-4 record for the year.

Already the '58 Hose have proven the dopesters to have have their slide rules out of whack. Pre-season speculation had Frank Jones' winless unit at the bottom of the list in the South Carolina grid picture. A look at the national rating of small colleges, before the Tampa clash that is, found Presbyterian tied in the number twelve position around the nation.

This is not brought up so much to belittle PC's chances against Catawba and The Citadel as it is to point out that losses to these two clubs would not necessarily wreck the season. Unless things take a complete reverse, the Hose certainly rate no worse than an even chance of their final four opponents—Catawba, The Citadel, Appalachian, and Newberry.

A highly respectable season or just a mere improvement over last season's dismal blot? Both the North State foes should not present as much a feared opposition as the pair of remaining SC elevens.

But, as mentioned repeatedly, it will take PC's finest showing of the season to beat either one of its remaining slate.

It will be interesting to see if the Hose are up to it.

HOSE HAVE VOCAL SUPPORT

Although Presbyterian rooters were almost lost in the Tampa Homecoming crowd, the Hose had considerably more vocal support than they had in the season opener in Greenville, N. C., for the East Carolina game.

Among those in the stands were a band of loyal supporters from Clinton who though numbering somewhere around the neighborhood of a dozen, flew down to the Sunshine State and faithfully followed the Blue Hose in quest of a fifth victory.

Former PC football performers were on hand at the game and also held a reunion prior to the game at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel, headquarters in Tampa for the Presbyterian football squad. Lee Frierson ('55), Bob Stevens, and Bill Tsacarinos ('56), were seen in the Florida city

SOCK PREDICTS

Last Week: 0 right, 3 wrong
Total for season: 9 right, 7 wrong

This week:

WOFFORD-DAVIDSON

Coach Conley Snidow's Terriers look to their fourth victory of the season as they host a tough Davidson club in Spartanburg this Saturday night. Both these teams were beaten last week, Davidson was swamped by VMI and Wofford upset by East Tennessee State. On their home turf and with Bradshaw back, we say WOFFORD, 26-14.

PC-CATAWBA

Away again this week, the Blue Hose appear well rested from the knocks at Tampa to encounter Catawba's rugged defense and the hot-cold offensive machine of the Indians.

It has been long and hard drills for the Hose this week; nevertheless, the spirit is running high. PRESBYTERIAN, 20-6.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Opponents Lenoir-Rhyne and Tampa have stated Bobby Pate as being one of the best halfbacks performing against their clubs . . . In 73 carries to date, Pate has registered 369 yards for a 5-yard per try average . . . Last year's Catawba game was cancelled becuse of the flu epidemic . . . PC has emerged victorious in the last four outings with the Indians . . . By virtue of the Tampa game, Pate took over the rushing and defensive departments, and remaining the top pass receiver for the Hose . . . Fullback Joe Coviello of Newberry, took over the L-T ground gainer leadership—by a yard over Wofford halfback Gary Whitlock. Coviello leads 423 to 423 . . . Jerry Richardson is still atop the scoring race within the conference with 48 plonts.

Socks Lose Second Game As Tampa Drives to Victory

Morgan Scores Lone PC Touchdown; Second Hose Scoring Threat Fails

By MARTIN CHITTY

A potent Tampa passing attack led to the downfall of the Blue Hose last Saturday night in Tampa. Although the PC'uns played their usual fine game they were unable to bring this one back.

The Floridians drew first blood in the first quarter in an 11-yard run by quarterback Bill Nuznoff. His pass to end Don Belliveau for 17 yards set up the score. Another big play in the drive came on a 16-yard run by fullback Fred Cason. The try for the point was unsuccessful.

Completing three for a total of 66 yards, second unit quarterback Billy Turner led Tampa's second scoring drive late in the first quarter. He threw to Belliveau for 18 yards and the TD. Again the extra point try was good.

Bobby Pate, who led all individual offense for the night with 88 yds. in 16 carries, was the big man in the Blue Hose touchdown drive. Halfback David Morgan scored the lone Presbyterian touchdown on a three-yard run. The Blue Hose point try also ended in failure. This left the halftime score Tampa 12, PC 6.

Another Tampa score came in the fourth, when Mike Whitwell raced 91 yards to paydirt. Cason's kick for the extra point missed.

The Hose had one other serious penetration when they moved the ball to the Tampa three, but were unable to move it on across.

Tampa went into the game rated number 11 small college wise and PC held down the number 12 spot.

Pacing the Presbyterian defensive unit were tackler Richard Shrigley and end Wilson Vastine.

Spotlight . . .

Pate Demonstrates Exceptional Ability

PC left halfback Bobby Pate has rapidly thrust himself into the South Carolina football spotlight with his exceptional all-around play.

With six games of the 1958 season history, Bob has gained 369 yards in 73 tries for a 5.0 yard per carry average.

He is the favorite target of quarterback Bobby Waters, making the leading pass receiver on the team. Bobby is currently tied with teammate Tony Benson for the individual scoring lead with three touchdowns.

Proving his versatility is the fact that he tops the Blue Hose in the number of individual tackles with 22 to date. He is also credited with numerous assists.

He has particularly shone in the last two games. Against Elon he averaged 13.6 yards a carry, while in Tampa he carried 16 times gaining 88 yards for a 5.5 average.

Although weighing only 165 pounds, he is a very hard runner. This combination of power and very fine speed make him a back to be feared from any point on the field.

Final Exams are Initiated By PC ROTC Detachment

Final examinations for Advanced ROTC students are being initiated by the Military Department, beginning with the current semester, it was announced today by Col. W. W. Barnett, PMS&T. These examinations will cover the material studied during the semester, including both drill and class periods, and it was emphasized that students will be responsible for material in reading assignments as well as that discussed in class.

The examinations will constitute twenty per cent of the final average, as against thirty-three per cent in most other departments of the college.

Col. Barnett said, in making the announcement, that the Military Department felt it a necessary step in order to help students retain the knowledge gained throughout the semester. He said further that the move was made with the full concurrence of college officials, but that it was conceived by the Military Department.

The examinations will be given during the regular exam week, but a special period, either during a morning or an afternoon for the giving of this ROTC exam. An arrangement will be worked out similar to the system now used by the language department.

Visitors Hit Campus Tomorrow For Annual Parents Day Affair

Full Program Planned For Occasion Football Game Kickoff Time Is 2:30

Visiting parents and other immediate family members will pour on the Presbyterian College campus this Saturday for the college's second annual Parents Day.

Almost 600 visitors are expected for this occasion, which has developed rapidly into one of the most popular PC events in the short period since its inception last fall. By mid-week more than 500 reservations already had been received, according to Public Relations and Alumni Director Ben Hay Hammet.

The visitors will join their sons and daughters for dinner and for the Presbyterian-Appalachian football game which follows at 2:30 p. m.

A full program has been arranged by the administration and by Blue Key national leadership fraternity, cooperating in the project. Registration is set for 11 a. m. Saturday in the Douglas House, Presbyterian College's new $250,000 student center. Visitors will receive their registrations, programs and other materials at this point, and members of the Student Christian Association and Alpha Psi Delta sorority will be on hand to assist.

Tours of the campus, under the direction of Blue Key, will move out from the Douglas House at regular intervals during the hour-long registration period from 11 a. m. to 12 noon. Buildings, facilities and several exhibits are to be shown at this time.

A program of welcome is set for 12 noon in the auditorium of Neville Hall. Dr. Marshall W. Brown, president of Presbyterian College, and student leaders will greet the visitors then. The college double-quartet will sing and Tau Phi Pi Society will present a laboratory demonstration.

Dinner is scheduled for 1 p. m., with groups to be served in both the Dining Hall and LeRoy Springs Gymnasium. And the football game, in which PC hopes to bounce back from its 38-0 defeat at The Citadel last week, will follow at 2:30 p. m.

Informal Open House will be held in the Douglas House and in fraternity quarters after the game to close the Parents Day activities.

Rifle Team Fires Saturday Match

[illegible]'s rifle team will fire its first shoulder match Saturday in Clemson College.

The team composed of three returning lettermen, Captain Toby Hunter, Dessie Dimsdale, and Robie Eschbaugh, and three new men, Jeff Chapman, Jeannie Powers, and Frank Forbes, will pit their skill against Clemson and Furman University.

The riflemen have held their own in mail matches against big teams in the south. With a win over the University of Florida they also fired a winning score of 1364 to beat Wofford's 1316 and Furman's 1345. High point man in these matches was Frank Forbes with a 369 out of 400. The only losses came from the University of Mississippi and Davidson College, the latter by three points. High point man against Davidson was Robie Eshbaugh with a 380.

Schedule of Events

SATURDAY

11 A. M.—Registration in Douglas House for parents of students.

12 P. M.—Program of Welcome in Neville Chapel.

1 P. M.—Dinner in Judd Dining Hall and LeRoy Springs Gymnasium.

2:30 P. M.—PC-Appalachian football game.

5:00 P. M.—Open House in Douglas House and Fraternity Suites.

Blue Key Chooses Four In Chapel Tapping Today

• Service To College Earns Recognition

Four outstanding men were tapped into Blue Key National Honor Fraternity this morning in chapel. Three students, Ron Bartlett, Ralph Chambers, and Ken Caswell, were selected on a basis of character, scholastic aptitude, leadership, and service. Mr. James Gray, a member of the faculty was chosen as an honorary member of the honor fraternity.

Ron Bartlett is a senior from Atlanta, Ga. He serves this semester as D Company Commander, captain of Scabbard and Blade Military fraternity, secretary of his fraternity, treasurer of his class, and is a senior superlative. His past record shows service on the PaC-SaC staff for three years, and the title of Associate Editor and class editor of the publication in his sophomore and junior years, respectively, membership in the robed choir, and Business Manager of the Blue Stocking.

Ralph Chambers, a former resident of Chicago, Ill., is a three-year graduate who is expected to graduate with honors. He is a letterman on the varsity basketball team, and is serving this year as the president of the Block P Club. He also served this year as the head of the Freshman Control Board, and holds membership in the Tau Phi Pi scientific fraternity. A consistent member of the Dean's List, Chambers is also a charter member of the Sophomore Honor Society.

Ken Caswell, a native of Paris, Ky., is Headquarters Company Commander of the Battle Group, president of Tau Phi Pi scientific fraternity, and president of the Baptist Student Union. He is also a letterman on the varsity basketball team, serving last year as Co-Captain, and a member of the Block P Club. His past record shows him also to be a consistent member of the Dean's List.

Baptist Deputation Goes To Lander College

Thursday night the Presbyterian College Baptist Student Union made one of their annual deputations to Lander College. The members were treated to supper in the Lander dining hall, after which they presented a devotional program for the Baptist students at Lander.

Evin Varner was speaker for the program on which several other Presbyterian College students participated.

The Baptist Student Union has been very active this year and have plans in the future for many other projects similar in nature to their deputation team which presented the program at Lander. President Ken Cashwell and Mrs. Martin, the advisor, have also made plans for a banquet and a number of socials to be held later in the year.

March 7 Is Date For Military Ball

PC's Military Ball has been scheduled for March 7, it was announced today by Bob Hafner, chairman of the Military Ball Committee.

This year's affair will be a closed dance for military personnel only, and is slated to be formal with appropriate cadet dress being Class A uniform. Also invited will be graduates of the PC military unit or PC graduates serving with the military on active duty.

Assessment for the dance has been tentatively set at $4.00, according to Hafner. He indicated however, that this could be raised or lowered slightly according to the price of the band secured.

No band has as yet been secured, but negotiations are being made and it was indicated that announcement about this should be shortly forthcoming.

An earlier arrangement had been made between the ROTC and the Inter-Fraternity Council whereby two dances would be jointly sponsored by both, but this has definitely been called off. It was indicated by Hafner that the Military Dance would be a one-night affair only, but that the IFC would probably sponsor another dance the following night.

March 10-14

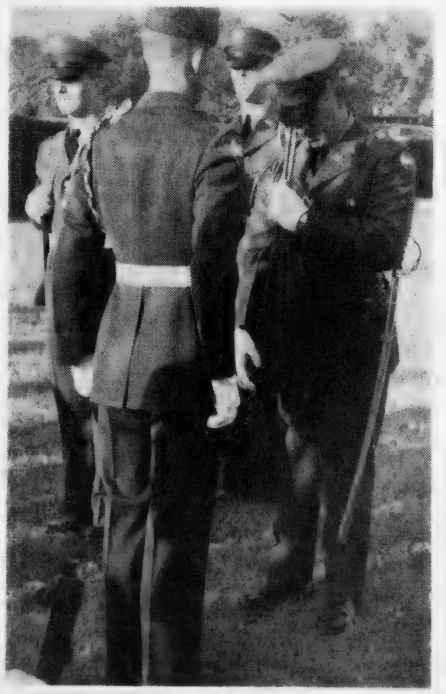
Top Speakers Secured for RE Week

Six outstanding speakers have been secured by the Student Christian Association for the 1959 Religious Emphasis Week to be held March 10-14. Secured for the week of religious emphasis are: Mrs. Fountain I. Chapman, Rev. Marshall James, Chaplain Loren T. Jenks, Dr. H. Park Tucker, Dr. M. W. Worsing, and Rev. Dave Miller.

Mrs. Chapman, who had "standing room only" classes during her stay at PC last year, is returning for her second consecutive year. She is a psychiatric assistant to Dr. W. B. Holbrook of Charlotte, N. C., and has spoken on many programs of similar nature.

Rev. James is pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Episcopal) in Greer. He has been heard by a number of PC students and comes highly recommended by a record of outstanding work in youth conferences, in addition to his regular pastorate.

Chaplain Jenks, who holds the rank of Colonel in the U. S. Army, is the Post Chaplain at Fort Jackson. He is also returning for his second consecutive year in the REW program. His classes, which were filled to overflowing last year, will continue with the marriage and family theme.



Dr. Tucker is the protestant chaplain at the Federal Penitentiary in Atlanta, Ga. He has been heard by several students on the campus and is widely acclaimed for his inspiring and picturesque illustrations.

Dr. Worsing is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Spartanburg. A powerful and forceful speaker, Dr. Worsing has for many years been a popular speaker in Spartanburg among Converse and Wofford students. He is also a trustee of the college.

Rev. Miller is a missionary from the Belgian Congo in Africa and is home on a year's furlough. He is presently speaking to many college groups in the Atlantic coast states.

Sonny Embry, SCA president, stated that "the cabinet has worked very hard to secure only the best possible speakers available. We think that we have accomplished this goal; all of the speakers have been heard by some member of the cabinet, and are considered to be excellent. The theme of the week will be "Go ye into the world and . . ." Each speaker will have a sub-theme or topic and will carry it out in their seminar classes, similar to those held last year."

Blue Stocking Proposes A Solution . . .

In our last issue we discussed the problem of noise in the dorms. Various comments made by students to staff members during the past two weeks have supported our contention that the situation should be remedied. Thus, this week we will discuss possible solutions to the problem.

GENERAL STUDENT AGREEMENT

We are forced to dismiss any notion of a general agreement among the students to cut down on noise, not because they wilfully create a rucus, but because they usually act without thinking. It is not dicreditable to need a reminder but a simple matter of human nature.

STUDENT COUNCIL ACTION

A student government cannot legislate without acting to enforce its regulations, not so much against wilful violators as against thoughtlessness. In the past the Student Council has attempted with its own membership to enforce the regulation on quiet hours without success, primarily because of poor distribution in the dorms and student unwillingness to cooperate.

ACTION BY THE ADMINISTRATION

The administration could devise some system to enforce quiet in the dorms. House mothers can be ruled out due to lack of facilities, expense, and probable poor student acceptance. The only practical solution would be a system employing student proctors. However, we sense that the administration prefers action on such matters to originate with the student body, and they will not act until the students demonstrate their support.

OUR PROPOSAL

Thus, we propose a system we believe is not only workable but one which the administration will approve and install if the student body will demand action. We suggest student proctors in all dorms, the number and distribution to be determined by those responsible for the administration of such a system. These proctors should be paid in cash, for if they do not fulfill their duties they can be suspended, and in turn, students will more likely cooperate realizing that if the proctor does not keep order he will lose cash income. Also, these proctors should be seniors as they will be more likely to be respected, and they will no longer be "shooting" for an elective office.

We offer only a skeleton plan for others to revise or build on. However, what are its advantages? Those students who are annoyed by the present situation need not be convinced of the merits of such a system. To the faculty we would say quiet dormitories will be much more conducive to study. To the administration we would suggest maintenance cost might be reduced with some check on vandalism. To all concerned, we believe that the efforts to establish such a system and the cost to maintain the same would be commensurate to the benefits received.

Again, LET US HEAR FROM YOU. If you desire action, you must indicate your support in some concrete way. Address your reply to the Editor in care of this paper.

Flag Pole Chanters . . .

"Bubble, Bubble, Toil and Trouble"

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

Unlike most students (Band members), who were loyal to their alma mater and went to the PC-Citadel game this weekend, I went home for National free-cut day.

Sunday night, when I arrived back on the P College campus, I noticed some strange things about the place —and some not so strange.

The first off happening that I observed, as I was crossing the Plaza, with my suit case and dirty clothes bag, was a group of local yokels dancing around the flag pole chanting that old familiar favorite, "Bubble, Bubble, Toil and Trouble."

I looked up the flag pole and there dangling from the top I saw a young lad of about nineteen clad in some sort of uniform with a black stripe down the leg. He was busily yelling something, but the bubble boys were making so much noise that I couldn't understand what he was trying to get across. Finally the BB's quited down and I could hear the bellhop on the pole calling for Philip Morris, whoever he is.

I asked one boy what the deal was with the bellhop on the pole, and he informed me that the bellhop I was referring to was a Citadel student who had yelled hoorah for the Del one time too often. I understood fully then, so seeing a friend of mine, I commenced conferring with him about the situation.

We talked on a while, and he told me that someone had been hung in Effigy, which is about three miles east of Clinton, but looking at my watch and seeing that it was past my bed time, I decided to sack out rather than driving over there to see about things.

Continuing on my journey to Smyth B, I looked toward Neville and saw the usual assortment of all the famous and some not so famous beer cans, lying on the walk—empty of course.

As I approached Smyth B, I saw beside the rooms for rent sign a big yellow one that read Stuckeys—ten miles. Walking up the steps I almost slipped because of the flood of water creeping out from under the door. This, of course, was nothing out of the ordinary.

I heard a strange noise coming from within but couldn't tell in which direction it was from. Entering my room I found the answer. There, sitting in the corner, was roomo, who was from South Carolina, crying over the Tech-Clemson score. He had already shed one trash can full of tears, and was starting on his second.

starting on his second.

After sixteen yawns, I decided I would hit the hay instead of studying—no sweat.

Letters to the Editor

Students Complain of Noise

Printed below are letters received last week regarding the Blue Stocking editorial on noise in the dormitories. These are indicative of the feelings of many students in regard to the situation.

Dear Editor,

I should like to commend The Blue Stocking on its stand concerning the problem of noise in the dorms.

The noise not only keeps one from study, but the horseplay which is the mother of the noise is also dangerous at times.

A student paying as much as we do for the rooms is entitled to the privilege of studying there. We should be able to live as a group of young men—but since we cannot, it is the duty of the college to, first of all, provide quiet for the serious student, and secondly, to protect their property resultant from horse play.

I vote "Yes" for quieter dorms.

Evin Varner

Dear Editor,

I think the Dorms are far too noisy, especially Smyth B. I would appreciate anything you can do about the noise in the dorms.

Thomas Ott

Dear Editor,

I would be very happy if some of the unnecessary noise in Smyth dormitory could be stopped. It is not very helpful when one is trying to indulge in studies.

Buddy Harper

Dear Editor,

It was good to see an organization standing up against the noise in the dormitories. The noise is simply terrible, it's outrageous and uncalled for. There is so much noise that I go to Douglas House to do my studying—and the other night when I went, every room was filled with students. The library is usually pretty full, too, and anyway, it's too darn far to walk to study, especially in the cold and wet. Also Neville Hall has its share of serious students.

If the administration doesn't do something about quieting the dorms, they're going to have to raise money and build a study building.

Some students enjoy plyaing rec-

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Psi Chapter met Tuesday night for its regular session. Plans were completed for Parents Day, and for a dance to be held in the fraternity room Saturday night. Plans were made for a brotherhood initiate to be held.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Plans were completed at the regular meeting Tuesday night concerning the informal tea to be held Parents Day in the Fraternity Suite.

During the course of the meeting, Social Chairman Gibson announce that he has obtained a combo to play for an open dance at the American Legion Hut. The brothers selected Ron Isger as Brother of the Week upon his being selected for Who's Who.

KAPPA ALPHA

Initiation was held Tuesday night at which time Bill Dobbins, Bill Norman, and Bubba Tolison were cordially welcomed into the brotherhood. On Friday night the chapter is having a closed social and following the game on Saturday afternoon, there will be an open house for parents and guests. A big party, with a real hot combo, has been planned for Saturday night at which all non-frat men and parents are invited.

Congratulations were extended to Brother Lewis Haynie who is the first proud father in the chapter to come through with a baby boy recently.

SIGMA NU

Zeta Theta Chapter wishes to congratulate Marion Parrish on his initiation into the brotherhood last Wednesday night. Plans were discussed for the activities of Parents Day weekend. Everyone is cordially invited to attend a Drop-In after the Appalachian game. There will also be an open house party at the Sigma Nu House Saturday night.

THETA CHI

Plans were made for Parents Day weekend, and John Gossett was awarded the scholarship as the chapter's outstanding pledge.

Music, Skits Featured Tonight At United Fund Variety Show

• SCA Sponsors Second Annual Affair

CARTER REDD, freshman from Atlanta, Ga., will act as Master of Ceremonies at tonight's Variety Show.—Photo by Lamar Hawkins.

The Student Christian Association will present its second annual Variety Show for the benefit of United Fund tonight at 7:30 in the Hampton Avenue School Auditorium. It will be similar to that held last year and will feature quartets, skits, and musical, western, and comedy acts. Carter Redd, PC freshman from Atlanta, Ga., will act as Master of Ceremonies.

Featured on the program will be the Silhouettes, a singing group composed of Lonnie Love, Jack Taylor, Dick Carter, and Pat Malone. Also working with the act in a duet are the McDonald twins, Hexie and Harry. The group will present the some numbers done for the Wofford Blue Key program that was very well received last month in Spartanburg.

Co-eds will star in a western type program, and Lou Gray wil sing a duet with Lonnie Love. Featured also will be Paul Arrington, Charlie Hughes, and Ronnie Wright in a guitar-picking session.

A highlight of the evening will be the judging of a womeness beauty contest for the title of "Miss United Fund." Several of PC's star athletes are entered in this eye-catching event. Major and Mrs. Harry F. Lowman will judge the contest. The winner will appear in the snapshot section of the 1959 PaC-SaC.

At the close of the program, G. Edward Campbell and L. V. Powell wil present cups to those fraternities who pledged 100 per cent in the United Fund Drive.

The price of admission will be twenty-five cents, and all proceeds will go to the United Fund. Hampton Avenue School auditorium, the scene of the show, is located one-half block west of the First Presbyterian Church.

PC's Service Award Goes To Montgomery

John Montgomery, managing editor of The State, is the recipient of Presbyterian College's Alumni Service Award for 1958.

He was named by the board of directors of the Presbyterian College Alumni Association because of his "outstanding service to the Association during the past year. The directors cited Montgomery for his work in two spheres of activity, as vice-president of the Alumni Association and as president of the Richland County Chapter of Presbyterian College alumni.

As Alumni Service Award winner, Montgomery's name will be placed on a plaque, bearing the names of previous recipients, which is kept on display in the library building at PC. This year marked the 11th annual citation for alumni service. The previous winners were:

1948—The Rev. Walker Sessions of Atlanta; 1949—Walter E. Walker of Anderson; 1950—Col. Powell A. Fraser of the U. S. Army; 1951—Tom Estes of Union; 1952—Robert L. Wylie, Jr., of Charlote; 1953—Doctors Duncan C. Alford and Furman T. Wallace, both of Spartanburg; 1954—Donald F. Kirven of Sumter; 1955—Hugh S. Jacobs of Clinton; 1956—Knox Wyatt of Rome, Ga.; and 1957—James J. Cornwall of Clinton.

HEXIE AND HARRY McDONALD are two of the top performers in tonight's United Fund Variety Show at Hampton Avenue School. They will present their renditions of several hit numbers.

Beta Club

PC's Dr. Harris is Founder Of Scholastic Organization

A Presbyterian College professor is the founder and driving force behind a high school organization now spread to almost one-half the nation.

He is Dr. John W. Harris, professor of English at PC since 1941, who founded the National Beta Club in 1933 to promote scholarship and a sense of community service among high school students.

Now celebrating its 25th anniversary and with the endorsement of leading educators, this organization ranks among the fastest growing groups of its kind in the country.

A number of Presbyterian College students are former Beta Club members. They stand among the more than 400,000 Beta alumni scattered throughout the nation. More than 78,000 select boys and girls in 21 states were active members at last official count—belonging to almost 2,500 individual clubs in as many high schools within these states.

DR. HARRIS

Growth has been continuous since Dr. Harris first set up his Spartanburg headquarters, and he plans to have chapters functioning in most of the other states in the near future.

His story with the Beta Club is one of achievement. It also is one of real service rendered to youth through leadership opportunities recognition and encouragement, and through a low-interest education fund that has helped almost 1,500 boys and girls to attend college.

This fund, for example, has aided worthy and needy members with their advanced school to the extent of $150,868 since 1940. Within South Carolina alone, 286 loans totaling $35,493.50 have been made to students needing help to meet college expenses. They have attended every institution of higher learning in the state.

There are other services of the Beta Club, such as a monthly magazine, program materials, and annual state conventions. Among the greatest of services, however, is in stimulating within each individual a keener sense of academic achievement and community responsibility.

Dr. Harris established his first club at Landrum (S. C.) High in 1933. He united in this one organization the service feature of Kiwanis and the scholarship feature of Phi Beta Kappa. Today, his almost 2,500 chapters are located in these states:

Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Indiana, Louisiana, Mississippi Missouri, Nevada, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia.

Founder John Harris Continues to serve this broad and expanding organization from his Spartanburg headquarters. Only a man of his tremendous vitality could do this and also maintain his schedule of teaching English here on the campus three days a week.

ords and radios, this is fine as long as they keep them low and keep their doors shut. In Smyth B now, someone has come up with the idea of throwing fire crackers. Sometime he's going to throw one at somebody and hurt him. It's not known who it is, but as soon as one goes off the students are out looking for him.

I think one way to cure the noise problem would be to have hall monitors on each floor. I would appreciate ANYTHING done to STOP this headache.

Jazz Jots . . .

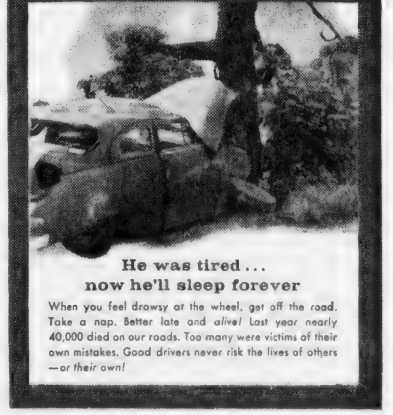
Top Trombonist Today

By PAUL WILLIAMS

Year after year, J. J. Johnson cops the trombone award polls of jazz fans, jazz critics, and musicians, themselves. This last occurred when Leonard Feather compiled his Encyclopedia of Jazz. He asked the men who make music to chose their favorites on each instrument. J. J. Johnson was chosen overwhelmingly to be the top jazz trombonist around today.

Six years ago, J. J. withdrew from the world and began to work in a blueprint factory. He worked during the day and played his music there would be more job security at night. He finally decided that if he returned to the jazz field. So in early 1954 J. J. teamed up with a fellow trombonist, Kai Winding. Almost overnight they became one of the most popular jazz groups in the country. The group cut many sides for Savoy, Prestige, and Columbia, which are still seling today.

The team of J&K split up in July, 1956, and each of the two men went thier own musical ways.



J. J. formed his own quintet and has since recorded many great sides for Columbia. In one of his latest, Dial J. J. (CL-1048), he shows that he has become one of the most fluent instrumentalists in jazz. In this album, however, he does not quite live up to some of his previous performances, but he plays well enough to surpass the flock of imitators playing trombone today. In this album J. J. plays fine solos on seven of the tracks and Bobby Jas-

Never Say Die

The Blue Stocking sports staff would like to take this opportunity to welcome all of the parents, friends, and alumni here on the campus for this colorful Parents Day game.

Presbyterian College Blue Hose, rested from last week's skirmish with a unexpectedly formidable Citadel eleven, look ahead to the session with the Appalachian Mountaineers in a game that should get them over any chance of a .500 mark.

As expected after two straight harrowing battles with Tampa and Catawba, the Hose were anything but "up" for the Citadel skirmish in Charleston. Warned with the fact that Eddie Teague's Cadets came into the game determined before a Parents Day crowd, it was made a much far sad loose affair than originally anticipated.

For the Hose, which by now are wondering what it has to do to stop this sliding tailspin of late, needs a win this week to stay up over just a fair season.

Presbyterian seeks to bounce back from a 38-0 drubbing tomorrow afternoon at the expense of Appalachian. Hose fans will see that once-feared redoubtable explosive offense which rolled against Davidson and Elon before the home crowd.

RUN IN THE HOSE

What this column said several weeks back could very well be holding true had not a strong Presbyterian forward wall fought off a surprising Catawba in a 14-14 tie—a lucky one to say the least. . . . An unpleasant 4-4-0 won-lost record was forecast only to be evaded by this lone stoppage.

While we're playing our so-called Monday morning quarterback role, typical of most every second-guessing football enthusiast at some time or another, we dare say it has been somewhat of a humiliation the last few weeks.

Though only casually remarked by several fans, it wouldn't be hard to believe upon close speculation that the Hose did terminate what appeared to be the finest season ever produced by a Presbyterian College team after the long Florida jaunt. A torn note of memory now, but a seemingly true observation.

Just what has hit the fading Hose in the space of three weeks?

PC LEADS NORTH STATERS

Aside from the constant knocking around, surprisingly enough the Hose could very well be sitting atop the North State Conference at the moment with a 3-0-1 record to date. Against such competition as witnesses in the loop this year, the home club has shown marked improvement over last year.

Early season wins over East Carolina, Lenoir-Rhyne, and Elon sport quite a respectable trio of victories with only a tie to Catawba spoiling a perfect record.

PC spells trouble, particularly for the high-flying Lenoir-Rhyne Bears. An 8-6 margin up at Hickory will be remembered somewhat as a top spoiler for the Hose as Stassavich's eleven appears headed for another great season with seven wins already against the lone loss to PC.

Little Three representatives Wofford and Newberry neither have produced too successfully with the North State cousins. The Terriers, in one of their worst seasons under Snidow, are 2-2 while a band from Newberry puts a 1-3 won-lost record on the line in the loop.

If and when the proposed "Carolina Conference" gets a footing between the Little Three Conference and the North Staters, the Blue Hose would be a most certain bet to stir trouble for the rest of the bunch, especially in this '58 campaign as the mythical champion.

SOCK PREDICTS

Record to date: 9-8-1

WOFFORD-NEWBERRY

Two Little Three teams square off this week in a contest that appears to capture the spothght among games in South Carolina.

The Terriers under Conley Snidow are having their worst season in years, presently exhibiting 3-6 on the season. The Spartanburg club hasn't been at full strength for the past several weeks and still remains a bit handicapped.

Newberry on the other hand has been surprising quite a few people this year and even has hopes of taking the first stride toward a L-T crown this week. We go along with Kirkland's Indians, 20-13.

PC-APPALACHIAN

A parents day crowd could bring a wounded and win-hungry Blue Hose off the floor against the strong contending North State team. Whether Pate and several others see action could very well determine the difference here.

Well, look for the Hose to go through with an undefeated season against North State competition. Presbyterian in a close one, 20-18.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Appalachian completed its conference season with a 13-6 victory over Guilford last Saturday night for a 4-2 record in the loop . . . Coach Jones was quoted as saying that this hanging in effigy business doesn't bother him. "Time to start worrying is when they try to hang you for real." . . . There doesn't seem to be much question about it any more: PC vs Newberry at Clinton on Thanksgiving Day will be the Little Three conference game of the year so far as fans in this area are concerned . . . Jerry Richardson continues to lead L-T scoring with a total of 65 points . . . Appalachian back Ansel Glendenning tops all North State rushers with a total of 620 yards . . . QB Bob Waters of PC, follows leader Bradshaw in the passing department with 34 of 76 passes for 452 yards in the L-T.

Hose Gridmen Fall to Citadel As Pups Unleash Tough Offense

Injuries Handicap Presbyterian; Cadets Claim Resounding Victory

By MARTIN CHITTY

An injury-ridden Presbyterian College Blue Hose football team felt the unleashing of Citadel's best offensive showing in two years in a 38-0 thump before a jubilant Parents Day crowd of 12,700 in Charleston last weekend.

The Hose were severely handicapped due to the ailments of some 13 PC players, including halfbacks Bobby Pate and Tony Benson, who both were hampered by leg injuries. First unit fullback Bill Hill, slowed down somewhat from an injury sustained in the Catawba game, also saw only limited action.

The cadets scored at least once in every quarter in running up the most convincing victory in the 17 games the team has played under Coach Eddie Teague.

In the first quarter the Bulldogs drove from their own 16-yard stripe behind the hard running of Joe Chefalo and Bobby Daugherty. Quarterback Dick Guerreri got the initial touchdown midway in the period with a 17-yard rollout around the left side to climax a 91-yard drive. The first of four two-pointers was good.

HOSE YEARLINGS SHINE

A pretty good indication of things to come appeared evident though in this defeat. Freshmen guards Cecil Drake and Billy Ogden played the majority of the last half, showing considerable promise for Frank Jones' charges. Quarterbeck Joe Nixon and end Fred Cook entered the game for the majority of the last half and showed up well.

The second Citadel score came in the second period with fullback Barry Thomas smashing over from the one. Guerreri hit end Joe Pacella for two more points and it was 16-0 at halftime.

Daugherty picked up six more points in the third quarter on a 5-yard scamper off tackle. Paul Maguire snagged a Jerry Nettles pass for the points after touchdown, mkaing the tally 24-0.

Another Nettles to Maguire pass went for 33 yards to set up another six-pointer. Daugherty got it, going around left end for the score. Reserve quarterback Joe Griffin found Pacella in the end zone from nine yards out for the final score. The extra point try failed and the game ended with the score 38-0.

The Blue Hose made only two threats, both coming in the second period. On one occasion they moved to the Citadel 35 before being stopped by a tough Cadet forward wall and once again they pentrated inside the 20 with recovery of a fumbled punt but failed to make any headway.

TED LEAHY, this week's spotlight, will be one of the mainstays of the PC offensive machine against Appalachian.

Spotlight . . .

Senior Ted Leahy Is Outstanding End

Senior Ted Leahy, hailing from Atlanta, Ga., has been one of the outstanding members of the Presbyterian football team this year. Leahy is a member of the starting unit and is in his fourth year of intercollegiate football here at Presbyterian College.

He has shown exceptional ability, being a fine all-around football player. Defensively, he ranks third on the entire Blue Hose squad. Opposing eams have found the going rough around his end all year long and in eight games he is credited with 21 individual tackles and 18 assists.

Ted is strong and aggressive, weighing in at a hefty 210 pounds and stands a towering 6'-3". He has had little trouble nolding down the left end position and has played first string all this year. Leahy has earned varsity letters his sophomore and junior years while at PC.

In addition to his defensive capabilities, Ted is a fine pass receiver. Through the current campaign of eight games this season, he has pulled down nine passes for 81 yards, ranking second only to teammate Bobby Pate in that department for the Hose.

Leahy's best game of the year came against Catawba where he caught 4 passes for a total of 37 yards. Ted's best defensive game was in the Davidson tilt, in which he came up with seven individual tackles.

Pigskin Predictions

Again the Blue Stocking offers you the chance to match wits with the experts in picking the winners of South Carolina football games.

Five passes to the Broadway Theater will be given the person who picks correctly the winners in all the games and also the total number of points in the PC game.

If no one turns in a prefect ballot the person coming closest to doing so will be awarded one pass.

Ballots must be placed in the ballot box in the Douglas House by NOON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 30.

Little Three Conference Season Nears Completion

By KEN NIX

South Carolina's Little Three Conference, which is always considered to be one of the toughest conferences in this section of the country, in two weeks will record its 1958 season as past history.

Looking at an over-all won-lost record, Little Three teams have compiled an 11-12-1 with three remaining games. However, since two of these games are among conference teams, the responsibility of having a .500 season rests with the Blue Hose when they meet another North State Conference foe, Appalachian State Teachers College this Saturday on Johnson Field.

Newberry boasts the best record up to date with a 4-3. Presbyterian follows closely claiming four wins, three defeats, and a tie, while Wofford is having a dismal 3-6 season. In conference play Presbyterian is the undisputed leader, being victorious over Wofford in the only game played.

Rounding out this year's schedule, Newberry clashes with Wofford this weekend and takes on the Blue Hose Thanksgiving Day. A Newberry victory over Wofford will set the stage for the traditional conference championship pitting Presbyterain against Newberry. A Wofford win would insure the Blue Hose at least a tie for first place.

Carrying the load for the disappointing Wofford Terriers have been All-American Charlie Bradshaw and Jerry Richardson, who and receiving. Gary Whitlock, the top ground gainer in the Little Three, has also been a bulwark to the Terriers.

The spirited Newberry Indians have an exceptional fullback in Joe Coviello who has rushed for 480 yards in seven games. The Indian line has been rugged to their opponents' offense.

Presbyterian's success is centered around Bobby Pate, a small elusive halfback who has gained 398 yards in 85 carries. Also appearing in the Blue Hose picture is good quarterbacking and strong support from lettermen and freshmen.

Other than being the smallest conference in active existence, the Little Three is highly regarded and also feared by several larged conferences, such as the North State and the Southern, because of its competitive spirit.

Blue Socks Host to Applachian For Annual Parents Day Contest

Crowd of 2,500 Expected Here As Hose Aim For Second Home Win

By DON HYDE

An estimated crowd of 2,500 is expected to be on hand tomorrow afternoon when the Presbyterian College Blue Hose play host to Appalachian State Teachers College in their annual parents day battle. A win against Appalachian will give PC it's second win at home and an over-all record of five wins against three defeats with one tie. It will also give them a sweep of rival foes in the North State Conference including wins over East Carolina, Lenoir-Rhyne, Elon, and a 14 to 14 tie with Catawba.

This is the seventh meeting of the two schools with each being victorious three times. Below is the record of the two teams with the PC scores listed first:

1946	14- 7
1950	7 -34
1954	14- 7
1955	6 -35
1956	34- 7
1957	7 -20

There are fourteen seniors on the Presbyterian squad, who will be seeking revenge of last year's 20 to 7 defeat, but revenge isn't going to be easy as the Mountaineers have 19 lettermen returning and didn't lose a single man via graduation. With the over-all depth to their squad the Mountaineers have won four while losing two and are currently tied for second place in the North State Conference.

Appalachian is said to have reached it's peak last week while defeating a strong East Carolina eleven 15 to 0. Coach Bob Broome was especially pleased with the performance of halfback Glenwood Wilson who personally was responsible for the first touchdown. Wilson took a hanoff and broke over right tackle for 48 yards and was finally brought down on the two-yard line. Seconds later he crashed over for the touchdown to give Appalachian a lead they never relinquished.

Appalachian has another hard runner in Ansel Glendenning, who has spearheaded the Mountaineer attack throughout the season and is one of the candidates supported by his conference for Little All-American honors.

The Blue Hose who have been hampered in the last three games with injuries will once again find themselves not in top shape, and Coach Jones will have to rely on several freshmen to fill some of the key gaps. Halfback Bob Pate who injured his knee in the Catawba game should be ready for some heavy duty action. Hose supporters also hope that Tony Benson, who is leading the conference in rushing with a 5.7 yards per carry, will be able to play a full sixty minutes.

Quarterback Bob Waters has been a capable field general of the wing-T offense while completing 34 out of 76 passes for 452 yards. He has a capable replacement in Nat Cole.

The "Big Blue" forward wall will be led by Co-captain Richard Shrigley of Clinton. Shrigley throughout the season has been outstanding on offense and defense and has contributed greatly in kicking off for the Hose. Other PC linemen to watch are center Mac Copeland, guard John Firby, and end Ted Leahy.

PC-Catawba Ends In 14-14 Deadlock

By JIM ELLER

The Presbyterian College Blue Hose met a fired-up Catawba team in Salisbury, N. C., week before last and were held to a 14-14 tie. The Hose went into the game as favorites, but Catawba, who had proved their ability as giant killers held the Hosemen to the deadlock. The game proved a disastrous one for PC because injuries were inflicted on key Hose players.

killers, held the Hosemen to the deadlock. The game proved a disastrous one for PC because injuries were inflicted on key Hose players.

PC scored first as the climax to a drive started on the Indian 36 where the Hose intercepted a pass. Fullback Bill Hill's one-yard plunge clinched the score, and quarterback Bob Waters ran for the extra points.

The second Hose score was the result of a 49-yard pass play from Waters to halfback Bob Pate, who made a brilliant shoe-string snag of the ball. Both Presbyterian tallies came in the second period. The first half ended with PC leading 14 to 6.

Catawba came out for the second half with a determined effort and managed to hold the Hose scoreless. Their game-tying score in the final quarter was set up when Indian fullback Oxendine blocked a Presbyterian punt on the 20 and end Ted Bates recovered on the Hose 10. The Indian extra point pass clicked to throw the game into a deadlock.

The game, played before a small crowd because of the damp weather, ran the Presbyterian record to four victories against two losses and a tie for the season.

per, with the help of Tommy Flanagan, shines on the remaining three.

Jaspar plays very well on both tenor sax and flue. Flanagan, a very modern pianist, contributes much of the driving force that reminds many of Dave Brubeck.

The tunes performed include Charlie Parker's Barbados, Miles Davis' Haze, and Bobby Jaspar's own Town and Chose. Town is a delicately woven mood number while Haze is played in a spirited fashion. Jaspar is at his best on a number titled Happen.

J. J.'s group as heard here, is a good combination. The arrangements are good, and they are performed in an inspiring way. Most record buyers will want to dial J. J. again because of his phenomenal technique and musical taste that has made him a significant figure in the world of jazz

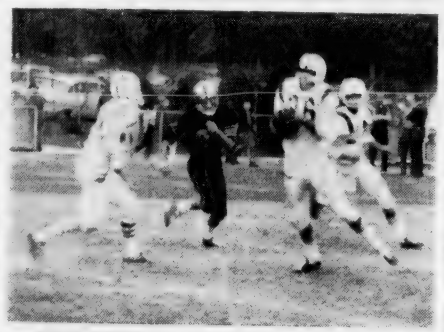
McSween Speaks

PiKA Fetes PC Faculty



Seven Presbyterian College faculty members were honored at a banquet by Mu Chapter of the Pi Kappa Fraternity Tuesday night.

They were unanimously selected for their contributions to higher scholastic standards, better faculty-student understanding, and personal interest in the individual students.

The recipients of the honor were: Dr. John W. Harris, Dr. Newton B. Jones, Mr. Taylor Martin, Dr. Louis B. Pope, Dr. Neill G. White, law, Dr. John W. Stevenson, and Mr. John S. Glover.

A unique feature of the banquet was the variety of meals received by the fraternity members according to their grade point standing in the fraternity. The brothers and pledges with the highest grade ratio received steak, whereas the ones with the lowest grades ate sandwiches.

Dr. John McSween, former president of the college, and fraternity advisor, gave a short talk following the meal. He stated that Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity is placing more emphasis on scholastic achievement.

Hosemen Face Newberry In Thanksgiving Day Clash

• Bronze Derby is at Stake

By KEN NIX

The grand finale of Little Three Football to be played on Thanksgiving Day promises to be the most exciting contest of the 1958 season. This traditional clash between the Blue Hose from Presbyterian and Newberry's Indians has not only the annual prize of the Bronze Derby at stake but the Little Three Conference Championship as well.

Coach Harvey Kirkland escorts his Indians into Clinton supporting an impressive record of five wins against three defeats. To stop the onrushing Tribe, still on the warpath since their victory over Wofford Coach Frank Jones' charges will deinitely have to be well prepared.

Directing the Indian attack are senior backs Joe Coviello and Bobby Rowe. Coviello is the second leading rusher in South Carolina, gaining 552 yards in eight games. Rowe, an elusive 155-pound halfback, is their most dangerous open field runner. The surprise of the Newberry offense has been freshman signal caller Vernon Prather. He has been at the helm of the club since the starting quarterback was injured earlier in the season.

Pacing the Hose asault usually falls upon the shoulders of halfbacks Bobby Pate and Tony Benson. Again we look to these cunning, hard-running backs to establish their toughness. Quarterbacks Bob Waters and Nat Cole furnish Presbyterian's attack with threat of the "home run" pass.

The Tribe's backs are not able to look forward to diving into the big stout Hose line. This spirited line has proven itself exceptionally stubborn in relinquishing yards to opponents. Shrigley, Firby, Leahy, and Schofill are the bulwarks in the Presbyterain forward wall.

Comparing records against mutual opponents, Presbyterian appears to hold a slight edge. Both teams possess victories over Eastern Carolina and Wofford. Newberry boasts and upset win over The Citadel while the Hosemen were routed by the Bulldogs. Presbyterian's over-all record against North State Conference foes is 4-0-1 as compared with a dismal Newberry record of one win and three setbacks.

Six Officers Tapped By Scabbard and Blade

• Cadets Cited for Leadership, Character

At the Battle Group Review this morning, six officers of the cadet corps were tapped into Company "K," 10th Regiment, of the Scabbard and Blade. Those tapped in the surprise ceremony were Roger Godwin, 1st Lt. Fred Stanley, 2nd Lt. Marion Dowdle, 2nd Lt. Toby Hunter, and 2nd Lt. John Firby.

The organization, which is commanded by cadet 1st Lt. Ronald Bartlett, is an honorary military fraternity whose members are distinguished in Colleges and Universities all over the United States by a blue and red forragere worn over the right shoulder.

1st Lt. Childers is a native of Birmingham, Ala., and is the Battle Group S-3. His duties include that of operations and training officer. 1st Lt. Godwin of College Park, Ga., is the Battle Group S-2, and serves on the staff as Intelligence and Public Information Officer. 1st Lt. Stanley, who hails from Rock Hill, is the Company Commander of "A" Company.

2nd Lt. Marion Dowdle, a resident of Clinton, serves this semester as the 2nd Platoon Leader of "D" Company. 2nd Lt. Toby Hunter, a resident of Simpsonville, is the 2nd Platoon Leader of "A" Company, and 2nd Lt. John Firby of North Augusta, is the Platoon Leader of the 1st Platoon of "D" Company.

These men were selected from the MS IV cadets on a basis of outstanding leadership in military, and character.

Rush Week Slated Following Holidays

Rush week for the 1958-59 school year officially gets underway Dec. 3, and will continue until pledge day Dec. 12, as six fraternities vie for pledges.

Sigma Nu has the initial smoker on Dec. 3, followed by Alpha Sigma Phi Dec. 4, Kappa Alpha Dec. 5, Pi Kappa Phi Dec. 8, Theta Chi Dec. 9, and Pi Kappa Alpha on Dec. 10.

This year marks the beginning of a new system of rushing, and is the first time that rush week has been held during the first semester of the school year.

Eligibility for pledging depends upon having a grade standing of at least 10 quality points at mid-semester. A list of those eligible to pledge was released this week by the college administration, and includes some 115.

Under this year's system each individual fraternity will be limited to ten per cent of the male enrollment of the college. A provision of the IFC Constitution states, however, that if a fraternity's enrollment already exceeds that number then they will be able to pledge 12, regardless of what their actual enrollment already is. This provision affects two fraternities, Kappa Alpha and Pi Kapapa Alpha.

Blue Sock Presses Stop Rolling Today

The Blue Stocking presses stop rolling today for the annual Thanksgiving vacation. The next issue will be published Friday, December 6.

According to the publications organization, the Blue Stocking is published weekly during the school year except immediately before and after holidays and final examinations.

The entire Blue Stocking staff joins in wishing for the administration, staff, faculty, and student body a very pleasant Thanksgiving holiday.

Robed Choir Opens Season With Two Concerts Sunday

The Presbyterian College Robed Choir, widely acclaimed student group, will present its cnocert of music and wosrhip at the Indiantown Presbyterian Church of Hemingway this Sunday morning (Nov. 23).

The 32-voice choir, conducted by Dr. Edouard Patte, has developed its program around the theme, "The Aposties' Creed." All articles of the creed are explained by passages of scripture and interpreted by the rendering of choral pieces taken from the great sections of the Christian Church.

It's a choral program that goes from the stern simplicity of ancient music to the exuberant emotion of the Negro spirituals and Russian chants. Of particular interest among the 14 anthems are the "Battle Song of the Huguenots" by Goudinod, two motets by Palestina, the only chorale ever written by J. S. Bach. Bach with a "Kyrie," the dramatic spiritual "Were You There?" and the gay "Great Getting Up Morning."

The choir also has in its reportoire for this season the soul-stirring "Nicene Creed" by Grechaninoff, in which a solo voice chants the articles of the Christian Creed against a background of humming voices in the authentic Russian tradition.

This season, with 28 concerts scheduled, marks the 12th year that Dr. Patte has conducted the Presbyterian College Choir. Trained in the music centers of Europe, he also is an ordained Presbyterian minister and professor of sociology at PC. He will approach his 500th concert here this season in leading his choir before church congregations of South Carolina, Georgia, North Carolina, and Florida.

Soloists are tenors Harold Gallimore of Tryon, N. C., and Lonnie Love of McColl. Readers include Roger Godwin of College Park, Ga., Dick Carter of Florence, Tom Wise of Thomasville, Ga., and Paul White of Raeford, N. C. Although the choir sings unaccompanied, Harvey Wittschen of Charleston, assures continuity at the organ and plays prelude, offertory and postlude.

Tony Torre Will Play For PC Christmas Dance

Tony Torre and his orchestra will play at the Christmas Dance slated on December thirteenth. According to Bruce Prince, President of the Inter-Fraternity Council, the dance will be held at the Clinton Armory from nine until one.

Assessment for each fraternity will be $3.50.

Best Squad Award Goes to 'A' Company

"A" Company placed first in squad drill competition held Thursday morning. The judging was based on precision movement. S. M. Faress was squad leader of the winning squad.

"D" Company, with E. W. Mayfield as squad leader, was second, with "B," Headquarters, and "C" Companies following respectively. Other members of the first ranked squad were James Eason, Carl Adams, Bobby Daniel, Herman Davis, Larry Edge, William Horne and James Lee.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

"We'll Go Along With That"

Thanksgiving 1958 is next week, and it seems appropriate for The Blue Stocking, as the student voice of a Christian Institution, to carry some comment on the significance of this holiday in a world of guided missiles, and misguided ideals.

We struggle for something original to say, but try as we may no profound or original phrases come to mind. We think only of what has been said so often before:

That Thanksgiving is a time to remember the Pilgrims and how they celebrated the establishing of a new life from the wilderness by thanking God for his goodness to them.

We'll go along with that.

That Thanksgiving is a time when all the family gets together at home for fellowship, family fun, and the traditional turkey dinner with all the trimmings.

We'll go along with that.

That Thanksgiving is a time to go to church and thank God for all the blessings we take for granted the rest of the year.

We'll go along with that.

That the true siginificance of Thanksgiving come only to those who observe it in a spirit of true thankfulness, and let it be a day to remember how fortunate we are to be living in America, "land of the free and home of the brave."

We'll go along with that.

Situation Comes to Light . . .

Voices were raised among certain student groups on campus this week in regard to the procedure used by the Inter-Fraternity Council in selecting an Orchestra for the Christmas Dance.

It is the contention of Kappa Alpha Fraternity that the selection and arrangements for the orchestra were made before approval of the fraternities had been given, and that no official meeting had been held for action on the matter. They further dispute the price of the assessment, contending that it is too much for one night.

The Blue Stocking does not take sides with Kappa Alpha, nor with the Inter-Fraternity Council in the matter. It is simply our intention to bring the situation to light, and to ask whether or not the accusations are true.

We would be very happy to have response from all persons and groups concerned in the matter, and will print the same in the next issue of the Blue Stocking, so that the student body may know the true facts of the situation.

World Favorites in Hi-Fi

By PAUL WILLIAMS

For most jazz collectors and listeners, Benny Goodman is now and will always be the King of Swing.

B. G. recently went to the World's Fair at Brussells, Belgium, where he thrilled countless thousands of persons from all over Europe. In fact, he was a smash hit on arriving.

The first LP to arrive on the market from the fair is B. G.'s own, Benny Goodman Plays World Favorites in Hi-Fi (Westinghouse Label). A good portion of this LP is from the old Goodman book, but a few modern, big-band sets have been added. The best cut of these new numbers is a pleasant, inspiring tune titled Balkan.

Benny himself shows flashes of the old B. G., but more often he falls into meaningless phrases during solos. The band has a generally good sound, but it can be distinguished from the old band which did such a great job on the originals.

The Sing, Sing, Sing, track is terrific. One O'clock Jump seems to almost have an excitement built in it that moves the audience. The quality in these is good, but not brilliant.

This LP is considerably better than the one released from this year's Newport Jazz festival. It will probably outsell it more than two to one. For all who are collectors of the swing era, this would be a good addition.

Pop Album of the Week—Harry Belafonte has come across with an honest and compelling set of blues vocals in Belafonte Sings the Blues (RCA-LOP-1006).

Belafonte still has much of the folk singer in his presentations, but this is overshadowed by a rawness and fervor that really comes to life in Fare Thee Well. I do believe that whoever did the "a&r" work on this set "goofed," because One For My Baby (Meet McGraw's song) seems completely out of place. On top of that, and even more important Belafonte is backed by various unidentified small groups that sometimes become too heavy. It would probably be profitable for Harry, if he has decided to go into this field exclusively, to begin working with a working blues group.

Star-Studded Line-Up

Gleesters Prep for Tough Season

By GRAHAM and JACK EDMUNDS

5:02 P. M.—NEVILLE MEMORIAL STADIUM.

"Good evening sports fans. This is your old sports announcer, 'Dizzy' Blue, bringing you a practice session of the Presbyterian College Blue Throats, last year's mythical champions of the Treble Clef.

Last year's Throats were victorious in 29 of 30 starts; their only loss being at the hands of Walhalla.

The 35-voice squad is practicing tonight in game uniform, preparing for the opening of their tough '58 season.

Leaving Saturday morning, they will appear in a two-game slate on Sunday. Though, this early in the season, it is considered a physical strain on these valiant 'Knights of the Notes,' the rugged training and conditioning they have undergone these past two months should make the tour a breather.

In the press box with us this evening is the coach of the great squad, the man voted 'coach of the year' in '57 by the United Press Musicians Guild, Ed Patte. Let's see if Coach Patte has a few words for you team supporters.

"At theese time I cannot see why my boys did not make All-American."

"Thank you, Coach Patte."

As he descends to the playing field let's go over the star-studded line-up.

Bulwark of the line for his fourth straight season is 'Rugged' Rutledge Durant, from Gable. Weighing in at 175, Durant was bass of the year last year in South Carolina.

The double quartet ten-second backfield (they can run the scale in ten seconds) includes several freshmen nemises this year. However, the starters, the 'Four Hoarsemen,' are all veterans.

The team is greatly handicapped this year since last year's All-American first tenor, Blair (the horse) Baldwin, has gone into military service. On the injury list is Frank (Foghorn) Sells, who is plagued with a terrible case of bungling foot.

Back in top shape after a severe voice strain is that will-of-the-wisp, pile-driving fullback, Jo John Childers, who was a star in the 'Blue Th post season victory last year in the 'Ludens Bow Tonsils, North Dakota.

Also up in the press box this season is a pro ster scout from the Fred Waring Organization. Pennsylvanian is expected to have his eye on swivel-hipped speed merchant from Birming Ala., Sonny Embry.

This year a new reader, Paul White, has added to give depth to that position. Not yet out o field is 'Dynamite' Dick Carter, versatile quarter who is now calling signals and marking down the sentees.

I see now that Coach Patte has sent Lumpy to his corner, and he is busily chanting someth Russian.

The managers are about packed for the trip have black game uniforms and red stoles for e one. They also have an ample supply of lemon halftime energy, and medicated throat discs fo relief of pre-game tension. The medicine kit is f with ammonia capsules for victims of the strain throat sprayers for those brave few who give the in fortissimo play.

Neville Memorial Stadium is well lighted wi 120 GE 60-watt bulbs. In the corner, gathered ar the Steinway tackling dummy, is the second t section, getting a last minute briefing on "running melody." The rest of the players are gathered ar Coach Patte, who is giving them a last minute talk. He is very fired up because a first string has cut practice to go to a hospital in Charlot

The squad is keyed to a high "C" and is re to hit their Presbyterian foes this season.

The prospect is for an undefeated season for t mighty 'Blue Throats.'

So long now. Think I'll jog down to the Blue concession stand for a cup of hot lemonade

PC Alumnus Lauds Blue Hose Gridmen

Sunday, Nov. 16

Editor
The Blue Stocking
Presbyterian Colllege
Clinton, S. C.
Dear Sir:

I have been intending to write for some time and congratulate the Blue Hose and their coaches for the fine season this year. This expression comes from the Aiken-Augusta PC Alumni club as well as myself.

The record of the team is most worthy of praise, but of even greater importance is the resurging college spirit that seems to motivate the players and the students.

I feel sure that all PC alumni share the thought with me that more team support and better attendance at the home games is of great importance. PC has given us something to be proud of and I trust that next year the aumni will increase their support with bigger contributions and better attendance.

All of us try to make the games, tune in by radio or rush to the news stands for results of the contests. The efforts of everyone at PC has made this pastime most enjoyable for 1958.

Wishing all even more success in 1959, always remembering Walter Johnson and his love for that "PC Spirit," and fondly hoping for pleasant results on Thanksgiving Day, I am

Sincerely,
ED KENNY,

Blue Socks Crush Appalachian

Fired-Up Gridmen Unleash Offense; Score 42 Points in Parents Day Tilt

By MARTIN CHITTY

A smashing PC offense and a hard-hitting line led the way for an overwhelming 42-0 Parents Day victory over Appalachian.

The Mountaineers were never in the game as their deepest penetration was to the Presbyterian 32-yard line.

After a scoreless first half and with 4:05 left in the half Tony Benson started the fireworks by going over from the one. His ten-yard run was the longest in a drive that carried 62 yards. Benson ran the extra point.

Shortly thereafter end Paul Chastain recovered a Mountaineer fumble. On the first play Bob Waters faded back to pass and threw a 41-yard strike to Dave Morgan who made a beautiful catch and stepped into the end zone. Guard Bill Sease booted the extra point.

Captain Richard Shrigley kicked off to start the second half, but Appalachian couldn't move and punted to the Hose 38. Fullback Bill Hill started up the middle and then cut to his right and streaked 52 yards before being pulled down on the five. John Lucas hit for three and Hill smashed over from the two. Shrigley's try for the point split the uprights, and it was 22-0.

The North Carolinians held the ball only three plays and kicked again with Morgan returning 13 yards to the 33. From there the Blue Hose went on to score with Lucas going over from the three. His 30-yard run was the highlight of the drive.

Unable to go anywhere after the kickoff, Appalachian kicked, and Freshman Fullback Jerry Lucas returned 18 yards to the Mountaineer 40. Billy Benton had runs of nine and twelve yards. Fullback Bob Mathews drove for the score from the two. Sease kicked wide. The score stood, PC 34-Appalachian 0.

The final Hose drive featured passes by Quarterbacks Joe Nixon and Pat Malone. The score came on a ten-yard pass from Malone to Bob Sherrill. The same combination accounted for two extra points. This ended all scoring and left the tally 42-0.

Th entire Blue Hose line played magnificently and no individual star could be singled out.

That's No Fluke

Presbyterian warmed up for its big one next Thursday with Newberry by simply stomping an out-gunned Appalachian in what proved to be quite an unexpectedly lopsided margin to some folks. Maybe all doubt, and I refer mainly to the previous week's loss at the hands of The Citadel, will now apparently be wiped away and labeled a fluke.

It was the biggest margin of victory in the new 'Jones era of football' here at Hoseland. The triumph pushed PC way over the .500 mark to a very respectable 5-3-1 mark on the season and coupled with Newberry's win over Wofford, it sets the stage for the all-important Turkey Day clash between the two schools.

It was no great surprise. Most everyone felt it was just about time for the Blue Hose to snap out of that plaguing slump which had been around ever since the Tampa game.

Consequently, the offensive show that we remember seeing in the Lenoir-Rhyne, Elon, and Wofford games by the Hose seemed almost history never to be seen again this year, but the home charges made a dazzling array of football come to life again. It was certainly a pleasant sight to all of us . . . possibly more so to one Coach Jones.

ALL-CONFERENCE TEAM

In the last edition to come out before the conclusion of Little Three Conference competition in South Carolina football circles, The Blue Stocking sports staff ventures to step out and pick a mythical all-conference squad.

1958 ALL-CONFERENCE SELECTIONS
(Selected by The Blue Stocking Staff)

Ends—J. Richardson, Wofford, Senior; T. Leahy, PC., Senior.
Tackles—R. Shrigley, PC, Senior; B. Schofill, PC, Junior.
Guards—M. Copeland, PC, Junior; R. DiBuono, Wofford, Junior.
Center—C. Jumper, Newberry, Senior.
Backs—C. Bradshaw, Wofford, Senior; G. Whitlock, Wofford, Freshman; J. Coviello, Newberry, Senior; B. Pate, PC, Junior.

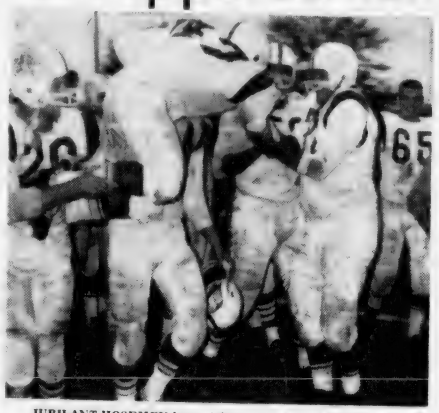
NEXT WEEK'S GAME

Despite the outcome of the Appalachian game whatever it may have been, it was obvious—on the playing field, in the stands and in the press box that the thoughts of many were attentioned on next week's PC-Newberry game.

The annual game between these two schools always falls right into the tradition of being played on Thanksgiving Day, a time when a great many students are way and far between their educational habitat.

The contest is gathering added color every day now and should present to be quite a game before determining a Little Three Conference champion. Such an honor hasn't fallen upon Presbyterian in eleven years now, not since Lonnie McMillan coached the '46 Blue Hose to the conference title.

PREDICTION:



Newberry hasn't shown quite as well as PC when comparing mutual opponents. The strength of a win over The Citadel is the offsetting factor. Coach Kirkland deserves credit on the results he has gotten this year with the large amount of injuries and shallow depth on the squad. They have fast backs who can break away at any given time but it is our belief that the Indians have not once this year felt a forward wall PC possesses.

The lot of injuries appear to be mended in the Hose camp, and all the horses in the backfield are ready. There's a feeling that a little bit of last Saturday's onslaught has rubbed of on this year's Turkey Day battle.

Not once this year has this column gone against the Hose, though we felt at times the odds were a little to much. We don't expect to end the good year on a sour note. PRESBYTREIAN, winning the L-T crown in a runaway, 20-0.

Thursday is Last Game For 16 Senior Lettermen

• Outstanding Players Will Be Missed

By JIM ELLER

When the Blue Hose meet Newberry on Thanksgiving, some 16 seniors will see action for the last time in a Blue Hose football uniform. They will help close out the most successful season PC has enjoyed since these men enrolled at PC.

Playing their last game will be Paul Chastain, Ken Gardner, Bob Biggerstaff, Richard Shrigley, John Lucas, Jim Walker, Bob Mathews, Fred Stanley, J. W. Drew, and Ron Barnette.

Paul Chastain, Ken Garner, and Ted Leahy will be sorely missed at the end positions next fall. Paul Chastain from Central, is in his third year as a letterman. His fine pass snagging and sharp defensive work have been an important part of the Hose attack this year.

Ken Gardner will be looking for a coaching career after graduation. His fine punting and defensive work have highlighted the Hose attack for the last three years. Big Ted Leahy has had the all-round ability to star for the Hose, and his shoes will be difficult to fill.

Bob Biggerstaff, Richard Shrigley, John Firby, "Bull" Parrish, Jim Walker, and Ron Barnette will also be ending their careers in the tough PC forward wall. Bob Biggerstaff, a senior from Charleston Heights, started at center with the Hosemen, but has since moved to the tackle position.

Richard Shrigley started at PC as a guard, but now fills the tackle slot. His play has been nothing short of spectacular this season. Jim Walker hopes to go into business, and if prowess in the tackle slot is any indication, he should be successful. His play has been vital to the Presbyterian defense as well as his being an important blocker in the Hose defense. All these men have contributed to making the Hose tackle position a blight to opposing backs.

"Bull" Parrish has alternated at tackle and center, but there has been no alternation in his rock-like defensive play. John Firby is the only guard PC will lose this year, with his younger understudies will have to work to match John's fine blocking and defensive work.

Ron Isger is the only PC quarterback graduate this year. Ron has been a fine leader as well as a good passer. Ron has proven himself as a valuable reserve this fall.

Tony Benson, John Lucas, Ed Messer, and Fred Stanley have all proved to be capable halfbacks in leading the Hose to a highly successful season. Tony Benson performs also on the diamond with the Blue Hose and should make a good pro baseball player. John Lucas from Donora, Pa., has been a good ball carrier and his skill proved disastrous to Wofford this year, while Ed Messer and Fred Stanley have been valuable in adding depth to the halfback position.

Bob Mathews has been vital to the Hosemen this year because of his speed and consistent defensive ability. Bob plans a career as a dentist.

All of these seniors have demonstrated the ability and sportsman ship for which Presbyterian College teams are noted. We salute all the seniors and commend them on their outstanding work as they wore the Blue Stocking uniform. We wish them abundant success in all their future endeavors.

Furman is Opener

Pre-Season Hose Victories Point to Top Basket Season

By DON HYDE

When the Presbyterian College Basketball team plays Earl Wooten's Piedmont Rangers tomorrow night, it will be another big step in preparing for the season's opener with Furman University.

The Rangers, who won the Southern Textile Championship last year, will field a much stronger team this year as they have added a good back court man from Kentucky, and Vince Yokel of Clemson, a member of the Atlantic Coast Conference all-star team. Other members of the team are Ernie Chambers of Furman, Fred Isner of West Virginia, Jim Slaughter of USC, and Paul Nye, formerly of PC. The fifth member of the team is Earl Wooten, who averaged over 25 points a game last year and definitely represents the key to the Rangers' success this year.

PC will be starting its second year under Coach Courts Redford, who last year won 16 ball games while losing only 8. This year the Hose will definitely rely on the fast break and the fine outside shooting of Chambers, Stratton, and Sullivan.

Last Wednesday night the PC five defeated Spartanburg Junior College 92 to 62 as Coach Redford played his reserves mostly in the second half. Guard Ken Caswell opened the PC scoring on a fast break withe a driving lay-up and the home boys never lost the lead. It was Bill Sullivan and Ralph Chambers who consistently set up baskets for the Blue Hose with Bob Stratton and Mickey Long whipping in 16 points each.

Sonny Wells did a fine job at center while he scored 11 points. Sophomore Paul Ard scored only three points but was probably one of the outstanding defensive players for PC. Mickey Flynn, a transfer from North Greenville Junior College, showed he would be of real value to the team this year with six points and 10 rebounds. Rounding out the scoring was Jimmy Rakestraw, who made his first basket for PC with a driving lay-up in the last few seconds of the game. Ladd, Spivey, and Redd failed to score but each one contributed to the Presbyterian victory.

PC only lost but two men from last year's squad, but these two grabbed 299 rebounds off the backboards. Because of this Coach Redford and his assistant coach, Irvin Montgomery, feel that they will be extremely fortunate to win a third of their ball games this year. A combination of a much tougher schedule, lack of experience at the pivot position and lack of height could keep PC from matching last year's fine season.

The coaches are both hoping that some of the freshmen will adequately fill the gaps caused by graduation. Some of them should be ready by the middle of February giving the Hose a much better ball club by Tournament time than they will have at the first part of the season.

Hafner Makes Statement Explaining Military Dance

"What has happened to the big band?"

This is the question that has been asked all week long. It has been a long and involved problem, but I will try to explain what has happened in as few words and still hit the main points.

We the Scabbard and Blade and the Inter-Fraternity Council tried to work a "Package Deal" (working together) for the weekend where the school could have a big band one night and a "topflight" combo the next night. I thought we were on our way toward having it, because the IFC and Scabbard and Blade had approved it—had received the Contract, and was ready to fix a paying plan, when I was informed that a formal petition had been made by a group of non-military men, but who were in fraternities.

This petition, as I was told, was presented to Col. Thackston and was passed. It was enough to stop the "Package Deal" from going through. From my understanding of the situation, it seems that the argument was that they refused to pay eight dollars for something that they had no "say-so" about, such as, being formal Friday night, etc.

As it stands now, which should be final is—The Military Ball will be on Friday night, the sixth of March. The dance will be open to the non-military men, on the condition that they be in Tuxedos or Full Dress, and pay the same as the Cadets at the door, which will be four dollars.

This is information for Friday night. To my knowledge, the IFC hasn't decided on what they will do for Saturday night.

—BOB HAFNER,
Chairman of the Military Ball Committee

Hosemen Face

both Presbyterian and Newberry was far below their records as they now stand. They were chosen to dwell in the cellar of South Carolina football for this season. To everyone's surprise each team has risen from the depths to establish themselves as among the better teams in the state.

Whoever emerges the victor in this annual Thanksgiving tilt will terminate their season with six victories, which could capture the runner-up laurels record-wise in state competition. Without doubt, both Presbyterian and Newberry realize the importance of this contest as their entire seasonal prestige depends on its outcome. Thus, one can assuredly expect hard, rough football of the highest quality on Johnson Field November 27.

Christmas Party Cancelled by SCA

In two meetings held this week the SCA cabinet and the presidents of the social fraternities, discussion was held concerning the annual SCA Christmas party in which the fraternities present skits as the major part of the program.

Sonny Embry, president of the SCA, today issued the following statement: "After a considerable amount of discussion and weighing of facts, the SCA is having to cancel its plans for the annual Christmas party. It is with our utmost regret that this action is being taken; however, each of the fraternities on campus has notified the cabinet that with the tremendous amount of conflicts preceding the event, it would be impossible for them to present skits for the program.

"The cabinet has tried to find another date, but none is open that would eliminate these conflicts. It is our hope that a similar type program can be planned sometime in early February to replace this omission from our program. The Christmas banquet will still be held in the dining hall, and the student directories published by the SCA will be given out at that time.

The Blue Stocking is exceeded in circulation by only ten million other newspapers.

Newberry Blue Key Entertains in Chapel

Newberry Blue Key men were on campus Wednesday and presented a program of entertainment for the PC student body in chapel. After introduction of their Blue Key men, a program of music was presented by members of the College "N" Orchestra.

Following the program, the members of the visiting group were given a short tour of the campus and ate dinner in Judd Dining Hall.

PC's Blue Key chapter returned the visit this morning to Newberry at which time they presented a program of entertainment for the Newberry student body. Several musical renditions were presented by the Silhouettes, along with Hexie and Harry McDonald, and several others.

Rush Activities Highlighted As Fraternities Vie for Pledges

Quiet Period Begins Wednesday; 103 Men Have Grades to Pledge

Sigma Nu Fraternity kicked off this year's Rush Week Wednesday night as they held the first of six smokers that are the highlight of rush activities on the campus. Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity followed last night as they entertained rushees in their suite.

Kappa Alpha Fraternity has the third smoker tonight as they vie for pledges. Pi Kappa Phi is slated for Monday night, and will be followed on Tuesday night by Theta Chi, and Pi Kappa Alpha on Wednesday to wind up the week's affairs.

Quiet period begins at midnight, Wednesday, December 10, and will continue until Friday afternoon, December 12, at 4:00 a. m. when pledgingg ends.

Pledging will take place from 2:00 to 4:00 p. m. in the classroom of Kenneth Baker, chairman of the faculty committee on fraternities. Men who have received bids will go to Baker's office and write on the form provided the name of the fraternity of their choice. They can then go to the suite of that fraternity to be welcomed by the waiting members.

This year marks the beginning of a new system of rushing, and is the first time that rush week has been held during the first esmester of the school year.

Eligibility for pledging depends upon having a grade standing of at least 10 quality points at mid-semester. A list of those eligible to pledge has been released by the college administration, and includes some 103.

Under this year s system each individual fraternity will be limited to ten per cent of the male enrollment of the college. A provision of the IFC Constitution porvides, however, that if the enrollment of a fraternity already exceeds this number, then they will be allowed to pledge 12, regardless of the present size of their organization.

This rule means that the six fraternities will be able to pledge as follows: Alpha Sigma Phi—23; Kappa Alpha—12; Pi Kappa Alpha—12; Pi Kappa Phi—28; Sigma Nu—28; and Theta Chi—39.

A system of strict rules governing rush week activities is provided for under the Constitution of the Inter-Fraternity Council. These rules are outlined in a separate article on page four of this paper. Bruce Prince, IFC president, indicated that these rules are very important, and that every attempt would be made by the IFC to see that they are strictly enforced.

Tony Torre Booked For Next Weekend

Tony Torre's Orchestra has been secured to play at PC's Christmas Dance on Dec. 13, according to announcement by IFC President Bruce Prince.

The popular Torre Orchestra is well known among students throughout the state, having played for numerous college events, including several previous dance weekends at Presbyterian.

This year's dance, which is a one-night affair, is slated to last from 8:00-12:00 p. m. in the Clinton Armory.

Dress for the dance is to be of an informal nature with appropriate attire being suits for men, and street length or cocktail dresses for the young ladies.

Top Quartet Sings Here In First Concert of Series

• Performance is at Thornwell

The first program in Clinton's Community Concert Series will take place tonight in the Thornwell auditorium on Calhoun street.

Chosen to launch the series is "The Revelers," male quartet.

A typically American institution, the male quartet has enjoyed a rare popularity in this country since the days when handle bar moustaches were the vogue and such tunes as Bicycle Built For Two," "Daisy," and "Down By the Old Mill Stream" were hummed and whistled by almost everyone.

Some forty years ago, the Revelers Quartet was formed and became in time one of the most in demand and distinguished groups of its kind.

The quartet has gained its enviable reputation for fine music making and clever arrangements of the standard concert repertoire,' with a fair sprinkling of both folk songs and those in the popular vein.

The quartet has also been the proving ground for many young musical aspirants, including such luminaries as James Melton, Frank Parker, and Frank Black, who was the director - pianist twenty-five years ago.

Last season, after an absence of several years, the new Revelers Male Quartet was heard in key cities throughout the country with outstanding success.

A highlight engagement and great honor was accorded the group when they performed for President Eisenhower at the White House.

The concert will begin at 8:30 sharp and everyone is requested to be seated by 8:15.

Hose Lose Opener To Strong Paladins

The Furman University Purple Paladins won their first game of the young season over the Blue Hose Thursday night in Greenville's new Memorial Auditorium. The final score was 82 68. The Hose led by Bill Points at half-time, but the Hurricane came back in the second half and outshot the Hose to cop the win. The Furman advantage in the second half was supplied by the lanky 6-9 center, Steve Ross. He connected for 15 points in the second half with 4 fouls on him going into the half. He also was the game's leading rebounder with a total of Presbyterian was led by captain Ralph Chambers who connected for 14 points. Bill Sullivan was high scorer for the losers with 16. Mickey Long added 10, Starton 12, Caswell Blanchard 5, and Wells 2 to round out the Hose scoring attack. Sonny Wells was the leading rebounder for the Hosemen with 12 grabs.

The loss can be attirbuted to the over-all poor shooting percentage with the Blue Hose connecting on only 29 per cent of their attempts from the floor. PC was unable to keep up the pace in the second half with opening game mistakes and a few close calls favoring the Paladins.

PaC-SaC Class Section Goes to Press Dec. 15

The Class section, the first of six sections of the 1959 PaC-SaC, will be sent to the engravers the 15th of this month. The section, which also includes the Faculty and Administration, the dedication and the campus secenes, is being presented to the engraver approximately six weeks ahead of schedule.

Choir Departs Saturday For Georgia Concerts

The Presbyterian College Choir departs from the campus tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock enroute to College Park, Ga. Two concerts are scheduled for Sunday. The Robed Choir, under the direction of Dr. Edouard Patte, will first sing at College Park on Sunday morning and in Marietta Sunday evening. They will reutrn to PC Monday afternoon.

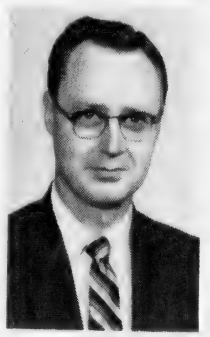
Powell Selected to Direct Local March of Dimes Drive



Vernon Powell, Presbyterian College's Director of Food Service, has been appointed Clinton area director for the 1959 March of Dimes, it was announced today. The drive will be held in January.

The polio-fighting organization is expanding into a broad new force that will tackle health problems on a wider front and no longer will confine its activities to a single disease. Initial new goals include arthritis and birth defects (congenital malformations.

"I am confident that the people of the Clinton area, who helped make possible victory over polio through their contributions to the March of Dimes over the past 20 years, will give even greater support to the National Foundation's expanded program in the future," Mr. Powell said.

"We would like to make it clear, as we begin preparations for the 1959 March of Dimes, that the National Foundation will not abandon polio patients," the director declared. "We have a moral obligation to the patients of this county to continue to provid neeeded care and rehabilitation, and we will fulfill this obligation."

The director stressed that while solution of the problems of arthritis and birth defects are the immediate new goals of the March of Dimes, the organization also will follow leads as they develop in the fields of virus research and studies of the central nervous system.

Blue Stocking Polls the Campus

West Should Stay Put in Berlin, PC Students Say

"Stay put in Berlin" was the sentiment expressed by a majority of PC students in a poll conducted this week by the Blue Stocking.

Of several dozen students interviewed on this critical question, only two expressed the opinion that the Western Nations should at this time relinquish their position in Berlin. All others felt that the United States and her Allies should stand firm, even to the risk of war.

The question as asked was this: "Should the Western Powers Stay in Berlin, Even at the Risk of War?"

A number of student replies are printed below:

Ebby Mayfield: "The U. S. has been in the background too long. Our authority should definitely be voiced. An inch given to the U. S. S. R. would certainly end with a mile being taken—a long mile, at that. I agree with my distinguished state senator, Olin P. Johnston, in his view that we should protect our interests in this most critical situation."

Ben Smith: "Yes, we should stay in Berlin. Our intervention in Lebanon did not result in a disaster, so why should we relinquish our sector of Berlin simply because of exaggerated Russian threats."

John Childers: "By staying in Berlin, I believe there would be little chance of war. The U. S., in another important area of the world, Formosa, has made the Communists back down and I believe if we hold firm here, Russia will back down again. This trying to unite Berlin is merely a farce; gain, rather than unity for the German people.

Jim Eller: "Yes, because we can't give in to the Russians—If Russia is only after their own we give in on Berlin, we'll have to give in somewhere else. We have to make the Russians stand up to our terms."

Bob Bean: "I definitely think the Western powers should stay in Berlin. Heretofore the Kremlin has threatened the West even so far as to the blockade of the supply route to Berlin. Now the Kermlin has told the free world to get out. By leaving, the West would again be giving in to the unreasonable terms of the Reds. Not only would we lose two million free Berliners, but would again lose face and a key position to the advancing Red horde."

Ben Donaldson: "I think the Russians have pushed us far enough. I think we should take a stand."

Dick Carter: "In regarding the Berlin situation, I think Russia has extended an iron fist in a velvet glove. We should hold what we have and let Russia do the backing out."

Roger Sumner: "I'm fundamentally opposed to war, especially since the draft board is on my neck."

Evin Varner: "Berlin is a symbol to the conquered peoples of the world. The WP's should not withdraw no matter what the cost. This is an area not for compromise, but diplomacy and a firm backing of our beliefs."

Scott Reed: "I don't think we should stay in Berlin, but I don't feel that we should give in to Russia. I feel that Berlin has come out of the war in good shape, and by now she should be able to govern herself effectively. I feel that West Berlin certainly knows how to set up its own government. In case Russia should try to infiltrate the government, then we should aid West Berlin."

The Blue Sock Salutes . . .

A Winning Gridiron Team

When the final whistle sounded in the PC-Newberry game on Thanksgiving Day, it marked the completion of one of the most successful seasons in many years for a Blue Hose squad.

Not only did the victory return the Bronze Derby to Presbyterian, but it also clinched the Little Three Championship for the Hosemen.

For an unwavering will to fight, for sportsmanship at its best, for teamwork and team spirit, for hours of unceasing practice, for putting all into a game for the school they represent, the Blue Stocking salutes the gridmen of '58.

The sixteen senior players who ended their football careers last Thursday deserve a great deal of credit for their continued effort in putting the Blue Hose on top. Every year valuable senior players leave hard-to-fill gaps in the squad and these 1958 seniors are no exception to this fact.

Freshmen this year have shown the willingness to practice and play their best when called upon. For a great many, the first year is primarily a training period for greater varsity achievements. The freshmen on this year's team have proved to be a mighty important part of the squad by their efforts and its results.

A group which is integral to a football team—a group which is often forgotten, however—is the little squad of managers, trainers, and equipment men. These men put in hours every day of the week in various jobs, all of which count in the final result of the team as a whole.

These men deserve recognition for the giving of their time and work in a task which, though very important, is often thankless.

The coaching staff certainly merits a genuine expression of praise for its leadership in the outstanding record of this year. These men had a hard task before them in shaping the team into an effective working machine. In short time the concentrated effort of these three men—Jones, Ehrhardt, and Redford—prepared the grid team, along with the aid of assistants Bowman and Mavromat.

All of these men—players, coaches, trainers, managers, and equipment men—make up the football picture. The Blue Stocking is proud to salute this entire team for giving Presbyterian College a football season of which it can be proud.

A Sly Screen Delight

By PAUL WILLIAMS

"She was the miller's beautiful wife—
Full of passion and lust for life . . .
He was the handsome scion of royalty,
Who tried to betray her wifely loyalty.
The miller is wondering what happened that night . . .
The answer is told in this sly screen delight."

Upon reading the above verse in a recent newspaer, I decided to see this delightfully sly comedy at my first chance. While reading further on I also discovered that the title of this epic was The Miller's Beautiful Wife, and it stars Sophia Loren and Vittorio De Sica.

The story, set in Naples during the spring of 1680, tells of a local governor (De Sica) who is ruthlessly extracting heavy taxes from the male population and other seducing favors from the ladies of the community. Miss Loren portrays a teasing, tempting wife of the local miller—the only man in town who pays no taxes.

As you watch the governor's fruitless attempts to court the miller's beautiful wife, you will undoubtedly notice the fine photography and color work. You will also notice how well Miss Loren is reproduced in cinemascope.

All in all, after getting used to the quick flashing of titles and the strange dialogue, you will certainly enjoy every minute of this fine art import.

"Jazz Jots"

By STUART WOOD

Boys, are you losing interest in girls? Do you wake up in the morning feeling lust—er, listless? Are you wasting your time with such useless frivolities as fraternity ping-pong, or even worse still, studying? If so, give a listen to Julie is Her Name, Volume 2 (Liberty LRP-3100), which is definitely designed to do things for your virility.

Twelve tracks are included, ranging from a sexy I Got Lost In His Arms to a wordless rendition of Hot Toddy. The top song of the whole album is Blue Moon.

There is only one fault with the album, and that is it was recorded with too much bass. This mild defect can be easily adjusted by a twist of the dial of the recording curve compnesation control of your three thousand dollar hi-fi stereo system.

Also, this sexy album, which comes fully equipped with a pin-up of Miss London, is available in Clinton at the record shop for only $3.69, instead of the usual $4.10. This is due to the fact that you are a PC'un

So . . .

Pop Album of the Week—Peggy Lee, the girl with the Fever beat, is terrific in her latest, Things Are Swingin' (Capitol 1049). In this very relaxed session, Miss Lee is backed by a large studio orchestra, rather than the small groups that she made her name with.

Prince Defends IFC In Dance Dispute

Dear Editor:

In reply to the charges made by the Kappa Alpha Order concerning the method of securing the band for the Christmas dance, my only answer is that the band was secured in the same was as those in the past. It was not the aim of the IFC to 'sneak' this band in for the Christmas dance.

However, since the last publication, the Prudential Committee of the Kappa Alpha Order met with the IFC and presented a number of suggestions concerning the activities of the IFC.

These were discussed with the committee but due to the holidays the IFC has not taken any action concerning these suggestions.

However, they will be acted upon at the weekly meeting and the results made known.

These suggestions were appreciated and all will be given consideration. The IFC welcomes suggestions from any of the fraternities as long as they are for the betterment of the IFC.

Bzzzzz!! Ouch!

Vegetarian Wasps in Chape

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

10:45 Monday. The bell rang. My associate in math class gave a couple of last yawns, opened his eyes, picked up his books, circled the problems for homework, got up, and headed for chapel and another thirty minutes sleep.

10:47. I headed for chapel. Stopping around the rotunda, I decided to socialize and talk over the latest "dirt."

10:48. Looking across the other side, I saw a small smoker going on among the last minute drag boys.

10:50. The last three bells rang—I adjourned to seat B-8.

The doxology was sung, the devotion read, and a hymn sung. Everyone took their seats and the speaker approached the rostrum All was quiet.

10:56. I looked up and saw him coming.

BZZZZZZ! OUCH! One of the swarm of worrysome wasps stung the student in A-7. He pushed the panic button, and was busily swatting the pest with a hymn book.

Maybe those who should, don't, but if they did, they would realize that there are some twelve months and some 105 more chapel programs before we move into the new auditorium. Since we have to hold chapel in the same place for at least another year, something should be done to make vegetarians out of those hungry wasps.

From Rags To Riches

Those of you who witnessed PC's 22-0 triumph over Newberry in their 43rd annual Thanksgiving Day classic last week can skip this review. For those fans who weren't among the 4,000 chilled onlookers, you missed possibly the best Blue Hose effort in the clinching of a coveted Little Three Conference championship—the first time in eleven years.

Presbyterian's wing-T finally meshed gears and looked sharper than it has all year with junior quarterbacks Nat Cole and Bob Waters guiding the show.

Turning from the potent offensive machine let's look at the obvious difference in the two teams, the Blue Hose brilliant defensive alignment. Richard Shrigley, Ted Leahy, John Firby, all playing in their last games, with Bill Schofill and Billy Ogden also turned in superb performance before the home crowd.

Schofill was never better. His block of a Newberry punt set up the second PC touchdown, from where freshman guard Ogden then pounced on the skin for the six points. His ferocious line play should stand most deservingly for post-season honors in the '58 campaign.

His counterpart on the other side of the tough PC forward wall, tackle Shrigley, turned in another one of his commendable games in the last college fotoball game of his career as a Hose, likely to claim honors for his fine season.

BOB, TONY NAMED

Coaches of the respective teams in the Little Four Conference participated in naming a mythical pre-season all-star ballot this week.

Named to the squad were Wofford forward Marshall Perkins, center Jerry Wolff, Erskine, forward Bob Stratton, PC, and guards Charlie Gallagher and Carl Short, both from Newberry.

Gene Alexander, who shifted from Erskine to Wofford this year, Red Myers, Erskine, Tom Quinn at Newberry, and Courts Redford, the only 1957 coach to return to the same school and again at PC, took a hand in the selections.

Another highlight of the week spotting Blue Hose gave senior Tony Benson a place of honorable mention on the 1958 AP Little All-American team. The speedster from Chester chalked up 450 yards rushing on 82 tries for a highly respectable 5.3 average on the season.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Lenoir-Rhyne under Stassavich finished another successful season with a 9-1 record. The only offsetting mar on the schedule being an 8-6 setback at the hands of the Blue Hose . . . Former PC great Ken Webb ran and blocked well and scored one of the Detroit Lions' touchdowns in their Thanksgiving Day victory over Green Bay, 17-10 . . . Wofford and Jerry Richardson moved from the 1957 third team Little All-American team up to a berth on the second unit . . . The Bronze Derby is back at Presbyterian College and Little Three Championship for the first time in eleven years . . . Newberry fullback Joe Coviello ran for enough yardage against PC to nip Wofford's rfeshman halfback Gary Whitlock in the rushing department. Coviello finished the year with 591 yards compared to Whitlock's 587 . . . PC junior halfback Bobby Pate stands in the No. 3 position with 520 yards on 99 carries for a 5.3 average .

Blue Socks Host Citadel Pups In Home Opener Saturday Night

PC Boosts Lineup of Returning Lettermen; Sloan's Five Present Formidable Attack

By JIM ELLER

The Presbyterian College freshmen basketball team, led by Ken Caswell, Bob Stratton, Bill Sullivan, and captain Ralph Chambers, dule here against the Citadel Saturday night. Both teams have the majority of last year's starters back for the 1958-1959 campaign. PC will be headed by returning starters fast break

All of PC's returning starters averaged in double figures last year. Ralph Chambers led the team with a 17-point average and was closely followed by Bob Stratton with a 16.5 mark.

The Bulldogs should present a formidable attack headed by Dick Wherry, the rangy center, Blackledge, and forward Art Musselman. Wherry was the big gun in the Citadel's opening win over an always tough Richmond when he collected 25 of the Bulldogs' 55 points.

The Phillips 66 oilers invaded the Cadets Wednesday night and pasted them in a 70 to 48 victory. Art Musselman led the attack this time in colecting 12 points for the losers. Blackledge is a tough rebounder, who is averaging almost 12 points for the first two games.

The Hosemen have no one to match the Bulldog height under the boards, but they will, as last year, make up for the concession with accurate shooting and aggressive defensive play. In the past Presbyterian ahs displayed a running club that frequently employs the Playing the home court should give the Hosemen an advantage in scoring, and the PC spirit should be vital in helping the Hose take the home opener.

Transfer Mickey Long will probably start at center, and Sonny Wells, Billy Ray Ladd, and Harvey Blanchard should see action to round out the Hose attack.

Hose Claim Victory In Thanksgiving Tilt

By MARTIN CHITTY

A hard-charging line which opened the way for a bevy of speedy backs led the way for a 22-0 victory over Newberry. With the victory came possession of the Bronze Derby and the Little Three Championship.

Offensive action was led by tackles Bill Schofield and Richard Shrigley, Center Mac Copeland, and End Ted Leahy, coupled with the running of backs Bobby Pate, who streaked for 86 yards in 7 carries, Tony Benson, Bill Hill, and Bob Waters. Quarterback Bob Waters effectively called plays throughout the game.

The Hose started things rolling in the second period when Hill smashed over from the one, climaxing an 80-yard drive. Shrigley kicked good for the extra point and 7-0 Presbyterian.

PC received to start the second half, but had to kick, and Hill's boot rolled dead on the Indian one-foot line. Newberry drove out to the 32, but couldn't move it any further. On fourth down Schofield broke through and blocked a punt which rolled back into the end zone and Billy Ogden recovered for the TD. Shrigley again added the extra point.

In the fourth, another drive carried to the three, and Bob Mathews drove over from there. The Blue Hose went back into a kick formation, but Waters took the ball, and flipped a pass to Tony Benson for two more points and a 22-0 final score.

Intramural Play Starts for Cagers

Intramural basketball took the spotlight this week on the Presbyterian College campus with play commencing Monday night.

Thirteen teams form possibly the best intramural hard court competition ever at PC. League Director Irvin Montgomery has put forth a tremendous effort since arriving on campus, acting for the best interest of the students and reviving a program which has appeared defunct for years.

SCA Athletic Chairman Larry Wood urges that all teams give ticipate fully to keep the league with full strength at all times.

Ferocious five, the Bandits, Rebels, Campus All-Stars, Confederates, Chinese Bandits, and All-Stars form the independent entries, with the six fraternities rounding out the thirteen-team league.

Against Monaghan

Frosh Cagers Claim Victory In Initial Game of Season

By DON HYDE

The Presbyterian College freshman football team led by the fine shooting of Billy Ray Ladd and Jimmy Rakestraw won their first game of the '58-'59 season by whipping Monaghan B team 72 to 59.

The baby Eagles led by the spectacular outside shooting of Jimmy Holden jumped off ot an 18 to 4 lead. It was at htis time that Coach Montgomery's forces began to click with their ofense. It was Billy Ray Ladd from Junction City, Ky., who started the fine comeback of the little Hose. Ladd scored sveeral baskets on driving lay-ups and was consistent with a short jumper for 21 points.

Jimmy Rakestraw, a small but fiery guard from Atlanta, kept the little blue in the game in the second half with 21 points. Rakestraw scored many times with a long jump shot from about 15 feet out.

The Monaghan team could manage only 59 points as the PC defensive game was real strong. Lauren Colins, a transfer from Wingate Junior College, was the man of the hour as he swept 23 rebounds off hte enemy backboards. Collins also chipped in with 11 oints.

Rebounding well also was Heyward Nettles, a former star of Clinton High School. Nettles has shown lately a great deal of improvement. He whipped in 12 points. Morgan Byars and Jack Williams played real well for the Hose on defense. "Big Jack" controlled the rebounds while he was in the game.

Coach Irvin Montgomery has done a fine job in moulding together a unit which provide it could play defense and more important a unit which fought back when defeat seemed so near.

From Constitution

Extensive Rules Listed Covering Rush Activites

An extensive system of rules is provided for in the Constitution of the Inter-Fraternity Council to cover Rush Week activities.

Those portions of the Constitution that pertain to rushing are printed below:

(2) Without the permission of the IFC, no other fraternity will be permitted to have any organized function during the time assigned to the fraternity giving an open social or smoker.

(3) The IFC shall set the dates and regulations for RUSH WEEK to be held in the second semester. At the beginning of the second semester each fraternity will be permitted one smoker at a date set by the council.

(4) Quiet period shall begin at the close of the last smoker and continue until six p. m. on the day set by the council as PLEDGE DAY.

(5) Pledges may go to the fraternity room of their choice after they have cast their pledge ballot, and after casting their ballot they will fall under the rules for quiet period established by the council.

(6) After any pledge has cast his pledge ballot for one fraternity and after the ballot has been counted by the Faculty Committee, he may not change his pledge without the written permission of the President of that fraternity to which he first gave his pledge.

(7) Before an old pledge or member of a fraternity can pledge another fraternity he must be released by the former fraternity as a past pledge or member in good standing and shall present the release in writing, signed by the president of the former fraternity, to the IFC.

(8) An undergraduate or transfer shall not be eligible for pledging until he has been a student at Presbyterian College for at least one semester.

(9) Any transfer student who has been pledged with a social fraternity at any other college may, if there is a chapter of that fraternity at Presbyterian College, become pledged with the local chapter immediately, if the fraternity so desires. (He comes under the rule of 8 quality points—see section 10 below.)

(10) A list of students prepared by the registrar of students eligible to be pledged will be furnished the Fraternities by the Faculty Committee on Fraternities.

(11) Any pledge who is a member of a fraternity as a pledge, who becomes inactive automatically drops his pledge and will not be allowed to attend functions or participate in intramural activities and his name will be dropped from the IFC roll.

(12) A pledge must be released after he has been pledged three semesters and when he is repledged he must be initiated immediately.

(14) No fraternity man is permitted to descourage any freshman from attending socials or smokers of other fraternities. He is not to carry him off or keep him, in any way, from another social or smoker.

(16) Only brothers and pledges of that fraternity, having the smoker shall be permitted at the smoker. Brothers and pledges of other chapters of same fraternity are permitted to attend.

(17) No freshman will be allowed in any fraternity room during quiet period. After he has cast his ballot to pledge he may go. (See section 5 above.)

(18) No fraternity man will be allowed in, on, or around the Science building, Spencer, Plaza, Douglas House, or Bailey between the hours of 2:00 to 5:00 o'clock on pledge day except those who have classes or live in the respective buildings. As soon as their classes are over, they must leave this area without talking to freshmen.

(19) No fraternity men will be permitted to have skits, stunts, or group singing, etc., outside of their fraternity room during quiet period.

(20) No pledges will be permitted to influence freshmen who have not signed up or cast their pledge to join a particular fraternity. The fraternity shall be held responsible for the action of its new pledges.

(21) During quiet period no fraternity man is permitted to:

a—Eat with freshmen anywhere, including dining hall.
b—Take a freshman to a show.
c—Take a freshman to Roddy's, Furr's, tec.
d—Offer rides to and from town, Laurens, Joanna, or anywhere else.
e—Fraternity men shall not accept rides from freshmen.
f—Fraternity men shall keep out of the freshman's room unless he lives there.
g—In other words—do not associate withe freshmen in any way.

Penalties: Maximum—Closed for 6 weeks and/or $50.00 fine.
Minimum—Closed for 1 week and/or $25.00 fine.

(22) Each fraternity shall have two representatives, preferably the president and the IFC representative, to assist the Faculty Committee on Fraternities after pledging.

COACH LONNIE S. McMILLIAN is shown here as he received a check from Hugh L. Eichelberger between halves of the PC-Newberry football game here last Thursday. The gift, from alumni of the college who played under McMillan, was in appreciation of his 35 years of service to the college in coaching practically every sport on the agenda. He was head fooiball coach for 13 years and head basketball coach for 19 year. He has continued to coach his Blue Hose trackmen throughout the entire 35 years—and is still going strong.—Photo by Dan Yarborough.

"Remember now, we want to see you up here Friday"

Familiar Words Heard During Rush

"Remember, now, that we want to see you up here Friday afternoon, and then Friday night after the pledge ceremony we'll go out and have a blast."

These words are familiar to all who participated in this week's feverish rush activities. These, or some similar to them, have been said and heard many times in smoke-filled fraternity rooms on various parts of the campus and in Clinton.

They symbolize the thought that is foremost in al most every PC student's mind during this annual week devoted to fraternity rushing.

It is an important week for the six national fraternities of the campus. For during this week the life blood of a fraternity is replenished. The continued well being of each fraternity depends upon getting pledges and maintaining its status.

This year's rush reason has operated under an entirely new system of rules. In addition to being the first time that Rush Week has been held during first semester a rule was placed in effect which limits each fraternity to ten per cent of the male enrollment of the college.

This rule has meant that two fraternities are able to pledge only twelve new men, and that the other fraternities can pledge only a limited number, with the highest possible number of pledges for any one fraternity being thirty-nine.

If every fraternity could pledge its maximum number, then a total of 142 new men could have been pledged. This was impossible, however, since only 103 men had the necessary grades.

Competition has, therefore, been extremely keen, and great emphasis has been placed by the fraternities on getting men to "commit themselves." Also, these limitations have meant that new men, more than ever before, have had to rush fraternities in order to be considered as prospective pledges.

Smoke has billowed thick in fraternity suites as pledge day and the end of rush week drew near. Thursday rushees breathed a sigh of relief as the pressure eased, and fraternity men sat back to await pledge day to see whether or not their efforts would yield favorable results.

Today freshmen made the journey across the plaza to Science 202, and cast their ballots—most in anticipation of now seeing college and fraternity life from the inside. But there were undoubtedly some who chose reluctantly, still feeling pangs of uncertainty.

For better or worse, Rush Week is over, and a new system has been tried. Whether or not it proves successful, only time will tell.

First Concert

Revelers Sing At Thornwell

Thornwell auditorium on Calhoun street was filled to capacity last Friday evening for the first program of the newly organized Clinton Community Concert Association. Members warmly received "The Revelers," male quartet, and had only favorable comments to make following the performance at 8:30 p. m.

The group sang arrangements of a variety of muscial numbers, including poems set to music from A. A. Milne's "When We Were Very Young." Two compositions which were particularly enjoyable, "Men of Harlech," and "Sea Chanteys," were arranged, respectively, by Thomas Edwards, tenor, and Laurence Bogue, baritone. Four of Schubert's compositions, two from the "Swan Song series, were quite impressive, and popular songs from Broadway musicals, as well as a group of "Revelers' Favorites," had appeal.

In addition to Mr. Edwards and Mr. Bogue, the volcalists were Feodoro Tedick, tenor, and Edward Ansara, bass. William Cerny, the accompanist, entertained at one point in the program with three Chopin compositions.

Students Are Notified Only When Overcut

"Students will be notified of class overcuts only," Miss Iona Blakely, absense secretary, reminded today.

She said that there would be no notice sent to those students taking their limit of cuts in a class. Absences may be checked at the information desk in the administration building from 1:45 to 5:00 every afternoon.

Christmas Dinner Set Monday Night

In celebration of the Christmas season, the dining hall will present the annual Christmas Banquet next Monday evening. At the same time, the SCA will distribute the Student Directories, one of the publications of that organization.

Featured on the menu will be tomato juice, roast turkey, nut stuffing, giblet gravy, green beans, sweet potato souffle, Christmas cranberry salad, hot rolls, iced tea and coffee. To round out the menu, mince meat pie and fruit cake will be served, and each student will get the usual stocking assortment of apples, oranges, nuts, mints, and candy.

Two Seniors Named DMS by Military Cadre

Two senior military cadets have been named Distinguished Military Students, announced Col. W. W. Barnett today. They are Cadet First Lieutenant John Childers, and Cadet First Lieutenant Roger Godwin.

The selections were made, according to Col. Barnett, on the basis of outstanding achievement as student leaders in the ROTC program.

These selections are in addition to the four other seniors that have already been designated Distinguished Military Students. These three are Cadet Major Bruce Prince, Battle Group Commander; Cadet First Lieutenant Fred Stanley, who commands A Company; Cadet Captain Herman Jackson, Battle Group Executive Officer, and Cadet Master Sergeant Ron Isger, who is First Sergeant of B Company.

Christmas Time

Torre Plays for IFC Dance At Armory Saturday Night

The IFC Christmas Dance gets underway Saturday night at 8:00 p. m. in the Clinton Armory with Tony Torre's Orchestra supplying the music.

The dance, which is to be a four-hour affair, will last until 12:00 midnight. An intermission is slated for 10:00 during which time fraternities will meet in their respective fraternity suites.

Torre's Orchestra, which has played on several previous occasions at Presbyterian is well known throughout the state, having played for similar affairs at other colleges.

Dress for this year's dance is to be of informal nature with appropriate attire being suits for men, and street length or cocktail dresses for the young ladies.

Fraternity assessments for the dance is to be $3.00 per member, according to IFC president Bruce Prnice. He said that this is a reduction from the previously announced amount of $3.50.

This affair marks the midway mark of the IFC social calendar here at PC. Homecoming was the first IFC dance of the year, and next on the list is the March 7th dance which is the day after the annual Military Ball.

Col. Thackston Hanged in Effigy In Protest of Proposed Curfew

Incident Climaxed by Explosion; Compromise Reached on Question

Dean of students A. J. Thackston was hanged in effigy Wednesday night by a crowd of college students in protest of a proposed curfew on fraternities.

A large crowd of students gathered on the college plaza at approximately 11:00 p. m. as demonstrators sent a dummy of Thackston up the flag pole. Attached to the paper-filled dummy was a flag reading "Pvt. Thackston, U. S. A., Once Honored, Now Scorned."

In addition to much shouting and milling about, the demonstration was climaxed by a loud explosion that shook windows two blocks away. It was reported to be a dynamite cap.

Members of the student council were finally successful in calming down the demonstrators, and dispelling the crowd.

The incident came as a result of student protest of a proposed administration ruling that dates would have to be out of fraternity rooms at 1:00 a m. on Friday night, and at 12:00 midnight on Saturday.

The proposed ruling was brought on, according to Col. Thackston, by protests from enraged families of Clinton. PC students on previous dance weekends had in several instances brought in their dates at hours that were considered objectionable to the hosts. He further stated that students had neglected to show proper courtesy to the hosts of their dates and in some instances did not even thank them for their hospitality.

Col. Thackston called a special meeting Thursday afternoon at 2:00 of presidents of the six fraternities. At the meeting, a compromise was reached concerning the proposed hours for ending fraternity parties.

Thackston placed the responsibility for control of fraternity parties in the hands of fraternity presidents. He made the recommendation that Friday night parties be ended by 3:00. a m , and Saturday night parties by 2:00 a. m., and asked for the fraternity presidents' cooperation in having their parties end at a reasonable hour.

Col. Thackston stated further in the meeting that he would be working toward better student-faculty relations through gatherings in Douglas House, and all other means possible.

He also pledged to check into student grievances in regard to the Administration, faculty, and dining hall, as well as a number of smaller complaints including the broken TV set in Bailey Hall. In concluding the meeting Col. Thackston asked for better student cooperation.

Student Body President Paul Arrington called a special meeting of the student body Thursday at 4:00 p. m. At the meeting he explained the results of the 2:00 p. m. meeting with Col. Thackston. Arrington emphasized at the meeting the need for better cooperation on the part of the student body. He also asked that fraternity men try to stop the excessive ill feeling that has built up between fraternities.

Cornwall is Prexy Of Johnson Club

J. J. "Peck" Conrwall, Clinton businessman, has been reelected president of the Walter Johnson Club, athletic organization of Presbyterian College alumni.

He has served in this capacity for the past two years, and was renamed for another one-year term by a recent vote of club members.

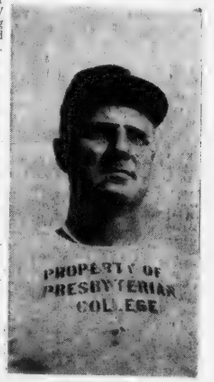
J. Edward Means, Jr., of Greenville, was chosen to serve as vice-president of the organization, which has as its objective the support and promotion of Presbyterian College's well-rounded sports program. Frank Jones, head football coach and newly appointed athletic director, will serve as secretary-treasurer.

The club is named for the late Walter A. Johnson, who served as athletic director of PC for 43 years until his death last July.

ROTC Undergoes Check By Command Inspector

An inspection team, headed by Lt. Col Callahan of Fort Jackson, was on hand this week for a Command Maintenance Inspection of the ROTC Detachment of Presbyterian College.

Although no official rating has been announced, Col. Callahan indicated that facilities were found to be Superior in all respects.



The inspection included a check of all signal, engineer, and ordnance equipment used by the PC Detachment.

Frank Jones Named Coach of the Year

Athletic Director and head football coach Frank Jones was named this week as "Coach of the Year" for district twenty-six, which includes the NAIA schools in the two Carolinas.

This honor was conferred upon him by small college gridiron coaches in this district. Coach Jones, in his second year as head coach, was instrumental in pulling Presbyterian College up from its pre-season rating at the bottom of South Carolina football.

Jones led his 1958 squad to an impressive record of six wins, three losses and a tie this year. The Blue Hose defeated East Carolina, Lenoir-Rhyne, Wofford, Elon, Appalachian, and Newberry. They lost to Davidson, Tampa and The Citadel and tied Catawba.

Also named by the poll were two Blue Hose players to the All-District team. These receiving this honor were Captain Richard Shrigley, outstanding lineman from Clinton, and Bobby Pate of Fitzgerald, Ga., who was the leading Blue Hose rusher and pass receiver.

Pate and Shrigley were two of the most outstanding players on this year's grid squad.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Haven't Gotten the Word?

Last semester there existed on campus an extreme problem in regard to the lack of parking facilities. It was relieved recently by the completion of two additional large parking areas—one at the rear of Spencer Dormitory, and the other betwen Bailey Dormitory and Douglas House.

These have been a tremendous help to students who operate autos on campus and were a welcome addition to the campus scene. For these the Blue Stocking says thanks to the administration.

In addition to paving the parking areas and building excellent curbs around them, two signs were erected on each parking lot. One is inscribed with the following word: "Exit," and the other clearly states "Entrance."

Fine. This seems to be clearly enough stated. But for you ten per cent who apparently haven't gotten the word, this means that you do not drive your car in the exit, nor do you drive your car out of the entrance.

Following this simple, clearly stated procedure would certainly facilitate the flow of traffic, and also provide more parking space, since all cars would then be parked at the same angle in the lots.

Snow and Christmas . . .

Snow blanketed the campus of Presbyterian College Thursday, and brought with it thoughts of the coming Yule season and all its festivities.

Traditionally snow is thought of in connection with Christmas. Why does this concept exist? It seems particularly strange here in the deep South where snow is infrequent, and a white Christmas a rarity indeed.

Here is one parallel that could be drawn. Snow, in all its brisk fluffy whiteness brings to mind thoughts of goodness and purity. It is hard to look at a brisk snow falling lightly on the trees, and conceive of all the evil that exists in the world.

Snow then quite naturally is a reminder of the one season of the year when men exhort one another with best wishes for a Merry Christmas, and Happy New Year. Christmas then is the time of year of purity—when we remember that Christ came, and angels sang "Glory to God in the highest, and on Earth peace, good will to men."

Christmas With Mathis

By PAUL WILLIAMS

For all you people who want to give a terrific, but inexpensive present this Christmas, the answer is simple. Its Merry Christmas with Johnny Mathis (CL-1185).

This LP is undoubtedly one of the finest of Christmas albums available this year. In fact, it has already reached the realm of the sacred "Top 25."

Johnny says on the album cover: "These are some of my favorite hymns, carols, and Christmas songs. A home should be full of joyous music during the Christmas season. Some of the most beautiful music I know is contained in these songs. They are wonderful expressions of the spirit of Christmas . . ."

These wonderful expressions are conveyed with much abundance in this album. The Christmas Song will probably become a standard as Nat Cole's did. Other good cuts include: What Child Is This? Silver Bells, I'll Be Home for Christmas, and White Christmas. The greatest rendition is his version of O Holy Night. This moving song really shows that he has come of age.

Whether you buy this fine LP for yourself or to give to someone, or even if you can't buy it for one reason or another, at least give it a listen-to. You won't regret it at all.

Christmas Album Pick Hits—This Christmas, right along with every other Christmas since 1948, the record buying market has been flooded with music that has a Christmas theme. There are many different types of Christmas music. There is the spoken word of the Christmas story, the chorales by beautiful instrumentals. In really its own special class are the albums by Perry Como (Sings Merry Christmas—LPM-1243), Bing Crosby (Merry Christmas — Decca 8182), and "Tennessee" Ernie Ford (The Star Carol—Cap. T-1071) The two best instrumental albums are by Percy Faith (Hallelujah!— CL-1187), and the 101 Strings (The Glory of Christmas — Somerset-P-7100). As far as the chorale type music goes, you can't find any better than The Robert Shaw Chorale and their rendition of Christmas Hymns and Carols (LM-2139).

No matter which you prefer, you will always be able to find some type of music that suits you at this time of year.

Quiet Period

Og Looks at Rush

Thursday, December 11, 1958—Quiet Period.

"Say, Melvin."

"Yeah, Willie."

"What do you think of Rush Week this year?"

"Well, Willie. I thought it was one h . . . of a week. On top of the smokers, I had four quizzes conveniently arranged to fall within the week, too. On my math I made a flying forty-two."

"This is bad?"

"Well, for some it might be considered good. Take Ralph, for instance. He made a thirty-three, and this raised his average to twenty-one."

"Let me tell you, Mel, I was peacefully sitting in my room smoking my Tau Phi Pi Have-a-Tampa cigar, when fourteen Bi Bi Bi's came in blowing some smoke also."

"No stuff!"

"Yeah, Ace, they came in and fed me some of the usual line about how good they were, by cutting down the other fraternities."

"Yeah, them brothers and gung-ho pledges have been known to do a little cutting. I was sitting in Judd, eating lunch when Sammy Tumm came over and sat down with me. You know he hadn't spoken to me all year."

"Well, Mel, during Rush Week I found quite a few people who acted like long-lost friends myself."

"Yeah, I guess lots of people found some of them this week."

"Yeah."

"Say, Willie, did I tell you about the I Bumma Sigs? They came in one night, and they did too."

"Did what?"

"Bum a sig."

"Oh!"

"Yeah, man."

"Well, Mel, which one are you going to pledge tomorrow in Baker's office?"

"I really haven't decided yet. I've got three bids. How about you?"

"I don't either. I can't decide."

And so as the sun set in the west, we leave Melvin Oog, and Willie Mutt unable to decide on a fraternity—torn between three decisions.

French View

U. S. Action Goes Too Far

Catherine Recamier of Paris, studying this year at Salem Colle Winston-Salem, N. C., wrote for the Salemite these views of America:

First you are wealthy. You have dollars and a powerful army, nav and air force. You think you have the role (almost God-given) of maki everybody happy and defending the poor and oppressed. With a "big brother" attitude, you are looking in every direction—Far East, Middle East, Greenland, South Pole, everywhere. Your aim is good, but look at your deeds.

As soon as there is a crisis you rush in to help apparently without careful consideration of what is involved, and after some debate and thought, you withdraw. The Suez Canal crisis is a good illustration of this. You rushed in, pledged your support and rushed out again leaving a very puzzled France and England to drift for themselves with Nasser. This indecision may be interpreted by others as a sign of weakness.

At other times you failed to act when people sought your support. The people of Hungary looked to you for help when they revolted, and you did not support them in their struggle for freedom.

Sometimes you go too far in yo actions. This is true in the instan of your asking the UN to consid the Algerian question. This is French domestic affair, and y have no right to enterfere. Y have so many military bases other countries that the people the get enough of America and begin feel that they are being invaded foreign troops.

I realize that foreign policy very difficult because it is to the and afterward to decide which the right thing to do at the rig time. Everything is a question shades on degrees . . .

You have a very wonderful thi here in America and that is your -lief and faith in your country. Y believe so strongly in somethi and you should preserve this.—E

Salute to Intramurals

In these days when there are almost as many All-American teams picked as there are college teams playing the game, the sports page reader may wonder if any team picked is more authentic than any other.

Our probable answer to such an "eleven," namely on the Presbyterian College campus, is the selection of a mythical 1958 All-Intramural football team which was under careful consideration by representatives from each participating team in the league. Incidentally, according to touch football rules, there are no tackles, so we find resulting in a renowned squad of "nine."

In an attempt to make a play of something that has never been done at PC., the intramural program under the able leadership of director Irvin Montgomery, has taken strides this year to become something really great with the existing competitive and spirited rivalries on campus.

So in this stretch of deliberation we salute the fine work of our new head of intramurals and the promotion of our program.

These, then, are the team representatives All-Intramural players for 1958.

PC STARS VS GAMECOCKS

The beginnings of post-season bowl football apparently will get an early start this year, and a first time showing at Presbyterian College over.

A newly-formed All-Intramural "dream team" will venture something most every mythical squad misses out on. This wealth of collegiate football talent, comprising a star-studded club, runs head-on to a similarly selected all-star lineup from the University of South Carolina Monday afternoon here at PC.

The contest is tabbed as a Thornwell Benefit Bowl and should attract something more than favorable comments to be a traditional affair, that might just as well include all intramural competitive sports participated in at the two schools.

Blue Hose Lose Home Opener, Claim Victory on Georgia Trip

Socks Top Mercer, Fall to Oglethorpe

By JIM ELLER

The Blue Hose lost their home opener to the Citadel Bulldogs here last Saturday night in a 77-62 tussle. An almost full house watched the sharp Bulldogs, led by 6-8 Bob Blackledge, display good shooting accuracy and a strong defense in trouncing the Hose.

Presbyterian was behind 35-30 at the close of the first half, but the Hosemen came back with a determined effort to tie the score at 38-38 after only minutes had elapsed in the second half. The deadlock was short-lived as the Citadel team's dead-eye shooting pushed them ahead. The margin of victory was widened in the closing mnutes of the game.

Scoring leader of the Hose was Mickey Long who collected 14 points. Captain Ralph Chambers followed with 12. Art Musselman was high scorer for the opposition with 19.

PC was unable to successfully penetrate the Citadel defense from the floor. Foul shots kept the Hose in the game as they collected on 30 of a possible 46.

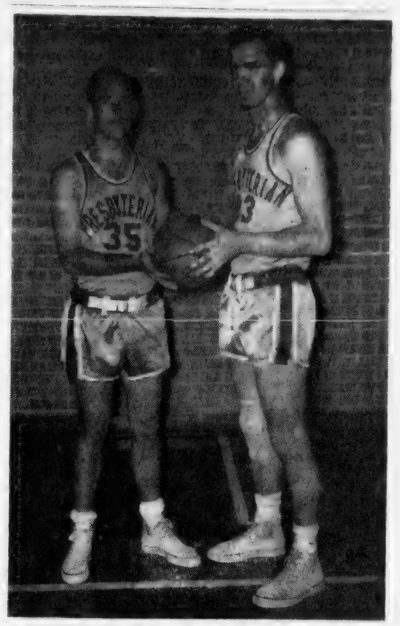
PC 79—MERCER 74

The Blue Hose got on the winning track Tuesday night against the Mercer Bears at Macon, Ga. PC came back strong in the second half after being down 43-40 when the period ended. Soph guard Harvey Blanchard sparked the drive which put the Hose ahead to stay with only 3 minutes gone in the half.

Bob Stratton was high point man for the Blue Stockings with a total of 21. He was closely followed by Bill Sullivan who collected 15 for the visiting Hose.



The final score stood 79-74 in favor of the Hose. Mickey Long and Sonny Wells added to the victory with 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Oglethorpe 58—PC 56

The Hose were upset by Oglethorpe Wednesday night 59-56. The eligibility of four Oglethorpe players was questioned by coach Courts Redford. All four were transfer students.

Oglethorpe was led by freshman Jennings Roland. Ken Caswell found his shooting eye in collecting 17 points for the losers. Presbyterian will remain in Atlanta until Friday when they meet a strong Georgia State team.

BIG GUNS of the Blue Hose squad are co-captains Bill Sullivan and Ralph Chambers. They were both key men in last year's highly successful lineup, and are again proving to be mainstays of the team.

Basket Play is Ferocious In Initial Intramural Rounds

• Four Teams Win Openers

Theta Chi, Campus All-Stars, Alpha Sigma Phi, and a defending champion Ferocious Five team all emerged victorious in the opening round of play in intramural basketball.

John Gossett led his improved Theta Chi team to their initial victory of the season over the Rebels, 34-24. Gossett contributed 20 points for the winners with Ed Loring bucketing 12 for the losers.

Defending champion Ferocious Five had a comparatively hard time in extending that three-year old undefeated record, having to pull away in the last half to overcome a tough Bandit team, 40-33. Dave Morgan kept the losers alive with his jump shot, totaling 15 points for the night. Bill Hill netted 13 for the winners.

Larry Wood stole the show with 17 points, but it was not enough to stop the Alpha Sigs in a low-scoring 25-23 affair. Sig guard Mike Brown pushed in 11 for the victors, coupled with Don Hyde's rebounding spelled defeat for the Confederates.

Skip Severance and Leland Vaughan divided 36 markers for the Campus All-Stars in a 45-30 win over the Stars.

It was announced this week that no more games would be scheduled until after the Christmas holidays.

Thirty-Two Awarded Letters For Year's Football Efforts

Twenty-nine players and three managers earned letters for their football endeavors at Presbyterian College during the past season, Coach Frank Jones announced today.

He and his staff will issue monograms to 12 senior players, seven juniors, seven sophomores, and three freshmen for their play which brought PC its best gridiron record since 1954. The Hosemen won six games, lost three, and tied one during the 1958 campaign.

The football lettermen for this year are:

Seniors: Ends Ted Leahy of Atlanta; Ken Gardner of Greenville; and Paul Chastain of Central; tackles Richard Shrigley of Clinton; James Walker of Anderson; and Marion Parrish of Chester; guard John Firby of Belvedere; center Bob Biggerstaff of North Charleston; halfbacks Tony Benson of Chester, and John Lucas of Donora, Pa.; fullback Bob Mathews of Decatur, Ga.; and quarterback Ron Isger of Clairton, Pa.

Juniors: Tackle Bill Schoffil of Fort Valley, Ga.; center Mac Copeland of Athens, Ga.; halfbacks Bobby Pate of Fitzgerald, Ga., Dave Morgan of Greenville, and Gordon Stanley of Rock Hill; and quarterbacks Bob Waters of Sylvania, Ga.,

The floor was then opened for discussion and several students expressed grievances and suggestions. One of these was in regard to the dining hall, and the request was made that the dining hall stay open later in the mornings for those students who are not in military.

A further grievance was in regard to the long registration lines at the beginning of each semester. It was suggested that this could be alleviated to some extent by issuing registration cards in advance.

The meeting was closed with the final suggestion from the floor that another student body meeting be called the first week of the next semester to see what had been done.

PC Professor Publishes Article

Dr. Nolon Carter, chairman of the chemistry department at Presbyterian College, has another article published in one of the profession journals of his field.

His article on "The Rearrangement of the Stereoisomeric Quinophorquinone-3-Hydrazones," appeared in the October issue of The Journal of Organic Chemistry. Previous papers by the PC professor have been carried in other scientific publications.

Dr. Carter's research on this latest article was supported in part by two grants, one from the South Carolina Academy of Science and the other from the Southern Fellowships FFund.

Fraternities Add Seventy-One, Membership Now Half Enrollment

Sigma Nu Leads With 17 Men; Alpha Sig Is Second With 15

Fraternity membership soared to slightly more than fifty per cent of the male enrollment of the college recently as six fraternities pledged a total of seventy-one men.

Most of these were pledged last December 12 at the climax of Rush Week activities. A number of others were pledged later, bringing the total number to seventy-one.

Sigma Nu led the field with 17 pledges, while Alpha Sigma Phi followed closely with 15. Kappa Alpha pledged 12; Pi Kappa Alpha 11; Theta Chi ten; and Pi Kappa Phi six.

This year's Rush season operated under a new system. In addition to being held for the first time during the first semester, a new rule was placed in effect that limited the membership of each fraternity to 10 per cent of the male enrollment of the college.

Under this ruling each fraternity could only pledge enough men to bring its membership up to the quota. A provision of the rule provided however, that if present membership of a fraternity exceeded the quota, a maximum of twelve men could still be pledged. This affected two fraternities, Pi Kappa Alpha and Kappa Alpha.

The list of new pledges includes:

Sigma Nu—Carl Adams, Sonny Dubose, Phil Bell, Jerry Chitty, Charles Clotfelter, Ted Burn, Dick McGaughey, Hal Roberts, Byron Hollingsworth, Jesse Harrell, Douglas Clark, Howard Gordon, Morgan Byars, Bob Stevens, Melvin Sloan, Bill Schofield, and Joe Davis.

Alpha Sigma Phi—Charlie Cook, Don Neal, Paul Layton, Joe Pickard, Dave Waters, Graham Edmunds, Fred Clark, David Watts, James Lowry, Ted Taylor, Bob Bethea, John Collins, Jim Wall, Jimmy Thompson, and Billy Ray Ladd.

Kappa Alpha—Creighton Frampton, Bob Joiner, J. W. Spivey, Bill Matthews, Chris Hunter, Ed Loring, Woodus Humphrey, Dick Vaughan, Bob Williams, Ted Hentz, Clifton Severance, and Heyward Nettles.

Pi Kappa Alpha—Fred Cook, Ted Abernathy, Dicky Carter, Blond Quartz, Jack Cornwall, Frank Sells, Maurice Schwartz, Joe Nixon, Mitchell Flynn, Michael Long, and Jimmy Howell.

Theta Chi—Mike Jarrett, Don Kay, Ron Kay, Gerald Pitts, Sanders Read, Chan Roberts, Ebenezer Goodwin, James Hughes, and Ray Long.

Pi Kappa Phi—Michael Dawkins, Tom Elliott, Frank Forbes, Larry Todd, Ken Nix, and Billy Benton.

Founder's Scholarships Soon Will Be Awarded

• Grants Offer Up to $2,000 Each

A strong group of contenders for the coveted Founder's Scholarships heads the growing list of high school seniors seeking admission to Presbyterian College next fall.

Student Dean A. J. Thackston has announced that ten Founders' grants, ranging up to $2,000 each, highlight the scholarship program which also offers other types of grants for high school students of superior intellect, leadership and character.

He said the Founder's Scholarships will be awarded competitively after final testing and interviews on the PC campus this winter. In addition, Valedictory Scholarships again are being made available to first-honor graduates of accredited high schools, and in special instances to the second-honor graduate. These grants amount to $500 each for the four years of study. Ministerial candidates of Protestant faith are eligible for $1,000 Ministerial scholarship, and some assistance to needy students also is available through the grant-in-aid program.

Meanwhile, the number of applications of students seeking to enter Presbyterian College in September, 1959, showed a marked increase at this early date over similar periods in past years. College officials urged high school seniors to apply early and to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Entrance Examination Board as soon as possible to be assured the greatest opportunity of enrolling at PC next fall.

Work Moves Forward On Chapel-Auditorium

Construction on PC's new $500,000 chapel-auditorium moved steadily ahead under the encouragement of an unusually fair fall season. Excavating and foundation work have been completed, and the contractors have started erecting the steel columns that will support the large structure. The building—which will include a 1,200-capacity auditorium, small chapel and fine arts facilities —is scheduled for completion in about a year from now.

Brown Attending Meet In Richmond

Dr. Marshall W. Brown, president of Presbyterian College, is in Richmond, Va., this week attending a called meeting of the education committee of the Presbyterian Church US.

President Brown, who has served on this committee for the past nine years, said the group would consider the purchase of real estate on which to erect a new building for the Board of Christian Education.

PC Choir to Sing At General Assembly

The Presbyterian College choir, under the direction of Dr. Edouard Platte, has been selected to sing at the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States next April. The Assembly, composed of ministers and commissioners from churches all over the South, is the governing body of the church and is analgus with the congress of the federal government.

"The selection of our choir to offer sacred music for the Friday night session is a recognition of the important place the choir has made for itself in the life of the church," Dr. Platte stated today, "and it is a great honor to be selected."

He plans to present two different types of music in the program, one of the moving Reformation style, and the other probably of a more gentle nature with an emphasis on choral chords which show the real ability of an a capella choir.

PC Alumni Enrolled At Medical College

Fifteen Presbyterian College alumni currently are enrolled at the Medical College of South Carolina in Charleston.

Other recent PC graduates undergo post-graduate work in medicine at medical colleges and universities in other states, but the South Carolina students represent the largest group at any single institution. Those Presbyterian College men now studying in Charleston include: Earl C. Alford of Spartanburg, Frank Young, Charles Johnson, Henry Blakely Burton, and Guy Blakely, all of Clinton; Sam Workman of Laurens; Edward Hay of Wadmalaw Island; Eugene Butler of Conway; Tommy Warren of Allendale; David Neville, Jr., of Newberry; Bill Stacy and James Hentz, both of Anderson; Cloud H. Hicklin of Richburg; John P. Brown of Laurens; and Tommy Richards of Heath Springs.

The campus section of the Student Christian Association student activities calendar will go to press during the semester break. Please turn in any new dates concerning your organization or fraternity to Dick Carter or Sonny Embry. The Calendars will be distributed during registration second semester.

For Needy Students

Bequest Will Establish Scholarship

A $10,000 bequest to Presbyterian College by the late Miss Annie Boyd Wilkinson of Bishopville, establishing a life-income for her niece, is announced by President Marshall W. Brown.

In addition to providing a regular monthly income for Miss Mary Wilkinson of Bishopville for the remainder of her life, these invested funds ultimately will set up a special ministerial scholarship at Presbyterian College. It will be designated as the Gregg-Wilkinson Ministerial Scholarship.

President Brown said this bequest is the second recent deferred gift to PC, designated for a specific purpose after its income has provided for the security of a loved one. He pointed out that such a program offers unusual opportunities, not only as bequests, but for persons who wish to secure their own future while providing for the ultimate establishment of a memorial in Christian higher education.

The will of Miss Annie Boyd Wilkinson—who died on June 12, 1958—specifies that the College accumulate the return from the $10,000 invested gift for the remainder of the lifetime of Mrs. Mary Cooper Wilkinson. Thereafter, Presbyterian College will pay monthly to Miss Wilkinson the income from the accumulated funds.

President Brown said that ultimately the trust fund will become a part of the PC endowment "to provide scholarships at Presbyterian College for needy students intending to go into the Presbyterian ministry." As the Gregg-Wilkinson Ministerial Scholarship, the fund will serve as a fitting memorial to the family and will perpetuate their influence in the lives of future generations of students attending Presbyterian College.

Another recent deferred gift to PC established an annuity as a tribute to Mrs. May H. Wyatt of Chiekamauga, Ga. A fund of $25,000 for this purpose was established by two Presbyterian College alumni—Knox Wyatt of Rome, Ga., and Henderson Wyatt of Dalton, Ga.—and their sisters, Mrs. R. P. Hardeman of Ware Shoals, and Mrs. William McMahan of Chickamauga for their mother. She receives a monthly income from this source.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

We Propose A Resolution!

January is, among other things, the month of the year for making resolutions. This seems to be a traditional concept held by most everyone, and it is a good one.

Resolutions are made by people covering every activity of life, and are limited only by the size of the imagination. Even though many resolutions are immediately forgotten, and others are remembered while the sun is shining only to be forgotten when the going gets rough, they still serve a useful purpose.

The Blue Stocking, as a separate entity, wishes to propose a resolution to the students of this campus. It concerns the grave matter of personal integrity. We propose that the best resolution that any student could make would be to resolve that his or her integrity be above reproach, particularly in regard to quizzes and examinations.

With final exams coming up next week, there will be more studying than at any time during the entire semester. It is not unreasonable to assume that dishonesty will have a comparable increase.

It goes without saying that this should not be.

Presbyterian College is a church-supported and directed institution and as such strives for a school character of the very highest nature. But the character of the college is no higher than that of those who compose the student body.

It is, therefore, the responsibility of each student to keep faith with this tradition, not only for his own integrity, but also because of those who surround him in the sacred halls of a Christian college.

A Martian in the Grass

By PAUL ARRINGTON

It was the first really hot day of the summer and the kids in the neighborhood, from all yelling, multitudes, were taking advantage of every minute of it. They seemed to thrive on the heat.

Agnes was gazing thoughtfully out the window when she first noticed Anne playing in the hedge. She seemed to be talking to someone through the thick brambles of the bush. She immediately sprang to her feet and came charging into the house wanting a glass of water for the little bald headed man outside.

"What man?"

"The man in the bushes. He told me that he had just gotten here from far away and was very thirsty. He told me not to tell anyone he was there, but can't he have some water?"

Agnes thought that it must be the heat that was causing her imagination to run wild. She poured a glass of water and had it snatched from her hand as Anne left more quickly than she had come.

"What an imagination these nine-year-olds have," she thought. She returned to the window and looked out, not seeing anyone. It was then that she noticed an ominous quietness over the house. None of the kids who were shouting and crying a few minutes before could be heard. Since it was about lunch time, she decided that they had all gone in for the summer afternoon sandwich and nap.

She turned and thought that she had better get a few sandwiches made. Anne would be yelling for one before long, she knew. She had just returned everything to its proper place and had the sandwiches on the table when Anne came charging in faster than before.

"He says he is hungry now. Can I take him something to eat?"

Playing along with the joke, Agnes said that she would go out and eat with them.

"It will be nice having a man for lunch."

"No! He said that he didn't want anyone to know he's here. He's true that a lot of his friends will come with him and they're trying to destroy everything and kill everybody, but he said he likes us and we're friends. He'll never let us go out there!"

"Ha! Ha! Alright, I won't tell your friend-of! When and where he was going to start the invasion?"

"At four o'clock. He wants me to come in right before then so I can get hurt."

With that she was gone. Agnes started to tell her to be sure and be in by then when she realized how silly it would be. She had a lot to do so she forgot the whole thing.

Later that afternoon she suddenly realized how deathly still everything was. She cautiously walked to the front door and peered through the glass. Not a soul was to be seen. Unconsciously she turned the key in the lock. She turned and walked toward the back of the house. She heard the back door open and close quickly. Her heart stopped for a moment and then its beat was the only audible sound in the air. Suddenly Anne came running into the room where she stood. A laugh came from deep in her throat as she seemed to relax.

"They're starting. He told me to come in and not to go back out. He said we would be alright though."

Suddenly the stillness was broken by a distant explosion, then another and another and they grew closer. The house rocked and finally broke; everything was one long roar of blasting. Then it was quiet. She hadn't time to get scared for her knees suddenly shook violently. She walked to the window in the back and looked out. Everything was in smoke and houses were leveled. In the middle of the destruction stood a lonely figure: the little bald head man—waiting.

Work Gets Done In Chapel

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

10:48 A. M., Monday, Dec. 15, two days before the Christmas holidays. Snow was on the ground outside . . . I was sitting in my chapel seat B-8, brushing my teeth. On my right was Melvin Ogg, doing his weekly ironing. To my left in B-7 was Willie Mutt, busily stringing pole beans.

Melvin put down his iron as he finished his blue shirt with red stripes, (Melvin was a Gung-Ho PC student), and turned to Willie and said, "Say, Willie?"

Willie Mutt now put up his beans and answered, "Yeah, Melvin."

I was still brushing my teeth.

"Would you look at that Melvin."

"What?"

"That."

"Where?"

"Up there in the ceiling."

Willie looked up and said, "There's nothing up there."

"That's just it, Willie."

"What's just it, Melvin? I don't understand what you are talking about."

"The wasps, Willie."

"There ain't no wasps up there, Melvin."

"I know, Willie. I know that already."

"Well, what are you getting at, Melvin?"

"Well, just this, Willie. Those who should and don't, found out and did—did always with the wasps, that is."

"Oh, I see what you are getting at now. Yeah, either that or the cold weather froze them out."

Willie started back at his beans again and Melvin returned to his ironing.

I was still brushing my teeth.

A few minutes later Willie put down his beans again and said, "Hey, Melvin?"

Melvin finished ironing his white shirt with gold stripes (Melvin was from Atlanta and on occasion cheered for Georgia Tech). As he put up his iron he replied, "Yeah, Willie."

"Do you feel that?"

"What" I don't feel anything."

"That's just it. There is nothing."

"You mean heat?"

I finished brushing my teeth.

"Yeah, Melvin, there is no heat. What do you think of that?"

"Well, with the snow on the ground and the temperature dropping, I think it's grounds for cutting."

"You're right. Let's cut Wednesday."

"OK, I was going to cut anyway and go home, but I'll cut the first day after holidays that there is no heat."

11:14 A. M. Chapel was dismissed. Everything left but me . . . I just sat there and wondered where the yellow went.

During the last days of the Christmas rush at a large department store a frenzied clerk, overwhelmed by pushing women shoppers, was making out what he hoped would be the last sales check of the day. As the customer gave her name and address, the clerk, pushing her hair up from her damp forehead, remarked: "It's a madhouse, isn't it?" "No," the customer replied pleasantly, "It's a private home."—The Reader's Digest.

Mythical Rating For Hose Cagers

With just a mere .500 record before meeting arch rival Wofford tomorrow night, the Hose are enjoying more than just Little Four leadership, but an "off-the-record" splurge to capture top ranking among national supremacy.

Let's start from the very beginning of this thing. Little Georgia Teachers College opens the '58 campaign with an eye-awakening victory over the supposedly tough Georgia quintet—by a margin of some 9 points.

The 'jackets, who knocked off previously unbeaten and yet-to-become crowned NCAA champs of 1958, Kentucky, down in Atlanta last year, headed for Blue Grass country this year to face the still enraged charges of Baron Rupp. Holding true to form the Wildcats separated the close skin embarrassment from striking twice and dropped a relentless Tech five by a spread of 10 points. Closer now we get to the climactic comparative object of all this.

Next in the tale comes along Georgia Teachers again, throwing their high-flying scalps fresh from the Tech triumph as a scare to the somewhat flat and impotent Blue Hose. Possibly an arousing New Years' eve awakening sprung the spirited bunch on a rampage in '59 and little did the Professors anticipate PC cagers to unwield their old form so soon after the holidays.

PC bit down hard on the Georgia squad, trouncing them rather handily by an 18 point margin.

Silly as it might sound, this mathematical process of 9, 10, and 18 markers shows to some folks, according to comparative scores of the trio of contests that is, how we rank rather mythically as ' top dogs' in round ball circles. Doesn't sound so ridiculous after all

SUPPORT SOCKS ON ROAD

Good basket ball needs ardent fans

The Blue Hose need their faithful followers over at Erskine and Newberry next Thursday and Saturday nights, respectively, tip-offs for both games being at eight o'clock.

Little Four fans are frowning upon the records accumulated by both of these squads, not a scant scratch in the win column for either of these clubs. These type happenings seem to always fool the best of 'em. Look what the Flying Fleet did last year after a rather miserable season.

Yes, they scrambled the seedings in the tournament last year and completely baffled all of the grandstand quarterbacks so-to-speak. Any Little Four game speaks for itself—no due respect for undefeated records are regarded as has been the policy to be evidenced in past years. The home club is back on top now after having a little trouble getting things on the road this season. Let's keep them there!

IF . . . in '59

We venture to think upon arrival in another year of all the colorful occurrences we possibly would like to see take place around Presbyterian College . . .

If the Presbyterian fightin' Blue Hose will win the conference crown for the second straight year, copping ten consecutive games and a trip to the Holiday Bowl in St. Petersburg, Fla.

If College Busines Manager G. Edward Campbell will grant funds to the Athletic Promotion Campaign for a brand spanking new field house at PC.

If there be an overflow crowd in the spacious Bailey Memorial Stadium at every home football game next season.

If one line coach lost some odd 50 pounds in time for fall football workouts.

If there be an unlimited supply of tape and screwdrivers (to say the least of socks, T-shirts, and other garments) for the sole use and discretion by football trainers and managers.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Ex-Presbyterian College basketball stars Bruce Thompson and Arnold Stone are playing service ball with the post team at Fort Jackson . . . It is reported that several discoveries were made by our coaching staff when looking over potential PC footballers in Georgia and at the junior colleges in Mississippi . . . Lenoir-Rhyne is believed to have lost the bid to the Holiday Bowl at St. Petersburg due to the lone setback received from the Presbyterian Blue Hose . . . PC is currently heading the Little Four teams with an average clip of 3 wins and 3 losses . . . One more shooting performance as displayed in the Georgia Teachers game will send forward Bob Stratton, from Laurenceburg, Ky., way over the 50% mark . . . Little All-American end Jerry Richardson of Wofford competed in the first annual All-America Bowl in Arizona pitting the Majors vs Small colleges. Richardson hauled down a nine-yard toss from QB Bob Webb, St. Ambrose, to score a touchdown in a losing cause, 14-12.

Chinese Bandits Top Sigs In Intramural Basket Play

The second complete week of intramural hardwood competition got underway Tuesday with the league putting all teams into the won-loss column.

In possibly the best played game of the week saw independent entry Chinese Bandits give a last minute spurt to outlast the Sigma Nu's 36-26. Bryan Carr proved the main cog in the winners' offensive with 15, but the losers' John McIntosh captured scoring honors for the day with 17 markers.

In other games of the week, Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Alpha, and Confederates all emerged victorious.

Blue Hose Open Little Four Play Seeking Victory Against Wofford

Terriers Hold Role of Favorite; Redford's Five Seeking Fifth Win

By DON HYDE

Presbyterian College opens its Little Four conference basketball season tomorrow night when they meet the Wofford Terriers at Spartanburg. Tip-off time is set at eight o'clock and the Blue Hose under Coach Redford will be looking for their fifth victory and their first in conference play.

PC wants this game badly for it was these same Terriers who defeated the Hosemen twice last year and one of the defeats was in the all-important Little Four Tournament at Anderson. Coach Gene Alexander of Wofford will field the same team as last year with the exception of Twitty Carpenter, who was the leading rebounder for the Black and Gold last year.

The two big scorers of the Terriers are 6'5" forward Marshall Perkins and 6'3" forward Trap Hart. Perkins, named to several All-State teams last year, had a 16.2 scoring average while his running mate Hart had a 13.6 average. At center will be Robert Jenkins, a 6'7" senior from Greer who is leading the Terriers in rebounding.

Boyce Berry, the most sought after high school basketball player in South Carolina, will be at guard, and he has a very good jump shot. At the other guard spot is 5'9" Bill Bradford. the Bill Sullivan of the team or at least this is what the Wofford fans think Bradford is the quarterback of Coach Alexander's fast break. The number six man and a fine replacement is Bill Barbee, a 6'4" junior, who averaged 11.4 in '57-'58.

Wofford has eight lettermen and with their over-all height, depth and experience, they will take the role of the favorite. The PC five would like nothing better than to beat the favorite, and the Hose have the personnel to do it. As a team they have taken 936 shots from the floor and have hit on 160 for a respectable 43.1 shooting average.

Forward Bob Stratton leads all the scorers with 96 points and a 50 per cent accuracy mark. Second leading scorer is Co-captain Bill Sullivan with 82 points and a 45.6 scoring average. Sully is way out in front with assists with 39. Third leading scorer is Senior forward Ralph Chambers with 65 points, and he has made a remarkable 23 out of 25 from the free throw line. Next in scoring comes Ken Caswell with 62 points and 15 assists. Caswell, like Chambers, excels on defense.

The two leading rebounders for PC are Mickey Long and Sonny Wells. Long has 66 recoveries and 49 points, while Wells has cleared the boards 46 times and has 40 points. Other scorers for PC are Sophomore Harvey Blanchard with 26 points, including 10 out of 11 from the free throw line, and Sophomore Paul Ard with 12 points. Ernie "the jumper" Redd also has 12 points.

The Terriers are big and tough, but the Hosemen have been aiming for this game all during the holidays. Coach Redford and his players feel that if students will go to Spartanburg and back the team, there is no reason why the Blue Hose can't come home with a victory and first place in the Little Four Conference.

Socks Win Fourth Game Against Georgia Teachers

• Chambers, Caswell Lead Fine Defense

By DON HYDE

Presbyterian College, led by the fine defensive play of Co-captain Ralph Chambers and Senior guard Ken Caswell, won their fourth game of the season by defeating Georgia Teachers College 81 to 63. It was a big prestige victory for PC, as the Teachers have been considered by many as the outstanding team in Georgia after their impressive win over Georgia Tech.

Throughout the season the Professors have counted heavily on the one-two punch of Whitey Verstrate and Chester Curry. Verstrate going into the game had a 20.3 scoring average and Curry with a 16.8 average. Ralph Chambers did a tremendous job on Verstarte, holding him to 8 opints, and Ken Caswell played equally as well in holding the usually deadeye Curry to 6 points. Coach Redford's boys worked hard throughout the Christmas holidays on defense, and it certainly paid off in the big battle.

It was a fine team effort on the part of the Blue Hose as they hit a phenomenal 55.5 per cent from the floor and made 23 free throws out of 27 attempts. Senior forward Ralph Chambers made 8 out of 8 from the line.

Leading the very effective offense was Bob Stratton, a junior forward from Lawreceburg, Ky., who came into the game with a 14-point average. Stratton ended the night with 26 points and 9 rebounds. He scored the first 8 points for PC and his deadly outside shooting opened up the Georgia Teachers' defense so other Hosemen could break through for close-in shots.

Co-captain Ralph Chambers' play was the best game of the year as he scored 18 points. He scored mainly on the drive and jump shot. Guard Ken Caswell, like Chambers, excelled on defense and pumped in 15 points. Sherkey Long and Sonny Wells, teammates with each other scored four points each with Long grabbing 10 rebounds. Wells made both of his baskets under pressure, one coming with the score deadlocked.

Senior guard Bill Sullivan had a 13-point performance and his airtight dribbling protected the lead for the Blue Hose in the closing minutes of the game. Rounding out the PC scoring was Sophomore Harvey Blanchard with one point, but Blanchard played his usual good floor game.

Senior Placement Program Slated For Next Semester

© SONNY EMBRY

[illegible] has been laid by the administration [illegible] to be a great help to the graduates as expressed [illegible] greatly [illegible] placement program during the coming semester.

Col. A. J. Thackston, who is the [illegible] in charge of the program, has met once with the senior class in regard to this program. The placement office is designed to assist students in finding positions in the business world both immediately after graduation and in later years by making available to business personnel managers detailed information concerning the education, work experience, and special aptitudes of seniors or graduates.

Beginning in February, men representing business concerns will be visiting on campus for personal interviews. Col. Thackston explained that these interviews will be helpful to many students if only in gaining experience in being interviewed, even though at the time they feel that they might not be interested in the particular company, or first must serve in the military service.

In addition to the interviews, the placement office has much valuable reading material concerning the procedures and examples to use in seeking employment and catalogues giving brief descriptions of opportunities available so that students can get a clearer picture in mind of the type of job they wish to seek. All of this material is free.

The only real task involved on the part of the student is filling out the information forms, but the office feels that this is a small thing to do for an opportunity that may save much time later in seeking employment, or that may lead to a more lucrative position by participation in the program.

Martin Named SIAA Vice-President

Taylor Martin, associate professor of mathematics at Presbyterian College and chairman of the faculty athletic committee has been elected vice-president of District One of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

He was named at the SIAA's annual meeting at Mobile, Ala., on January 3 to serve a one-year term in this capacity. Martin also serves on the constitution and by-laws committee of this organization.

District One is composed of these six colleges in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida: Erskine, PC, Newberry, Wofford, Stetson and Tampa.

Varner, Faress Are Nominees For Top Blue Stocking Posts

Election Set For Monday; Students Are Urged To Vote

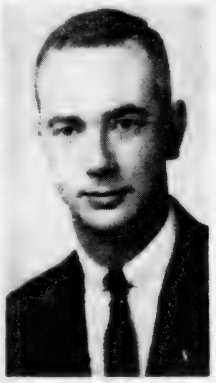
An unusual situation arose this week as Evin Varner and Sid Faress were the only nominess for the top Blue Blue Stocking posts of Editor and Business Manager, respectively.

Nominations were made Monday night at a meeting of the present Blue Stocking staff. The nominees were presented to the student body this morning during chapel period, and the situation explained.

Election date is set for Monday, although it will actually be only a vote of approval since both candidates are unopposed. The balloting is, however, necesary as the Constitution requires that candidates be elected by the student body.

Student Council President Paul Arrington indicated that balloting will be held between 8:00 A. M. and 2:00 P. M. Monday. He urged that all students vote so that a fair appraisal of the students' approval could be had. This would prevent the possibility of a write-in ballot winning with only a few votes.

Varner, the candidate for Editor, is a rising junior and hails from Bennettsville. He is well qualified for the position, having had a number of years experience in the journalism field. In addition to being per, Varner worked with the local newspaper writing news and ads, and he was also a colmnist.



Since coming to PC he has been a member of the Blue Stocking staff and has worked with the PC Public Relations Office. He has also been a book reviewer for the Charlotte, N. C., News.

Faress, the candidate for Business Manager, is a rising senior from Charleston. He has for the past year worked as Circulation Manager for the Blue Stocking, and has worked closely with Business Manager Willie Turner on the business side of the Blue Stocking

Childers Is Exec Of Battle Group

John B. Childers of Birmingham, Ala., led the list of ROTC promotions this week, as he was named Battle Group Executive Officer. He replaces Herman Jackson who graduated at the end of first semester.

Ken Caswell of Paris, Ky., steps up as Battle Group S-3, filling the vacancy created by promotion of Childers.

CHILDERS

Marion Dowdle takes the command post of a revamped Headquarters and Band Company. This company is to be divided into two platoons, a band platoon, headed by Jim Elliot, and a Drill Platoon, led by Ben Smith. Joe Hardin will assist with the Drill Platoon.

All senior ROTC officers were promoted at least one rank, and in some instances, two.

Embry Names Committee To Direct R.E.W. Activities

• Composed of Student Leaders

In a called meeting last Monday evening, the cabinet of the Student Christian Association approved fifty names to serve on the Religious Emphasis Week Committee of Fifty.

This group, which comprises most of the student leaders on campus will act as the main body to work out all of the details, arrangements, and special work necessary for the Religious Emphasis Week which will be held March 10 through 13. The committee is divided into nine sub-divisions.

Those named are:

Planning: Sonny Embry, Bob Mathews, Ebby Mayfield, Larry Wood, Al McKie, and Troy Mathews.

Publicity: Lonnie Love, David Waters, Carter Redd, Roger Godwin, and Evin Varner; Prayer and Vespers: Don Hendrix, Frank Richbourg, Frank Sells, Paul Layton, and Glenn Gibson.

Programs: Bob Bean, Tom Collins, Jim Lowry, and Pauline Stevenson.

Dorm Discussions: Bill Francis, Roshe Eshbaugh, Byron Hollingsworth, and Ann Gettys. Correspondence: Dick Wood, Gay Maddox, Ina McDonald, and Dot Chandler.

Music: Dick Carter, Harvey Wittschen, Harold Gallimore, Dick Curnow, Lou Grey, and Tom Wise. Attendance and Records: Paul Arrington, John Childers, Ron Isger, Bill Haygood, Ron Boston, Heyward Nettles, and Ted Burn.

Contact: Bruce Prince, Jim Shakespeare, Billy McElveen, Don Chapman, Toby Hunter, Willie Turner, Ken Caswell, Ron Bartlett, and Ralph Chambers.

General Meeting Held By Student Association

A general meeting of the Student Christian Association was held in the chapel this morning to discuss the annual Religious Emphasis Week.

The slate of speakers was announced, along with background material and some of their individual personal color. The schedule of the week was discussed and note was made that all classes with the exception of drill would be dismissed on March 11 and 12 for the use of the speakers in similar type classes.

The SCA did not ask the military department to dismiss drill since this would be the time of weapons instruction, and so that people would be up and ready for the seminar classes.

Blue Key National Honor Fraternity will publish next week's edition of the Blue Stocking.

Purdum Succumbs After Brief Illness

Dr. Raymond B. Purdum, 60, retired college president and professor of chemistry at Presbyterian College since 1956, died at a Greenville hospital Wednesday night following a brief illness.

Prior to coming here, Dr. Purdum served as president of Davis-Elkins College in West Virginia from 1944 to 1954. He headed the chemistry department there from 1925 to 1943, and served a year as dean.

Upon his retirement here, he devoted his time to his coal business in West Virginia.

A native of Providence Forge, Va., he was educated at the University of Virginia where he earned his bachelor of science degree in 1923; his master's degree in 1924 and his doctorate in 1926.

Dr. Purdum had served as a deacon and elder of Davis Memorial Presgyterian Church in Elkins, W. Va. He was moderator of Greenbriar Presbytery in West Virginia and named commissioner to the Presbyterian General Assembly in 1947.

His interest in church work had continued here. He was teacher of the Men's Bible Class of Clinton First Presbyterian Church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Matthews Purdum; and four children.

He will be buried Sunday in Elkins, W. Va.

Prince Discloses Date For Next IFC Dance

Arrangements have been completed for an IFC Dance March 7 in conjunction with the Military Ball on March 6, IFC President Bruce Prince announced today. He said the fraternity assessment for this dance will be $1.25 per member, and that it is to be an informal "dance."

Prince also disclosed the date for the annual IFC Spring Dance Weekend. It is set for May 8-9.

Former Choir Tenor Dies in Auto Crash

A former tenor soloist of the PC Choir, Rev. Lee Williams, 29, of the 1953 graduating class, died Jan. 18.

Returning from a preaching engagement in a North Carolina church, his car left the road and serious head injuries were the result. An operation failed to save his life. He was buried in the Steele Creek cemetery.

"Lee had a beautiful, warm and expressive voice. Serving two years as a tenor soloist for the choir he was able, by his rendering, to create a profound spiritual impression on his audience. His voice will be remembered by many," says Dr. Edouard Patte, the Conductor of the Choir, "and will be heard again as it is found in one of the Choir's recordings, particularly the great Negro Spiritual, "Take My Mother Home."

Belk Makes Gift To Building Program

Presbyterian College will receive a gift of $125,000 from the Belk family and their business associates in the Belk mercantile organization in South Carolina and Georgia, it was announced Monday.

Dr. Marshall Brown, president of Presbyterian College, said this amount is being given to the development program in memory of William Henry Belk, outstanding Presbyterian churchman and nationally famed mercantile leader who founded the Belk system. He died in 1952, at almost 90, after giving personal direction to his organization for 64 years.

As spokesman for the group today, Irvin Belk issued this statement from his office in Charlotte:

"This Belk gift is an additional evidence of progress in this far-sighted movement in aid of this worthy Presbyterian institution, owned and controlled by the Presbyterian synods of Georgia and South Carolina, from which so many distinguished graduates have made a great name for the South and the nation in church, civil and military leadership."

W. H. Belk, during his lifetime, and many of his associates over a long period of years have been active supporters of Presbyterian College and other church-owned and church-supported educational institutions. The pledge of $12,000 announced Monday is part of the general program of the Belk interests in furthering collegiate education under the control and guidance of the Christian churches of this area.

President Borwn said this gift represents the largest single donation made to the Presbyterian College Development Program, which was launched in 1955 and which already has realized more than one million dollars. He added: "It is, indeed, a fitting memorial to William Henry Belk, a native South Carolinian whose Christian character was reflected in both his personal and business life. A staunch Presbyterian, he generously supported the agencies of his denomination and made of his life a true witness for Christ."

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Editorials : Features : Humor

Known Dubiously As the Editorial . . .

There appears in the upper left hand corner of the Blue Stocking's feature page each week that exposition known dubiously as the editorial. By definition the editorial is meant to express the editor's opinions, and to give the readers a common meeting ground outside of their variant individual personalities.

If all this be true, then this week's column is not an editorial. It is more an accumulation of the thoughts that are running through the editors' mind as he realizes that this is the last edition.

An editor probably considers from the time that his first edition goes to press what he will say in that last one, when the time for saying it finally arrives. Editors have been almost unanimous in the thoughts expressed about their experiences with the Blue Stocking.

It is a privilege to become editor of the Blue Stocking. Yet as each edition goes to press the editor thinks more and more of that day when the last copy will finally pass through the black rollers.

Readers do not realize what a tremendous, agonizing job it is to put out a weekly poop sheet. They are not aware of the long hours put in by the staff in order to get a little four-page edition printed each week. The responsibility of trying to keep the news complete and accurate, of making the deadline, and of all the thousand and one details that crop up—these are enough to discourage the strongest individual.

Your editor would have long since expired under this load had it not been for the assistance of that group of faithful individuals known collectively as the staff. The chief reason for this paper getting out every Friday has been the fine, enthusiastic, and cooperative staff.

To Billy Hagood, Buddy Mullis, Sonny Embry, and Al McKie, the editor expresses heartfelt thanks for a year of sincere and faithful support. If this newspaper has been worth anything, and we hope it has, then the credit goes to these men.

Others to whom special credit is due include Don Hyde, Jim Eller, Martin Chitty, Graham Edmunds, Paul Arrington, Bill Turner, and Lamar Hawkins. And we would not forget Sue Faress, the faithful circulation manager. To these and all the others on the staff, the editor can only express deepest appreciation.

To the list of those to thank the editor would also add Ben Hay Hammet, the college's Director of Public Relations; and all of the folks at the Clinton Chronicle; their patience and assistance to your editor has saved the day on many occasions.

Next week Blue Key will edit the paper and then a new staff will take over for another year. To them we say best of luck. We've had a great time—hope yours is the same.

Cut Off At The Pass

The Most Eventful Day of My Life

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

I believe last Tuesday was about the most eventful day of my life.

Promptly at 6:40 I was awakened by the presence of an angry mob in my rom. Herman Bugfuzz was leading them. My book, "My Life In A Nutshell," had been sold in the book store for the first time Monday and since I saw everyone clutching tightly to a copy, I said that I would autograph them.

Herman informed me that they were not autograph hounds but a lynch mob and if I didn't answer their question it would be their civic duty to hang me from the third floor of Smyth by one of Leo's wet noodles, which are sure death in any form.

All of this was for the cause of illiteracy of course. Since Sheriff Isaac wasn't around to quiet the mob, I decided I'd better answer the question.

Herman asked, "Why do you always live in a nutshell?"

Being unable to explain, I assured him that I would change the title to "My Life In Brief," but then I was asked, "Why do you wear briefs?"

I decided that this would probably happen again, so I told the mob that no more editions would be printed. This pleased them greatly, so they left.

It was now 7:15 so I decided to arise and don my Militia Costume.

As I walked out the front door, I noticed everyone gonig to the chapel, manly because it was 36 degrees and raining. It appeared to be a good day for dying. When I got to the chapel, the heat wasn't on as usual and the temperature changed from a comfortable 36 degrees to a freezing 17 degrees inside. To make things worse, the film shown was entitled "The Soviet Soldier" and pictured a bunch of Cossacks crawling around in the snow.

That same Tuesday afternoon something happened to me that really got me shook up. I had just turned off the main drag and was peacefully riding up the plaza passing the new chapel-auditorium when it happened. I pressed the gas pedal to the floor but the car just wouldn't go.

I cut off my roaring six engine and got out to see what the trouble was. I walked to the front of the car and there was the trouble plain as day.

It seems as though four months ago the street was torn up to run a water line to the new building and there were the front wheels of my car comfortably resting in the hole, which had never been filled in correctly.

Well, after the Clinton Metropolis Tow Service pulled me out, I decided to head to my room for some sack time, since I had been so rudely awakened earlier.

I hadn't driven too much further when I was cut off at the pass by Powerful Prince's Precious Platoon of Persistent Posture Prize-winners. It looked like sleep was out of the question now.

I asked what the trouble was and Prince said that I hadn't paid my Militia money yet, and if I didn't I would have to carry weapons during instruction period, or something like that.

I looked over the crowd to see what I was up against, and when I saw that Prince had the backing of Magee's Menial Mob, I felt the "esprit de corp" of my wallet and decided to pay. Giving the money to the man in charge I said, "Here, have fun."

The roadblocks were lifted and I headed on to the dormitory.

Playboy Jazz Poll

Frankie, Ella Are Favorites

Two of the U. S. top jazz singers have the unique distinction of having been chosen as the most popular by both the general public and their fellow artists, in the nation's biggest and smallest music polls. They are Frank Sinatra and Ella Fitzgerald, according to results of the third annual Playboy Jazz Poll, published in the magazine's February issue.

As in past years, Playboy's 850,000 readers were asked to vote for their favorite jazz artists in this the most comprehensive of all music popularity polls. In addition, a new feature was introduced this year, when a select 22, winners of last year's All-Star Jazz Poll, were invited to pick their own favorite performer in each category. Sinatra and Miss Fitzgerald ran first in the Male Vocalist and Female Vocalist categories, respectively, in both the readers' and All-Stars' polls.

Hugh M. Hefner, Editor-Publisher, in announcing the winning artists, noted that "the annual Playboy Jazz Poll is the biggest and most successful music poll ever conducted and certainly the most significant statement on popular taste in jazz available anywhere."

This year's poll was initiated last October, when Playboy printed the names of leading jazz musicians in ballot form, and invited readers to choose their favorites in each category. The 30 winners will receive the coveted sterling silver Playboy Jazz Medal, and in addition 16 special medals will be awarded to this year's All-Stars' All-Stars. Also, all the members of the 1959 Playboy All-Star Jazz Band selected by the readers, and the All-Stars' All-Stars named by the musicians themselves, will be featured in Volume III of the Playboy Jazz All-Stars album, an unprecedented intra-industry venture on Playboy's own label, scheduled for release this fall.

Little Four's Finest Hour

Little Four basketball will reach its finest hour in a little less than a month with an array of games staged over n Anderson set to highlight the year for the Carolinas' best n small college hardwood action.

A look at our home club finds the Blue Hose cagers pushing down the backstretch with an average record to date of two wins and a like number of losses, but yet to play before the tourney are the No. 1 and 2 clubs, Newberry and Wofford to round out play in the second round. Victory n both of these scraps, plus a Terrier win over league-leading Newberry would deadlock the standings with PC., Newberry, and Wofford owning identical 4-2 records.

A flip of the coin, and of course on the side of a loyal assumption of such a situation do we add this, the Hose could emerge with a top berth in the tourney facing Erskine, winless in thirteen starts this season, in the opening round.

As is oft repeated by many, that the regular season games between Little Four competitors 'don't amount to a hill of beans', so to speak, but that the tournament carries the biggest weight of the year towards the championship. Of course the big thing of the year is the tournament, but a top seeding carries a big advantage in the affair.

For those who are new to Little Four basketball circles, the colorful tournament is held every year upon the termination of the regular campaign over at Anderson, which serves to be the neutral site for the occasion and hosts the four small colleges for a two-night staging. Opening play on the first night pits the second vs third place teams and first vs fourth clubs in the nightcap. The following night, action is kicked off with a consolation game between the losers of opening night of which is followed by the championship tilt between the remaining two clashing to decide a conference champion.

UNDERDOG COMES THROUGH

Yes, top seeding in the tournament certainly helps, just ask the Newberry aggregation who if you will remember last year achieved such an honor only to fall to the lowly fourth place team. We featured a spread in our column preceding the tournament, a fever of 'don't count those Flying Fleet out,' and such a prediction fell true to form. A supposedly weak Erskine club carrying a most miserable record into the affair, knocked off front-running Newberry the first night, and went on to capture the laurels with an impressive victory over a surprised Wofford. That's Little Four basketball for you!

Perchance the standings got mingled with a 4-2 record containing those three already mentioned quintets, then again a hapless bunch from Due West could assume the role as giant killer again and take their pick of an opponent. With their record to date, such a recurrence would certainly shock the experts.

During a stay of four years, this writer has experienced the thrill of a single Little Four Championship. Two members of the Hose varsity participated in that triumphant occasion which happened during the Thompson era at PC, and from all indications the Hose charges have the potential to bring back the bacon a second time to PC.

SPRING PRACTICE BEGINS

Fall 1959 for the Presbyterian College gridmen will soon catch an early preview as Coach Jones and staff issued the call for the squad to report next week for spring football workouts. These practices are reported to carry a rugged schedule of Monday through Friday each week and extend to the first of March.

The coaching staff has been contemplating several position switches of the 40-odd players on the spring roster. The act of transplanting a few key individuals in hopes of improving a 6-3-1 record in '58, will be anxiously watched during the six-weeks period.

Gaping holes left via graduation and other reasons make it essential for the staff to make certain changes in attempting to fill these large vacancies. Possibly the biggest of these lies at end, where the departure of Leahy, Gardner, and Chastain make for a most difficult job to cope with.

A run-down by positions of those lost to the squad finds three at end; tackle, three; guard, one; center, two; quarterback, one; halfback, four; and fullback, two. Possibly among all the positions, it appears to be at guard where the most game experience still remains, though the exit of John Firby will leave quite a gap to fill.

Left to fight it out at guard are rising senior Mac Copeland, rising juniors Bill Sease, Ken Nix, and Don Bridges, and also sophomores-to-be Bill Ogden and Cecil Drake adding to the guard strength. Possibly it rests among the players that a replacement for the pivot position will be found.

Set to battle it out at the quarterback slot will be Bob Waters and Nat Cole, both of whom figured highly in the record this year, and also will carry most of the load next fall as the top two Blue Hose field generals. Considerable amount of new personnel resulting from recruiting will be needed to take up the heavy loss of sixten seniors. Spring practice should show signs of budding potential and a somewhat sound picture of PC football in 1959.

THE SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Bob Stratton currently leads the Presbyterian cagers with a scoring average of 15.3 points per game . . . The top field goal percentage in NAIA District 26 is owned by PC's Sonny Wells who has tried 50 shots and hit 31 for 62 per cent through 10 games . . . Ken Caswell and Bill Sullivan were on the 1956 Blue Hose basketball squad which won the Little Four Tournament . . . Charlie Gallagher, 6-2 junior forward from Newberry, paces the LF Conference with a 19.4 scoring average . . . It is reported that the swimming pool will be available within several weeks with a heated convenience . . . PC owns the best record in the Little Four of 6 wins and 6 losses while Erskine has the worst, a disgraceful 0-13 mark . . . The century mark has been reached only twice this season by the Hose, both against Georgia State.

Hose Shoot Down Flying Fleet, Claim 61 - 58 Little - Four Victory

Stratton Sparks PC Offense As Top Scorer for the Night

By DON HYDE

The Presbyterian College Blue Hose won their second Little Four conference game with a 61 to 58 victory over the Flying Fleet of Erskine. A win against Newberry College here next Tuesday night could push PC into second place in the conference standings.

The big gun for Redford's five was junior forward Bob Stratton who was held scoreless the first half, but his accurate jump shooting and spinning hook shots in the last half sparked the Hosemen in their brilliant comeback and their second win over Erskine.

Erskine jumped off to an early lead as Jerry Wolff hit two long set shots. Combined with the accurate shooting of Wolff, Blanton, and Keenan, the Fleet held a 35 to 28 advantage at halftime. During the first half PC hit only 20 per cent from the floor, but the sharp foul shooting of Co-captain Ralph Chambers and center Sonny Wells kept the Blue Hose in striking distance.

The outcome of the game began to look dark midway in the second half as Co-captains Ralph Chambers and Bill Sullivan had to be taken out of the game with each in danger with four fouls. They were replaced by Wells and Blanchard, both of whom played outstanding during the game.

The turning point of the game came with about seven minutes to go and the Flying Fleet holding a 12-point lead. Coach Redford put his boys in a full court press and the Fleet offense began to fall apart mainly on the pressure applied by Ken Caswell and Harvey Blanchard.

Providing the offensive spark for Presbyterian was Bob Stratton, who led all the PC scorers with 16 points. Stration really proved his value to the team as he switched from forward to center and led the Blue Hose in their last minute rally. With the score deadlocked at 58 to 58, Mickey Long made a key floor play by tying up Ronnie Rice of Erskine. Long then controlled the jump ball and senior guard Ken Caswell put on a freeze for about two minutes. With about twenty seconds on the clock, Stratton took a ten-foot jump shot and dropped it in to ice the game for PC.

This was a fine win for Coach Redford and his boys as they came fighting back with their backs to the wall, especially after the one-point heart-breaker they lost to Furman U two nights before.

PC 100-GA. STATE 68

Presbyterian College jumped off to a seven-point lead and went on to sweep past the Georgia State Panthers 100 to 68 at the Leroy Springs Gym last Tuesday night. It was the second straigh win for the Hosemen and evened up their season record at six wins and six losses.

The Blue Hose, led by the 23-point performance of Bob Stratton and the 20 points scored by Ralph Chambers, charged into a quick lead and Coach Redford was able to clear his bench and give the reserves some important game

Three Returning Lettermen

Net Prospect Looks Good As Season Draws Near

By JIM ELLER

The Blue Hose netmen will begin a rebuilding season when they open their schedule against Erskine here on March 16. They will be looking forward to another successful campaign under the tutorship of Coach Jim Leighton.

The schedule is studded with such powerhouses as Miami, Yale, Harvard, Duke, Rollins, George Washinton, and Kalamazoo; but it is hoped that the netters will make up for inexperience with outstanding playing ability in the traditional Hose style.

Returning from last year's squad will be three lettermen: Jim Shakespeare, Harry Hoffman, and Bob Daniels. Shakespeare, the only senior on the squad, is a vet of three previous victorious seasons, and will bring to the squad his experience which should be valuable in meeting tough opponents. He has displayed consistent ability in starring for Coach Leighton's proteges.

Hoffman, a junior, will be one of the top men on the squad. These two should form the nucleus around which the rest of the squad will be built. Bobby Daniels has improved over last year, and should help the Hose netters considerably.

The remainder of the team is made up of first year men. Bill Stone, Tom Ellis, Dave Greenslade, Beansy Frampton, and Ed Caviness round out the roster.

1959 TENNIS SCHEDULE

March: 16—Erskine; 20—Clemson; 23—Erskine; 28—Yale at Miami; 30—Yale at Miami. 13—Yale at Miami.

April: 2—Kalamazoo; 3—Harvard; 4—Harvard; 7—at Georgia U; 8—at Georgia Tech; 10—Furman; 13—at George Washington; 14—at Georgetown; 16—at Virginia U; 17—at Duke U; 20—Georgia Tech; 28—Rollins.

Intramurals In Full Swing As Many Cage Teams Clash

Intramural basketball hit full stride for the first time since exams with four games resuming action this week. Ferocious Five, Gray Ghost, All-Stars, and Sigma Nu all emerged victorious in league play.

The Stone continued his league-leading point total adding 26 points and thus led his All-Star five past Pi Kappa Alpha, 41-37. The lead changed hands throughout the contest and was not determined until the final seconds of the close tilt. Bob Waters was high for the losers with 15 points.

Undefeated Ferocious Five recorded another win at the expense of the PiKaps, 41-25. Jone Lucas and Paul Chastain added 15 and 12 respectively for the winners, with Bob Biggerstaff collecting for the PiKaps.

The Gray Ghost outmanned the Garnets by a 44-20 count. Bill Porter was high man for the winners with 12 markers.

Another wide margin caught Sigma Nu in a 52-18 onslaught over the Confederates. Three Sigs, Jerry Slutty, Charles Adams, and Bob Stevens, shot in double figures with 12, 11, and 10 points, respectively.

INTRAMURAL CONTINUED

Alpha Sigma Phi was pushed till [illegible] but five minutes, but succumbed to a strong fast [illegible] Theta Chi five, paced by Jim Eller and Paul Layton who shot for twelve and 8 points, respectively. Dave Gossett [illegible] with a total of 15.

experience.

As the Blue Hose reached the 90 mark, the crowd began to roar to the possibility of reaching the century mark. A few minutes later Billy Ray Ladd stole the ball and made a layup to hike the score to 98 and seconds later Jimmy Rakestraw brought the crowd to its feet with a 15-foot jump shot to end the scoring for the night.

Georgia didn't have too much to shout about and only the shooting of Frank Doherty with 14 and Gene Powell with 13 kept the Panthers in the game in the first half.

Blue Key To Work On Public Relations

Members of the Presbyterian College chapter of Blue Key National leadership fraternity will serve as a student public relations committee, Public Relations and Alumni Director Ben Hay Hammet announced today.

They will meet with President Marshall W. Brown and other representatives of the administration and faculty at regular intervals to present student views on the general program at Presbyterian College. Student Dean A. J. Thackston, Dr. Newton Jones, history department chairman and Blue Key adviser, and Hammet round out the college representation.

President Brown said the committee can serve a useful role of liaison between the student body and the administration. He added:

"One of the attractive features of a small college is the degree of personal contact between student and teacher. Our administrative offices are always open to each individual member of the student body, and many students avail themselves of the opportunity. This special committee, however, functioning officially as a public relations group, is designed to form a stronger link within the college family."

Blue Key was requested to serve in this capacity, because this function is in accord with its purpose as an organization of responsible campus leaders who work for the best interest of the college in all phases of its program.

Alan McKie is president of the PC chapter of Blue Key. Other members of the chapter will also serve on the new student public relations committee.

The student public relations committee will organize shortly to receive views of the students on the general college program before scheduling formal meetings.

Blue Sock Nominees Win Posts In Uncontested Student Election

Varner, Faress Named Wed.; Will Take Office Next Week

Evin Varner of Bennettsville, and Sid Faress of Charleston, have been elected to the offices of Editor and Business Manager of the Blue Stocking, respectively.

In the election on Wednesday, each of the candidates was unopposed which resulted in the voters either registering their approval or disapproval. A total of 195 votes were cast with 154 ballots giving their approval for both candidates and forty-one showing disapproval.

The fact that the two men won an uncontested election, however, need not reflect on their capabilities, for their performance in their new positions will indicate their qualifications.

Varner, a rising junior, received experience as editor of the Bennettsville High School newspaper, and he also was a columnist and wrote news and advertisements for his home town newspaper. Since entering PC, Varner has been a member of the Blue Stocking staff and has acted as editor of the newsletter of his fraternity. He also works for the PC Public Relations Office. Varner entered college on a National 4-H Club scholarship and he is the current president of the International Relations Club.

Faress, a rising senior, for the past year has worked as Circulation Manager and assistant Business Manager for the Blue Stocking.

On learning of his election Varner stated, "I hope that the enthusiasm of the student body for the newspaper will not be impaired by the uncontested election. I will try to secure an outstanding staff, and with their support, will do my best to carry on the long standing tradition of the Blue Stocking."

DR. JONES

Dr. Newton Jones Is Blue Key Advisor

Dr. Newton Jones came to Presbyterian College in 1950, shortly after receiving his doctorate in history from the University of Virginia. He had earned both his Master's (1946) and BA (1941) degrees from Emory University. Four fellowships were awarded him during his period of graduate study.

His study was interrupted, 1941-46, by service in World War II, during which he rose from private to Captain in the quartermaster corps.

Dr. Jones is a regular contributor to publications in the field of history. He is a member of the South Carolina Historical Association, Virginia Historical Society, South Historical Association, and the American Historical Association.

In the fall of 1957 the PC Chapter of Blue Key tapped Dr. Jones as an Honorary Member of the fraternity and selected him as advisor, and he has continued to serve in this capacity until present.

Honor Fraternity Formed For Seniors

In cooperation with the Blue Key Honor Fraternity, Academic Dean Dr. George Bellingrath this week announced the formation of a new senior academic honor fraternity to be called Sigma Kappa Alpha.

This fraternity, which will immediately become independent of its sponsoring organization, Blue Key, requires that candidates for membership have a grade point ratio of 2.4 or better.

Also required is enrollment at PC for a minimum of six semesters or the equivelent in summer schools.

The charter members of Sigma Kappa Alpha are: Mable June Adair of Clinton; Raleigh Hugh Burns of Piedmont, Ala.; O. H. Embry, Jr., of Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. Laura Jo King of Anderson; and James E. Shakespeare of Hollywood, Fla.

Ginsberg Speaks To IRC

"There is a new focus in history," said Mrs. Edward Ginsberg, social historian, as she spoke "off the cuff" to the International Relations Club on Monday evening.

She told the group that the new focus in history is an evaluative view into the "whys" and "wherefores" of events.

Pope Urges Use of Guidance Center

In collaboration with the placement office, Dr. L. B. Pope, director of the Guidance Center, today urged members of the senior class to make use of the guidance center.

Dr. Pope explained that many of the personnel directors who are visiting the campus to interview students are giving timed tests. The guidance center can offer these tests, not only to refresh or familiarize the student with the techniques of timed testing, but also to aid the student in narrowing down his interests in the business field or in selecting graduate schools.

Baillie, Jemison

Renowned Men To Speak

Presbyterian College's spring Fine Arts series, featuring a world-renowned theologian and talented singer of folks songs, was announced today by President Marshall W. Brown.

Dr. John Baillie, dean of the faculty of divinity at the University of Edinburgh (Scotland) and principal emeritus of New College, will visit the PC campus for a series of lectures on March 1-4.

An on April 13-14 Eugene Jemison will present his program of folk music and talk on the inter-relationship between the folk arts and the other fine arts.

Dr. Baillie has a series of interesting and provocative topics for his lecture and assembly addresses and for informal talks with student and faculty groups. In addition to his position at the University of Edinburgh and his writings in the field of theology and philosophy, he has held visiting or special lectureships at several outstanding institutions. Some of these include the University of Toronto, (Emmanuel College), Harvard, New York, Yale, London (King's College), Princeton and Glasgow.

Jemison is an accomplished singer of folk songs and a recognized scholar in the field of folklore and folk music. He also has distinguished himself as a painter and printmaker of folk themes, and has held numerous one-man exhibitions of his work. A selected exhibition of 30 prints, paintings and drawings—recent works by Jemison and representative examples of graphic arts work produced by his students—also is being arranged as a feature of his visit to Presbyterian College.

Prince Represents PC At Blue Key Convention

The Twelfth Biennial Convention of Blue Key National Honor Fraternity was held at the Statler Hilton in Detroit, Mich., December 28 through 30, 1958, with the University of Detroit acting as host. Bruce Prince represented the Presbyterian College Chapter.

During the three-day convention, discussion sessions were held pertaining to fraternity problems on both a local and national level. At the last session several resolutions were passed, the major one establishing a grant for a National Award Program.

Prince reported on his activities at the convention to a recent meeting for the PC chapter.

An Invitation To Talk ....

The Blue Key is happy to "crank" out this edition of the Blue Stocking not only because we are able to give the new editor a few days to organize his staff, but mainly because we are able to carry on a tradition. Nor will we deny that in this issue the Blue Key receives an unusual amount of publicity which we hope will further acquaint you with our activities.

Particularly, this editorial gives us a rare opportunity to share our thoughts with you. We have no wrongs to right or crusades to initiate this week, so we presuppose your approval to keep this informal. First, let's swap the editorial "we" for singular "I," for there is no advantage in expecting the Blue Key to share in my ineptitude.

Recently, I've considered the Blue Key and its relation to you, the student body. Several of you will one day be brothers of this fraternity in recognition of your scholarship and leadership. But what about all of you, the students collectively?

During the past years the Blue Key has served the college in various ways. This is our duty and privilege. During this time we have seen PC change, and we are rightly happy to be a part of its growth.

But how can we serve you more directly? There are many possibilities. Bruce Prince, our chapters' delegate to the National Convention in December, has returned with many ideas and programs from other chapters. And, besides working on this edition of the Blue Stocking, we are pleased to sponsor Sigma Kappa Alpha in recognition of academic achievement.

The preamble to our Official Code states that the Blue Key should promote intellectual attainment and serve the best interests and progress of the college. I hope we have accomplished something along these lines, but again, I have wondered how we might serve you more directly. The Preamble presents another possibility when it states that "Student problems are studied and student life is enriched" through the efforts of the Blue Key.

A way has been opened for us to fulfill this objective. We have been asked by the Administration to serve as a student public relations committee. As such, the Blue Key will meet with President Brown and other faculty representatives to consider problems and possible solutions. (See announcement on page 1)

I believe that the Blue Key is qualified for this task. It is a representative group of men who have already demonstrated their interest in the well-being of PC, and I am certain of their continued service. Also, these men have the ability to recognize student problems and propose remedies.

However, we are only twelve out of over five hundred men and women on the campus. We would serve you in this new capacity but we must know of your opinions on campus problems. I certainly do not have to elucidate on the need of your help and interest nor on the satisfaction to be gained by your participation in campus affairs.

Thus, we hope to serve you more directly in the future as an agency of liaison between the students and administration. We appreciate President Brown's interest in establishing this committee, and we know that he and the other faculty commitee members will respect our efforts on your behalf.

Also, we will promise our own time on your behalf. And so, we invite you—independent, fraternity men, coeds, day students—to talk with any Blue Key man about our campus and its problems.

"Good evening. What'll it be?"

"Coffee."

"Are we nervous?"

"Why sure—you don't see anyone else, do you?"

"I don't guess I do, but I thought you'd want some hot chocolate on a cold night."

"My gosh, man, it's not cold out here. What you got, water in your ears?"

"No, I don't guess it's really cold for ice cream."

"What, are you crazy?" I said coffee, not milk. Will me to get a curdled stomach? You know I didn't ask for cream."

"Don't guess you did, come to think of it. How about sugar, then?"

"Sugar? What you want, to kill me with diabetes? I didn't ask for no sugar. Can't you tell I got diabetes?"

"No, I can't. 'Sa matter of fact, you look pretty helathy. Musta played some football in your day, huh?"

"Football? I hate that game. Turn off that TV, will you?"

"Okay."

Blue Key Gives History of Service

By RON BARTLETT

In 1924 the University of Florida was bracing itself for the annual Dad's Day and Homecoming, which was expected to exceed in attendance all former gatherings at the school.

Dr. A. A. Murphree, then president of the University, called on Major B. C. Riley to correlate and coordinate all the plans for the entertainment of guests on the campus.

Major Riley, in turn, selected twenty-five outstanding student leaders who held places of prominence in the student body. Homecoming went off well, as was expected.

Afterwards, they decided to meet regularly and discuss other ways of improving student life. The progress and results obtained by the group were amazing. With the idea of cooperation with other schools, Riley passed the idea along, and in 1925 phenomenal growth of the Blue Key began.

Blue Key has been active at Presbyterian College since 1932. In 1931, President Marshall W. Brown, then Dean, along with Col. R. E. Wysor, Jr., PMS&T, and C. W. Grafton, English professor, established an honorary fraternity on the campus called the Archons.

The Archons joined another honorary society and received a charter from Blue Key in 1932.

ALPHA PSI DELTA

The Alpha Psi Delta Sorority held its weekly meeting at the Infirmary at Thornwell Orphanage Tuesday night. Plans were made for Valentine's Party to be held at the Youth Center at Thornwell Saturday night. Officers for the coming year have been elected, with Miss Virginia Neil serving in the presidential capacity.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Plans were completed for the Alpha Psi Chapter Valentine's to be held this weekend. Plans were also begun for our "Black and White Ball" to be held in Charlotte this Spring in conjunction with the other chapters in the area. The pledges began their work on remodeling the kitchen and adjoining rooms.

KAPPA ALPHA

At the weekly meeting of Beta Pi Chapter, Mr. Jim Crews, Kappa Alpha Eastern Regional Adviser, was welcomed to the chapter during one of his semi-annual visits from the national office. Final arrangements were made for a "Wild West" party for this Saturday night, as were further plans for the annual "Old South Ball."

PI KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting Tuesday night, plans were discussed concerning the "Barefoot Ball" to be held in honor of the pledges later this month. The stag supper held last week was a big success.

PI KAPPA PHI

Beta Chapter had its regular meeting on Tuesday night. Plans were discussed for the coming pledge party on February 21. Girls from Lekine will hostess at "Peck" Cornwall's "Mary Lou" Ranch.

SIGMA NU

At the weekly meeting, the pledges were congratulated on their work and decorations for the party held last Saturday night. Plans are being made for the Military Ball weekend and the coming events of Spring by the Planning Committee.

THETA CHI

Plans were made for our Valentine's party this Saturday with a dinner to begin festivities at 7:00 p. m. Mrs. Dick Cushnie was elected as new Chapter Sweetheart, to be crowned at Saturday night's party.

Blue Key Celebrates 27 Years

By RON BARTLETT

Each year students on campus are met with some strange sights, one of which is the informal initiation of the college's more prominent student leaders. They will be wearing signs fore and aft, much in the same manner as freshmen goof-offs, except that the signs will be in the shape of a key. They will be carrying a week-end bag containing gum, candy, cigarettes, a brick and a raw egg with autographs on it.

Then, on a particular afternoon these same men line up on their hands and knees on the plaza and try to win a race by pushing an egg across the campus with their nose.

So, if you happen to see some boys dressed up in such regalia don't get excited and think they're "nuts, or all shook up over something," for, if you will note they are being initiated into the Blue Key National Honor Fraetnrity. This is a way of calling the Student Body's attention to one fact that they have been selected by their fellow students as oustanding.

This year the Blue Key is celebrating its twenty-seventh anniversary on the Presbyterian College campus. Blue Key was established here on March 29, 1932.

The work and purpose of the Blue Key fraternity is not all as jocular as the initiation ceremonies may make it appear. Behind the Blue Key is a serious and worthy purpose. The fraternity was established to foster leadership in various students in the colleges and universities throughout the country. Among its purposes are to promote high ideals, faith in God, intellectual achievement, and service to one's fellowman.

The Blue Key of Presbyterian strives for better relations between colleges with which we have intercollegiate contact. Annually delegations are welcomed from Wofford and Newberry Colleges for a club program, with the intention of bettering relations before football games. PC's chapter sends a delegate to their schools for the same purpose.

BEHIND THE BLUES

By BOB MATHEWS

SPRING FOOTBALL PRACTICE BEGINS

Thirty-four returning Blue Hose answered the call Tuesday afternoon for the initial spring practice session. 17 of these are lettermen. Spring practice will consist of 30 practice days and will terminate with the annual spring game.

Coach Frank Jones said the positions hardest hit by the loss of 12 seniors will be the ends, tackles, and right halfback. The guard position is the strongest it has been in ten years even though John Firby is a graduating first team guard.

For the first time in years, the quarterback situation poses no headache. Bob Waters and Nat Cole, who ran one and two respectively in directing the successful '58 operation, will see action again.

Assistant Coach Clyde Ehrhardt indicated that the line shows good competitive spirit and has good experience. Some changes in position will be tried this spring which should prove most interesting.

Fundamentally, the Blue Hose are improving and next year they will be a "hard nosed" football team.

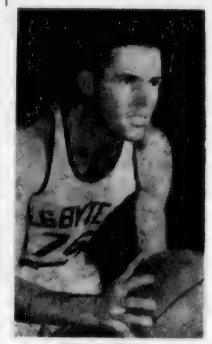
CASWELL IS UNSUNG HERO

Ken Caswell, senior from Paris, Ky., is considered by our coaches as the best basketball player in the state. Although Ken is not high scorer each game, he is second to none in competitive spirit and natural ability. We certainly hope Ken will receive the recognition he deserves.

TENNIS TEAM BUILDS

The loss of Brownlow, Potter, and Peck will certainly hurt during an unusually tough season. Coach Leighton stated that the team has worked hard all year and made as much progress as possible.

The new recruits, Elliott, Frampton, Stone, Caviness, and Greenlsade, show considerable ability on the court, and the "old pros," Hoffmann, Shakespeare, and Daniels, have come along nicely and have set a fine example for the new men. Leighton looks forward to an interesting season due to the fact that much of it will be against the better teams, such as Harvard, Yale, Miami, Rollins, Georgia Tech and George Washington. They are hoping to upset at least a couple of teams that consider PC an easy match this year. Team spirit, a main factor, is continuing high.



Jim Shakespeare, senior from Hollywood, Fla., is to be congratulated on his election as team captain.

INTRAMURALS IMPROVED

Our intramural program has really come into its own due to the outstanding work of Mr. Montgomery who is Director of Student Activities.

This year, many problems which plagued past intramurals have been overcome. The success of the program can also be attributed to the active participation of both fraternity and independent teams and the conduct exemplified by the participants. Possibly even greater interest could be aroused by the acquisition of colorful uniforms, similar to those of the Chinese Bandits.

Hose Swamp Newberry Indians 95 - 75 Before Overflow Crowd

• Wells' 23 Tops Hose Scoring

Bedlam broke loose in LeRoy Springs Gymnasium Tuesday night as the Blue Hose swamped the Newberry Indians 95-75 before an overflow crowd. The game was a "must" win for the Blue Hose to keep their hopes alive for a tie in the Little Four Conference Championship.

PC and Newberry battled on even terms for the first six minutes with the scoring at 18 all. During the next several minutes the Blue Hose ran up a 29-18 margin. From then on the Hosemen dominated the game.

PC left the floor at halftime leading 43-27. The second half opened with PC still taking command and building up a 24-point lead, winning by the final 20-point margin.

It was a great victory for the Blue Hose as they came through with flying colors when the chips were down. PC placed four men in double figures for the night, with Sonny Wells playing the best game of his career and leading the point parade with 23 points. Ralph Chambers with 22 points was close behind.

Bill Sullivan and Ken Caswell followed with 18 and 16 points, respectively. However, high point honors for the night went to Newberry's Carl Short with 27 points. Sonny Dugan pitched in 18 points in a losing cause.

Newberry entered the game leading the conference with a 4-1 record, but before the night was over they had fallen to second place behind Wofford who has a 3-1 record. Newberry needed only one victory to assure them the conference title, but they failed in two successive tries against Wofford and PC.

A victory against the Terriers next Tuesday night could give the Hosemen a 4-2 record resulting in a three-way tie for the championship. However, a win by Wofford would give them the title, with Newberry and PC tied for second.

The Hose travel to Statesboro Saturday night for a game with the Georgia Teachers Professors, always a dangerous threat. In their previous meeting, the Blue Hose emerged victorius 81-63.

Key Has Athletes Among Its Number

By RON ISGER

The Blue Key has always been well represented by prominent athletes at PC. This year the following men are included:

Jim Shakespeare—Jim is a tennis player who for the past three years has helped lead PC to victorious seasons. Jim's consistent playing has earned for him the captainship of the netters for the coming season.

In addition to being outstanding on the tennis court, he is currently the senior representative to the Student Council, president of his fraternity, and he was selected for Who's Who. Jim is also active in the many tennis tournaments during the year and in doing so has brought additional prestige to his already outstanding career at PC.

Ralph Chambers—A perfect example of desire and determination, Ralph has mentored the Basketeers for the past two years and has been a familiar figure in many PC victories. Ralph is a fine competitor on the court and true example of sportsmanship. Other than being an asset to the basketball team, he has excelled scholastically by being a consistent Dean's List man.

Better known as "Champ," Ralph was chairman of the Freshman Control Board last fall and is presently president of the Block P Club. He is a member of the Sophomore Academic Honor Society.

Ken Caswell—Ken is another one of our basketball players who is a fine example of the fighting spirit of Presbyterian College. Ken captained the Basketeers last year to a victorious season. Ken, other than being an outstanding athlete, is also president of Tau Phi Pi and BSU, vice-president of the Block P Club, treasurer of the Scabbard and Blade Military Society, and a consistent member of the Dean's List.

Bob Mathews—Bob is primarily known for his football ability but is also a member of the baseball team. He was a member of the backfield which led the PC Blue Hose to a Little Three championship, the first in ten years. As a member of the baseball team he is expected to turn in another fine all-round performance during the approaching season. Besides being a fine competitor on the field, Bob is vice-president of the SCA, Business Manager of the PaC-SaC, and president of the Senior Class.

Ron Isger—Ron is a member of the Blue Hose football team, lettering all four years. Also, he was named to the Chemical and Engineering Football Honor Roll for 1958 by the Chemcial Engineering News. Ron has likewise proved himself in this classroom by being selected for the Dean's List. His other campus activities have ranged from the vice-presidency of the student body and Senior Class to membership in the Scabbard and Blade.

Sonny Wells Moves Into Starting Five

Sonny Wells has finally developed into an outstanding player for the Blue Hose basketeers. Wells started his career at Furman, but discovered that PC needed his height more than Lyles Alley.

Coach Redford recognized the potential in Wells and gave him a great deal of individual attention during spring practice last year. This effort has started to pay off as Wells moves into PC's starting five.

Redford considers Wells as one of the finest shooters, for his height in the South. This confidence is borne out by the latest release of statistics by the NAIA. Wells leads all players in the Carolinas with a sizzling average of 62 per cent from the field.

Wells is handicapped by his lack of weight but has compensated for this with his determination. It is likely that Wells will be a key factor in bringing the Little Four championship home to PC.

Mid-Season

Grey Ghosts Lead League In Furious Intramural Play

Intramural basketball continues with interesting results as it nears mid-season. Of the games completed by last Wednesday, Pi Kappa Alpha handed the Ferocious Five their first defeat in four years, 41 to 35. PiKA held the lead throughout the game but never had more than an eight-point margin. Harry Hoffmann and Bob Waters led the victors with 15 and 13 points, respectively, while Jimmy Dunn and Rich Shrigley had 11 each for the losers.

Earlier in the week, Harold Simmons, with 13 points, led the Garnet Five to an upset victory over the Chinese Bandits. The Ferocious Five outmanned the All-Stars by a 41 to 34 score. Bill Stone was high man for the losers, with Dunn and Shrigley sharing the honors for the winners.

PiKA recorded another win at the expense of the Sigma Nu's to the count of 44 to 28. Bob Waters hit 20 points for PiKA and Carl Adams led the Sigs. Also, the Chinese Bandits continued their colorful play in defeating PiK Phi 47 to 20. Jimmy Kolb paced the Orientals and Tommy Middleton was high man for the PiKap's.

Intramural standings through Wednesday:

	Won	Lost
Grey Ghost	4	0
Pi Kappa Alpha	4	1
Ferocious Five	3	1
Chinese Bandits	3	1
Campus All-Stars	2	1

Alumni Blue Keymen Display Capabilities In School Affairs

The faculty Alumni members of the campus Blue Key were all prominent members of the Student Body during their years at Presbyterian College.

Ben Hay Hammet, Director of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs, is a graduate of the class of '43. Hammet served as sports editor of The Blue Stocking and was associate editor of the PaC SaC plus. Director of College Publicity. He was selected for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities and appeared in the 1942-43 edition of that publication.

Lewis A. Hay, Instructor in Bible and Greek, is a graduate of the Class of '49. He was president of the College Choir, a member of the Pan-Hellenic Council and vice-president of Blue Key. He was a member of the Rifle Team and served as captain his senior year. His name appeared in the 1949 edition of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

G. Edward Campbell, College Business Manager, is a graduate of the Class of '50. Mr. Campbell was president of the College Choir and chairman of the Faculty-Student Advisory Committee. He was selected for the 1950 edition of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Andrew S. Howard, Instructor in Mathematics, is a graduate of the Class of '54. He was president of the Student Body, a member of the SCA Cabinet, a consecutive Dean's List student, a member of Scabbard and Blade, member of the Knapsack Staff, and vice-president of the Junior Class; he was a Company Commander in the ROTC, winner of the Hudson Military Award.

Blue Key Is Representative

Blue Key represents a cross-section of campus affairs. Its members are the leaders in every element of campus life, be it extra-curricular, scholarship, military, athletic, or social and religious activities.

The present members include the president and vice-president of the Student Body, presidents of the Senior Class, Student Christian Association, and one social fraternity; the editor of one campus publication and business manager of another; the commander of the Scabbard and Blade; the captains of two athletic teams and the president of the Robed Choir.

Five members of the Blue Key were elected as superlatives by the Senior Class. Three members are consecutive members of the Dean's List and probably most important of all, six men were selected to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Thirty Hours Required For Major Under New Program Of Study

Changed Curriculum Will Feature Related Courses Instead of Minor

Academic Dean George C. Bellingrath announced today the frist major change in the college's academic program in over two decades.

The new program will involve the discontinuation of the major and minor system in effect for a number of years. Students will now study in "Areas of Concentration" to obtain a major requiring a total of 30 semester hours credit. Minors as such are no longer necesary, although 18 hours of credit in related fields will be necessary.

This change is a result of an educator's survey of the college sponsored by the Presbyterian Board of Education in Richmond. The recommendations of the survey group were submitteed to the Academic Advisory Committee, which laid the groundwork for the program.

"This program enables a great concentration in a particular field," Dean Bellingrath stated.

The 1959-1960 catalog, soon to be off the presses, explains that candidates for all degrees offered by Presbyterian would ". . . require 30 semester hours in a particular field, and such other courses, not to exceed 18 hours, in related fields, as may be prescribed by the Department of major interest."

One problem that this change involves is that of teacher candidates, who have often been required to have the equivalent of two minors, one being in education.

Bellingrath advised that adherence to the new prgoram would not be required of any presently enrolled students, next year's freshman class to be the first to come under it. "We expect to have a meeting with the freshman and sophomore classes," he added, "to explain the program to them. Freshmen will particularly be encouraged to take the option of following this program."

The revamping of the system also produced there new "functional" majors.

There will be a major in Pre-Med, whose makeup will not vary greatly from the present program. A major to teach General Science will feature sort of a "sampling" of all science courses.

A major to teach social studies would require about 30 hours of history, psychology, political science, sociology, etc.

A second recommendation of the survey group which is being put into effect in conjunction with the new requirements, is a larger-scale division of the curriculum. This divides all courses into either the Humanities, Social Studies, the Sciences, or Military.

Corps Commander Speaks Next Week

Major General Frank S. Bowen, Jr., XII Corps Commander, will visit the Presbyterian College campus next Wednesday and speak to the student body on Formosa.

Lt. Col. W. W. Barnett, Professor of Military Science and Tactics at PC, said this is the general's first visit to the college since he became commander of the XII United States Corps (Reserve) upon its reactivation last November.

Prior to this, General Bowen served as Chief, Military Assistance Advisory Group, Taipei, Taiwan. (Formosa)

His visit will coincide with the annual informal inspection of the PC cadet corps.

MAJ. GEN. BOWEN

A 1926 graduate of the United States Military Academy, Gen. Bowen has served in the Army since that time. During World War II he was assistant chief of staff for operations of the Eighth Army during much of the fighting in the Far East.

During the Korean conflict, Gen. Bowen commanded the 18th Regiment Combat Team in Korea. It was in this capacity that he led the 187th on a jump north of Pyongyang which cut off the Korean Communists attempting to escape from their fallen capital.

Since that time Gen. Bowen has served as Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff for Plans and Operations of the Army Element of SHAPE at Paris, France. He also has commanded the Sixth Armored Division at Fort Leoard Wood.

The XII Corps, one of two reserve corps in the Third US Army, now supervises the Presbyterian College ROTC Unit. South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, and Tennessee comprise the XII Corps area.

The reactivated corps has behind it a history of hard fighting during World War II. It was activated in 1942, and during the next three years saw action in France, Luxemburg, Czechoslovakia, Austria, and Germany. The Corps participated in the Battle of the Bulge.

Top Staff Positions Announced By Editor

Four top members of the editorial staff of the 1959 Blue Stocking have been announced this week by newly-elected Editor Evin Varner.

The four, who will serve for this semester and first semester of next year are as follows: Maurice Schwartz of Laurinburg, N. C., Managing Editor; Graham Edmunds of Decatur, Ga., Feature Editor; Billy Hatchett of College Park, Ga., News Editor; and Martin Chitty of Denmark, Sports Editor.

Members of the staff are Ed Loring, sports; Alice Watkins, secretary; Bob Stevens, sports; Jinks Harrell, features; Jerry Chitty, sports; Ken Nix, sports; Don Kay, news; Don Dunlap, circulation; Worrell Kurtz, feature; and Phil Bell, circulation.

The staff still has several vacancies which are to be filled in the future.

Evangelistic Teams Sponsored By Club

The Ministerial Club, in seeking to carry out the important phase of evangelism, has been sponsoring evangelistic teams which direct services in churches of South Carolina and Georgia. These teams are supervised by Larry Crocker, chairman of the teams, and Dr. Fraser, club advisor.

Four team captains—Don Hendrix, Paul Reed, Neil Bain, and Pat Griffin—have arranged services for their particular teams, consisting of seven or eight members of the Ministerial Club.

Participation of each team includes preaching, talking with young people, praying, reading the Scriptures, and giving testimonies.

Anyone interested in the Ministerial Club and this work should contact Dr. Fraser or Don Hendrix. All students thinking about religious work are invited to attend Ministerial Club meetings and take part in its activities.

This week's team—Allan Pitts, Tony Gavalas, Jack Clontz, and Sanders Read—went to Mt. Pleasant, S. C., Thursday.

Procter Speaks To BSU

Dr. Robert A. Procter, Jr., Assistant Professor of Psychology and Religious Education at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, was guest speaker for the Baptist Student Union last Friday night.

His topic was "God Speaks to Man." He came to PC in connection with the semi-annual missions tour, sponsored by the state BSU.

Thurmond Will Keynote Revamped IRC Program

• Event Scheduled April 6-10

South Carolina Senator Strom Thurmond is scheduled to speak to the Presbyterian College Student Body on April 10, ending a revamped International Relations Week, it was announced today.

The annual week-long event originally scheduled for April 20-24 has been changed to April 6-10 due to conflicts with speakers. Sponsored by the International Relations Club, the observance brings outstanding personalities to the campus to speak.

A native of Aiken, Thurmond became Senator in 1955. He has quickly made a place for himself on Capitol Hill, as a member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. He is noted for his outspokenness on military affairs.

The theme for 1959 will be "Our Changing World," and Senator Thurmond will have as his topic, "Our Changing Nation."

Harry Shuler Dent, a PC alumnus and chief administrative assistant to the senator, will probably accompany Mr. Thurmond when he speaks to the Student Body and invited guests during the April 10th chapel period.

Dr. Gettys Has Two New Works In Print

Two new religious booklets by Presbyterian College Professor Joseph M. Gettys have been accepted for spring publication, it was announced today.

Dr. Gettys, who serves as professor of Bible at PC, thus will add "How to Study Acts" and "How to Teach Acts" to his growing collection of 19 titles in the field of religious writing.

These latest two booklets are to be published by the John Knox Press of Richmond, Va., and will appear on April 20.

Of all his 19 books and booklets, Dr. Getty is probably most widely known for his publication, "What Presbyterians Believe."

Society Has Initiation

Company K, 10th Regiment, of the National Society of Scabbard and Blade will hold its regular meeting tonight at the home of Maj. and Mrs. Harry F. Lowman.

Prior to dinner, two men will be initiated into the company. They are Capt. Fred J. Stanley and 2nd Lt. John Greer.

Speaker for the evening will be Col. Harry McSween, who served in the Italian campaign of World War II.

A Lady Prof

Mrs. Carter Joins Chemistry Dept.

Now heading the freshman chemistry department is Mrs. Kenneth Nolon Carter, who began work here early in the semester after the untimely death of Dr. Purdum. Interviewed by The Blue Stocking Mrs. Carter revealed some of the side of the college professor that few students ever see.

Mrs. Carter, who holds AB and MS degrees, graduated from Erskine College, and did graduate work at Vanderbilt. Mrs. Carter is the wife of Dr. Kenneth N. Carter, present head of the chemistry department here. Dr. and Mrs. Carter have a son, Kenneth, Jr., who will be two in April.

Mrs. Carter has had seven years of experience in college teaching, and four years experience in high school work; she says that she loves her work. However, Mrs. Carter said, "Although I am enjoying my work very much, I dread the results of the first tests." She says that she plans to remain the entire semester.

MRS. N. G. CARTER

Mrs. Carter majored in math and chemistry and minored in physics in college. She says that she is most enthusiastic about chemistry. "No other subject is as interesting," she says. Tennis was the participation sport for Mrs. Carter in college, and she says that she still enjoys playing. Also, she says that she likes to read and knit, and she does both at the same time. Mrs. Carter enjoys the boys in her classes; she says that they are most polite and quite responsive.

Mrs. Carter worked at Oak Ridge for one year, and has worked there several summers. General opinions from her students point to the fact that PC is quite lucky to have her here, if only the classes could catch up with her.

Meeting A Challenge

This, it has often been observed, is the age of Specialization. This week, by the inauguration of the new major system, Presbyterian College made a large step in meeting the demands of the age.

As in the case with almost any change, there will be those who will grieve, protest, and fume. There will be charges of: "Easier—no minor," and "Harder—30 hours!" When one has examined the program, it is obvious that it is not appreciably easier or harder . . . it all adds up to just a larger major.

Therein lies the beauty of this new program, for today man is learning "more and more about less and less." As Dean Bellingrath pointed out, "In this world, there is so much to know, that one needs to know more about a smaller segment." PC graduates who enter graduate school will now be in a better position to compete with other students who had as many as 40 hours on their majors as undergraduates. Students entering the teaching profession will do so with a better understanding of their field. In the past a student's major, minor, and electives might be totally unrelated. Now each field will compliment the other.

As We Embark . . .

Observing a blind friend, we have often wondered how he felt as he went into an unfamiliar part of town or into a strange house . Now, after a week of staff arrangement, picture taking, and deadline making—we think we know —awed and overwhelmed.

As we embark on a year's tenure at the helm of The Blue Stocking, we are awed at the fine reputation and outstanding quality of the paper which must be lived up to. We are at times overwhelmed at the complexities of the job and the responsibilities that it entails. We know that we shall lean heavily on a fine staff and your support—for after all, The Blue Stocking is the voice of the student body and should be used as such.

The blind man knows that in spite of obstacles, he can achieve his objective. We promise to devote ourselves to bringing to you a top-notch paper, whose editorial columns will not be swayed by any factions, and whose quality will be deserving of the trust placed in us.

Zeta Theta Chapter of Sigma Nu wishes to offer congratulations to the following boys who were initiated into the Brotherhood Monday night—Marion Stacy Coker, John Greer, Flash Gordon, Phil Dick McGaughey, Charles Clotfelter, Byron Holdworth, Jinks Harrell, Bob Stevens, Melvin Sloan, Ingald Clark, and to our new pledges, Sonny Bell, Morris, and Nat Cole.

At the regular meeting Tuesday night plans discussed for the forthcoming Military Ball week

Book Review

Introducing Music Is Outline Guide

Quite a number of books have come off the presses under the Barnes and Noble College Outline Series, a series which provides summaries of important academic subjects and instruction in popular activities.

Now comes Introduction To Music, the first book to help students who are not very well informed about music. Through this remarkably precise, authoritative, economical and coherent book one can become familiar with the basic elements of music.

All recognized approaches to music are discussed. For those students taking music courses or who would like to know more about music, this book would be quite an asset.

The author, Hugh M. Miller, Professor of Music at the University of New Mexico, was a Fulbright Lecturer during 1958.

Torre Case Draws Comme

Some college papers commented on the case of TV columnist Torre—jailed for her refusal to reveal a source of information to a York Federal court.

University of Kansas DAILY KANSAN believes "the most satisfa conclusion and result of the case would be for the judge to set a dent in common law by deciding that Miss Torre did, in fact, have a of confidence, or for a wave of public opinion to force Congress to a law to that effect.

Often the sources of stories that citizens should know, need to insist on the protection of anonymity. If this protection is denied or the ened, as in the Marie Torre case, these sources will dry up, and them many a story that needs to be told."—(ACP)

Hopping Up To Military

Percival Crudely - Ace Reporter

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

eral, elections for Blue Sock editor and business manager are not too far gone, and, of course, with any new administration, there is a new staff. Ace reporter on this term's Sock staff is Percival Crudely (PC for short), who says, "All the news that's fit to print—isn't fit to read."

Percival will be working diligently this semester and next to bring you all the latest news. It was last Tuesday, as well as I can remember, Percival and I were hoppin' up to Military class from the armory, each with a BAR on our shoulders, and we were talking.

"PC?"

"Yeah, Graham."

"You paid your Military money yet?"

"Yeah, they finally put the clutches on me and I had to depart with four of the lovellest greenbacks' I'd ever had, and the thing about it is that I just got a five-spot in the mail that morning."

"Well, PC, you know the old saying, 'Here today, gone tomorrow'."

"I guess you're right."

"PC, didn't they tell us that if we send our money we wouldn't have to carry weapons?"

"I think you're right, G. B., why?"

"If it's true, then what are we doing with these guns (and I use the term loosely) on our shoulders?"

"That's a good quest—say, who's that out there on the plaza, and what are they doing?"

"It looks like Major Lowman and Captain Bennett to me, PC. I don't know what they're doing, but the way things are marked off out there, I guess that they're playing a new type of shuffleboard."

"Hey Graham, I hear a siren."

"Yeah, how about that. Sounds like they're coming this way."

"There it is now stopping in front of the new chapel, Graham."

"Nothing to worry about Percival, its just the Clinton Metropolis tow service pulling another unfortunate victim out of that canyon in the middle of the road."

"Man, I was afraid that they were coming to get me for a minute."

"PC, did you hear about the survey that Powell just finished making?"

"No, G. B., sure didn't, what about it?"

"It seems that he made a survey of the students to see what they were eating and what they weren't."

"Well, what did they find out?"

"Statistics prove that more students were switching to peanut butter."

"Yeah, I figured as much. Say, are you going to the big dance this weekend?"

"What dance?"

"You know, the one everyone is growing beards for."

"That's not this weekend, PC!"

"Why not, it's George Washington's birthday, isn't it?"

"Forget it, PC. Speaking of hair, I hear that Tau Phi is conducting a scientific experiment to produce a crop of human hair for one of the outstanding heads on campus."

"No joke!"

"No, man, there ain't nothing short about this school."

"I didn't hear that, but I did hear that Mr. Adams was the father of a little baby girl."

"Yeah, I saw him the other day, and he was telling me that she crys in perfect Spanish."

"Remarkable!"

"Simply amazing for her age."

"Say, G. B., did you hear Dr. Stevenson's brother speak in chapel the other day?"

"Yep, sure did."

"Pretty good, huh?"

"Yeah, I reckon, if you like chapel."

"By the way, G. B., what time is it?"

"Golly, it's almost 7:30. We'd better hurry on to military."

"Yeah, I guess so. Sure is going to be a beautiful day when the sun comes out."

Senior Cagers Play Last Game

KEN CASWELL

SONNY WELLS

Cagers Blast Abbey; End Regular Season

Alert ball playing combined with their ability to take advantage of breaks, gave the Blue Hose sweet victory over one of the most highly rated small colleges in the nation.

History repeats istelf. Fans will remember last season when a confident Abbey five, boasting 16 wins, were clipped one point by the underdog PC. Belmont Abbey has lost two out of their last 44—both of these to the Blue Hose five.

After the pre-game clowning exhibition led by "Sunshine Doyle" the game got underway with Abbey sinking the first basket. However, the tables turned and PC led 12-7 with only seven minutes gone in the game. The Hosemen led through the majority of the first half, but due to trouble with the fast break, the lead changed hands and Abbey was ahead by one at the midway point, 32-31.

The beginning of the second half saw the Crusaders take a quick 38-33 lead which was soon overtaken by the Blue Hose. PC was never behind again, although their lead was never more than six points.

Wells left the game via the foul route, with 11 minutes left, and was replaced by Long who did a very capable job on the boards. Wells, playing his last game in the Blue did a fine job against a tremendous height advantage and contributed 8 points to the cause. He left the floor to a standing ovation.

Balhawking by Sullivan and Caswell kept the lead for the PC'uns as the Crusaders started a heavy press. Ralph Chambers, although not getting his usual point percentage, played an excellent defensive game in holding 6'-7" Doyle to only 11 points.

Abbey pulled within 3 points in the final seconds and the game ended with Caswell going to the charity line for two. The Crusaders left the floor and PC chalked up its 10th win against eight losses. A very exciting end to the home court season.

The team will lose four starters by way of graduation, and no one knows just how much they will be missed.

Peppy Bill Sullivan led the Hosemen in the scoring column with 12 points. He also played one of his best floor games. Von Bargen, 6'-10" center for the Crusaders, led for the losers with fourteen points and was high for the game.

All eyes now turn to Anderson for the playing of the Little Four Tournament next weekend, and the hopes of a Blue Hose crown.

Hose Tie For Lead As Terriers Fall

The PC five started their battle with Wofford slow, but moved on to grab a 53-34 halftime advantage Then, with a very hot second half, glided into a 97-71 victory over the Terriers.

Over 700 fans packed LeRoy Springs gym to watch the Hosemen outdo the Terriers on the round-ball court.

The victory insures PC of a tie with Newberry for the Little Four crown. Wofford journeys to Erskine this weekend, and if successful, would mean a three-way tie for the championship. Both Newberry and PC have a 4-2 record, with Wofford traveling on a 3-2 count. The championship will be divided at the tournament next week.

Ken Caswell set the pace for the Hosemen. Caswell hit 11 of thirteen from the floor and two charity shots to lead the scoring with 24 points. Chambers collected 21 points and did his regular job on the boards. Sonny Wells shared rebounding honors with Chambers. Sullivan and Stratton continuously led the fast break, getting those quick points which kept the Terriers baffled all night long.

Wofford scorers were led by Bradford with 15 points. Perkins and Barbee shared the runner-up honors—each dumping in 14.

With five minutes left in the game, Coach Redford cleared his bench of second and third stringers.

Civic Clubs Honor PC Football Team

Clinton civic clubs and the Chamber of Commerce will join in staging a banquet honoring Presbyterian coaches and the 1958 Blue Hose football team on March 2.

The dinner, to be held in the PC dining hall, is being sponsored by the Clinton Chamber of Commerce, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and the Civitan, Exchange, Kiwanis and Lions Clubs.

Frank Jones, PC athletic director and head football coach, and assistants Clyde Ehrhardt and Courts Redford will be honored guests for the occasion, along with some 50 members of the Blue Hose football team which won six games, lost three and tied one during the past season. The team won the Little Four championship and Jones was named South Carolian Coach of the Year.

Hugh L. Eichelberger, acting in behalf of the Chamber of Commerce, serves as coordinator for the banquet.

BEHIND THE BLUES

By MARTIN CHITTY, Sports Editor

The close of this basketball season will also be the close of four colorful PC cagers' careers.

Little Four Tournament time will see co-captains Bill Sullivan and Ralph Chambers, as well as Ken Caswell and Sonny Wells' final wearing of Blue. These four boys have, each in their own way, been an integral part of the Hose court success for the last four years. All four are enjoying a great finale by averaging in the double figures.

PC fans and students will long remember the two small peppery guards, Caswell and Sullivan. Whatever these fellows have lacked in size they most assuredly make up for it in courage and team spirit. In these two departments, they must rank as giants. In game after game we have seen them dribble opponents crazy, fire circus-like shots from the outside and set up scoring plays in clock-like fashion.

Then there's always the man who can be termed "The Backbone of the Team"—Ralph Chambers, a topflight forward in any man's book. He was last year's leading scorer with a 17-point average. Although his average hasn't been as high this year, his team value hasn't lessened a jot. He still gets the points when they're needed and has posed all season as a deference bulwark.

If a "Mr. Improvement" award were given, then certainly Center Sonny Wells should come in for a share of the laurels. No credit can be given without mentioning the hard work and many hours spent by Sonny on the court in his never-ending effort to improve his game.

To these four boys we extend a heartfelt thanks for the work and effort they've each done. Good luck to them . . . and the entire team in tournament play.

We're pulling for you to bring back the crown.

Grey Ghosts Undefeated In Intramural Basket Play

This week, the most active of the season in the intramural basketball league, ended with the undefeated Gray Ghosts again in first place.

The week began with the Confederates topping Theta Chi 44-29. Larry Wood and John Gossett took high honors of their respective teams. The Alpha Sigs were halted by the narrow margin of five points in their outing against the Pi Kaps. The final game of the evening saw the Gray Ghosts upholding their usual style of play, downing the Chinese Bandits 48-33.

The second night of competition pitted Sigma Nu against the Bandits in a heated game. The Sigs, led by John McIntosh, showed the impressive score of 52-44. The Campus All-Stars all but ousted the Rebels off the court with an 86-21 victory.

Later in the week Alpha Sigma Phi held fast to an early lead, overrunning the cold Rebels by twenty points. Pi Kappa Phi, in their best game of the season, led the All-Stars 42-39. Pi Kappa Alpha, with top approximately six games and hold the "top ten" scoring honors of the season: Stone (All-Stars) 110 points; Waters (PiKA) 83; L. Vaughan (Campus All-Stars) 73; Gossett (Theta Chi) 72; Bennett (PiKA) 69; Joiner (Gray Ghosts) 64; Porter (Gray Ghosts) 60; McIntosh (Sigma Nu) 59; Watson (Campus All-Stars) 58; and Hunter (Gray Ghosts) 57.

Artillery, Infantry, and Armor Take Largest Number of ROTC Assignments

Seven Army branches were represented as this year's list of PC's ROTC seniors and their branch assignments were released Wednesday. Again the three combat branches — Artillery, Infantry, and Armor—took the largest number of men, taking ten, seven, and [illegible] respectively. Ordnance and the Chemical Corps were assigned two men each, and one man each was assigned to the Army Security Agency and Signal Corps.

Those assigned to the various branches are:

Artillery: Penn Ballenger, O'Neil Chester, Sonny Embry, Roger Godwin, Toby Hunter, Ron Isger, Carroll Wilson, Al Oquinn, Bob Hafner, and Trott Riley.

Infantry: Bruce Prince, C. E. Quinn, Ben Smith, Dick Carter, Tom Childers, John Furby, and Ted Straby.

Armor: Ron Bartlett, Don Chapman, Jim Elliott, Fred Stanley, and Charles Dowdle.

The Chemical Corps claims Bob Biggerstaff and Ken Caswell, and Paul McGee and Joe Nesler were named in Ordnance. Ray Hodge is the Signal Corps assignee, with John Greer rounding out the list in the Army Security Agency.

Major Lewman was extremely pleased that so many of this year's senior cadets will serve their country in the Armor Branch.

PC Gets $10,326

Presbyterian College has received a check for $10,326.82 as its share in the 1959 distribution of funds from the South Carolina Foundation of Independent Colleges.

The Foundation has mailed out checks totaling $131,051 to its member colleges, increasing the total distributed since 1956 to $427,800.

Representing gifts from 118 corporations, both local and national, the funds will be shared on a "community chest" basis by the nine accredited, independent colleges in the state.

Foundation chairman J. A. Barry, Jr., who is president of Coker College, expressed appreciation to the businesses which made the distribution possible. "These funds," Dr. Barry said, "will strengthen our colleges at a crucial time in their history and a continuation and increase in this assistance is necessary to our future independence."

Each college's share in the Foundation distribution varies according to the number of students enrolled and by the amount of gifts which donors have earmarked for a specific college.

Coker College received $19,586.38; Columbia, $10,546.25; Converse, $30,233.39; Erskine, $10,168.08; Furman, $16,326.50; Limestone, $9,212.31; Newberry, $11,880.00; Presbyterian, $10,326.82; Wofford, $11,

Presbyterian To Participate In Student Loan Fund

Presbyterian College has received $6,144 for participation in the National Defense Student Loan Fund, President Marshall W. Brown announced today.

He said this amount is part of the initial grant in a new program of the deucational division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The program is designed "to stimulate and assist in the establishment at institutions of higher education of funds for the making of low interest loans to students in need to pursue their courses of study in such institutions."

The fund provides for loans up to a maximum of $1,000 per year for the individual student. It authorized special consideration to students of superior academic background who express a desire to teach and those who have superior capabilities in science, mathematics, engineering or language.

Those students who, after leaving after graduation will receive a 50 per cent reduction in the amount of borrowed funds they must repay, spread over a five-year period at 10 per cent annually.

Choir Trip . . .

Tomorrow the PC Choir pulls out to present two concerts in Georgia.

Sunday morning they will sing at the Gordon Street Presbyterian Church in Atlanta, and that evening at the First Presbyterian Church in LaGrange.

They will return to the campus sometime Monday afternoon.

Strange Mail But . . . Better Than Cobwebs

Someone at Macalester College in St. Paul has been putting strange things in campus post office boxes, the MAC WEEKLY reports.

The unusual objects have ranged from a glass of water to a dissected frog.

The postmistress is as mystified as anybody, but she does say that seeing so many smiles on students gives her a real boost in morales at least everyone's getting some mail.—ACP.

Renowned Theologian Will Lecture Here

DR. BAILLIE

Presbyterian College's spring Fine Arts Series will begin Monday morning when Dr. John Baillie, Dean of the Faculty of Divinity at the University of Edinburgh and principal emeritus of New College, addresses the student body.

He will present a three-part course to the student body on "What It Means to Be a Chrsitian," with one topic covered in each of three extended chapel periods, each of which will last from 10:45 to 11:30. The Monday topic will be "The Christian Frame of Reference"; Tuesday morning's topic, "Why I Am a Christian"; and on Wednesday, "The Mainspring of Christian Action."

His major activity of the occasion will be an address on Tuesday night entitled "None Other Name." This lecture is open to all who wish to attend as guests of the College, and will be held at 7:30 p. m. in the Chapel.

In addition to these formal addresses, Dr. Baillie will be available to talk to students informally on Monday and Tuesday afternoon.

The entire visit here is sponsored by the Danforth Foundation and the Arts Program of the Asscoiation of American Colleges.

A native of Gairloc, Scotland, Dr. Baillie began his education at Inveness Royal Academy, where he was Gold Medalist in Classics. He entered Edinburgh University, earning his M.A. degree with first class honors in Mental Philosophy, subsequently receiving there his D. Litt. and an honorary D.D. degree.

From 1912-14 Dr. Baillie was assitant minister of Broughton Place Church in Edinburgh. During the First World War, he served under the YMCA with the British Armies in France.

He has held visiting or special lectureships at many outstanding institutions; among them are the Universities of Toronto (Emmanuel College), Harvard, Newfork, Edinburgh, Yale, King's College, Princeton, Glasgow, and Durham.

For three years Dr. Baillie was an examiner in theology at Glasgow University. During World War II he was director of YMCA religious and educational activities with the British Expeditionary Forces. He was moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland in 1943-44, and from 1946-50 a member of the Edinburgh University Court.

Since 1952 he has been Chaplain to Queen Elizabeth in Scotland, and was Chaplain to King George for the previous five years. At present Dr. Baillie is one of the six presidents of the World Council of Churches.

Some of his better known publications include: The Roots of Religion in the Human Soul, Belief In Progress, and Natural Science and the Spiritual Life. Aside from these, Dr. Baillie has written numerous articles to philosophical, theological, and literary journals.

Military Ball Plans Are Announced

With the Military Ball and IFC Dance just a week away, the Military Ball Committee has completed almost all of the arrangements. The committee has announced the entertainment and also the dress requirements a week in advance for the benefit of the students.

On March 6 in the Memorial Hall (9:00 P. M.-1:00 A. M.) Friday night, Buddy Bair and his band with 17 pieces on Saturday night, from 8 until 12, Sam Cook will provide the entertainment. Both these name bands are very popular, and Buddy Bair will open at Roseland Dance City in New York [illegible] after the Military Ball.

For the Military Ball the cadets are required to wear Class A uniforms with white shirt and black tie, black socks and black shoes. All non-military students are asked to wear tuxs or full dress. Tickets for those not in military uniform will be [illegible] at the door.

The IFC Dance Saturday night will be an informal sweater dance.

Trustees to Meet

The annual meeting of the Presbyterian College Board of Trustees is scheduled for Tuesday, March 3, at 10:30.

The board is composed of fourteen representatives elected by the Synod of South Carolina, eleven chosen by the Synod of Georgia and three elected at large by the Alumni.

The trustee group is headed by Robert M. Vance of Clinton.

Sumner to Head Alpha Sigma Phi

Roger Sumner, senior from Asheville, N. C., has been elected President of Alpha Sigma Phi, replacing Jim Shakespeare of Hollywood, Fla. Tom Spratt, sophomore from Fredericksburg, Va., took over the vice-presidency from Charles Watts of Georgetown.

Don Dunlap, sophomore from Charlotte, N. C., was named Recording Secretary, replacing Bob Forbis of Moultrie, Ga. Alumnus Elected

Mr. John A. Montgomery, Presbyterian College alumnus, was recently elected president of the South Carolina Press Association, moving up from the vice-presidency.

Mr. Montgmery, the Manager-Editor of The State newspaper in Columbia, was last year's recipient of the Alumni Service Award.

SCA Cabinet Make Nominations; Ballots Will Be Cast On Monday

Presidential Nominees Are Dick Wood, Roscoe Lindsay, Larry Wood

Nominations for president of the Student Christian Association were made Thursday by the SCA Cabinet. Balloting for this office will be held from eight to two Monday.

The following three men were nominated: Dick Wood of Greer, Roscoe Lindsay of Marion, and Larry Wood of Moss Point, Miss.

Dick Wood, a rising Senior, has been active in extra-curricular activities. At present he is secretary of the SCA, vice-president of the Junior class, and secretary of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity. He has served on the Blue Stocking staff and PaC-SaC staff and was vice-president of his class last year.

Roscoe Lindsay, also a rising Senior, has been an active participant in religious organizations. He has served as [illegible] and currently is [illegible] member of the Baptist Student Union and is also chairman of the Inter-Denominational Council. His other activities include IRC, former Blue Stocking staff member, Tau Phi Mu most treasurer of Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity, and IFC Representative-elect.

Larry Wood has been a member of the Ministerial Club, past secretary of the Kappa Alpha Order, is also a rising Senior.

Nominations for the other three SCA offices will be made Monday night by the present cabinet. Election for these positions will be held next Wednesday. In the past all officers have been elected in a single election and this year in compliance with the SCA constitution, a ballot for [illegible] member of the Freshman SCA Cabinet, and is at present head of the Inter-Dormitorial Sports Committee of the SCA. Seminar Classes To Highlight REW

Final plans for the 1959 Religious Emphasis Week were announced today by Sonny Wells, President of the SCA. The event, which will be held March 10-13, will be highlighted by two days of seminar classes. Regularly scheduled academic classes, with the exception of drill, have been suspended on March 11 and 12 to enable these special classes to be held.

The week's activities will officially begin Tuesday evening, March 10, with a "get acquainted" chapel program to introduce the six speakers for the week. The program will be concluded with a special film, "The Road Back," which deals with prison rehabilitation, and will be introduced by Chaplain [illegible] of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

The student body will be divided into six groups and will rotate among the speakers' seminar classes on Wednesday and Thursday. The classes will last an hour, and are slated to begin at 9:30 a. m., 11:00 a. m., and 2:00 p. m.

An exception will occur with the seminar, "Mental and Physical Preparation for the Christian Marriage," due to the length of the sexual aptitude tests. These classes will convene at 9:00, 11:00, and 2:00, and will last from one and a [illegible] to two hours.

Wednesday evening, the student body will be addressed by Dr. Mark W. Weersing of Spartanburg, and on Thursday evening by Reverend Marshall James, an Episcopal minister from Greer.

On Wednesday night, following the address, the fraternities will hold open house and have discussion groups with the speakers. Classes will be resumed on Friday, March 13, and the week will be brought to an end with an address by Chaplain

The Closed Doors

It was just this past weekend. First, a church group of young people were on campus. Next, a rather large family, friends of the College, driving through, stopped by to "see the new Student Center." Then a student's parents, over to see him for the day, were looking for a comfortable place to eat and talk.

All saw Douglas House—from the outside—then after viewing a rather messy game room, they peered into windows.

The first two groups went away disappointed, the parents were disgusted that they had to sit in the car or drive around all day.

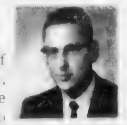
These little episodes point up a definite need for a revamped program for our new Student Center. In a small college town the weekends are devoid of entertainment. This is the time that many students would use, and appreciate, the opening of at least the main lounge. The weekend is the customary time for visitors, such as parents, to visit the campus.

On these weekends there is desperate need for the lounge and its facilities. Often individual fraternities have weekend socials which bring visitors to campus.

Beyond this is the fact that only a fraction of the student body is aware of the hours of the center. A definite, permanent posting of hours would solve this problem.

During the first semester, the lounge remained open and SCA representatives were present to show visitors the building. This program was discontinued after it was noted that most visitors were accompanied by students. If "building sitters" are desired, perhaps the SCA or another organization on campus could take on the job.

Granted, there will be those weekends when there will seem to be no one making use of the building—but it should be available. When PC can boast, as it well can, of one of the most beautiful and well equipped student centers in the State, it certainly shouldn't hide its candle under a bushel—especially when that candle cost a quarter of a million dollars.



A Good Beginning

With the appearance of Dr. John Baillie on our campus next week, a new program, the Presbyterian College Fine Arts Series, will be inaugurated. We welcome this program for Presbyterian College has far too long been lacking in the more cultural side of life.

This current Fine Arts series should be, and is, only a promise of what is yet to come. With the completion of the new Chapel-Auditorium scheduled for this fall, PC will have excellent facilities for the presentation of programs of an artistic nature. It is well that a series has begun now to lay a groundwork for a larger program with the advent of the auditorium.

Perhaps later on a co-operative effort with the city of Clinton might be employed to secure a larger and better Fine Arts Series. Nor is the future program to end here, for there are many more factors such as dramatic activities, which are in the planning stages.

The extent of these plans is now in the hands of the students, to be determined by their interest, support, and comments.

Crudely Tells Of Big Trip

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

The other day I was peacefully sitting in my room trying to type my term paper for English when who should come in but Percival Crudely and the Booze Boys. They were cheerfully chirping away with the Joan of Arc version of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes."

All of the boys got seated and P. C. started telling them of his choir trip to Atlanta this past weekend. Suddenly he stood me and asked what I was doing.

"I'm typing my term paper, so knock it off," I said as I yanked another mistake-filled page from the T-writer.

"Man I can't shut up when I'm revealing history to illiterates."

"History. You call that history?"

"O. K. go ahead. I want to hear what you did, too."

"You talk like I'm gonna tell a tall tale, G. B."

"Well—"

P. C. began telling of eating lunch Monday. "Me and G. B. walked into Howard Johnson's, looked at the menu, then checked in our wallets. Things were looking pretty bad, so we each ordered a triple decker hamburger and coffee. Well, as soon as we devoured that, G. B. and I decided our tummies weren't full, so I called the waitress over.

"Then what, Crudely?" asked one of the more interested listeners.

"Then I asked her what kind of ice cream she had."

"And what did she say?"

"Much to my disappointment she said, 'Chocolate, vanilla, strawberry, and 27 other flavors'."

"We checked over our money pouches again and decided that we didn't want ice cream anyway. Thus, historians, ended a most successful and enjoyable trip."

With this closing statement our visitors left.

I went down to the all-night washerette at the end of the hall, took my clothes from the big apex and began making the Cheer window test. Everything seemed fine, so I returned to my room to hang out the apparel. P. C. greeted me with a big—

"Hey, Graham, guess what in chapel today."

"What?"

"Wasps."

"You don't say?"

"Yep, they're back. I they've flown back north spring?"

"P. C., I did notice that in front of the new stretch been filled up."

"No stuff. I guess I'll breeze and see the Colonel tomorrow congratulate him. Say, when term paper due?"

"It's due Monday."

"Monday?"

"Yep, why?"

"Well, you've got till night."

"Yeah, but I'm a slow type"

"Well, why don't you get Chronicle to print it for you"

"Highly unreasonable, P. C."

"Yeah, I guess so."

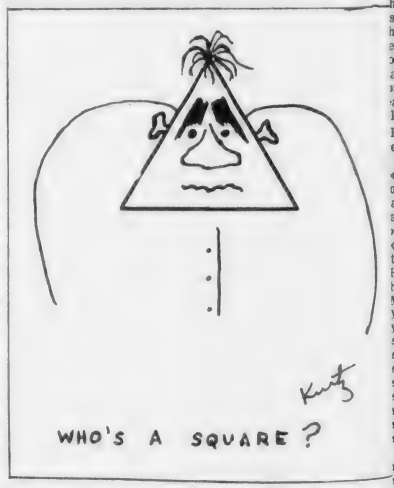
"Say, P. C., have you heard latest from the chow hall?"

"No, what?"

"Well, after trying many different combinations of supper dients, Powell finally came them down to a standard supper hamburger meat and French fries.

"How about that—our packages are here at last."

Movie Review



Rally 'round Sex And Suburbania

"Rally Around the Flag Boys" is a cinema comic-satire on missiles, suburbina and sex, based on the novel by Max Shulman. Regrettully, the movie is over-condensed, with Paul Newman combining the personalities of soldier and civilan. Nevertheless, he deserves considerable praise for his portrayal of Mr. Bannerman, whose sex life is frustrated by a community conscious wife who, much to hubby's dismay, leads the campaign against the establishment of a missle base in peaceful Putnam's Landing. After all, think of what will happen to real estate values and to the purity of all the lovely young girls of the community!

But Harry Bannerman is not the only frustrated human in this little village. One Angela Hoffa, played by Joan Collins, finds her TV producer-husband out of town more than in and well —. When Grace Bannerman discovers hubby's escapades with Angela, her Puritan dander is aroused and Harry heads for the dog house. To make matters worse, Harry becomes a turncoat in his wives' eyes when he is drafted by the Defense Department and charged with public relations for the missile base.

This is only the beginning of Harry's dilemma. A fourth of July pageant turns into a "rumble" between the soldiers and local hoods and then Oscar Hoffa comes home.

You can see how this all turns out for yourself. We recommend this flick as one of Hollywood's better recent comedies. See it from the beginning.

Little Four Tournament Opens Tonight

Event's Program is Dedicated To PC's Walter Johnson

Tonight at 9:00 the Presbyterian College Blue Hose plunge headlong into the annual Little Four Basketball Tournament, matching their skills against defending champion Erskine. It was announced Monday that the official Little Four tournament program will be dedicated to Presbyterian's famed coach and athletic director, the late Dr. Walter Johnson.

In the preliminary event the Wofford Terriers will attempt to impress upon the Newberry Indians their superiority on the hardwood court. All of the Little Four squads see within their reach a Conference championship.

Preliminary event the Wofford Terriers will attempt to impress upon the Newberry Indians their superiority on the hardwood court. All of the Little Four squads see within their reach a Conference Championship.

Leading the Terriers into battle will be Marshall Perkins and Trap Hart who passes highly respected averages of 16.7 and 16.5. Also the improving Bill Barbee and his traditional 13 points further strengthen Coach Gene Alexander's troops. These sharpshooters plus good rebounding and strong bench support can carry the Terriers to the highly sought-after crown.

Cal Short and Charlie Gallagher have Newberry supporters and athletes claiming that they have best shots. His 21-point average was tops in South Carolina this past peason, and Gallagher's 19.5 mark was second. Guard Bobby Lynch is the Tribe's playmaker and ball handling artist, averaging ten points a game.

Erskine's pre-tournament showing points to everything except a championship team. But the Fleet cannot be counted out of this year's picture as they were last year, when they coasted to their second consecutive Little Four Championship. With two returning men from last year's All-Tournament team, Jerry Wolf and Frank Blanton, Erskine's chances to capture the crown are not as farfetched as the statistics show.

The Blue Hose from Presbyterian, coached by Courts Redford, are certainly in a position to take command of the Little Four Tournament by defeating Erskine tonight. Then they can move on to the winner of the Newberry-Wofford tilt. They will be cast in the role of favorite due to their superior record.

The Blue Hose squad is led by seniors and co-captains Bill Sullivan and Ralph Chambers. Your Presbyterian starters average in the double numbers with Sullivan and Bob Stratton leading the pack with a 14.7 and a 14-point average. Defensive spark Ken Caswell has connected for 13 tallies per game, while Ralph Chambers and Sonny Wells average 12.6 and 9.7, respectively.

Everyone who turns out for the Little Four Tournament in Anderson tonight will see basketball in its finest hour of the 1959 season. This is the finale for many fine athletes from the schools of Carolina's Little Four Conference. Every possible effort will be made by each individual to take back to his school the coveted trophy of basketball supremacy in the Little Four.

BLUE HOSE BASKETEERS journey to Anderson for the opening of the Little Four Tourney tonight. Tipoff time at 9:00, the top seeded Hose go against Erskine's last place Flying Fleet.

Unheralded Ken Caswell Is Player of the Year

PC Guard Ken Caswell, who was completely ignored by sports writers in their All-State vote, has been named Little Four Player of the Year.

Caswell has received little publicity all year. However, he finds that he has made an impression in his own Little Four Conference. This has the most meaning, as the members of the Little Four are the most familiar with the ball players of their league.

Others making the first team are Newberry's Carl Short and Charlie Gallagher, Erskine's John Keenan, and Wofford's Trap Hart.

Ferocious Five Era Sadly Ends

An electrifying intramural basketball team ended its domination of the campus Wednesday night when Captain Richard Shrigley announced that his team would not compete in the remainder of the 1959 season. The announcement came as a surprise to most of the students who have watched in awe as this tremendous team won game after game in the past four seasons.

Compiling a record of almost forty games without a loss, the Ferocious "5" were finally edged out of the lead by the PiKA last week, playing without the services of ace Bill Hill. Last night the "5" were again defeated by the Gray Ghosts, but only after they had led for the entire game. The contest, characterized as always by the undying spirit and outstanding ability of Shrigley's charges, was determined in the second overtime, 57-55.

It will be a long while before another team such as this will be able to command the respect and admiration of so many students as have the Ferocious "5." We suggest no team ever adopt its team name for it could only be done with disrespect and dishonor. To this great team the intramural council and student body say, 'Well Done'," Intramural Chairman Larry Wood stated.

BEHIND THE BLUES

By MARTIN CHITTY, Sports Editor

In the Feb. 12 edition of The Greenville News, Reporter Gene Granger expounds in great detail on the unfair advantage of the Little Four home court. He gives example of the recent romping of Newberry by PC in Clinton, while the Hose lost to the Indians in Newberry.

Then he really starts in on PC with both barrels firing. He states that no team better knows the home court advantage than does Presbyterian. Mr. Granger goes so far as to say that Blue Hose teams both past and present have been kings in their own back yard. He brings up the Furman game in which the Hurricanes were pushed to win by one point.

He explains that referees have a tendency to favor the home team, and that the viewing audience has a direct effect on the game. However, he brings out that their wild actions would not be if the coaches would refrain from putting on a sideline show.

Reporter Granger brings in another incident to further push his point. This time he makes note of the time that Wofford coach Quinn walked on to the floor during their game with Newberry and Wofford was given a technical foul. But he also remembers the PC-Furman game in which Coach Redford went onto the court and the foul was ignored.

The News reporter finds one consolation . . . that of the Little Four Tournament where there will be a neutral court and no partisan crowd.

These statements made by Granger are, we feel, too strong and too indicative to be overlooked and ignored.

True, every team wishes to play on its home court. That's the principal for securing a home and home schedule. Certainly the home court offers an advantage. Anyone with the slightest knowledge of basketball accepts this.

As to the Furman game, we remember that Mr. Granger was one of those most mystified by the extra two points awarded Furman. He even went so far as to ask one of the officials about this incident. The official replied that he didn't know anything about it. Is this home court favoritism?

As for the spectators and their wild actions—are they expected to sit back and take it easy? No, for they, too, are a part of the game. They've paid money and are naturally out for a good time. If they think their team has gotten a bad deal, it's human nature to let it be known.

We know nothing of the Quinn incident. However, in all probability, circumstances will have something to do with the call. But we do know of the PC-Furman incident and it seemed to us (and from all appearances to Mr. Granger at the time) a good moment for somebody to take the floor and find out just what was taking place.

Yes, the Little Four Tournament offers PC students a consolation, also. This is the time when the Blue Hose will prove that they have the best in the conference at home or away.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

PC's peppy little guard Bill Sullivan was last week named a member of the All-State third team. Forwards Ralph Chambers and Bob Stratton received Honorable Mention notice . . . Newberry's Charlie Gallagher was the only Little Four player to make the first team, while another Indian, Carl Short, made the second team.

Star halfback Bobby Pate, last year's Little Three back of the year, is out of school this semester due to excessive cuts. He will stay in Clinton and take a correspondence course. This, along with summer school, should enable him to re-enter school at the regular fall semester, making him eligible for football next season.

LITTLE FOUR PREDICTIONS

The best team should go all the way . . . that's PC. We see Newberry in second place and playing a hunch pick Erskine for third and Wofford to bring up the rear.

REDFORD APPRAISES SEASON

A self-improving team and fine student support are the reasons Coach Courts Redford attributes to a winning cage season.

"The three best games played by the team this season were against Newberry, Wofford, and Belmont Abbey," Redford says, and points out the fact that these games were also the ones with the best student turnout. Drawing upon that fact, he encourages a good PC attendance in Anderson.

Jones' Talk To Highlight Civic Banquet for Hosemen

Presbyterian Coach Frank Jones, his staff and football squad will receive the salute of Clinton civic leaders here Monday night in appreciation of their outstanding gridiron success last fall.

Four civic clubs, the Chamber of Commerce and the Jaycees all join in sponsoring a banquet to honor Jones as South Carolina "Coach of the Year" and his team for its record which included the Little Four Championship.

The occasion is set for 7:45 Monday in the Presbyterian College dining hall. The Civitan, Exchange, Kiwanis, and Lions Clubs have designated it as one of their regular meeting,s so a capacity crowd is expected.

Hugh L. Eichelberger, Clinton businessman who serves as coordinator, has announced that John Holland Hunter will preside as master of ceremonies. Dr. William Redd Turner, pastor of the Clinton First Presbyterian Church, will give the invocation, after which each club president will bring greetings from his organization.

Dr. Marshall W. Brown, president of Presbyterian College, will introduce Coach Jones. The PC coach thne will introduce his staff and and will address the group on his football prospects for next year.

Besides Jones, the "appreciation night" program will honor assistant coaches Clyde Ehrhardt, Courts Redford, and Jim Neal, the members of the Blue Hose football squad and the managers of the team.

Season Soon Opens For Blue Sox Team

In the Spring a young man's fancy turns to . . . baseball.

Very soon the crack of the bat will announce the opening of another season. Seven starters from last year's nine give Coach Clyde Ehrhardt a solid core to build on. Returnees are: Outfielders Ray Hodge and Ed Jackson; first baseman Ted Leahy; second baseman Tony Benson; third baseman Bill Chase; pitchers Alex Dubose and Bill Dobbins; and catcher Ken Nix.

Pitching and catching situations are presenting the major headaches at the present time. Several prospective pitchers give hope on the mound. Among these are Harvey Blanchard, who was ill during last season, Harold Raeford, Jimmy Powell, and Jerry Chitty. Ed Foster and Morgan Byers line up as new catchers.

Here is the newly announced schedule.:

March 18—Catawba at Clinton.
March 20—Pembroke at Clinton.
March 21—Pembroke at Clinton.
April 4—Catawba, Salisbury, N. C.

Five Games Featured In Intramural Action

This week saw only five games being played in the well organized intramural bucket brigade. Even so, one of the year's most exciting games was played when in a double overtime the Gray Ghosts edged the Ferocious "5" to the tune of 55-57.

The Ferocious "5" took the lead early in the game and held it by a few points until the closing seconds when the game became tied. After a second overtime period the Gray Ghosts jumped ahead by a slim two points to win.

Elsewhere Sigma Nu won over the Alpha Sigs by a 27 to 37 decision. PiKA took a beginning lead never to be threatened again in a battle with the Confederates, ending 49-26. The Bandits and Campus All-Stars both played well, the All-Stars taking the honors 55-51.

The following night of competition had second place PiKA topping the Pi Kaps by a margin of 59-31. The last contest of the week pitted the Campus All-Stars and Alpha Sigma Phi together.

Aid of National China Is Emphasized by Bowen

"Today the United State has one of her greatest allies in Nationalist China," said Major General Frank S. Bowen, Jr., as he addressed the student body during the Wednesday chapel period.

As former Chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group on Formosa, Gen. Bowen gave a most enlightening talk on the military view of U. S.-Formosan relations.

He said that if war should break out in the Far East, the Chinese Nationalists would have to bear the brunt of the initial fighting and serve as a first line of defense. "Although their army is small in comparison," he added, "they are capable of holding their own with any Far Eastern country. They are a ready-made outpost—dedicated to the defeat of communism."

Religious Emphasis Week Begins Monday; Annual Event Features Seminar Classes

Six Top Speakers To Highlight Observance

Religious Emphasis Week begins officially this Monday at Chapel with the showing of the film, "This is Your Life—Chaplain Tucker."

Dr. Tucker, who is protestant chaplain of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, is one of six speakers who will speak on this year's theme "Go Ye into all the World and ..." The remaining speakers are: Mrs. Fountain I. Chapman, Chaplain Loren T. Jenks, Dr. Marc C. Weer, the Rev. Marshall O. Jones, and the Reverend David V. Miller. Each of the speakers will be introduced Tuesday veening at 7:30 in a special get-acquainted program and will lead seminar classes on Wednesday and Thursday at 9:30, 11:00, and 2:00.

Chaplain Tucker will speak on "The Road Back" on Tuesday evening and will carry this topic further in his seminar classes on Wednesday Thursday. Dr. Tucker is a man of nationwide fame who has become known as a lecturer, an author, and a penologist. He worked in the coal mines of Pennsylvania until an earth-shaking experience changed his life and he decided to become a minister. He received his A.B. degree from Houghton (N. Y.) College and his B.D. from Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Mrs. Chapman will carry as her topic in the seminar classes ". . . and create an atmosphere in which people may grow to their highest selves," with an approach towards good mental health. Mrs. Chapman is a psychiatric assistant in Charlotte, N. C., and has served on pro-

Faculty Accepts New Honor System Proposals

Suggestions concerning the Presbyterian College honor system which were born of a student body meeting and a student council meeting last month, were accepted by the faculty in a meeting earlier this week.

The Discipline Committee of the Faculty, headed by Dr. Neil G. Whitelaw, met with the Student Council and prepared the following report:

"The Student Body of Presbyterian College held discussion on the following points, and it was approved that these suggestions be submitted to the Discipline Committee, and in turn, presented to the Faculty:

1. That the matriculation pledge signed by each student on registration not be mandatory before registration is completed. It would be expected that the student, who is later convinced that he wishes to uphold the Honor System, sign the pledge at that time.

2. It has been noticed by the students that certain courses in certain classrooms obviously have more infractions than others; thus each professor should lend his assistance in support of the Honor System.

3. Since material is oftentime brought to the classroom which will aid the student in a quiz, it is suggested that the professor prohibit any material being brought to class during a quiz, other than writing instruments. Blank test booklets (Blue Books) could be purchased by the students, or the administration could furnish material by raising the matriculation fee.

4. Arrange the students in alphabetical order, and keep seats spread out as much as possible throughout the room.

It is realized that this might take away from the meaning of the Honor System as such, but with this faculty assistance, the Honor System should eventually be held in its true respect by a vast majority of the Student Body."

These suggestions were made when it was felt, under the present circumstances, the present honor system was in need of some "artificial injections." As the report noted these suggestions, which the faculty will comply with in co-operation with the student council, will detract from the Honor System. It is hoped, however, that this action will give the Honor System time to build up and improve.

One major problem noted was the tremendous turn-over in the student body. With new students each year often numbering over 200 in a student body of around five hundred, it has been very hard for these new students to become aware of and accept the Honor System.

JACQUE BAIR, Fraternity Records and CBS recording star, will appear with her brother, Buddy Bair, and his Orchestra at tonight's Military Ball from nine until one. A sweater dance will round out the dance weekend Saturday night as Sam Cook and his combo play from eight until twelve at the armory.

Douglas House To Open for Weekend

The main lounge of Douglas House will be open during Military Ball dance weekend, Irvin Montgomery, director of the building, announced today.

A special social program has been set up for the convenience of the students. The lounge will remain open an hour after each dance, 2 a. m. on Friday night, and 1 a. m. on Saturday night.

During the intermissions of both dances informal drop-ins open to all students are scheduled. Refreshments will be served during these drop-ins. The lounge will remain open on Sunday afternoon, March 8, Montgomery advised.

In conjunction with the announcement of the weekend schedule, the director of Student Activities called attention to the regular week-day hours of the student center. These are 8 a. m. until 10 p. m.

New Auditorium To Be Memorial for Belk

Presbyterian College will name its new chapel-auditorium in memory of William Henry Belk, outstanding Presbyterian churchman and nationally famed mercantile leader who founded the Belk organization.

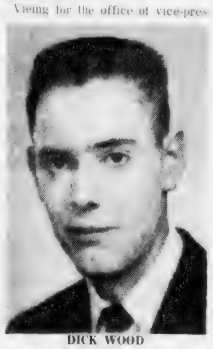
That's the announcement today from President Marshall W. Brown, who said the PC board of trustees authorized this week that the building now under construction bear the name "William Henry Belk Auditorium." Dr. Brown added:

"Mr. Belk, during his lifetime, and many of his associates over a long period of years have been supporters of Presbyterian College. They also have contributed generously to Presbyterianism in South Carolina and in other states, both among local churches and in support of synod causes. Mr. Belk was a native of South Carolina whose lovely Christian character was reflected in both his personal and business life. It is indeed fitting that one of our buildings honor his memory."

President Brown pointed out that more recently members of the Belk family and their business associates in the Belk mercantile organization in South Carolina and Georgia gave generous support to the college's development program launched in 1955. And just two months ago, they added a pledge gift of $125,000. It represented the largest gift of the development program.

The Presbyterian College chapel-auditorium, under construction since last afll, is scheduled for completion late this year. It will be formally dedicated at that time. The structure, rising across the plaza from the library building, will be of colonial Georgian design in keeping with the architectural theme of other campus buildings. It will feature a main auditorium, air conditioned and capable of seating 1,200 persons, a chapel for small worship services and a three-story fine arts division.

Nominees Named For Remaining Offices



Dick Wood, a rising senior from Greer, was elected President of the Student Christian Association yesterday to succeed Sonny Embry of Birmingham, Ala.

In the first election Wednesday, none of the three candidates, Roscoe Lindsay, Dick Wood, or Larry Wood received enough votes for a simple majority. This made it necessary for a runoff yesterday between Dick Wood and Larry Wood, with Dick Wood emerging victorious by a narrow margin.

Dick is well qualified to carry out the responsibilities of SCA president, having played an active part in campus activities since coming to PC. His activities include secretary of the retiring SCA cabinet, vice-president of his class for two years, fraternity secretary, and past member of the Blue Stocking and PaC-SaC staffs.

Thursday night the SCA cabinet nominated candidates for the offices of vice-president, secretary and treasurer.

Vieing for the office of vice-president are Ebby Mayfield of Greer, Lonnie Love of McColl, and Bill Francis of Charleston.

In the race for secretary are Gay Maddox of Spartanburg, Dick Faulkner of Henderson, N. C., and Don Dunlap of Charlotte, N. C.

Nominated for Treasurer are Tom Collins of Pageland, Bill Betchman of Summerton, and Stacy Coker of Glade Valley, N. C.

All of these candidates meet the qualifications for SCA officers set down in the constitution. Election of the three officers will be held on Monday from eight until two in the Douglas House.

Donaldson Elected Number One of KA

Ben Donaldson, a rising senior from Blackshear, Ga., has been elected to the position of Number One of Beta Pi Chapter of the Kappa Alpha Order. Donaldson will replace Paul Arrington of Charlotte, N. C., in the Number One spot.

Chosen for the Number Two position was Jack Crandall, a rising senior fror Orlando, Fla. He succeeds Bob Richardson of Greenville.

Filling the shoes of Bill Porter of Anderson, as Number Three will be Tom Wise, also a rising senior, from Thomasville, Ga.

Taking over the IFC representative slot is Harvey Wittschen of Charleton.

WF Conference

"World-wide Witness in a Revolutionary World" is the theme of the Westminster Fellowship Conference this weekend at Spartanburg.

The main speaker, Dr. Frank Price, was formerly a missionary to China, and was for a period of time imprisoned by the communists.

Glenn Gibson, local President of Westminster Fellowship, declares that during past years PC has always had a large group of delegates to the conference. Attending from PC this year are Jack Clontz, Glenn Gibson, Don Hendrix, Raymond Humphries, Joe Pinkston, Sanders Read, Alice Watkins, and Paul White.

The Doors Open?

We are pleased to note the announcement that the Douglas House it so be open during the Military Ball dance weekend. It is commendable that a fine program, outlined in our news columns, has been set up for this event. We are happy at the good step in the right direction.

But is this to be the only step taken? If the Douglas House lounge is to be available to students, their parents, and visitors every weekend, we are told that a "building-sitter" is necessary. The building's administration is looking for a student group who would take on this responsibility.

We beg to disagree. First, we do not feel that the student center needs a "sitter." It is without such during most of the day, and until ten at night. The student body is proud of this building. Those who would make use of the Douglas House facilities on a Sunday afternoon would respect and protect the building. Secondly, if someone must be there in order to have the building open, the responsibility should not lie on the shoulders of a student group. Presbyterian College is fortunate in having a director of student activities whose salaried job it is to see to the maximum use and enjoyment of the center. We certainly do not advocate anyone working seven days a week, but we do feel that it is this administrator's responsibility to oversee the week-end operation of the Douglas House.

We are convinced from comments received, that the student body wants the Douglas House lounge available and open—whether great numbers make use of it or not. It seems that the doors are ajar—will they open? We wait.

When Prone To Complain

In looking over the newspapers of other colleges, we found several items that make one stop and think. The first was the Furman paper which told of the fraternities there optimistically going on with rush season in the face of the cold fact that that college's sponsoring group is considering outlawing Greek organizations on that campus.

The other paper came from Clemson. This student body of several thousand situated in a tiny town, is making an attempt to get fraternities on its entertainment-devoid campus. That paper mentioned "Presbyterian's success with the fraternity lodge system."

It all adds up to make one think—that although things perhaps are not like we'd like for them to be, we are by no means on the small end of a raw deal.

I busted into my illustrious room in Smyth B Monday afternoon and found P. C. slumping over his desk, sound asleep.

"Hey, P. C., wake up!"

"What's the trouble, G. B., has someone been hung in effigy again?"

"No, man, I'm just happy."

"About what, you don't have a date, do you?"

"No."

"Well, what then?"

"Well, P. C., they said it couldn't be done."

"What?"

"My term paper."

"I guess you're pretty happy. I can't even write this short Epistle."

"What are you writing?"

"My first big article for the Blue Stocking is coming this week It's my big chance. I'll be on the Paul Harvey News. I'll be famous."

"Don't hold your breath."

"I can't—it smells."

"Say—what are you writing about?"

"Its' a secret."

"O. K. Say, did you get to chapel these last three days?"

"Yes, but I couldn't tell you what went on."

"Sleep, huh?"

"Yep."

"Did you notice all the others dozing before you downed your weary eyelids?"

"Yeah, I did see a few of them—in fact, I think I saw number 1 himself giving a few nods up there on the stage."

"Say, P. C., there's a big end coming up Have you date?"

"Yeah, I've got a pretty one—378 pounds."

"You gonna take in the Hop?"

"I'd like to—see as how four good Washingtons for my girl said she was afraid she couldn't stay in step with heavy beat of the drum."

"Nasty break."

"By the way, G. B., what's big election about today?"

"I don't know exactly. They voting on a new president for las House or something."

"Well, P. C., I think I'll out."

"Yeah, I wish I'd made List and didn't have to stu could sack out, too."

Beta Chapter met Wednesday night and plans were completed for the Military Ball. The Pi Kappa Phi will have an "after the dance" party Friday and Saturday night.

SIGMA NU

At the regular meeting of Zeta Theta Chapter final plans were made for Military Ball weekend. Everyone is looking forward to this occasion.

Dr. John Baillie

An Insight of The Mind And of The Man

Perhaps nine students out of ten did not appreciate the visit to this campus of Dr. John Baillie. There are several reasons for this. One is the profession of Dr. Baillie—a theologian, and another is the nature of his lectures—theology. These are not of great interest to the average layman or the student in general. This Scotchman had no air of dignity, no platform mastery, no impressive basso voice, so his general appearance was anything but attracting.

Yet, to those students who occupied chapel seats for voluntary reasons, Dr. Baillie's visit and lectures were a highlight of this school year.

There was but one disappointment to the above-mentioned students—little or no opportunity prevailed for a personal conversation with our visitor. Considering the fact that the elderly man made four lectures in three days and was continuously entertained by professors and faculty members, this one weakness is easily pardonable.

A few students, however, experienced the pleasure of closely watching the man and listening to the mind of John Baillie. Perhaps "pleasant surprise" best expresses their impressions. He was not a pious old man, but one who acted as though he had a great deal more living to do, a man, not completely wrapped up in theology, but a man keenly sensitive to the existence of a modern world and of the events and needs of that world.

Commenting on America's educational system, Baillie said: "You must realize that Amerira's philosophy of education is quite different from that of Europe. You have 1,161 colleges and universities over here; we have five.

"America is seeking, at the present time, to educate one-third of its population. In doing this, you see, there is much room for a great many students that are not of the

BEHIND THE BLUES

By MARTIN CHITTY, Sports Editor

END OF AN ERA

Thirty-one years of sports service were abruptly ended last week upon the surprise resignation of Coach "Lonnie Mac."

Words cannot express the debt owed by PC to this beloved figure in the worldly light, but his works will never diminish in the heart and spirit of PC students

Coach McMillian has spent his lifetime in selfless service to others whether on the athletic fields, the campus or as a neighbor or good friend. His dealings with people can be stated with one word . . . sincere. He has never magnified a fault, or failed to give a pat on the back for a good work.

His name is synonomous with good sportsmanship, fair play, Christian ideals and character. He along with the late Walter Johnson built the renowned PC Spirit. As with all good coaches he feels that athletics should be a builder of character. For this reason his years in sports reflect nothing but the highest credit upon PC.

Honesty, sincerity, faith in man These traits symbolize Coach Mac.

A CHANGE FOR THE BEST

It looks from this corner as though we are witnessing a new and better era of PC athletics. Football definitely seems to be on the up grade. Blue Hose cagers have more than held their own against foes of their class. In spring sports, especially tennis, PC'uns can boast with the best.

This brings up a problem which has been batted around for about ten years. That of dissolving the Little Four, with PC and Wofford joining forces with the North State Conference teams.

We realize and appreciate the tradition and state-wide appeal of the Little Four. However, it seems that competition would be keener and more intensely exciting if more teams were fighting for a mutual crown.

We urge that someone take this matter in hand and check the possibilities of a future change.

Despite the loss to Wofford PC basketballers deserve a tip of the hat. They staged a great comeback to throw the Little Four race into a three-way tie. Because of this and the marvelous Belmont Abbey victory, Coach Redford and his roundballers merit much credit.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Sonny Wells was the district NIAA field goal percentage champ. In 15 regular season games he attempted 83 shots and hit on 51 for a 60.0 percentage. Presbyterian was tops as a team in free throw shots with a mark of 76.2 per cent . . . Newcomer Dave Parrish, transfer from South Georgia Junior College, has moved to a first string end position in spring football workouts.

PiKA Falls to Grey Ghosts Ending Week's Intramurals

By ED LORING

Last night this season's most exciting game in the intramural league took place when the undefeated Gray Ghosts clashed with PiKA. The PiKA's took an early six-point lead and held the margin the entire first half. The second half began much in the same way with the game a close five or six points difference continually. With seven minutes left to play, Bobby Joiner hit two foul shots, brought the Ghosts up to a one-point lead. The rest of the game was played with neither team taking any lead until the Gray Ghosts pulled away to defeat PiKA's 40-48.

Elsewhere in the league the Garlic "5" slipped past the All-Stars by a slim two points in a 45-43 win. The ever-improving PiKaps took an easy victory over the Cofederates in a 51-22 ending. The Chinese Bandits, led by the future Redskin Ted Leahy, topped the Bandits 44-33.

The next night of competition placed the All-Stars, with Bill Stone's all-time high of forty-four points, over Theta Chi by 58-48. The second game of the night scheduled the winless Rebels and the undefeated Gray Ghosts together. The Rebels fought hard the first half, being down only four points, but the Ghosts came back to win by the large margin of 50-30. The final game of the evening held the Confederates and the Bandits fighting hard all the way. The Bandits, one time twelve points behind, came up to win 45-43.

The third night of action began with PiKA overrunning ASP with a score of 54-31. Then in a similar game the Chinese Bandits won over the All-Stars 53-34. The concluding game ended with Sigma Nu out front of the Garnet "5" 46-25.

Coach "Mac" Retires, Ending Outstanding Athletic Career

PC Takes Second Place In Tourney

Presbyterian had to fight all the way to beat a scrappy Erskine 56-49, in the opening round of the Little Four Tournament

Blue Hose charity shots decided the game's outcome PC hit for 20 points from the line, while Erskine only connected on seven. Starting with a bang, the Flying Fleet grabbed a 15-11 lead. This was soon overtaken by the Hosemen and the game seesawed until the final whistle.

Three fast field goals by Bob Stratton in the final minutes gave PC the needed advantage. Ken Caswell and Bill Sullivan did a fancy freezing act and at the final whistle the Blue Hose were in front by seven. Stratton was the big gun for the victors, hitting for 23 points.

In the second game the Terriers of Wofford defeated Newberry in a nip-and-tuck battle 62-61 and gained a berth in the finals with PC

PC-WOFFORD

Wofford used a few stalling tactics and some height to defeat the Blue Hose for the championship. The score was never more than a whisper apart the entire game. The lead changed hands at least a dozen times during the first half, and was knotted up on five occasions.

The Terriers led at halftime 34-33. A quick surge by the Hosemen put them out in front. This lead was soon overtaken by Wofford, never to be relinquished again. The Pups led by as much as 12 points during the second half.

Too late was a desperate last-minute rally by Caswell, Sullivan, and Mickey Long. The Terriers wound up on top 72-61. This was Wofford's second Little Four crown in a decade, while PC missed it's fifth.

Perkins and Hart shared scoring honors with 19 apiece, Caswell paced the Blue Hose with seventeen.

Newberry defeated Erskine in the consolation game 88-63, to gain a third-place spot behind Wofford and Presbyterian.

Leahy Signs With Washington Redskins

Ted Leahy of Atlanta, star Presbyterian College end, has signed a contract with the professional Washington Redskins.

That's the announcement today from Blue Hose Coach Frank Jones, who coached Leahy during his last two seasons at PC. He predicted the big flankman had a good chance of making the grade with the Redskins.

TED LEAHY

Leahy, a 6 foot-3 inch, 210 pounder, starred for three years as one of PC's top linesman. Jones pointed out that he is a sure pass-receiver with adequate speed and a strong man defensively.

Civic Leaders Pay Tribute To Hosemen

Presbyterian Coach Frank Jones, his staff and football squad received the salute of Clinton civic leaders here Monday night in appreciation of their outstanding gridiron success last fall.

Four civic clubs, the Chamber of Commerce and the Jaycees all joined in sponsoring a banquet to honor Jones as South Carolina "Coach of the Year" and his team for its record which included the Little Three championship.

Dr. Marshall W. Brown introduced Coach Jones. The PC coach presented his staff and squad and addressed the group on his football prospects for next year.

• Three Decades of Service

Coach Lonnie S. McMillian has resigned after 36 years of continuous athletic service to Presbyterian College.

" Coach Mac", as he is affectionately known to the hundreds of young men who have played under him, began his coaching career at Presbyterian College in 1923. Since that time he has coached four different sports, giving special emphasis to three of these, and produced some of the brightest stars and the most colorful teams in the annals of PC athletics.

COACH McMILLIAN

Last Thanksgiving at the Bronze Derby Classic, a group of alumni honored him in appreciation for what he has meant to PC and for what he has done through the years for his boys. His length of service ranks among the longest on record anywhere. It is second in South Carolina only to that of the late Walter A. Johnson, McMillian's coach and long-time associate, who died last July after 43 years as PC athletic director.

It was this cagey football mentor who introduced into the Southeast the now universally used T formation football offense. He installed it immediately after becoming head gridiron coach at PC in 1941.

Coach McMillian, at this time, already was serving as head track coach, head basketball coach and freshman football coach. And he also has coached baseball on occasions during his stay here. Each team, no matter which sport, has exhibited that special McMillian taste for swift action and wide-open play that carries extra appeal for the spectator.

He started as fullback and end on Walter Johnson's first PC football team in 1915, moved on to All-State honors in this and other sports before graduating in 1919, after two-year Navy service in World War I. He then coached two years at Clinton High and Thornwell Orphanage, and joined the Blue Hose staff in 1923.

Sports activity has whirled about him at Presbyterian. Among his top varsity roles, he served as head basketball coach for 19 years (from 1930 to 1949) and he directed the Blue Hose gridmen through 13 campaigns (1941-1954).

Although his athletic duties shifted from time to time, he continued to coach his beloved Blue Hose trackmen throughout his entire 35 years here. His cinder specialists have won five state championships and one SIAA crown.

Today, Coach Mac has retired from all sports. He will remain as manager of the college canteen and book store.

Spooner Named To Succeed McMillian

A new assistant football coach and head track coach to succeed Coach Lonnie S. McMillian, was announced today by PC Athletic Director Frank Jones.

The new coach is Victor Spooner, former Texas Tech star athlete and for the past two years coach at Levelland (Texas) High School. Spooner will join the coaching staff immediately.

Spooner, a native of Colquitt, Ga., has quite a record in sports. He served as captain of the Texas Tech team that defeated Auburn in the 1954 Gator Bowl game after leading all other major teams in scoring during the regular season. Spooner was All-Border Conference end for two years and while at South Georgia Junior College was named to the junior college All-American team. He also lettered in basketball, track and baseball at both institutions.

The new coach graduated from Texas Tech in 1954 and after two years of army service coached football for a year at Colquitt (Ga.) High before going to Levelland High as line coach and basketball assistant.

Spooner will take over direction of the track squad immediately and will assist as end coach with spring football practice.

Senator Wasson To Speak on Socialism

"Socialism: A Threat To National Security" will be the topic of Senator C. Wasson Loaners Cummy Sumter when he addresses the International Relations Club next Monday at 7:30.

In speaking to the group, Mr. Wasson will draw from long experience as a public servant. He has been a member of the South Carolina House of Representatives for Students Say . . .

Open Douglas House On Weekends

In a student poll conducted this week, general student opinion showed a definite trend toward keeping the Douglas House open on weekends. More than ninety per cent of the students polled expressed this opinion. Some of the opinions voiced are as follows:

Bill Porter—"When the whim of one or two persons can close from public display and student use a building which was built almost entirely with the voluntary contributions of those who wish to visit it, then the time is at hand when some steps must be taken to counteract the narrow-mindedness which keeps the building locked."

Frank Sells—"Since the main purpose of the Douglas House is for fellowship and recreation, I think it should remain open to be used. People visit the college on weekend, and when it is shut up, they can't see it."

Al McKie—"I fully agree with the editorial that was written. There have been several times I have tried to show someone through Douglas House and it has been locked. The Douglas House is not the only facility not open to use by students, and the Douglas House as a show place should definitely be open."

Donald Kay—"During the week when everyone is busy studying, it is open. On the weekends when everyone has a little free time to relax, it is closed."

Bobby Brown—"It should remain open because the purpose of the building is to have a place to take your parents or friends or dates, and what good is it if it is closed when they come. You can't do anything but look through the windows."

Marion Lee—"I think it should be left open because it was put there for the students' use. On certain weekends when dates of parents are here it should remain open so that you could take those people there, and also for the convenience of those students who remain on campus during weekends."

Robie Eshbaugh—"Having the Douglas House closed on the weekends is like buying a new Cadillac and leaving it locked up in the garage to look at through the windows."

Skip Savarance—"Purpose of Douglas House is for the students; therefore it should be open for the students to use so as to give them a place to study during the week as well as a place for recreation and fellowship during the weekend."

Jim Shakespeare—"With having a salaried man in charge of student activities, I think it is silly not to have it open every day."

highest mental capacity. European universities take only the very highest and it is therefore more difficult to obtain a degree in Europe than over here. This is not a criticism of your system—it is to say that college graduates here are not scholars. There are a few exceptions, but very few."

Asked his impression of religious attitudes and interests on the campuses of America, the theologian remarked:

"I think there is a growing interest in religion today. Reporters often ask me if I think we are having a spiritual revival. That is an exalted name for it, but something is happening. It is a result, I think, from a feeling of insecurity. We see Rupssia feeling secure in its doctrines and philosophies. The free world must have an equal feeling of security. They feel this can be found in religion."

At the close of his last lecture, Baillie professed his reasons for being a Christian:

"Lord, I believe; help Thy my unbelief. Lord, I care; help Thy my unconcern. Lord, I love; help Thy my lovelessness."

She was one of the REW speakers last year and captivated everyone who heard her.

Chaplain Loren T. Jenks will carry as his topic in the seminar classes, "The Christian Marriage," with an approach for mental and physical preparation. His classes will also contain some tests. At present Chaplain Jenks holds the position of Post Chaplain at Fort Jackson. He secured his A.B. degree from Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and later did graduate work at the University of Iowa where he received his M. A. Col. Jenks was with us last year and his clases on marriage were tremendously received.

Dr. Marc C. Weersing will have as his topic, "Invitation to Maturity." Dr. Weersing is the minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Spartanburg. He was graduated from Calvin College, Grand Rapids, Michigan, and received degrees from Calvin Seminary and Columbia Theological Seminary. At present he is serving on the Board of World Missions and on the Presbyterian College Board of Trustees.

Reverend Marshall O. Jones will speak on "Vocations" in the seminar classes. He received his A.B. from Furman, and after doing graduate work at LSU he was commissioned in the army and served four years in Austria. Mr. Jones studied theology at Oxford University and at General Theological Seminary, New York. He is presently serving at the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd in Greer.

Reverend David V. Miller will speak on the subject, "This Hour and Our Task" in his seminar classes. Mr. Miller is home on furlough from the Mweka, Belgian Congo. Mr. Muller studied at the Tennessee State and David Lipscomb Colleges, and Union Theological Seminary. He held two successful pastorates in Virginia and Alabama before going to the mission field.

Sigma Kappa Alpha Installation Scheduled for Wednesday Chapel

Clemson Graduate School Dean Will Speak During Exercises

Sigma Kappa Alpha, senior academic fraternity, will be officially chartered at regular chapel exercises Wednesday. The honorary fraternity is being formed in co-operation with the Blue Key, but will become completely separate of the Blue Key upon its formation.

Requirements are a grade point ratio of 2.4 and completion of six or seven semesters at Presbyterian College or the equivalent is summer schools.

The charter members of Sigma Kappa Alpha are: Mable June Adair of Clinton; Ralph Chambers of Chicago, Ill.; O. H. Embry, Jr., of Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. Laura Jo King of Anderson; James E. Shakespeare of Hollywood, Fla.; Mrs. Nettie Murphy Young of Clinton, and Alan R. McKie of Alexandria, Va.

Speaker for the chapel program will be Dr. Jack H. Williams, Dean of Graduate School of Clemson College.

Also at the chapel period the new members of the Sophomore Honor Society will be [illegible] ments for this honor fraternity, organized last year, is a 2.4 point ratio and completion of at least three of four semesters.

Seniors who have received graduate school fellowships and faculty members who have received grants or fellowships will be recognized at this program.

Student Body Fills Remaining SCA Posts

Ebby Mayfield, Gay Maddox, and Tom Collins were elected to fill the three remaining offices in the Student Christian Association in run-off elections Tuesday.

Mayfield, a junior from Greer, was chosen to take the vice-presidential duties, replacing Bob Matthews in this office. In the election Monday, neither Bill Francis or Lonnie Love received a majority vote, thus making it necessary for another balloting on Tuesday.

The new secretary, Gay Mattox, a sophomore from Spartanburg, won against Dick Faulkner and Don Dunlap to succeed Dick Wood, outnumbering Faulkner in Tuesday's voting.

Tom Collins, a sophomore from Pageland, was elected to fill the treasurer's position vacated by Mayfield. Bill Betchman and Stacy Coker were the initial nominees for treasurer, with a run-off between Betchman and Collins.

All of these have been active in campus activities at P. C. and have had previous experience on the SCA. Ebby Mayfield, vice-president, is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha, served as treasurer of the retiring SCA cabinet, is treasurer of the International Relations Club, a member of the Methodist Student Union, and previously served on the Interdenominational Council.

Gay Maddox is well qualified to fill the office of secretary. She was secretary-treasurer of her class for two years, secretary of the Freshman SCA, corresponding secretary

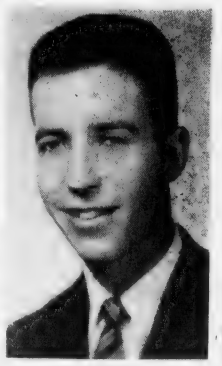
Gibson Elected As W. F. Officer

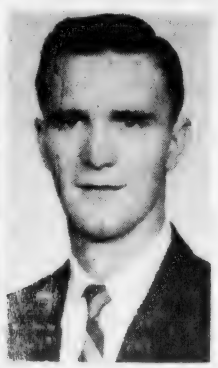
Glenn Gibson, a rising senior, was elected vice-moderator of the Westminster Fellowship of the Synod of South Carolina at that organization's annual conference held last weekend in Spartanburg.

Gibson is past treasurer and is currently serving as president of the local Westminster Fellowship. He is also a member of the Ministerial Club.



Other Synod officers are Pete Johnson, the Citadel, Moderator; Martha Sue Taylor, Erskine, Secretary; Joe Thompson, Clemson, Treasurer; and Henrietta Odell, Converse, editor of the WF newsletter.

Gibson was one of nine PC students who were delegates to the conference.



Student Council

Student Body president Paul Arrington announced today that proceedings of student council meetings, including trials, would be made public.

This information is to be posted on the bulletin board in the student post office.

JIM SHAKESPEARE

RALPH CHAMBERS

Two Leading Seniors Given Graduate Study Fellowships

Ralph Chambers and Jim Shakespeare, Presbyterian College seniors, have recently been awarded fellowships for graduate study.

Shakespeare was awarded a fellowship by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation and plans to study at Vanderbilt. His fellowship is worth full tuition and fees plus $1,500 living expenses for a year. He intends to major in the field of English in preparation for college teaching.

Chambers has been awarded a graduate fellowship at Vanderbilt University valued at slightly more than a year. He will be an assistant in the chemistry department during graduate work in chemistry with a concentration in organic chemistry.

Since coming to PC, Chambers has been an honor student. A member of the Blue Hose basketball team, he co-captained last year. A member of the Tau Phi Pi social fraternity and of the Block P Club, Chambers will be a three year graduate.

Shakespeare also boasts an excellent academic record. He is a member of the student council, past president of his fraternity, and a top debater and contender for the honors society.

Scabbard And Blade Taps Junior Members

Ten junior cadets were tapped into PC's chapter of Scabbard and Blade, national honorary military society, at the annual Military Ball activities held last Friday, March 6. Those chosen were Joe Hardin, Bob Somers, Dick Wood, Dave Magee, [illegible] Cliff Stovall, Jim Benson and Don Benning.

These men were selected through the local battle group unit on the basis of outstanding leadership and proficiency in military science.

At the same ceremony Lt. Col. Bruce Prince was awarded the "outstanding cadet" ribbon.

Retrospect

R. E. Week -- An Evaluation

Religious Emphasis Week has come and gone and PC's students have gone and come. Everything is back to normal.

It was a good program the SCA cabinet planned for us and they are to be congratulated. They chose a theme for us, "Go yet into all the world and . . ." and applied it to many different aspects of life.

Dr. Weersing spoke concerning going into the world with mature minds and thoughts, saying that our modern world required these traits of any who wished to live effectively as an active member of such a world.

Chaplain Tucker elaborated on the task of refitting criminals in such a way that they might return to a normal life in the world of prejudice and unforgiving minds.

Reverend James brought our attention to the fact that as we choose our vocations we also choose our future personal success. He emphasized self honesty and self-evaluation as the guides toward the right vocational choices.

Chaplain Jenks chose the field of marriage for his discussion, showing students that sex and the participation in the sharing of sex cannot be done effectively unless the participants are educated mentally and emotionally about the beauty of good Christian marital relations.

Mr. Miller, a missionary to the Congo, reminded each of us that missions is not a task reserved for foreign fields or a few consecrated Christians but a privilege for all Christians to fulfill in all aspects of daily living.

Mrs. Chapman's ideas cannot be confined to a small paragraph but the topic of her discussions were the five unexpendables of life — learning, loving, creating, communicating, and wondering. This, indeed, is a broad topic but she covered it quite effectively showing that the only requirements for the enjoyment of these eternities was the courage to partake of them and the love and understanding to share them.

Yes, these were the topics and ideas given to students this week and everything is back to normal. This is a tragedy. But it is not necessity for things to be this way. The challenges of the six speakers have carried the students out of their shell into a new world of light. It is not possible that we remain on this high high plateau, but it would be a profound shame to return to normal campus life without bringing at least part of the light of the week back to our paths of normality.

After all, what is the purpose of the Religious Emphasis Week?

ernon Is BSU ission Speaker

Rev. Vance O. Vernon is scheduled to speak at the Clinton First Baptist Church at the March 15 evening worship service at 7:30. Vernon represents the South Carolina BSU Spring mission tour and is accompanied by Charles W. Horner, state BSU executive secretary.

Rev. Vernon's talk will be drawn from his experience as a missionary among the Amazon River in Equatorial Brazil, and as a teacher at Equatorial Baptist Theological Institute where he has been working for the past 13 years.

He received his bachelor of arts degree from Howard College in Birmingham, and his BD from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

Religion and Numbers

We recall last year's evaluation of the 1958 Religious Emphasis Week by the faculty and administration and it seems that particular reference was made to the matter of attendance as a criteria for its success. We don't propose to predict the basis for this year's evaluation of Religious Emphasis Week, but if numbers or attendance figures dominate the thinking of whatever group decides on the 1960 program, then they have completely overlooked the purpose and real value of Religious Emphasis and might best discontinue the whole affair.

No man can possibly measure the immediate or long range effect of this Religious Emphasis Week. The results are known only to the Creator. But if an indication of success is a must for those who will determine following programs, then we suggest they ask those who have participated. Many men on this campus have been variously inspired through their association with the individuals who have been our guests. They have discussed a new outlook and have refreshed through the dynamics of Christian personalities. Religion has been emphasized, even revitalized for those who participated. For those who didn't, the loss is their own and they are accountable only to themselves and their Creator.

Thus if 50 men, or even less, have been reached, then 1959 Religious Emphasis Week is a success. But again, if numbers must be the criteria for success, then we have forgotten the parables of the mustard seed and leaven and even Christ's concern for the individual.

Editor's Notebook

NO ONE KNOWS exactly how many years it has been . . . how many brooms . . . how many tons of dirt—but no longer is that important for Laura is gone. She passed on this week in her sleep of a heart attack. Neville is not the same- -no longer the cheering "Mawning"—no longer the uninhibited spirituals ringing in the halls. Gone is the desire to get into "That Douglas House—it needs a woman's touch." Laura is gone, but not the assurance of a great faith which rang in her singing.

WE ARE GLAD to see the new furniture on the Douglas House patio. With the warm breath of Spring upon us, the furniture will be well used and much appreciated.

POINTED OUT to us as a problem is the un-availability of postage stamps on campus. 'Tis a problem—for many's the time we've carried a stamp-less letter for days on end. We wonder if the canteen could obtain a stamp machine.

OUR CONGRATULATIONS to the new SCA officers. We wish them luck as they take over this important phase of student leadership. We also tip our hats to the old SCA officers and cabinet for a fine year's work.

AND LASTLY we welcome the newest member of our faculty, Coach Vic Spooner. With big shoes to fill, we wish him luck.

PI KAPPA PHI

Beta Chapter of Kappa Phi had its weekly meeting Tuesday night. The Brothers were assigned their little Brothers. Final plans were made for the pledge party to be held at Peck Cornwell's Mary Lou Ranch on the 21st. We would also like to extend congratulations to our basketball team for their fine playing on Monday night.

KAPPA ALPHA

The results of the military ball week-end were brought out at our weekly meeting. Finding that Tom Wise and Ben Smith had pinned their respective young ladies, we extended our warmest congratulations.

Final arrangements concerns the annual Old South Ball have been completed, thanks to Beta Pi chapter's Bob Richardson, chairman and director of secession ceremonies.

One of the highlights of the week-end is the secession ceremonies, in which several members of Beta Pi will participate. General Robert E. Lee will be portrayed by Jack Crandall, and Wade Hampton by Howard Bumgardner. Paul Arrington will portray a full general.

SIGMA NU

The brothers and pledges of Zeta Theta chapter were privileged to hear Chaplain Tucker of Atlanta Penitentiary Wednesday night. Chaplain Tucker's informal talk dealt mainly with the international aspect of his work and was both interesting and informative.

Election of officers are planned for next week.

Ominous Apparition

NIGHTCOWS and GOLDEN CALVES

I'm a Freudian (aren't we all?) at heart if not in mind. I delight in dreaming, and in relating and interpreting my slumberland productions and those of other creative folk. My ruling ambition, I might say, is to dream as well as Tony Randall (a funnily pharaonic visionary), an aspiration very nearly realized only several nights ago. I feel, all things considered — photography, lighting, direction—that it is the finest thing I've done; but it has, since its occurrence, steadily increased in disturbing significance. Have you, perchance, ever had a dream not unlike mine?

I dreamed I was awakened — a tricky, realism-leading device of the mind—by an unpleasant voice urging me to rise and sign. I pretended I was dead, but the voice continued to hound me until I was forced to acknowledge it. When I got my lids unglued and my eyes accustomed to the blinding light, I saw that I was surrounded by seven sacred cows, fat but not so sleek. They were wearing yellow jerseys, all of which were numbered. The numbers, however, were small in spatial size and each contained seven digits. The number of the cow who was roughly shaking my shoulder was 3,792,239.

I am a very light sleeper, it's true, but I take an inordinate length of time awakening. There are those, in fact, who hold to the opinion that I have never been really awake; and I myself must admit that I've never been known to utter a sensible series of words before 10 o'clock in the morning.

Anyway, all the cows seemed thoroughly to enjoy my confusion and consternation at being so rudely aroused at such an unholy hour. "The British are coming," the captain of the cows declared, and thrust a yellow, blue-ruled tablet under my nose, "Sign here," he ordered.

"What is it?" I inquired, for I had gotten it into my head that I was being awarded my daily demerit quota.

"It's just a petition," he said. "We're gonna get get a re-trial for Red Forest."

"I'm sure that's thoughtful of you," I told him. "Who is Red Forest?"

"Who is Red Forest!" cow 7,724,935, exclaimed with great incredulity. "He's just our most valuable player.'

"Do you mean by that," I asked, "that he has lifted the most valuables?"

"Don't get funny, fella," a third cow said, sliding his hand into the pocket of the trench coat which he wore over his jersey and in which I had earlier detected an oval-shaped bulge, a loaded football no doubt.

"What time is it?" I wondered aloud.

"It's four fifteen. Now quit stallin'. Sign right here," the cow-captain said.

"Aren't you cows breaking training rules or something," I asked; "staying up so late, I mean. And should you be smoking those marijuanas?"

"You lookin' for trouble, buddy?" said one of the addicted cows, who resembled Franz Kafka in no respect. "Do like the guy says: sign the paper already."

"Just a minute," I entreated vigorously shaking my head. "I can't remember my name."

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

The other day I was heading to my 9:30 I spied Percival Crudely staggering aimlessly across the plaza. Since a big dance weekend had just been completed, I could understand some people staggering, but not P. C., because he was in shape for the weekend. The other day when I had walked in the room I found him pacing up and down the floor from one end to the other. I watched him for about five minutes then, puzzled, I asked him what he was doing and he had told me that since there was a big week-end coming up, he was practicing walking a straight line. I just couldn't understand his staggering across grounds.

"Hey P C."

"Ye-yeah, G-raham. what do for you?"

P. C. looked all tuckered [illegible]

Behind the Blues

Spring Sports Season Sends Students Shrinking From Studies

By MARTIN CHITTY, Sports Editor

With football and basketball behind us, spring sports jump to the spotlight. PC'un interest will now be divided between baseball, tennis, track, and golf.

In past years the Blue Hose racketeers have always been ed among the nation's best. The a of 3 of last year's stars will ike this year one of rebuilding. Baseball could be the big gun enty of experience and power eve notice of an outstanding nine e pitching staff is the present estion mark, however, there is od depth here. With experience s position should prove formid- le.

Dr. Stevenson's golfers suffered ough a bad year last season, but evidence points to an improved son on the links.

Coach Spooner cuts his teeth in lege sports as he begins preptions with his cindermen. Alough it is too early to see the seaorts heard on Coach Spooner, is just the man who can bring PC ck back to its former promiace.

Catawba Clash Opens PC's Diamond Season

Coach Clyde Ehrhardt sees his seball nine begin to take shape as y make preparations for their mer with Catawba on Thursday.

In early workouts, the team has ibited excellent power at the bat h Wayne Godfrey, Tony Benson, l Sease, Paul Chastain, and Ted ahy swatting the apple with frency.

The pitching, which has been a adache to Coach Ehrhardt thus has also been improving with e. Veterans Bill Dobbins and x Dubose are back in form, with comers Jimmy Howell, Harold eford, Leland Vaughn, Jerry tty and Harvey Blanchard provthat they also have the ability to the ball past opposing batters. t the present time it looks as ugh the Blue Hose will line the mond as follows next Thursday. catcher will be either Morgan ers or Ken Nix, Ted Leahy will dle the chores at first, Tony Benwill see duty at second, Chas- at shortstop and Wayne Godwill hold down third. The probe outfielders are Ray Hodge, Ed kson, and Bill Sease. Any one of pitchers previously mentioned nds a good chance of seeing and action on opening day.

College Will Open Pool Next Week

Irvin Montgomery, director of student activities, announced today that the college pool will open next week. The schedule given for the semester is 2:30 until 5:30 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

In making this announcement, Montgomery said that if student interest was sufficient, the pool would be open more htan the above hours.

Plans have been made for the pool to be heated for the comfort of the students. A lifeguard will also be on duty at all times.

New Men Dominate Blue Hose Cinders

By JERRY CHITTY

Due to his recent arrival on campus, Coach Vic Spooner has his work cut out for him.

Ed Messer, a returning star from last year's cinder squad, was recently elected captain. Another bright spot will be Curtis Linder, who has held the State Broad Jump title for the past two seasons.

Prospects for the '59 Blue Hose trackmen are numerous. Dick Shawn, Ed Messer, Billy Blanton, and Tony Atkins are expected to lead the dashmen. A fine crop of speedy new men have also come out for the speed posts and are expected to lend great aid here. The discus will be thrown by Ed Browder, Reubin Gramling, and first year man Billy Ogden. Larry Kirven, John Collins, and Dave McIntosh will be featured in the mile relay. Dick Curnow and Gordon Stanley will be the probable 440 men. Linder will of course be the big man in the broad jump.

These positions are all temporary and there are many yet to be filled. This is mainly due to the fact that eight of the above named men are freshmen.

Intramural Action Approaches Finish

Because of this week's time being largely devoted ofthe Religious Emphasis Week program, only six teams saw action in the three scheduled games. Next week will begin the end of the season, with the teams finishing their scheduled games. The following week will take the top five teams to the tournament, which will post the "number one" team.

This week's one night of intramural play began with Phi Kappa Pi out-shooting the Garnet "5" by the surprising score of 37-27. The following game placed the forces of Theta Chi, led by John Gosett, and the Bandits together. The same began with a slow start, but by the second half the Bandits were never threated again in their 59-33 effort.

The closing game of the week was similar in the scoring column, the Chirese Bandits took the beginning points and led the All-Stars all the way. The final score was 52-32.

Hose Golfers Set For Fairway Circuit

Dr. Stevenson's Blue Hose golfers prepared to tee off the 1939 season here next Thursday against Belmont Abbey.

The PC men of the links will be led by co-captains Sonny Bell and Al Copeland. The lineup has Jack Shawn in the No. 1 position, Al Copeland No. 2, Sonny Bell No. 3, Max Clyburn No. 4, Harry McDonald No. 5, Hexie McDonald No. 6, Frank Sells No. 7, Johnny Granger No. 8 and Charlie Morris No. 9.

Other matches next week will pit the PC'uns against Furman here on Thursday and on Friday they will go to Spartanburg to meet Wofford.

The teams expects to be much improved this year as they look forward to an enjoyable season on the links.

COACH JIM LEIGHTON displays the "old know how" to tennisers Jim Shakespere (left) and Harry Hoffman as preseason practice comes to an end. This year's opening match is with Erskine on the home courts Monday.

PC Racketeers Prepare For Tough Net Season

By BOB STEVENS

The recent sunny weather has everyone's eyes turned to the tennis courts. Here will be found Coach Leighton and his tennis team working very hard in preparation for their March 16 opener with Erskine.

Coach Leighton will build this year's team around the core of three returning lettermen. These lettermen are Captain Jim Shakespeare, Harry Hoffman, and Bobby Daniels. Tom Elliott, Ed Caviness, Dave Greenslade, Bill Stone, and Beansy Frampton are all outstanding freshmen.

Due to the graduation of three lettermen last year Coach Leighton considers this to be his year to rebuild. However, the five outstanding freshmen make the PC tennis future look bright, indeed.

Coach Leighton feels that it is still too early to designate the team positions, however, the squad has been working hard all year and should be ready for the first match.

The doubles teams have already been selected. Shakespeare and Hoffman will compose one with Frampton and Elliott, Caviness and Greenslade featured in the other two.

A change in the state matches has also been announced by Coach Leighton .In the past there have been two tournaments, one being an invitational in which PC did not take part. This year there will be only one tournament. Three more teams are expected to take part in this event. They are: Furman, Citadel, and Clemson.

Coach Leighton considers his strongest opponents this year to be Georgia, Yale, Miami, Harvard, Georgia Tech, George Washington, and Rollins. He feels that a victory over any of these would be an upset.

Over all it looks like another in-

Top Nine News Stories

Nine events are seen by Roger Godwin, immediate past editor, as the outstanding ones among the many events and news items reported in the pages of the Blue Stocking during last semester.

Leading the co-editor's list as the most notable event in the way of progress was the completion of Douglas House and its dedication at Homecoming. Following closely in the same vein was the breaking of ground for the chapel-auditorium and beginning of construction.

The most exciting single event as far as students were concerned was the hanging in effigy of Dean Thackston and the controversy surrounding the dispute over fraternity parties.

Classified as the most successful event during the semester was the Parent's Day week-end. More than 600 parents and other visitors were on campus November 15 for dinner, the PC-Appalachian football game, and open houses in the fraternity suites.

First semester rushing and pledging cannot be omitted from a list of top events. Six fraternities sought pledges and completed rushing under an entirely new system of rushing with fraternities being limited in membership under a new quota system.

Basic changes in design and policy for the PaC-Sac were made during first semester by editor William Turner. These included the addition of a beauty section and the elimination of the sponsor's section except for fraternity sponsors.

In the field of sports the naming of Frank Jones as Athletic Director was a noteworthy event. He succeeded Dr. Walter Johnson who passed away last July, who since 1915 had served faithfully in this capacity.

Fourteen over the last two events were Blue Hose victories over arch-rivals Wofford and Newberry. The defeating of the latter was particularly significant in that it returned the Bruce Derby to PC.

Night Cows

I turned over and went back to sleep. End of dream.

The very next morning I began to ponder the dream's deep, dark meanings, dredging my subconscious for keys to the complex symbolism. I came up with some startling and revealing answers. From a number of possible interpretations I have selected the four most plausible.

First off, I think perhaps I should not have eaten the chocolate-filled mushroom effect which constituted dessert on the day of the night of the nightmare. As Sigmund once remarked, sick food is the stuff on which dreams are made.

On the other hand, the phantasm may have been a delayed reaction to a story I had read the week-end before, a story by Delmore Schwartz called "The Track Meet." There is a definite kinship between the two.

Then again, my dream may be further proof that football players, as a breed, are boors, loyal to their own kine to a fault.

Perhaps it foreshadows a seven year famine, or a seven year losing streak. Nightmarish as that may seem, there are those who couldn't care less.

Living Endowment Program Is Resumed

The Living Endowment Presbyterian College's annual giving program for alumni and friends, is being resumed full-scale this year.

This program was suspended during the three-year period of the Diamond Jubilee Development Campaign (1953-56) to which alumni and friends gave more than $1,000,000.

With the capital gifts drive now ended and buildings rising in its wake, the Living Endowment will seek smaller annual contributions to help with the current operations of the College. This program, 1955, operates on this principle:

Few alumni and friends can give large capital gifts to endowment investment. They can, however, through this annual fund give amounts equal to the interest on capital gifts. Thus, every donor sharing in this endeavor helps to create a "living endowment."

Under the Living Endowment program, for example, a $5 gift equals the annual return on $100 invested at 5 per cent; a $50 gift, the annual return on $1,000. And these funds serve the same useful purpose as invested endowment income in helping to meet urgent need in the face of mounting costs of operation.

Donors may earmark their gifts for scholarship aid, for any specific department, for athletics, or for unrestricted use. Each contribution will become an important part of the overall College program.

Marine Recruiter Will Visit Campus

Major Charles B. Redman, Marine Corps officer selection officer, will visit Presbyterian College on Monday, March 16, to interview those students interested in obtaining a Marine Corps commission.

While at PC, Major Redman and his team will be located in Douglas House from 9:00 A. M. until 5:00 P. M.

Several excellent programs are offered by the Corps. The Platoon Leader's class program is available for freshmen, sophomores, and juniors. Seniors may participate in the Aviation officer candidate course or the officer candidate course.

Wallace, Bean, Stovall, Lindsay Nominated For PaC - SaC Posts

• Election After Holidays

Nominations for editor and business manager of the 1960 PaC-SaC were announced today by Willie Turner, present PaC-SaC Editor. They are Bob Bean and Will Wallace for editor, and Roscoe Lindsay and Cliff Stovall for business manager.

Concerning the nominations of the staff, Editor Turner said, "The staff knows more about who is qualified for the positions and that is why the present staff did the nominating instead of the student body as was the practice in the past."

Bob Bean, a junior from Marietta, Ga., was Class Editor of the 1958 PaC-Sac and served as Assistant Business Manager on this year's staff. He was editor of the Knapsack Student Directory and Chairman of publications for the retiring SCA cabinet. Bean is a member of the IRC and has held positions in the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

Will Wallace hails from Mooresville, N. C., and is also a junior. He served on the 1959 PaC-Sac staff as Class Editor and will take over as vice-president of Sigma Nu Fraternity of which he served as Treasurer this year.

Roscoe Lindsay, candidate for business manager, comes from Macon and is a junior. He has been a member of the Blue Stocking staff, IRC, and Tau Phi Pi. He is chairman of the Inter-Denominational Council and vice-president of the Baptist Student Union. Lindsay is the IFC Representative for Alpha Sigma Phi.

Cliff Stovall from Mullins, is also a Junior. As a member of the PC [illegible] for three years, Stovall has been [illegible] and is secretary this year of the organization. He is a member of the Scabbard and Blade Honorary Military Fraternity.

Elections for these offices will probably take place the first Monday after Spring Holidays which is April 6.

SCA Installs New Officers, Cabinet

Installation ceremonies were held this morning at chapel for the new SCA officers. Those installed were Dick Wood, president; Ebby Mayfield, vice-president; Gay Maddox, secretary; and Tom Collins, treasurer.

Also the new REW trophy was awarded to Alpha Psi Delta Sorority for the second straight year. This was given on a basis of percentage attendance at the night services. Mary Virginia Neil, president of Alpha Psi Delta, accepted the trophy.

The new cabinet has been selected. Heading intramural sports is Larry Wood. In charge of publications is Billy Hatchett, who will edit the student handbook, the Knapsack. Bill Francis is to handle chapel programs. Personal and campus affairs chairman is Jim Lyzey, who will be in charge of the SCA calendar. Pat Griffin is Christian Faith and Heritage chairman.

Publicity for the SCA will be done by Evin Varner and Dave Waters. Ted Burn is to work on Dorm Discussions and Frank Sells is music chairman. Managing camps and deportations is Mike Jarrett, and World Relations chairman is Alan Pitts. Working on special assignments are Marion Lee and Bill Robertson.

Hatchett Will Edit Freshman Handbook

Billy Hatchett has been appointed as editor of the 1959 Knapsack, SCA handbook for new students. The appointment was made this week by the SCA officers.

The new editor has announced his staff for the annual guide book. Pat Malone will take the post of business manager, and Edd Collins will serve as managing editor. The associate editor is Mike Jarrett.

Heading the activities section will be Bob Williams, and Ed Wells will be responsible for the fraternity section. Bob Stevens will act as sports editor. In charge of the military portion of the handbook will be Fred Cook.

The art editor will be Dave Waters, and Sonny Ross will be responsible for the handbook layout. Lamar Hawkins will serve as photographer.

The Knapsack is the student handbook and guide for the coming year.

McIntosh Chosen New Sigma Nu Head

John McIntosh, a junior from Columbia, was recently elected Commander of Sigma Nu Fraternity for the coming year, replacing Don Chapman. Elected to the office of Lt. Commander was Will Wallace, a rising senior from Mooresville, N. C. He succeeds Willie Turner in this position.

Stacy Coker of Glade Valley, N. C., is the new treasurer, taking the place of Wallace. Malcolm McHargue was reelected to the post of recorder.

Bob Stevens replaced Jackson in the post of chaplain. The new IFC representative will be Dougald Clark of Fayetteville, N. C., who replaces Willie Turner.

Others elected were Flash Gordon, reporter; Charlie Clotfelter, social chairman, Jinks Harrill, rush chairman; and Dick McGaughey, sentinel.

College Will Play Host For State IRC Convention

Tony Gavalas, chairman of the International Relations Club of South Carolina, announced today that the state convention of the IRC will be held at Presbyterian College next month.

Scheduled for Saturday, April 18, the meeting will draw delegates from The Citadel, University of South Carolina, Winthrop, Wofford, Coker, and other colleges.

Highlighting the convention will be the presentation of a new state constitution, which is being drawn up by the University of South Carolina chapter. The new state chairman will also be chosen.

The delegates will be entertained with a banquet at Judd Dining Hall and a special address by noted speakers. Names of speakers will be released at a later date.

Meetings for the convention will be held in the Douglas House.

The meet will mark the beginning of the second year of the South Carolina clubs as an organized district. This group is a member of the American Association of International Relations Clubs.

Hunter Recalls

Bell Tower Boasts Colorful Past

The tall, deteriorating structure that is the Presbyterian College bell tower stands its post to the side of Neville Hall and looks back on a full and colorful past.

The bell is now used to proclaim PC athletic victories and as the death knell to freshmen underclassmen rat service. But it hasn't been too long—under two decades—that the same bell summoned students to classes, drill, and chapel.

Mr. John Holland Hunter, former business manager of the college, a member of the late Walter Johnson's first football team, and currently serving as treasurer of the Joanna Foundation, recalls many incidents surrounding this PC tradition.

There seems to be no record of the first consecration of the bell tower. Mr. Hunter, who entered PC in 1914, says he remembers hearing the ringing of the bell as a youth in Clinton.

Chapel was held then the first thing in the morning. The bell was rung for five minutes after which no student knew he was late.

Dr. John McSween, who served as president of the college from 1928-1935, personally paid for the present tower and bell which replaced a smaller structure.

No one seems to know when the tradition of the victory bell was begun, or when the bell was first used to call out the freshmen. Many humorous incidents have been related concerning the bell.

One incident of the early days [illegible] Negro apprentice employee who rang the bell by the early morning chapel. When questioned as to his method of telling the time he said that he started ringing the bell as Dr. Brown, another head of the Bible department who was noted for his punctual promptness, passed the church and continued ringing it until the professor reached Neville, which was exactly five minutes.

A former Negro driver and janitor, an assistant manager of the school for one year, recalled one day after the installation of the electric bell system in 1951 that the bell tower was no purpose and should be removed. He stated that he was the lowest wage [illegible] have been razed, except for the stubborn refusal of the same Negro employee.

Mr. Hunt recalls that students, [illegible] on their degree of accuracy and attentiveness in class. Classes often ran overtime, and occasionally were left out, which prompted the installation of the electric bell.

Clarify Or Revise?

Rumors are vicious things. This is especially so on a small campus such as ours. These thoughts are brought to mind concerning the trial proceedings of the student council. Previously, proceedings of the council were not made public. The lack of information lent itself to speculation and colorful additions to the truth.

The case of last week was, as often student council trials are, involved, complicated and confusing. No one seems to know exactly the straight of the matter. A copy of the trial proceedings will be posted early next week, which might give the answer.

There is a definite need for a delineation of areas of responsibilities between the student govrnment and the administration for the administering of discipline. That is, exactly what areas of discipline should be the responsibility of the student government and what areas should be under the jurisdiction of the administration. The interpretation of the constitution by the administration and the student government is vague and needs re-definition or revision.

Also it behooves all students to make use of the information concerning the work of the student government. Only being well-informed can a student better understand and work with the student government—without reliance upon a shaky rumor.

The Tower And Time

It would take quite a mathematician to enumerate the victories that the Presbyterian College bell has announced, the freshmen it has called to rat duty, or—in earlier days—the students it has summoned to class.

To these people—past and present—the bell tower means something. It is tradition. The dictionary on our desk defines tradition as something handed down. The bell tower is something shared, owned in common, with all students who have attended PC. Over the years the structure has become associated with the college as a symbol of the institution.

These are the reasons that it is disgraceful that the tower is in the dilapidated condition that it is. Boards have rotted and fallen off. Those remaining are almost devoid of a protective coat of paint. The rope to the bell has long been missing. The expense involved in repairing the tower is tiny compared to its sentimental value if nothing else.

And perhaps we have ulterior motives.

What a catastrophe it would be should the tower fall down, and there would be nothing with which to call out the new crop of freshmen next Fall.

ALPHA PSI DELTA

Sonny Embry has announced that Alpha Psi Delta has won the trophy this year for attendance at Religious Emphasis Week exercises.

At the meeting this week, plans for the Sorority's skit at the spring picnic were discussed.

SIGMA NU

At the meeting Tuesday night the brothers received a challenge to a brotherhood softball game. There was a discussion as to whether to have a beach party or not. Pledges also elected officers—they were Cecil Morris, President; Wilbur Douglas, Vice-President; Jerry Chitty, Secretary-Treasurer; Dan McQueen, Sergeant-at-Arms. Congratulations to Wilbur Douglas on being named outstanding pledge.

PI KAPPA PHI

Final plans for a party scheduled for the 21st at "Peck's" were made. The annual Shipwreck Ball, to be held in April, was also discussed. Party favors for both events were chosen.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Plans for Alpha Sig's Carolinas-wide Black and White Ball were completed at this week's meeting. The dance is scheduled this week-end at Charlotte, N. C. The socials for the remainder of the semester were discussed.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting of Mu Chapter, plans were discussed for PiKA weekend April 17 and 18. Plans have been made for three combos to play Friday night, Saturday afternoon and Saturday night.

A report of the district convention held at Tau Chapter, University of North Carolina, was made by Brother Billy Hagood.

KAPPA ALPHA

Our warmest welcome and heartiest congratulations were extended to Pledge Ben Vincent after entering the brotherhood Thursday night. Ben is a sophomore from Danville, Va.

SUNSHINE AT NIGHT

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

The other night I rolled to Sunshines parking lot in my putrid pink and dirty white chevy six. It was about 1:30 A. M. I cut the lights off, grabbed my laundry sack and threw it over my shoulder as I hopped out of the car. Entering the all-night launderette, I spied Perceival Crudely, and some members of the Owl Club gathered around the table in the back. One of them had the ace of hearts sticking out of the top of his sock so I figured they were engaged in the gentlemanly sport of card playing.

After throwing my clothes in the machine and adding some GRUB—the new miracle washday detergent. I went back to the car to get some study materials. When I re-entered, the card game was still going on, and no one knew I was around.

Over the noise of the machines, I could faintly hear some of the language of the same.

"Oh, shoot box-cars again."

"Your turn, Crudely—roll 'em."

"Seven come eleven—HOORAH! OK, gentelemen, fork over your dough to Uncle P. C."

I decided to see what was going on.

"Hey, P. C., what's happening back there?"

"RAID!", shouted an owl, and everyone innocently raced to cheek their machines.

"Well, what do you say, G. B.?"

"I don't detect a small game of dice throwing, do I?"

"No, man, we were just engaging in a friendly game of Old Maid."

"Oh, I see."

Some of the machines cut off—the Owls took out their clothes.

"We'll see you, P. C."

"O. K., Babe, I enjoyed it."

"Yeah, I guess so, you won all the money, 'Night."

"Hey, P. C. Why's your face so red? You look as if you've been out kissing the blarney stone all day."

It's A Jinx!

By JINKS HARRILL

Spring is on its way, and in the Spring a young man's fancy turns . . . to what the young ladies have been thinking about all Winter. Venture forth, brave ones. The lair is laid, and the trap is set. Some brave one saw the first of Spring Sports this week, and ventured down to the gym pool. A few dipped cautious toes into the 50-degree water, but very few remained long. However, still others have plans for keeping everything really warm this week-end. Imagine! $2,157 worth! But my guess is that the home fires will be burning, too.

Many have gotten the urge—to get close to nature. One saw new things from his vantage point upon the flag pole. A few found glee in the mountains, and still others are leading a quiet life in Mike's place every day.

You Playboy fans will appreciate this—It is rumored that there is a man in a green suit passing out chewing gum on campus. Further, June Wilkinson has hired two girls to assist her in walking to work every day. The Britons are great!

I heard that the choir had a wild time at The Anchor in Charleston; Lou Brown runs a cool place. Also rumored is the possibility of the chow hall serving nothing but peanut butter sandwiches and hamburger on Sundays. The "big old boys" will go wild.

Did you hear? Next year we're going to have Sleep Emphasis Week to replace REW, with no drill! It proved too embarrassing for the students who were asked to sign those blasted little sheets in chapel telling how many classes they had attended.

Musical trends are taking very interesting turns. The Kingston Trio is said to be releasing a new album this Spring called "The Thirsty 1." The last one was great; this one should be fabulous! Music caused the purchase of 3000 television sets across the nation when it was announced that Julie London was to have an hour show next year. Wear your safety belts, men.

Catastrophic is the word for the poor earthworm in Biology lab that developed a new head where it should have had a tail. It gets plenty to eat, but it's developing several psychological problems.

Best wishes are in order for the "Tweety birds" as they prepare for their spring tour, and a good health and limber elbows are wished upon the party-goers of this weekend.

Behind The Blues

Mr. Irvin Montgomery has recently announced the requirement of a new intramural trophy. This trophy will be given at the end of the year to the fraternity which has acquired the most points during the preceding year. The basis for awarding points goes as follows: any frist place win by a fraternity counts as 5 points, second place as 3 points and third place as one point. At the present time PiKA leads in this race with 10 points, KA and Pi Kappa Phi have three each. Alpha Sigma Phi and Sigma Nu have one apiece. However, Mr. Montgomery emphasizes that points for the remainder of the year will be given for basketball, softball, swimming, track, and volleyball; for this reason each fraternity still has a good chance of emerging on top and possessing the trophy.

The new trophy must be won three years in succession by the same fraternity, before it may be retired permanently.

The reason for acquiring this trophy, Mr. Montgomery says, is to promote more interest and participation.

We would like to take this opportunity to commend Mr. Montgomery and all others concerned with the intramural program for the fine job done. So far this year there have been 300 participants in the intramural program and for a school with the student body the size of PC's this is exceptional. We feel that this widespread interest of the students has been beneficial to the school as a whole.

Other sports that students will be given a chance in which to participate is spring will be tennis, golf, and horseshoes. However, there will be no trophy points awarded for these.

Tracksters Start Drills Under New Coach Spooner

New Coach Bob Spooner, after only two weeks of preparation, is beguiled with many question marks as he prepares his Blue Hose cindermen for their opening meet at Catawba on March 21.

Coach Spooner feels that he will present a squad fairly strong in field events while the dashes and relays pose as problems only after seeing his men in active competition will he be able to compile the final event roster.

Ed Messer, Tony Atkins, Paul Harrington, Billy Benton, and Bob Beddingfield are now benig slated to represent the Hose in the dash events. Richard Curnow, Gordon Stanley, and Bob Beddingfield are to be featured in the 440, while Dick Shawn and Dave McIntosh are both showing fine potential in the 880.

Ken Caswell and Bill Hill look like top prospects for high jumpers. Dale State Champion Curtis Linder spares to defend his broad jump crown. Benton and Shawn both show ability as pole vaulters nad with Gus and big Bill Schofill. Mac Copeland is the big gun at center.

Guards should well be called the team's strong part, with Billy Ogden and Sonny Bubose firmly fixed in the first unit, with Cecil Morris and big Bill Schofill. Mac Copeland is the big gun at center.

Quarterback is the strong point in the backfield with Bob Waters and Nat Cole, last season's number 1 and number 2 men, respectively, back to field general the Hosemen. Bobby Pate, Dave Morgan, Jerry Lucas, and Billy Benton will return at halfback, offering excellent potential here.

Fullback Bill Hill presents a strong first unit picture at halfback, but aside from Harold Raeford, there is no reserve strength at this post. All things point to a stronger PC gridiron squad next year, but three months is a long time and much can change in this time.

Football Squad Ends Good Spring Workout

Although it's a long time till the pigskin comes back into the picture, the recent close of spring practice brings a natural question. That of "What are the Blue Hose's football prospects for next year?"

Ends were the big problem at the end of last season, but the addition of Dave Parrish, who came here from South Georgia, has helped to modify this problem. Jon Vastine was the other first string flankman at the spring season's end.

Full Intramural Week Ends; Plans Made For Tournament

DIAMOND STRATEGY is planned by pitcher Jerry Chitty (right), Coach Ehrhardt and catcher Morgan Byars in preparation for opening day. The Blue Sox fell to Catawba 7-6, and play Pembroke today and Saturday.—Photo by Rossman.

Four-Team Action Will Begin Monday

After twelve weeks of hard competitive play, the 1958-59 regular intramural season is foreseeing its end. This season featured the undefeated Gray Ghosts and PiKA leading the league. This year after winning four straight championships, the Ferocious Five were finally stopped. The season's teams were made up of at least one from each fraternity and five independent teams.

The next stop will be the long-awaited "Big Four Tournament." Mr. Irvin Montgomery, Director of Student Activities, announced today that play will begin next Monday afternoon. Only three of the four competing teams have a sure place thus far—Gray Ghosts, PiKa, and the Chinese Bandits. The fourth team will be announced later.

Beginning last Monday afternoon, all of the teams have seen continuous action in this final stanza of play.

The week was highlighted when the under-rated Bandits almost gave the Gray Ghosts their first defeat. Fleet-footed Dave Morgan led the Bandits to a halftime lead, but their effort fell through in the closing seconds when the Ghosts went ahead to win 50-48.

The remaining eight games began with PiKA overrunning Theta Chi 50-35. In one of the season's highest scoring games the Pi Kaps were downed by the Campus All-Stars 78-70. Bob Bizerstaff led the scoring with 38 points, followed closely by Buddy Watson with 30. Garnet "5" outplayed the Alpha Sigs by the score of 56-39. Sigma Nu took an easy win over Theta Chi 47-30.

In another close game of the week the Campus All-Stars barely were able to surpass Garnet "5" in a 50-49 effort. The Bandits, led by Roger Foster's 23 points, topped Theta Chi 59-33. In a very low scoring game the Gray Ghosts put down Alpha Sigma Phi 30-14. Again, the Bandits were held in an important game when PiKA won 50-48. The last game of the evening placed the Chinese Bandits 50-25 over Theta Chi.

Last night Sigma Nu defeated Theta Chi 47 to 30. The Gray Ghosts eked out a victory over the Bandits in a 50-47 thriller. The Garnet "5" romped over The Rebels by the score of 75 to 33, while the Pi Kaps defeated Theta Chi by the narrow margin of 2 points in a 38 to 36 hair-raiser. This was Theta Chi's second game that evening. The evening was finished by PiKA's smashing defeat of 48-37 over the Chinese Bandits.

Tonight is the last night of the intramural basketball season. Game time is 7:00 p. m.

Blue Hose Baseballers Fall To Catawba Nine

PC baseball fans witnessed one of the most fantastic catches ever seen here Wednesday when the Catawba right fielder caught Bill Sease's eighth inning line drive. Both ball and player were headed in the direction of the fence and the Catawba outfielder made the catch over his head while running. PC's Bill Sease has every right to feel "robbed."

Catawba cashed in on eight hits in three innings Wednesday for a hard-earned victory over the Blue Hose.

Bill Dobbins hurled a one-hit game until the seventh inning, but a sore arm began worrying him and then the roof caved in.

The Hosemen out-hit the visitors 13-9. Captain Tony Benson and first baseman Ted Leahy led in this department with three each.

The Blue Hose led all the way until Catawba's big eighth inning when the Indians scored four runs to gain the lead, 5-4. They added two more in the top of the ninth, making it 7-4.

Hits by Chastain, Ed Jackson, and Benson led the Blue Hose in a modified last inning rally of two runs, but they were unable to push across.

Tennis Takes First Win of Net Season

PC netters easily romped over Erskine by an 8-1 score in the tennis opener for both Little Three teams. Coach Leighton did not use four of his top netters as Harry Hoffman, Jim Shaksepeare, and Bobby Daniels practiced among themselves during the match.

Scoring victories for the Hosemen were: Ed Caviness, Billy Hagood, Bill Stone, Dave Greenslade, and Ronald Wright. Dave Carr defeated Hal McGirt for the losers' only score. All three PC doubles teams won as Sullivan and Frampton, Caviness and Greenslade, and Stone and Wright handily defeated their opponents.

The Hosemen will face Erskine in a rematch here next Monday and then they will journey to Miami where they will face Yale and Miami University. These matches will take place on the 28th, 29th, and 30th of this month.

Coach Leighton has announced that Harry Hoffman will serve as No. 1, Jim Shakespeare as No. 2, Ed Caviness as No. 3, Tom Elliott, No. 4, Bobby Daniels, No. 5, and Beansy Frampton and Dave Greenslade will alternate in the sixth position. However, it is probable that these positions will change as the team faces different opponents.

Blue Stocks Outgun Arch Rivals in Duel

Friday the 13th proved to be not unlucky for PC's rifle team as the campus gun-slingers shot down Davidson, Furman, and Wofford.

PC won first place with 1379 points. Second, third, and fourth places, respectively, were Davidson, 1375; Furman, 1334; and Wofford, 1315.

High shooter for the match was Wearn of Davidson, with 282 points out of a possible 300. Eshbaugh and Smith were high for PC with 281 apiece.

To date Presbyterian has a conference record of 6 wins and 3 losses; over-all the record is 6 and 5. In competition for the Hearst Trophy PC is ranked number 23 out of 80 participating teams. The local sharpshooters, in Third Army competition, are ranked 14th among all ROTC units.

Students Choose Varied Professions, Denominations

A total of 56 or 12 per cent of the completion recorded the various fields of business. Education draws 55 or 11 per cent, plus the twenty-one students who plan to coach and teach. There are 11 candidates for the ministry and 25 prospective lawyers.

The largest group, 123 or 24 per cent, are still undecided as to their future careers.

Among the other fields toward which Presbyterian College students are preparing for are:

Medicine, 19; Dentistry, 12; Engineering, 11; scientific fields, 13; military, 3; Journalism, Aviation, medical, and library science.

Almost as diversified are the student's church preferences. There are fifteen different denominations represented in the student body.

Presbyterians lead with 283 or 55 per cent. The Baptists are second high with 131, followed by fifty-three Methodists.

The total breakdown by denominations past the top three are: Episcopal, 15; Lutheran, 5; Catholic, 4; Christian Church, 4; Church of Christ, 2; Pentecostal Holiness, 2; Non-Denominational, 2, and ARP, Church of God, Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints, Seventh

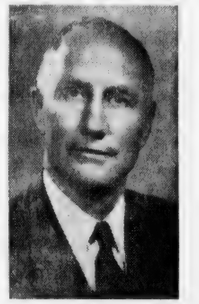
Strom Thurmond Is IRC Week Speaker

'Our Changing World' Set As Annual Event's Theme

A cancellation-plagued International Relations Week begins Monday evening with an open forum entitled "The Plant Earth—1965." Last minute cancellations left the week with only two speakers. Club officials, as the Blue Stocking goes to press, are trying to obtain a third speaker for the event. Students will be notified of any changes in chapel periods by a notice on the Dining Hall bulletin board.

The forum Monday night is scheduled for 7:30 in the Douglas House meeting room. It will feature speakers in several fields describing what they feel the world will be like in 1965. The audience will participate in the discussion, which is open to the student body.



On Wednesday, during the regularly scheduled chapel period, T. Frank Watkins, a distinguished corporation lawyer of Anderson, will speak to the student body.

Mr. Watkins is widely traveled and toured Russia two years ago under a special government program. In addition to travel, he is widely read on Russia and the current situation concerning this nation. He will draw upon this knowledge in his address. He is a trustee of the college.

Keynoting the week will be the address by United States Senator Strom Thurmond during chapel period Friday. He will be introduced by Laurens County Senator Robert C. Wasson.

His address will follow the week's theme of "Our Changing World," by bringing thoughts on "Our Changing Nation."

Following his appearance in the college chapel the Senator will be in the Douglas House lounge to meet students and answer any questions they might have.

SENATOR THURMOND

Senator Thurmond began his service in the United States Senate on December 24, 1959, after winning the distinction of being the first person ever elected to a major office in a write-in campaign.

He serves on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and the very important Armed Services Committee.

Prior to his election to the Senate, the Senator had a variety of experience in public service. A graduate of Clemson College, he has farmed, taught agriculture, served as a County Superintendent of Edu

Presbyterian Robed Choir Departs Tomorrow for Annual Spring Tour

Dr. Edouard Patte, conductor of the Presbyterian College Robed Choir, will take his twenty-four-man choir on tour through the state of Georgia and along the east coast of Florida. The time of departure is 5 p. m., April 4.

The tour, which includes eight performances, is as follows:

April 5, A. M.—Albany, Ga.
April 5, P. M.—Waycross, Ga.
April 6, P. M.—Bradenton, Fla.
April 7, P. M.—Miami, Fla.
April 8, P. M.—Miami, Fla.
April 9, P. M.—West Palm Beach, Fla.
April 10, P.M.—Winter Park, Fla.
April 12, A. M.—Valdosta, Ga.

The well-known choir has previously presented sixteen concerts this school year in this state and Georgia. Following their return from Florida, the choir has four remaining concerts, one of them being at the First Presbyterian Church of Clinton on the morning of May 8.

Using the Apostle's Creed as the theme of their religious program, the choir presents thirteen numbers which exemplify the statements of this Christian statement of beliefs. These impressive anthems, most of which are sung acco-pelo, have been chosen from the repertoire of Bach to Palestrian, from the traditional Russian numbers to our own country's traditional Negro spirituals. With the purpose of making each performance an experience of spiritual meaningness and religious worship, each anthem is preceded by scriptural readings by various members of the choirs.

The first number gives praise to the power of God; Goudimel's "Let God Arise in All His Might." Palestrina's "Adoramus Te" follows this featuring an impressive double choir rendition. The double quartet then sings a Christmas anthem in Latin, "Angelus ad Pastores," by Sveelinck. The next number is by the entire choir and is one of its best numbers. Palestrina's "O Bone Jesu," is a deeply moving piece concerning the death of Christ.

A Greek piece by Bach, "Chorale and Kyrie," is the double quartet's second number. This is followed by "The Lord Ascendeth" which features a first tenor solo. The powerful "Now let every Tongue adore Thee," by Bach follows this before the offertory. These least two numbers are the only accompanied numbers in the entire program.

The traditional "Bless the Lord, O My Soul," starts the second half. During the thirteen years the choir has existed under Dr. Patte's direction, this one anthem has been sung every year and has become known to choir members as

Theta Chi Leads In Scholastic Ratings

Theta Chi Fraternity is ranked first in the fall semester scholastic ratings of the Greek social fraternities. The Theta Chi's compiled an average grade-point ratio of 1.74 for the semester.

Rated second was Alpha Sigma Phi with an average of 1.55, and Pi Kappa Alpha finished third with an average of 1.29. Pi Kappa Phi, averaging 1.17, Kappa Alpha with 1.15, and Sigma Nu at 1.13, rounded out the ratings. Alpha Psi Delta Sorority actually finished second among all Greeks by way of their 1.63 average.

In the figuring of the standings only members at the beginning of school were taken into account. The grades of the new pledges were not figured in with the fraternities' averages.

The all-fraternity average for first semester was 1.34, compared with the all-mens average of 1.45. The non-fraternity average was the lowest in ten years—a .96 average.

Scholarship Finalists Visit Campus Next Week

Finalists for Presbyterian College Founder's Scholarships will arrive on campus next Friday, April 10, in the last round of competition for the ten coveted awards.

On Friday, the young scholars will tour the campus. That night they will be feted at a banquet in Douglas House, after which an banquet will be held for them in Judd Hall. Several members of the faculty, as well as several campus leaders will give brief talks to the prospective students.

Saturday will be occupied by a series of intensive tests. Dr. Louis Pope, director of the guidance center, will be in charge of administering the tests.

The winners will be announced at a late date.

The founder's scholarship program was established to encourage academic achievement. Each top scholarship will pay up to $500 per year for four years to the student who qualifies on the basis of intelligence, character and leadership.

The select group of finalists—composed of eight South Carolinians, four from Georgia, and two from North Carolina and one Floridian—includes:

South Carolina finalists—Donald Sterling of Conestee; Roslyn E. Denny and Roy Garris, Jr., both of Columbia; Mark Glenn of Summerville; George Reeves of Alcolu; Harry Waikart of Seneca; Barbara Jean Way of Dorchester, and James Witkinson of Lugoff.

Georgia finalists—Rebecca Earnest and Ann Walker, both of Macon; Judy Bolton of Winder; Robert Hazelwood of Decatur and Robert Piephoff of College Park, Ga.

North Carolina finalists—James Perry of Shelby; and Christine Wilson of Monroe.

Florida finalist—Beverley Butler of Bradenton.

PaC-SaC Elections For Top Posts Monday

Elections will be held Monday, April 6, for editor and business manager of the 1960 PaC-SaC. The ballot box will be in the Douglas House lounge where the voting will take place. Students are urged to cast their ballots between the hours of nine and two o'clock.

Candidates for the editor are Bob Bean and Will Wallace. Cliff Stovall and Roscoe Lindsay are in competition for Business Manager.

BSU Delegation Will Attend Spring Retreat

A delegation from the Presbyterian College BSU will attend the state Spring Retreat in Rock Hill next weekend, April 10-12, according to Ken Caswell, local president.

The meet will be held in the Oakland Baptist Church. The program is designed primarily for newly-elected officers. Workshops for the various offices will highlight the event.

Among those who are to appear on the program are: Dr. Kearnie Keegan, Convention-wide BSU Secretary; Dr. W. F. Howard, Texas BSU Director; and Rev. Harold Cole, North Carolina BSU Director.

The theme of the retreat is "As You Go, Preach."

A Shoulder Shrug...

(From The Duke Chronicle)

Be casual. That sentence could well be the by-word of the American college student. He worries about what kind of job he'll get when he graduates; he worries about making a C average; he worries about himself. But let the subject of the nation or the work or life in general come up—he can't do anything about it; so he doesn't bother to think. Let other people come to him with a problem—well, it's not his concern. He commits himself to neither principles nor people. He believes in nothing but getting himself through a decently comfortable life; for everything else he has only a shrug of the shoulders.

Historically, the college student has been the leader of his nation. In Hungary the students fought. In Russia the younger generation is the center of attention. But in Hungary and in Russia there stands an ideal for which to fight, a belief for which to live. A helpless uncertainty toward important things leads American students to turn to their immediate situation, accepting the staus quo with apparent unconcern.

In keeping with college tradition, we must avoid committing ourselves. Let's just live along in our own little ways. We must be collegiate, be cynical, and above all—be casual.

It's Spring....

It's Spring. And we've got it. Spring fever, we mean. It's an annual contagion which, even with the newest miracle drugs, we can't seem to fight off.

Besides, it's right after holidays . . . and mid-semesters . . . no more quizzes for awhile. The tennis courts . . . the show . . . and the sack all beckon. And so this week, we're not in a cutting mood. Not that we are always "Cutting," or that the sole purpose of our little epithets is to cut, for we are always backed up with a serious purpose.

So, you'll pardon us, you see, it's Spring.

Chapel Needs Changing

(All letters to the editor must be signed; names will be withheld on request. Letters do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the editors.)

Dear Editor

After three years as a back row witness, I would like to raise the question of chapel conduct. In light of Friday's installation of the new SCA officers, I am sure that we will have to agree that the conduct of the student body is more like a group of kindergarten students assembled together instead of a group of "future men of Christian leadership." The conduct and attitude of some students has sunk so low that it is embarrassing to have a distinguished speaker in chapel.

What is the purpose for having chapel? I was under the impression that it was to be educational and to increase our spiritual life. If these are any of the motives for chapel, how many programs have we had that were so centered and how many students have had the correct spirit to receive these programs?

In defense of the students, I would like to say that they can't win for losing. First, the student must go to chapel, which is good, but when chapel runs one minute over time and then the student is three minutes late to class, they have to have all sorts of explanations to get some professors off their neck. Second, if chapel is so good for the student, why doesn't the faculty support the chapel programs. To the faithful few who do, we tip our hats, but to those who come only when their organization has the program or when they receive recognition for some creditable work, I would like to ask why should the student go if they don't. Does the student need more exposure to religion than the professors?

I do not propose to have answers for these questions, but I would like to make a few suggestions that could help. First, that the programs be planned ahead of time so that they will be as interesting, enlightening, and inspiring as possible. Second, that the faculty agree among themselves to support chapel and at least be somewhat understanding when the student has to walk to the Douglas House or Science Hall after a program that may have run a few minutes overtime. Third, that the student try to at least respect the person speaking and if possible to imagine themselves in the speaker's shoes.

BYE-BYE BLUES

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

I was sitting in my room Thursday afternoon doing some last minute studying before taking off on the week-long Florida Tour with the P College Blue Throats.

Percival Crudely walked in carrying a bunch of packages under his arm and giving a few last TRA-LA-LAS before departing.

"Hey, Roomo. What's in all those packages you've got ther?"

"Oh, just a few items I picked up at Adair's to take to the Sunny South with me."

"Who you think you're goiog tn impress down there?"

"You never can tell, G . B. Have you packed yet?"

"No man. We still got two days."

"Well, I think I'll get started. How about coming in here and checking the items off the list as I pack them."

"O. K., P. C." I walked in the other room and found all kinds of cuirous goods lying on the beds and floor.

"Here's the list, G. B.—Readyu"

"Shoot, P. C.!"

"Throat sprayer!"

"Check!"

"Game uniform!"

"Check!"

"Roulette wheel, cards, pair of dice and three rolls of dimes. That's in case I run into some dumb Yankees who want to play a round or two."

"Check!"

"Portable ice machine, ginger ale, lemons, Four Roses, three brown bottles."

"Check—say, what's in the three bottles?"

"Milk!"

"Oh, all rgiht, continue."

"Sun glasses, pipe, cigar box."

"Say, Crudely, what's in that cigar box?"

"Jelly beans, of course, what else?"

"Check"

"Soda straws"

"Check!"

"Bermudas and noxzema, the sun shines—GE sun lamp, sun tan lotion in case it does."

"Check!"

"A change of underwear, I get to bathe in the sea two days and two 5-day Deodorant Pads in case I don't."

"Check!"

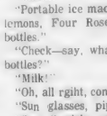
"Swim suit in case I get a chance to go swimming—Dristan in case I catch a cold and can't."

"Check!"

"Throat pills."

"Check!"

"Razor and shine cloth"



"Check!"

"Well, G. B., I guess that's all. He gets everything for the trip and then G. B., you think the camp will get along without me?"

"I believe so."

"Your really think Mama and his staff will get along?"

Book Review

A Jew in Russia

Beggar's Paradise is a new book of great interest to a select group of students. This is to say that with the rigors of a college schedule to meet, this new work by Gaston Bilenkiss will probably be worthwhile reading only to those majoring in history, sociology, or political science.

But, at any rate, it is a very interesting book which has a down-to-earth quality — possibly because it is written about a very unromantic subject, Jewish life in old Russia.

Through persecution and poverty under the tzars, Zanvel Springer, the hero of Beggar's Paradise, holds on to his good humor, and through him we see typified the Jewish courage and character. Pauper, fugitive, the victim of a seemingly random fate, Zanvel nevertheless finds through suffering the way to genuine wisdom and love.

Like many legends and tales evolving from the world wars, this, too, is a human story, an expression of the impregnable human spirit. These old Jews were, one might say, "down, but never out."

The author, Gaston Bilenkiss, is now a poultry farmer in New Jersey. He was born in Russia and is very familiar with the locale of the novel, having been a member of a Jewish community in Southwest Russia.

Behind The Blues

South Carolina's Military College, better known as The adel, recently announced that it will no longer meet fford on the gridiron due to the fact that they play un- a different system of rules. This game was played at Orangeburg County Fair and was one of the state's outstanding sports nts.

In considering this situation, one wonders if this was truly the reason the game's ending. It is felt that Citadel officials were rather embarrassed by the five straight defeats handed them by the smaller school.

Another question which comes to mind is why haven't the Cadets dropped Newberry and FC from their schedule. Is it because they have had a little more success with these teams? These clubs play under the same rules as does Wofford.

Perhaps the answer is that Citadel feels that it has outgrown these all schools and will drop the other two (Newberry and PC) in the near ure. We suppose that The Citadel is in a different class. After all, has only to look at their game with Georgia to see that they should y big schools. Georgia won this match 76-0.

CONGRATULATIONS TO TENNIS TEAM

We feel that Coach Leighton and his tennis squad deserve a long round applause for their fine showing thus far this season. In winning six of nt matches, this team composed of four freshmen in the first six men, es promise of even greater things to come.

One can easily tell the improvement these boys have made from se opening match to the latest one with Kalamazoo. It will be interesting to see how the Hosemen fare against Harvard.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

The word is out that Newberry will replace Citadel at the Orangeburg asic.

Kalamazoo's number one Bill Japinger was very impressive here as defeated Harvard's number one and gave Harry Hoffman a close tch . . . PC tennis players feel that Tulane is the top net team in the ion this year.

Much excitement was shown over the fierce competition exhibited in intramural basketball tournament. A good example of the fierce play s the semi-final between the Sigs and Pikes with the PiKA's coming out top in a double overtime by two points. During these games several dents were seen with books attempting to get in some studying during ermission.

At least eight PC tennis players have already merited letters. The rement for a tennis letter is to be in at least two winning matches.

PC POOL

"Come on in—the water's fine," says Director of Student Activities, Ir- Montgomery. So he describes PC's now heated (72 degrees) swimng pool.

Participation thus far has been good, according to Mr. Montgomery, i if it continues there is a possibility of the pool being open five days a ek, and perhaps even during the winter months. Also, plans are being ade for an intramural swim meet to be held later this Spring.

iKA and Grey Ghosts Fight or Intramural Cage Title

Fierce and exciting play marked the action here as iminations began in the intramural basketball tourney.

This tourney features the four teams with the best recds after a season's play. The four squads represented re PiKA, Gray Ghosts, Sigma , and Chinese Bandits.

The first round saw PiKA emge victorious over the Sigs and e Gray Ghosts win over the hinise Bandits.

The Gray Ghosts whipped the KAs and the Sigs eliminated the Chinese Bandits in the second round.

In the next meeting the PiKAs pushed out the Sigs in a double overtime, thus putting them into the finals with the Gray Ghosts. However, the PiKAS will have to defeat the Gray Ghosts twice to emerge champions.

A team must lose two games to be eliminated. This means that the Gray Ghosts have only to defeat the PIKAs one to take the tourney.

Intramural Chairman Larry Wood reminds students that softball will start Monday. He requests that all teams be turned in by Saturday noon. It is necessary that their rosters be typed or they cannot be accepted.

Blue Hose Tennis Team Boasts Outstanding Mid-Season Record

• Clash With Harvard Today, Tomorrow

PC netters roll into mid-season with an outstanding record of six wins and two losses. The Blue Hose have swept over Erskine 8-1, Clemson 9-0, South Carolina 8-1, Wofford 9-0, Georgia 5-3, and Kalamazoo 9-0. The two losses have come at the hands of Yale, 2-7, and Miami, 4-5.

The most exciting match witnessed here this year was the one with Georgia in which Harry Hoffman and Georgia's John Foster battled for three and a half hours in the number one singles match with Foster finally coming out on top 8-4, 2-6, 17-15. In the number one doubles match Hoffman and Shakespeare tied Foster and Lindsay Hopkins 6-4, 4-6, 5-5, with the final set being called due to insufficient lighting.

After the Georgia match the Hosemen journeyed to Miami. In the first match they lost to Yale by a 2-7 score, with Jim Shakespeare winning the only singles match and Hoffman and Shakespeare wining out in the doubles. Next, the Blue Hose came out on the wrong end of a 5-4 match with Miami. Hoffman, Shakespeare, and Frampton emerged victorious in the singles, and Caviness and Greenslade won their doubles match.

HOFFMAN
. . . No. 1

The PC six came home to conquer a supposedly strong Kalamazoo squad 9-0 and are now preparing to meet Harvard Friday afternoon and again Saturday morning in what should turn out to be exciting matches.

Coach Leighton seems well pleased with the showing of his inexperienced squad. Freshmen Caviness, Greenslade, Frampton, and Stone have all shown up well in the rugged competition undergone. All four have scored several decisive victories. Coach Leighton considers his strongest opposition for the remainder of the season will come from Georgia Tech, Duke, Rollins, and Princeton.

Redford Announces Basketball Lettermen

Nine Presbyterian College cagers will receive basketball letters for their play during the past season, Coach Courts Redford anounced today.

They are the regulars who carried most of the load during the campaigns in which the Blue Hose won 11 games and lost 9. Four of these players are seniors who now have completed their careers on the Presbyterian hardwood. Two juniors and three sophomores round out the list.

The 1958-1959 baskteball lettermen are:

Seniors—Guards Bill Sullivan of Frankfort Ind.; and Ken Caswell of Paris, Ky.; Forward Ralph Chambers of Chicago; and Center Sonny Wells of Summerton.

Juniors—Forward Bob Stratton of Lawrenceville, Ky.; and Forward-Center Mickey Long of Greenville.

Sophomores — Guards Harvey Blanchard of Fayetteville, N. C.; and Paul Ard of Atlanta; and Forward Ernie Redd of Columbia.

PC Baseball Squad Whips Pembroke Nine

Presbyterian's baseball squad met Pembroke College on March 20 in a one-sided winning contest.

Sophomore Harvey Blanchard outlasted two Pembroke hurlers to take credit for the victory in a game that was halted because of rain.

Paul Chastain led the Hosemen at bat with three hits, and Tony Benson collected two safeties. Bill Sease led in RBI's, with his towering three-run homer. Tickle and Dees led Pembroke at the plate, collecting two hits apiece.

The Presbyterian nine take on Catawba this coming weekend. This will be the second meeting of these two squads. Catawba won the first, a squeaker, by an 8-7 margin.

Spring Sportsters Elect New Captains

Presbyterian College captains for the four Spring sports have recently been elected.

The new captains are: Track, Ed Messer; Tennis, Jim Shakespeare; Baseball, Tony Benson and Paul Chastain; and Golf, Al Copelan and Sonny Bell.

Track captain Messer could well be one of the outstanding South Carolina cinderman this year. Due to an injury he was unable to participate last season, but as a sophomore he was rated an outstanding prospect.

He will be featured in the dashes and low hurdles.

Shakespeare is considered to be one of the outstanding amateur netmen in the nation. He has already been very successful this season in his No. 2 position. Aside from tennis he is also one of the school's top students.

Baseball co-captains Benson and Chastain give Coach Clyde Ehrhardt an excellent one-two punch, both in the field and at bat. In the first two games of the season each has colected five hits in nine trips to the plate.

Golfers Copelan and Bell represent two of the three returning lettermen in this sport. Due to this fact Dr. John Stevenson will rely heavily upon these two men to lead his linksters to a successful season.

War Hero

Post Article Written Through Alumnus' Eyes

A Presbyterian College alumnus is featured in the April 4 issue of The Saturday Evining Post. He is George Mabry, now a colonel stationed in the Pentagon, whose experiences as a Captain in D-Day landings in Europe during World War II are recounted by the noted British historian, David Howarht.

The article is part four of six which will soon be published by McGraw-Hill as a book under the title, "D-Day." Howarth, who lives in Kent, England, wrote the book after extensive research, interviewing, and travel.

Howarths' outline of the battle is objective, but the details are deliberately subjective because interviewers disagreed widely on what they observed around them under the stress of intense emotions.

Mabry is a 1940 graduate of PC. He fought throughout Europe, winning the DSC. He is the only PC alumnus to hold the highly coveted Congressional Medal of Honor, and one of the few men alive who holds this honor.

While at Presbyterian, Mabry was an outstanding ROTC cadet. A native of Sumter County, S. C., he was vice-president of the Block P Club, played football, and was particularly outstanding on the baseball diamond.

One interesting paragraph from the article follows:

"It was only by chance that George Mabry was the first seaborne officer to report to Maxwell Taylor, the air-borne general. Nobody had planned it. But his experience of the landing was typical of the experience of most of the 600 men who landed in the first wave of American troops on Utah Beach on D-Day morning."

their own theme song.

Four Negro spirituals are next which add a great amount of interest and impressiveness to the choir's performance. These are: "Soon I Will Be Done," "Were You There" featuring a bass solo, "Great Gettin Up Morning," and "Steal Away."

The program is then concluded by a Russian number, Gretchaninoff's "Credo." This unique and moving chant consists of a baritone solo, who chants the Nicene Creed, and the support of the choir in the traditional Russian humming style.

Soloists for the choir are Harold Gallimore, tenor; Lonnie Love, baritone; and Dick Curnow, bass. Readers are Dick Carter, Roger Gadwin, Tom Wise, and Paul White.

Officers are Dick Carter, president; Rutledge Durant, vice-president; Cliff Stovall, secretary, Lonnie Love, treasurer.

The choir travels approximately 5000 miles each year and is completely self-supporting. They are well known and appreciated throughout the southland; from Washington, D. C. to Florida, and from North Carolina to Louisiana.

Dr. Gettys to Be Guest Lecturer

Dr. Joseph M. Gettys, PC Bible professor, will be a guest lecturer at the summer session of the Biblical Seminary in New York July 6-24.

He will teach a course of two hours credit on the Gospel According to John.

Dr. Gettys will be one of eight lecturers who will teach at the session which is open to graduates of accredited colleges and universities.

No Fee Raise For Next Year

A widespread rumor that Presbyterian College will raise its fees for the coming year was squelched today when college officials told The Blue Stocking that no such increase was planned.

"The same rates of the current session will be in effect this coming year," President Marshall W. Brown stated. Dr. Brown went on to state that the matter was not even discussed at the last meeting of the board of trustees, which would be the authority in such matters.

The cause of speculation concerning the possible raise in fees was not immediately traceable.

The last change in fees was announced in the early fall of 1957 and became effective in September of 1958.

Founders Candidates Hear Student Leaders

Thirteen outstanding high school seniors arrive on campus today in the final round of competition for the Founder's Scholarships to be awarded to members of the incoming freshman class.

This week's program formally begins at seven tonight with a short social to be held in the Douglas House. At seven-thirty the group will assemble at Judd Dining Hall for the Founder's Dinner and welcoming remarks from the College and students.

President Marshall Brown will give a short talk of welcome, followed by Academic Dean George Bellingrath's comments on scholastic requirements. Students who will touch on various phases of the College are Paul Arrington, Student Body President; Larry Wood, for the SCA; Bruce Prince, IFC; Ken Caswell, Blue Key; and Ralph Chambers, president of the Block P Club.

Tomorrow's schedule begins at 8:30 a. m. Tests and interviews will be administered until lunch at one o'clock. After lunch, the students reassemble at the library for a continuation of the morning's program.

The program will officially end at 5:00 P. M. Winners will be announced at a later date.

Cunningham Set As Graduation Speaker

Dr. John R. Cunningham, former president of Davidson College and currently head of the Fund Raising Foundation for colleges of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., will be the speaker for the 1959 commencement services, it was announced today.

Dr. Cunningham received his education from Westminster College in Fulton, Mo., Louisville Seminary, King College, Duke, Wake Forest, and the University of South Carolina. He is an ordained Presbyterian minister.

He served as secretary of the Army YMCA during the First World War and as a member of the war council of the Presbyterian Church. From 1930 to 1936 he was president of Louisville Seminary. He became president of Davidson in 1941.

Cunningham was president of the Association of American Colleges in 1933 and a member of the committee on higher education of the national council of churches. He was voting delegate of the World Council of Churches in 1941.

He left Davidson two years ago to head up the Presbyterian fund raising group. His appearance at Presbyterian is scheduled for the commencement exercises at 10:00 A. M. on June 1, in the Clinton First Presbyterian Church.

Jones Elected As History Group Veep

Dr. Newton B. Jones, chairman of the PC department, was elected vice-president of the South Carolina Historical Association at the group's meeting last weekend in Charleston. The Citadel played host to the event.

Dr. Jones will automatically become president of the society the following year. Mrs. Jones accompanied her husband to the meeting and banquet on Friday evening at the Fort Sumter Hotel.

Print Display Set for Monday Evening Reception

Eugene Jemison, Folksinger, Artist, and Printmaker, will appear on the Presbyterian College campus Monday and Tuesday, April 13 and 14. Mr. Jemison is sponsored by the Arts Program of the Association of American Colleges and will be the second in the year's program of the College's Public Lecture Series.

The Folksinger will make three appearances on the campus. His main event will be held at Chapel period on Monday, April 13, and the subject will be "Folk Songs and Ballads." This is a unique and varied program, with guitar accompaniment made up of Love Songs, Carols, Sea Songs, Work Songs and Ballads, with commentary relatives to traditional balladry of the people.

Chapel period on Monday will be extended for Mr. Jemison's appearance. Five minutes will be cut off each class period that morning so that the program will begin at 10:35.

On Monday evening Mr. Jemison will address Dr. Pattie's Fine Arts 354 class and the Robed Choir at 6:30 P. M. in Douglas House 361.

At 7:30 a student reception for Mr. Jemison will be held in the lounge of Douglas House, at which time Mr. Jemison will show his original prints. Everyone is invited and urged to attend this evening lecture on "Modes and Rhythmical Forms or Creative Element in Folk Music."

On Tuesday morning at 8:50 Mr.

EUGENE JEMISON

Jemison speaks to the English 350 class in Neville 107 on the subject of "Folk Poetry and Ballads." This is in the large Radio Forum room and all those students who are able are welcome to attend this final lecture by Mr. Jemison.

Mr. Jemison is a native of Kansas and a graduate, with BFA degree of Washburn University; received MFA degree from Kansas City Art Institute, where he is now a member of the faculty. He has studied the ballad, music, voice, and guitar at Washburn University, University of Kansas City, with John Jacob Niles, the Conver-

Political Scientist Keynotes State Meet

Dr. H. B. Mayo, Head of the Political Science Department of the University of South Carolina, will speak at the second annual International Relations Club State Convention banquet, it was announced today. The convention is to be held at Presbyterian College on Saturday April 18.

Highlighting the event will be the adopting of a new state constitution, which is being drawn up by the IRC of the University of South Carolina. In addition, new state officers are to be elected. PC student Tony Gavalas, present state president, is in charge of arranging and planning the convention.

"Complacency Greatest Evil" - Thurmond

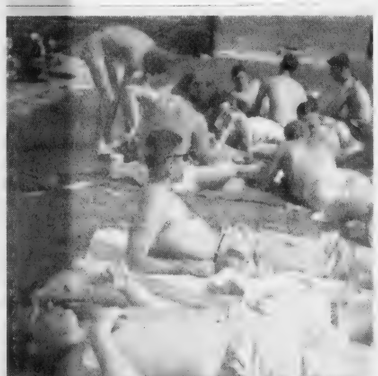
Senator Strom Thurmond (D-SC) today urged Presbyterian College students and "all who cherish liberty" to fight any change in America which would imperil individual freedom.

In a speech prepared for International Relations Week activities at PC, the Senator spoke on the subject of "Our Changing Nation." He emphasized the vast growth and development of the Federal Government into an "awesome, octopus-like monster, with tentacles of control and regulation into every phase of our activity and conduct." He warned that the more areas into which government is injected the greater is the subjugation and oppression of the individual.

The South Carolina Democrat charged that increased Federal "handouts for virtually everyone and every segment of our population has plunged our country into a quagmire of socialism and a public debt totalling approximately $284 billions." When the debt hits the 350-billion dollar mark, he said, the bankruptcy point will be reached.

Complacency on the part of the American people was tabbed by the Senator as the principal reason for the change of the role of our government from serving as the "first line of protection from individualism" to the "principal weapon in this land for collectivism."

The Senator called for a curb on non-defense spending items and for an increase in defense expenditures —all within the bounds of a balanced budget with increased emphasis on our national defense posture is essential to thwart the Communists from taking over the United States by either of two avenues of attack—internal collapse or armed aggression. Of the two attacks, he said internal collapse of our economy and our free enterprise system posed the greater threat because most people are unaware of the seriousness and progress of this attack.



A panel discussion on "The Planet Earth 1959" kicked off the IRC-sponsored International Relations Week Monday. Guest panelists were Dr. N. G. Whitelaw, Capt. H. C. Bennett and Professor E. S. Russell.

The three guest speakers gave their prospectives on life in 1959. After this they answered questions posed by the club members and guests.

Dr. Whitelaw spoke of the revolutionary changes in household heating and guided missiles and Captain Bennett discussed possible military advances. Professor Russell talked about what would not change and then about changes in business, economics and education.

On Tuesday Dr. Raymond A. Moore spoke at the first of a series

Costs And Rumors

Presbyterian College students have a communication system that would rival the best set up "grape-vine" anywhere. The efficiency of this system was proven this past week as the rumor was begun that the college would substantially raise its fees for the coming academic year.

Nor did it stop here, for the actual amounts of the raise were discussed about the campus. Confronted with the "news," crestfallen students began cries of transfer and "why didn't they tell us." The fact that there is no basis for this story has already been proven. It is a shame that students will accept such information without an effort on their own part to investigate the validity.

Presbyterian College, and all of her sister small, private schools, face a problem in constantly rising costs. PC still remains below many other Presbyterian schools in fees. The campus is expanding, and with expansion comes additional expenditures. The day might come when PC will be forced to again raise its fees, but when that time comes, students can rest assured that they will be promtply and properly informed.

Expressing Views

For the past several weeks space on the Blue Stocking's editorial page has been devoted to letters to the editor. The editors welcome these contributions to the student forum and encourage all students to make use of this opportunity to express themselves.

Letters for the forum can be given any staff member or slid under the door of The Blue Stocking office in Douglas House. All letters must be signed; however, at the request of the author, names will be withheld on publication.

It is a known fact that it is healthy to gripe and get things out of one's system. We urge students to make use of their newspaper to do some constructive griping or let their thoughts be known.

PC WRITES A LETTER

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

Paris Room,
Bubbleforth Hotel,
Miami, Florida

Honorable Maurice Schwartz
(Managing Editor)
The Blue Stocking
Presbyterian College
Clinton, S. C.

Dear Maurice,

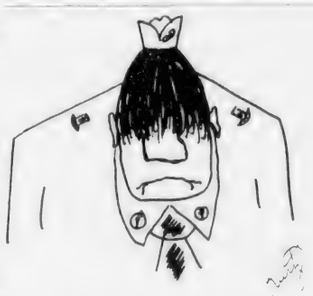
I was just sitting here in the Paris Room of this Beautiful Bubbleforth Hotel watching the Paris sites and—keeping watch over the flock by night—when I thought of all you lads (and the 37 co-eds) hard at work back at old P. College; I had nothing better to do but sip some suds (mint julep by trade name) so I thought I'd scratch out a little note on the back of this used parley card.

Man us crooners are really having a big time here at Miami Beach—wish you were here—we've really had some experiences.

"Poor Pitiful" Bill Pierphoff, of the smouldering expanse of Spencer, with his sunglasses, was mistaken for a member of Batista's American underground by some darn yankee tourist. Before the tourist found out any different, Bill had him believing that the state of Georgia was joining Batista's revolutionists and College Park was to be the next city of concentration in Batista's march to the Republican nomination for President.

Well, Maurice, like I told you before I left, I knew it would be—I caught a cold and got caught swimming. I'm glad I packed my faithful Dristan because it comes very handy. I really wasn't worried about the whole situation because I knew if anything happened to me it would be taken care of by the Master of the multitude.

One other interesting but interest story is that one of the entertainers from Decatur was handing out samples of Stone Mountain to the native Floridians and telling them that it was an unfinished work of Lawrence Welk.



Oh, yeah, one thing that deserves a front page headline is that P. College is the fact that Rutledge Durant, while ambling around the beach the other day found the Lost Chord.

I see Eshbaugh sitting over in the corner talking to a real cutie—little does he know she's talking to a real Marine.

These boys have let themselves down here—singing, eating with all the women, and many other activities. They were setting a fast pace that I just had to get here and rest awhile. That was yesterday, but this seat is very comfortable.

Here comes the waiter with more money, so I'll sign off. Hold down the fort and I'll see you Sunday.

Your Buddy,
Percival Crude

O.K., O.K., I'LL GET ONE.

PI KAPPA PHI

Beta Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi held its regular meeting Tuesday night. Definite plans were made for the Shipwreck Ball to be held on Saturday, the 18th. Frank Forbes was elected IFC representative for the upcoming year.

KAPPA ALPHA

Plans were discussed concerning a party with Rho Chapter of the University of South Carolina, to be held April 18th. Also plans for a Senior party were discussed to be held at the end of the year.

SIGMA NU

Martin Hope is the new pledge marshal and intramural chairman. A Hobo Ball is planned for the 24th. Plans for the dance weekend and the beach party have materialized.

Congratulations to Brother Byron Hollingsworth for pinning Miss Amie Snyder of Tampa, Fla.

Congratulations are also due to Brother Don Chapman for such conscientious work and a job well done as past Commander.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Mu Chapter welcomed four new brothers into the brotherhood Tuesday night. Initiated were Bobby Jobson, Billy Hatchett, Gordon Stanley, and Bobby Hodge.

Plans were made for the pledge trips to be held this weekend. Also final plans were made for Pi Kappa Alpha Weekend coming up next week.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

The social scheduled for the 18th was discussed at Alpha Psi's last meeting. Also plans were made for brotherhood initiation next week.

The chapter was happy to welcome alumni association president Ted Freeman of Columbia, for a visit . . . and thanks him for the fine gift of a coffee urn to the chapter.

THETA CHI

The regular meeting was held Tuesday night. Plans were made for a dance May 8.

Out of one hundred twenty-three chapters in Theta Chi National Fraternity, the Beta Psi Chapter ranked fourth scholastically for 1957-1958. The trophy went to the chapter at Lehigh University Linfield College and North Carolina State also ranked above the local chapter.

Richard Sanders, John Gossett, Milton Mayes, and Gerald Davis are attending the Rebel Reunion at the University of Alabama. They left Thursday and are expected back Monday.

Pledge projects are being completed.

It's A Jinx!

By JINKS HARRILL

Hi Partygoers! Are you enjoying that delicious meal before you? Here's hoping these inostentatious words won't make your indigestion any worse. Ready for the weekend? Still got our motto in mind?

Boy, these spring days really give a fellow ideas, don't they—about pleasant afternoons in the sun, drink a cool lemonade—or something.

The sun worshippers are getting it early this year; those of us here might be as brown and well worn as the Blue Thoats will be when they get in Sunday.

The crack drill platoon is the talk of the military department. Seven ME-100-SS-529-ED-623 - Up - 54029 forms had to be filled out Wednesday morning because seven cadets got knocked out trying to learn the Queen Anne Salute. Keep up the good work—Hup, two, three, five.

Another secret is out. They aren't worried about the Federal inspection either. Those prepared sheets of questions are just for fun; don't learn them; it's more fun that way.

Here's a good one. The boys down at the Sig house were looking for the poker chips last night and after scavangering through all the junk in the storeroom, found them in an old Religious Emphasis Week trophy! Lightning rods are being put on the house today.

Say, for the improvement of a column that really needs it, how about letting us in one some of those juicy tidbits that are lying around the fraternity rooms and dormitories, just waiting to be made fun of?

By the way, congratulations are in order for the number one Easter-egg-hunter, Bill Schofield, who found the golden egg in the PiKA egg hunt. Those of you that scorned the "child's play" don't know what a good time was had on that $5.

Well, as the Kingston Trio says, "For those of you that have sinned, or are thinking about sinning, or who are doing so secretly right now,"—best of luck.

Dear Editor:

I believe we of Presbyterian should be truly proud of our student conduct. There are few colleges in the country that can be matched by an outstanding speaker, student body of the college, and have the student body break out with a rousing cough. As if the cough was not enough, we have been urged to stomp our feet and use bits of old newspaper. (The administration should install a popcorn stand so that we could buy popcorn and peanuts for added flavor.)

These outstanding men must surely be impressed with the means we employ in raising a civilized bedlam.

Behind The Blues

A job well done. These words can well be said for the work Courts Redford has done at PC. No one has ever seen the amiable coach at work without seeing that here was a man who worked conscientiously. The results prove it, too. The basketball, which much of the time found Redford splitting his coaching duties here with football, he carried the Hose to victory 27 times during his two-season stay while losing only 17. He did this both years with squads who weren't picked in pre-season predictions to win over half their games. We take this opportunity to wish to him good luck in his future occupation.

FOOTBALL GAMES

It seems a shame that next year's football squad will only be seen by the student body at home three times. This is especially bad in the light of the fact that this should be one of the better PC gridiron squads.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Jim Shakespeare, the No. 2 tennis player, is still undefeated after eight matches. The quick-moving Shake has won matches against Clemson, Carolina, Georgia, Yale, Miami, Kalamazoo, and twice against Harvard.

An article was seen in The State by their Sports Editor, Jake Penland, who urged South Carolinians to contrbiute to a fund which is raising money to honor the late Walter Johnson. Penland described Johnson as contributing more to South Carolina sports than any other man.

Blue Hose Drop Game To Indians and Fleet

The Newberry baseball nine, aided by a loose Presbyterian defense, downed the Hose 15-9 Monday afternoon. This was the third loss in four outings for the the PC diamond men.

Harvey Blanchard was the initial pitcher and was tagged with the loss, although he was relieved by Max DuBose in the fifth inning. The Hose and Indians both slammed out numerous base hits, but the Newberry defense strengthened their play.

Leading Presbyterian's 15-hit attack were Ed Jackson and Paul Chastain who each collected three hits. Wayne Godfrey also joined the slugging parade with a home run and a double. Third baseman Herndon slammed out three hits for the Tribe.

PC baseballers lost their fourth game of the season Wednesday as they were shut out by a surprisingly strong Erskine club, 2-0. Erskine scored both of their runs in the second inning as pitcher Bill Dobbins walked home one run while the second was scored on a fielder's choice.

Paul Chastain and Bill Sease led the losers' attack with two hits. Outfielder Cox collected two hits for the Flying Fleet, one of them a three-bagger. Best bag was the winning pitcher . . . giving up 6 hits.

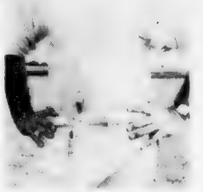
Redford Announes Resignation As Basketball Coach; Enters Business



Action Ends Two Years With College Athletic Department

Courts Redford, assistant football coach and head basketball mentor at Presbyterian College, has resigned to enter business.

Athletic Director Frank Jones, in making the announcement, said that Redford will return immediately to his native Atlanta to become associated with Consolidated Investors, Inc., a mutual fund organization.

Redford just completed his second successful season with the Blue Hose basketball team, winning 11 games and losing 9. His 1957-58 squad won 16 and lost eight.

COURTS REDFORD

PC students will long remember some of the highlights of Redford's career, especially some of his cage teams' outstanding victories. Perhaps one of the most stunning small college upsets in the nation was rendered last season when Redford's Blue Hose squad defeated Belmont Abbey, a previously unbeaten team.

Other memorable occasions were the victory over strong Georgia Teachers and the thriller with highly touted Furman when the Hosemen only lost by one point.

Also remembered is the excellent and exciting backfield developed by the football coaching staff this year with which backfield coach Redford had an integral part.

3 Home Games On '59 Grid Schedule

Presbyterian College, defending Little Four champions, will play a ten-game football schedule in 1959, Athletic Director Frank Jones announced this week.

He said the Blue Hose will resume gridiron relationship with Furman after a 10-year lapse. The Hurricane replaces Lenoir-Rhyne on the PC schedule, which otherwise remains the same.

Presbyterian will open with East Carolina in Clinton on September 1. Only two other home games are scheduled. One will be against Wofford on October 13 and the other against Catawba on October 31.

The season will close against Newberry on November 26 for the annual Bronze Derby clash.

The schedule:

Sept. 12	East Carolina*
Sept. 19	Furman
Sept. 26	Davidson
Oct. 3	Wofford
Oct. 17	Elon
Oct. 24	Tampa
Oct. 31	Catawba
Nov. 7	Citadel
Nov. 14	Appalachian
Nov. 26	Newberry

*Denotes home games.

Linksters Clash With Abbey Today

PC's men of the links meet Belmont Abbey in Laurens this afternoon. Leading the Hosemen will be Jack Shawn at No. 1, Al Copeland No. 2, Max Clyburn No. 3, Harry Macdonald No. 4, Hexie Macdonald No. 5, and Charlie Morris No. 6.

The PC'uns lost a match to Carolina earlier this week, but excellent performances were turned in by Al Copeland and Max Clyburn, both of whom shot a 74.

The Blue Hose golfers are being coached by Dr. John Stevenson.

Spring Brings Opening of Intramural Softball Action

The Gray Ghosts and the PiKaps kicked off the intramural softball season on Tuesday with the Ghosts taking a hard-earned 14-13 victory. Medford Rockstroh took over the Gray Ghosts' mound duties from Larry Wood in the fourth and pitched excellent ball the rest of the route to earn the victory. Earlier the same afternoon Theta Chi forfeited to Sigma Nu.

Wednesday, in a game called after five innings, the Champs defeated the Dukes 9 to 7. Theta Chi again had to forfeit, this time to The Stones. Art Blackweilder pitched the Champs to victory.

Thursday's action saw Sigma Nu win 9-4 over The Stones. Dan McQueen was the winning pitcher. He helped his own cause with two home runs. Later in the afternoon the Pi-Kaps whipped Theta Chi 12-1, with Frank Forbes going the route for the victors.

PC Tennis Stars Split With Harvard

Presbyterian College netmen embark on a four-match tour of the Middle Atlantic area next Monday after having split a pair of engagements with the powerful Harvard team here last week.

The Blue Hose tennis squad, after having completely subdued Furman by 9-0 on Thursday afternoon, will hit the road for contests against George Washington University next Monday, Georgetown University on Tuesday, the University of Virginia the following Thursday and finally Duke University two days later.

Presbyterian continued to shine in tennis during the past week. The PC squad bounced back for a 3-6 defeat at the hands of Harvard last Friday to upset the boys from Cambridge by an impressive 7-2 score on Saturday morning. Jim Shakespeare and Harry Hoffman, playing numbers one and two singles positions respectively, led the attack with victories in their matches and then combined efforts for a doubles win. The Hose netters also knocked off Kalamazoo last Thursday and the University of Georgia for a second time on Monday.

Going into the Georgia match the Hosemen's record stood at 7-3. They dropped the Bulldogs gracefully by a 6-3 score, but the PC netters hit a snag the next day in the form of Georgia Tech. The Engineers from Atlanta after losing every single match rallied and upset the Hose by taking each doubles match.

Their next home stand will take place against the tough Blue Devil netmen from Duke on the 20th of April.

PC Establishes Defense Loan Fund For Students

Presbyterian College has established a National Defense Loan Fund, according to announcement today by the Business Office. There is slightly less than $7,000.00 deposited in this fund at the present time. It is believed that additional funds will be deposited in this account during the early part of May. These monies can be used during the remainder of this school year and the 1959 summer school and the school year 1959-60. It is also believed that still additional funds may be secured during the summer or early fall for use in 1959-60.

These funds may be loaned to all full-time students and have been made available on attractive terms. Every student, with any need at all, should consider making application. Instructions for applicants and other details on the loan fund will be announced at a later date.

Federal Team Will Inspect Cadet Corps

The annual Federal Inspection of the college's military department will be held next Thursday and Friday, April 16 and 17. The inspection will cover all phases of military training and administration here at PC, including drill, classes, a parade, and administration and supply.

Colonel Barnett has announced that the inspection team consists of two officers. They are Col. Edward P. Thomason, Commander, Tennessee Sector Command, and Lt. Col. John C. Wilkerson, Assistant PMS&T at Georgia Tech.

The team will inspect the cadet corps in rank on Thursday morning at drill period. On Friday morning they will observe general drill, consisting of squad, platoon, and company drill. Uniform for Thursday will be Class B, with ties, white webbing and gloves and for Friday, Class B.

The inspectors will inspect classes of all four years of Military Science. Inspection of the military administration will be made during the two days. All records and papers will be checked at that time.

To wind up the cadets' part in the inspection will be a ceremonial ballade Group parade on Friday afternoon. The parade will begin at 4:30 of three chapel programs. Dr. Moore, a Columbia graduate and former professor and head of the International Studies Department at the University of South Carolina, lectured on "The United Nations in Perspective." He brought out the weaknesses, strong points and importance of this organization. He stressed the development of the Asian-African-Arab Alliance which is gaining control of the UN over the United States and her alliances.

Judge T. Frank Watkins, a distinguished corporation lawyer in Anderson and a Presbyterian College trustee, spoke at Wednesday's chapel. Judge Watkins, who toured Russia two years ago as president of the South Carolina Bar Association described the social and economic life of Russia. He stressed the importance of an individual understanding of his nation.

Dr. Sullivan Will Address PC Group

On Thursday evening, April 16, the Ministerial Club will present a guest speaker, Dr. Edgar N. Sullivan.

Dr. Sullivan, a local physician, will speak on a subject which should be of interest to all who have intentions of entering some phase of Religious work. His subject for the evening will be "Visiting the Sick."

The meeting will be held in the meeting room of Douglas House at 6:45. An invitation is extended to all students and members of the faculty.

Gettys Will Speak At Montreat Meeting

Dr. Joseph M. Gettys, Professor of Bible and author of a popular series of Bible study books, will be one of the featured speakers at the annual Men of the Synod of South Carolina Conference scheduled for May 16.

The group will meet at Montreat College, Montreat, N. C. Approximately 800 men are expected for this annual inspirational and instructional event.

Dr. Gettys will be in charge of the Bible Hour on Sunday.

PC Alumnus Heads Security Division

Charlton C. McSwain, a Presbyterian College alumnus, is the new security division director of the Atomic Commission's Chicago Operations office.

He took over this assignment last fall after serving as chief of the personnel security branch of the AEC's Oak Ridge (Tenn.) Operations staff since 1954.

A native of Columbia, McSwain is a member of the class of '42. Prior to his work with the AEC, he was a member of the FBI.

Why did 14,436 sophomores enter advanced Army R.O.T.C. during 1958?

Many more applied. Not all were accepted. In more than 200 U. S. colleges, 14,436 college sophomores met the high standards set. These students were selected to continue officer training in the advanced R.O.T.C. course. Why did each of these young men decide that he would benefit by fulfilling his military obligation as an Army officer? Here are two important reasons. Perhaps they'll help you make your decision.

1...TRADITIONAL RESPONSIBILITIES

As an Army officer, you're in command of men. More men than the number supervised by many civilian executives years older than yourself. To meet your command responsibilities, you employ a great many of the LEADERSHIP principles acquired in advanced R.O.T.C. training. And your executive potential develops while you gather LEADERSHIP experience. The executive ability you gain as an Army officer will be an important advantage in any civilian career. That's why employment directors often prefer men who have served as commissioned officers. These men have already proven their capacity to handle executive responsibility.

2...TRADITIONAL REWARDS

In every organization, greater responsibilities mean greater rewards. The traditional prestige of an Army officer is matched by material advantages. A second lieutenant earns a minimum of $355.88 per month—plus substantial fringe benefits. Think you might want to marry soon after graduation? An officer's salary can make things a great deal easier for a married couple just starting out. What's more, an Army officer is entitled to take his dependents with him, wherever possible. Imagine sharing the fun of travel with your wife—in the United States or foreign countries like France, Germany or Japan.

TRADITIONAL Responsibilities Rewards

U.S. ARMY R.O.T.C.

SOPHOMORES: Are you considering whether to apply for advanced Army R.O.T.C.? Why not discuss your decision with the Professor of Military Science and Tactics at your college? He'll be glad to talk it over with you.

Patterson, Outstanding Minister To Deliver Baccalaureate Sermon

• Speaker is Active PC Alumnus

The Rev. Merle C. Patterson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Montgomery, Ala., will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at this years' commencement program, it was announced today. He will speak at the Clinton First Presbyterian Church at 11 o'clock on Sunday morning, May 31.

Mr. Patterson is a graduate of Presbyterian College and Columbia Theological Seminary, holding the BA and BD degrees. He served churches in Florida, South Carolina, and Tennessee prior to taking over his present pastorate.

A member of the board of church extension, Mr. Patterson has given valuable service to the Division of Evangelism of that board. Formerly he was moderator of the Synod of Tennessee, and he has served on many Presbytery and Synod Committees.

Recently Mr. Patterson was elected "Young Man of the Year" in Montgomery.

At the graduation exercises to be held on Monday, June 1, Patterson will be honored with an honorary DD degree.

Scehduled for Sunday night, May 31, is a Senior supper in Judd dining hall to welcome the seniors into the alumni association.

It was anounced earlier that Dr. John R. Cunningham, former president of Davidson College, and currently head of the Fund Raising Foundation for Colleges of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., will be the speaker for the commencement ceremonies, also to be held at the Presbyterian Church.

Scheduled to receive honorary degrees besides Patterson are the Rev. Robert L. Forbis of Moultrie, Ga., and Dill D. Beckman of Columbia.

Jones Resigns As Department Head

Dr. Newton Jones has announced his resignation as professor of history and chairman of the department at Presbyterian College. He will be leaving PC at the end of this semester to take a position at a larger liberal arts school where he will have the opportunity of teaching more students interested in going into graduate work in history. Dr. Jones states that, "it is with sorrow that the ties with Presbyterian College will be broken."

Dr. Jones came to Presbyterian College in 1950, shortly after receiving his doctorate in history from the University of Virginia. He had earned both his Master's (1946) and BA (1941) degrees from Emory University. Four fellowships were awarded him during his period of graduate study.

His study was interrupted, 1941-1946, by service in World War II, during which time he rose from private to captain in the quartermaster corps.

Dr. Jones is a regular contributor to publications in the field of history. He is a member of the South Carolina Historical Society, South Historical Association, and the American Historical Association.

In the Fall of 1957 the PC Chapter of Blue Key tapped Dr. Jones as an honorary member of the Fraternity and elected him as advisor and he has continued to serve in this capacity.

WF Schedules Luther Film For Arab Refugee Project

With a program by Don Dunlap and Ina McDonald in chapel last Wednesday morning, Westminster Fellowship of Presbyterian College opened an extensive campaign to raise money to aid Arab refugees. These are the one million people who were driven out of Palestine by the Jews in 1947 and 1948.

Since there are very limited employment opportunities for them, a few of these refugees have returned to farming or have developed small business that hire only two or three people. But the vast majority are not employed and are in desperate circumstances. Westminster Fellowship has undertaken the project, with the help of the student body, of aiding these refugees.

The Chinese Auction held in front of Spencer Dormitory last Wednesday night proved quite successful, and netted around sixty dollars. Glenn Gibson, president of WF, said that "this was only the beginning, and that there would be other activities to raise money."

Next Sunday night at the First Presbyterian Church the film "Martin Luther" will be shown at 8:45. At this time a collection will be taken. Later on in April (possibly the 23-24) "Cricket" Lowry and the Coeds will be in charge of car washing. The price will be one dollar and the place Calvert House.

A dance is being planned late in April also to raise more money for the WF project. Glenn Gibson and Ed Messer ar ein charge of this. Bill Mathews and Dick Curnow are working on preliminary plans for a basketball game between the faculty and students. May 6 is the tentative date for this clash.

When these money-raising drives among PC students and merchants in Clinton are completed, the Westminster Fellowship hopes to have a thousand dollars to send to the Arab refugees.

SCA Picnic Set

The annual SCA spring picnic is scheduled for May 6 at Camp Greenwood, according to Dick Wood, SCA president. The event will feature fraternity skit competition.

The state convention of the Student Christian Association will be held at Camp Long near Aiken on April 23-25. Delegates from PC will be Dick Wood, Tom Collins, and Edd Collins.

Stovall Chosen Robed Choir Prexy

Cliff Stovall of Mullins, was elected president of the Presbyterian Robed Choir last night, succeeding Dick Carter of Florence. As a three-year member of the group, Stovall has served as custodian and secretary.

Rounding out the slate of officers chosen for next year are Lonnie Love, a junior from McColl, who moves up to the vice-presidency to replace Rutledge DuRant of Gable; Billy Piephoff, a sophomore from College Park, Ga., who takes over the office of treasurer from Love; and Frank Sells, freshman from Johnson City, Tenn., who becomes custodian replacing Britt Spann of McRae, Ga.

The Presbyterian College Robed Choir appeared on the Channel Ten Miami television station last week durin gthe group's week-long tour of Florida and South Georgia.

Dr. Edouard Patte conducted his singers through a 15-minute program televised for the Greater Miami Council of Churches, an organization of all Protestant churches in the city. The choir rendered five selections of its sacred music repertoire.

Gavalas Cancels State Convention

Tony Gavalas, Chairman of the South Carolina IRC, announced today that the second annual state convention originally scheduled to be day that the sceond annual state con. campus, has been cancelled.

The small response to the event from chapters on other campuses brought about this action.

Gavalas stated that there is a possibility of the convention being rescheduled for a later date, perhaps at USC.

The speaker for the event was to have been Dr. H. B. Mayo, Head of the University of South Carolina Poliaical Science Department. Besides the presentation of the constitution, election of a new slate of state officers was to be held.

Alpha Phi Omega May Form Chapter

Plans are underway to establish at PC an Alpha Phi Omega Chapter. Alpha Phi Omega is a national service fraternity with more than 250 chapters and more than 50,000 members.

Membership is restricted to men who have previously been affiliated with the Boy Scouts of America. Chapters may be formed only on fully accredited four year colleges in the United States. The purpose of this fraternity is to develop friendship and promote service to humanity.

In order to form a chapter at Presbyterian College, twenty-five charter members must be enrolled. According to Rohe Eshbaugh, campus leader of the effort, a meeting will be held in the near future for those interested in joining. He also stated that it is desirous that the chapter contain students from all areas as well as nonfraternity and sections of campus life—fraternity and day students.

It is definitely pointed out that Alpha Phi Omega will work with the Blue Key and the SCA, and will not have contrary interests.

IRC Chooses New Officers Monday

Election of new officers will take place at a meeting of the International Relations Club Monday night. The featured program scheduled for 7:00 in the Douglas House meeting room, is to be a [illegible]

"Behind the Ticker Tape" will be the color film which gives an easy to understand background on investments and the stock market.

The new officers will take the helm of the organization following the meeting.

Also to be selected is an executive committee which will make plans for the group for the coming year.

College Catalog

New Major Requirements Listed

The 1599-60 Presbyterian College Bulletin has been released announcing the requirements for the new 30-hour "areas of Concentration" program which replaces the major-minor system. The new program, which requires 30 hours for a major and 18 hours study in related fields is optional for present freshmen and sophomores.

Students now enrolled at PC can still continue in the 24-hour major and 18-hour minor program.

The curriculum is now divided into four divisions: the Humanities, Social Studies, the Sciences, and Military.

The new requirements for majors can be found in the new catalog. In most departments elective courses to complete the major and to meet the requirement of related hours must be approved by the department.

Requirements for a major in Bible include Old Testament Survey, Life and Parables of Christ, Acts and Teachings of the Apostles, The Christian Life, Christian Doctrine, Christian Address, either Romans and James or First and Second Corinthians, either Isaiah or Jeremiah, three hours of philosophy and three hours of psychology.

For a Biology major Freshman Biology, American Genetics, Embryology and eleven selected hours are required. Chemistry, French, and German are recommended.

Necessary for a Chemistry major are Freshman Chemistry, Qualitative and Quantitative Analysis, Organic Chemistry, Physical Chemistry, Analytic Geometry, and Differential Calculus, Integral Calculus, German or French.

Requirements for the major in Economics include Principles of Economics, and 18 hours in history, mathematics, psychology and sociology.

Principles of Economics, Accounting, Business Law, Business Organization, and either Math or Finance or Statistics are required for a major in Business Administration.

English majors must have Survey of English Literature, Survey in World Literature, Renaissance Poetry and Prose, History of the Language, two semesters of English History, and Introduction to Philosophy.

Required for a History major are Survey of European Civilization, American History, Historiography and Historical Research. Principles of Economics, either Elements of

The Reason Why?

An editorial, we are told, is used to point up a problem or situation, and offer possible solutions. If that is correct, then this is not a true edtorial, for we can offer no solutions, only wonder why.

Figures released by the Registrar's office today reveal that 121 students made three or more D's or E's at midsemester. We are not preaching, but it seems pretty bad when more than a fifth of the student body appears onsuch a list.

The reason why? The students themselves . . . Spring . . . perhaps the counseling system isn't working effectively . . . perhaps professors have too many assignees. In a tabulation, freshmen dominate the totals. Perhaps this points up a need for a freshman dormitory or a more effective orientation program. As we have said, it is a problem for which we have no solution, but which needs investigation.

Editor's Notebook

WE WONDER . . . What's happened to all the salt shakers in the Dining Hall—rather annoying to have to go in search of condiments . . . have students "borrowed" that much? Or, what's happened to the salt mines.

BEST OF LUCK to the Westminster Fellowship as it undertakes, very enthusiastically we might add, the very worthwhile, "Project Arab."

WE ALSO WONDER how many excuses will be originated by rising seniors to get out of chapel next year . . . Belk will soon beckon.

WE TIP OUR HATS to the Choir for fine representation and reputation gained only through hard work. Happy we are that finally PC students will have a chance to hear the choir this year . . . here's hoping that we'll have the pleasure every year.

A FINE JOB is the long-overdue revamping of the Presbyterian College Catalog, which is just off the presses. Better paper, larger type, new pictures, a full-color cover, and complete re-writing makes it a publication well suited to represent the school.

AND FINALLY, we thank whoever was responsible for making stamps available in the student post office.

PC REVIEWS INSPECTION

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

Thursday afternoon there was a big conglomeration outside my room door in the sorrowful sights of Smyth "B." Since this rout wasn't anything unusual, I thought nothing of it—besides, I was busy unpacking my suitcase.

Suddenly, there was a tremendous scramble at the door. Percival Crudely entered and locked it behind him. People began banging on the door and said they'd knock it down if Crudely didn't show himself.

"Say, P. C., what's going on?"

"Nothing, G. B.—forget it. What you doing there?"

"Im unpacking my suitcase."

"You mean the one you took on the choir trip?"

"Yep."

"Gosh—you've had four days to do that."

"I know, but I've been trying to catch up with my studies."

P. C. stared at the floor a minute. The people were still banging on the door. He finally spoke.

"Say, G. B., you know wha tthat rug reminds me of?"

"No. what?"

"Tha tone over there."

"Maybe it's because they're the same color."

"Yeah—I guess so. Say, what's that yellow thing you're throwing in the trash?"

"Oh, that's the T-shirt I took to Florida. P. C. Why do you keep staring at the floor?"

"Nothing, G. B.—I guess I'd better go outside and face the fellows."

Later P. C. re-entered with his shirt ripped.

"How about telling me what's going on, P. C.—what was that."

"That was the entire second row of the choir."

"Why are you so messed up?"

"They were harassing me to get me to vote for their candidate."

"Oh, I see—well, you better sit down and rest."

"Yeah, besides this we had that darn Federal inspection this morning."

"Yeah. What did you think o fit?"

"Gosh, I was so scared I didn't know what to do. That General Colonel or whatever he was, asked me a tricky question."

"What was that?"

"He asked me what my name was."

"And what did you say?"

"1478836."

"That was smart—what other boners did you pull, Crudely?"

"Well, he didn't seem to like the las tanswer, so he asked me where the balanc of my rifle was."

"Did you show him?"

"Well, not quite."

"Oh?"

"No. I told him that I didn't know where the balance of my rifle was. What I had was al lthey gave me."

"Another good one."

"Thanks."

Opinion Poll

Students Favor Larger, Varied Series

With the departure of Eugene Jemison, Presbyterian College's first Spring fine arts series came to an end. Sponsored by the Arts Program of the Association of American Colleges, the inaugural series consisted of lectures by Dr. John Baillie, renowned theologian, and lectures and folk songs by Eugene Jemison, balladeer, artist and print maker.

A smapling of PC students thoughts on the matter reveals generally varied, but favorable opinions on this year's program, as well as comments on what is wanted in the future:

Edd Collins: "I liked it; it was something different. I'd like to see the program expand into art; a good orchestra if possible."

Bill Betchman: "I think Jemison had more appeal to the student's interest. There should be more along this line. I feel that this type program is a pleasant change from the general run of PC's programs."

Ed Messer: "I liked Jemison because I am interested in folk songs."

Maurice Schwartz: "Both of the speakers were, of course, outstanding in their field. I think Dr. Baillie was a little difficult for most students to grasp, probably because his subject matter was of only slight interest to many. Jemison was enjoyed by most everyone. For next year, perhaps some music—classical and jazz, also some drama."

Al McKie: "One of the most important steps PC has taken toward a real cultural program. I believe enough students enjoyed the first two programs to warrant continuation and expansion of the program. Next year—this program should be expanded to include music and drama, among other things. It should also continue to include both the lighter and more serious subjects."

Don Clark: "I liked Jemison; he was the type person I'm interested in. The background of folklore was interesting. Next year I'd like to

THREE BLUE HOSE trackmen are off and running in the meet with Citadel. Hosemen in this race were Ernie Redd, Bob Waters, and in the inside lane, Tony Atkins.

The Hosemen won only one ent, the javelin, with Jon Vas performing the winning chore re.

Glen Pugh was the high scorer the day as he won three events— 100-yard low hurdles, 100-yard sh, and the 220-yard dash. His he in the 100 was 9.9.

The Citadel meet was the second et lost this year. The first loss s to Catawba. However, the boys improving each day under ach Spooner and they should be shape to give someone a rugged he by state meet time.

The future years look good, too, th such freshmen as Bedding- ld, miler Dave McIntosh, Billy y Ladd, and Davey Miller, all od potential.

Other varsity men who looked od in Saturday's meet were dash- men Ed Messer, Tony Atkins, and Paul Arrington. These same men did an excellent job on the relays. Messer posted a time of 10 seconds in the 100-yard dash.

State champion broad jumper Curtis Linder did not participate Saturday.

The question being asked by many PC students is "What happened in the Citadel meet?" Coach Spooner feels that the big problem lies in inexperience. Only six lettermen returned from last year's squad. He feels that the potential is there, it only needs developing.

In time, PC should present a well-balanced squad with strength in the dashes, relays and field events. A particular headache at the present time is the mile. Dave McIntosh is the only participant at the present. He has done an exceptional job, for a freshman, but badly needs experience.

Sigs and Ghosts Tie As Week's Play Ends

The second week of intramural action began with the Gray Ghosts defeating The Champs, The Sigs taking the PiKaps 10-5, and the Gray Ghosts winning again over the Stones 13-12.

The Gray Ghosts' Medford Rockstroh limited the Champs to only two hits in the five-inning pitchers duel, meanwhile striking out 10. Losing hurler Arthur Blackwelder also pitched excellent ball, only giving up 4 hits. Rockstroh, himself, collected tow of these.

Dan McQueen posted his second victory of the year as the Sigs used a very fine hitting attack to defeat the PiKaps 10-5. Willie Turner was the big gun at bat for the winners, collecting two hits, one of which went all the way for a home run. Robert Gibbons had two hits for the losers, and Frank Forbes received credit for the loss.

The Gray Ghosts outscored the Stones in a hard-hiting game Wednesday afternoon. Skip Severance and Paul Arrington led the winners at bat with two safeties. Larry Wood went in for Rockstroh in the sixth and did a creditable job on the Ghosts. Robert Sherrill was the losing pitcher.

College Courts Will Host State Tennis Championships Next Week

• Home Team Favored In Meet

PC holds the role of favorite in the State Tennis meet to be held here, beginning next Tuesday. The Hosemen will be striving to take their 30th straight win of these events.

Coach Jim Leighton anounced several weeks ago that that the event will change from two meets to one this year. In the past there has been an invitational meet in which Presbyterian did not participate. However, on the request of several of the other schools, this partciular phase has been eliminated.

Partially due to this change, The Citadel, Furman, and Clemson have agreed to take part. Others expected to join the ranks again are the University of South Carolina, Erskine, and Wofford.

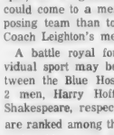
In past years the finals have always seen PC'un pitted against PC'un, but a little more competition is expected this year, especially from Clemson and Wofford. Presbyterianm netmen will be on the spot, as no greater tennis honor could come to a member of an opposing team than to defeat one of Coach Leighton's men.

A battle royal for the top individual sport may be witnessed between the Blue Hose No. and No. 2 men, Harry Hoffman and Jim Shakespeare, respectiveily. Both are ranked among the top amatuers nationwide; however, Hoffman would rank as a slight favorite in the event of such a meeting. PC's former star, John Brownlow, won the chmapionship in the two previous years.

The meet begins on Tuesday, April 21, and continues through Thursday, the 23.

Netmen Boast 2-1 Road Tour Record

The Blue Hose netters downed the Cavaliers 9-0 at Charlottesville yesterday, for the first shutout in tennis in several seasons experienced by the University of Virginia team.



Harry Hoffman defeated Ray York 6-2, 6-2 in the top singles match and Hoffman and Jim Shakespeare downed York and Bob Bugenheism 6-4, 6-4, in the first doubles match.

The record of the northern tour is thus 2-1. The PC netters lost to George Washington University 5-4 on Monday, but went on to defeat Geroge town University 7-2 on the same courts the following day.

Coach Leighton was pleased that, by Tuesday the team had become accustomed to the hard courts used in Washington because of bad weather. He considered both D. C. teams on a par with the University of Georgia.

Behind The Blues

Last week's Harvard Crimson quotes Harvard Tennis Coach Jack Barnaby as saying that their Presbyterian loss could partially be discounted due to special circumstances. He claimed that PC caught the Ivy Leaguers when they were ". . . More anxious to hit the road than a tennis ball."

This is a poor excuse in itself. However, Coach Barnaby has another, claiming that the switching of position on Saturday was also responsible This is normally done when teams play two matches in a row.

If Barnaby is going to use such excuses, PC'uns can recall that in Friday's match (Harvard won 6-3) the Blue Hose had just returned from a hard road trip. Also, the switching of men usually affords one team as much advantage as it does the other.

The Crimson must be given credit for bolstering our ego, as it states that Presbyterian is probably the best team Harvard will face until the Yale match in the middle of May. They also claim that PC is by far the strongest team met on their Southern tour.

THE ROUNDUP

Tennis leads the lot of spring sports thus far this season. The netmen embarked on their road trip with a fine record of nine wins and four losses. Harry Hoffman, Jim Shakespeare, Tom Elliott, Creighton "Beansie" Frampton, Dave Greenslade, and Ed Caviness have all been outstanding for Coach Leighton's suprisingly strong squad.

The Blue Hose baseballers have been suffering from a severe case of butter-fingers this season. However, they have excellent potential at bat. There are at least 11 men on this squad who can hit agains any college team. The pitching staff has done a pretty good job, but they can't win ball games unless they have an infield to back them up

Coach Spooner and his trackmen are in the midst of a rebuilding campaign. It can be easily seen, however, that the cindermen are improving every day under the hard work required by Spooner. An especially good-looking prospect is Freshman Bobby Beddingfield of Columbia. Providing he can escape injury he's a cinch to win many honors as a thin-clad before his college career is over.

Much practice and hard work finally paid off for Dr. Stevenson's linksters as they won their first match of the year last Friday. Jack Shawn, Al Copeland, and Max Claburn have all been doing a good job on the greens. Claburn, in fact, is undefeated.

IN OTHER CAMPS

Newberry's only big loss was fullback Colivello. They had a good team last year and will field basically the same squad next season.

PC's big loss was at the flank positions, but they have gained enough in other positions to more than make up for this loss. At this point it looks as if all Little Three clashes will rate as a toss-up.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

PC students are turning out in pretty good numbers for the various spring sports. The athletic department has not yet decided on a basketball coach. Medford Rockstroh was very good last week when he struck out Richard Shrigley in an intramural softball game. Shrigley once played baseball for Jacksonville. It appeared to many as if Wofford's pitcher, Billy Witherspoon, was balking when he made his very tricky throw to first.

Hose Divide With Wofford, Davidson

Presbyterian baseballers needed a big ninth inning to score five runs and take a hard-earned 10-9 victory over Wofford Tuesday afternoon. With one out Ted Leahy bunted Bill Sease home for the winning run. Harold Raeford was the big man of the day. He was the winning pitcher and collected four hits in five trips. One of these was a double in the ninth, driving in two runs. Wofford's Billy Wither pitched 8 innings, but was taken out early in the ninth. At that time Wofford held a four-run lead. Buddy Carey was then put in, and he received credit for the loss.

Turner and Shinkens led Wofford at bat, each collecting two hits. Raeford was ably assisted by second baseman Tony Benson, who slammed out three hits and by back to back homers by Leahy and Ray Hodge.

The Davidson Wildcats turned tight hits and eight Presbyterian errors into a 14-1 baseball triumph on Thursday at Davidson.

Dee Green, who pitched the first seven innings before yielding to Pat Henderson, got credit for the victory. The two pitchers held the Hosemen to only four hits.

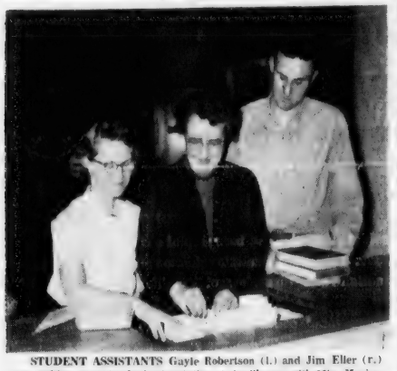
Bill Dobbins went the route for Presbyterian and was charged with the loss.

Russ Cotton led Davidson at the plate, hiting two for three, one of them a double. Harold Bynum had two for five.

Shortstop Paul Chastain hit two singles in three trips to the plate for Presbyterian.

Montgomery Elected To Sports Council

Irvin Montgomery, director of student activities has been elected to the sports committee of Region 4, National Association of College Unions.



He was chosen at the 36th annual conference of the Association held Miami Beach, Fla. The conference last week at the Deauville Hotel, studied problems of directing and supervising a student center. Presbyterian was the smallest school to be represented at the event.

Region four consists of Alabama, Florida, Virginia, and the Carolinas.

Golfers Gain Win From Belmont Abbey

PC linkmen won their first match of the year by defeating Belmont Abbey last Friday afternoon.

The Blue Hose were led by Jack Shawn, who shot a 73. Others winning matches were Al Copelan, Max Clyburn, and Charlie Morris. Earlier in the week the Hose golfers lost to the University of South Carolina in another home match.

College Library Notes Nationwide Observance

"Wake Up and Read" is the admonishment that the Presbyterian College Library had been giving its patrons during National Library Week. Under the direction of Miss Marian Burts and a student staff of 12, the library is a smoothly run and progressive unit of the college.

Contained in its three stack levels are around 48,000 volumes. The music library presently contains well over two thousand ceords. Immense pamphlet and magazine files are available for the student doing research.

The present library represents a merging of college and community efforts. The first college library was housed on the top floor of the school's one and only three-story building on the Thornwell campus. Then, upon the completion of Neville Hall in 1907, a room on the second floor was used. When the Jacobs Science Hall was opened in 1915, the Library was moved there, where it remained until the pr esent building was opened in 1942.

The library building contains two large attractive reading rooms—one furnished by the late W. J. Bailey, and the other by the late Mrs. Dora floor of the administration wing.

Wilson in memory of her son. These two rooms hold the reference collection, the newspapers, and more than 150 current periodicals.

Outstanding among colections in the library are the Jones South Carolina Collection, given by a former history professor, Dudley Jones, and the Captain Ellison Smyth's Carolimiana library, both formed of rare books.

Along with these in the library of the founder, Dr. William Plumer Jacobs, together with his furniture, personal papers and family photographs housed in a room just off the rotunda, and arranged just as he left them. All of these collections are available to students on request.

The library, which processes some 1500 books into its open stacks each month, allows students to make requests for additions, which are always given careful consideration.

Soon to be added, according to Miss Burts, is a shelf of paper back books of current popular fiction for open circulation.

Lindsay Elected State BSU Treasurer

Roscoe Lindsay, rising senior from Marion, was elected state treasurer of the South Carolina Baptist Student Union Council, at the annual Spring Retreat held in Rock Hill last week.

Several delegates from PC attended the meet, which was held in the Oakland Baptist Church, with the theme, "As You Go, Preach."

The main speaker for the event was Dr. Kearnie Keegan, Convention-wide BSU secretary.

Lindsay currently serves the local nion as vice-president.

Dorm Proctor System To Be Installed

The Blue Stocking
Distinguished for Its Progress
Vol. XXXVII Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., April 24, 1959 No. 24

Plan Set for Fall Inauguration; Seniors Will Serve As Monitors

A proctor system to help maintain quietnes in the dormitories will be put into effect this coming Fall, college officials stated today. The action by the administration was a result of a consultation with the Blue Key honorary leadership fraternity, serving in the capacity of a student Public Relations Committee.

The new system would place a proctor on almost every floor in every dormitory on campus. According to present plans, these proctors are to be seniors, and are to receive a regular salary for their services. Plans call for 12 to fourteen men to serve in these positions.

Dr Bloch, commenting on the change said that it could be effective only if considered a service offered to the students for their (the students') welfare. He went on to say that it is impossible to have quiet in the dorms. The proctors are to aid in keeping the quiet, but to accomplish the goal, the students must be willing to cooperate.

Quiet hours have not been set definitely as yet. This matter will be decided later in a conference with student leaders.

Earlier, the Blue Key had surveyed approximately half of the resident student body. Tabulation of this survey showed that 88 per cent felt that noise in the dorms is a problem, 50 per cent calling it a critical problem. Twelve per cent did not feel that is is a problem.

Seventy-three per cent felt that they would be able to study more and, or better if quiet hours were enforced as opposed to 27 per cent who did not. Eighty-six per cent advocated the paid student proctor system, while 19 per cent made other suggestions.

Research on this action was a desire to keep vandalism and petty destruction to a minimum in the dormitories.

New Drill Platoon Throws Away Manual; Goes Fancy

• Works Toward Special Show

Second semester of this year has seen the ROTC add to ranks a new unit, a precision drill platoon. The unit is ade up of more than thirty men, mostly freshmen and phomores, who volunteered to join the platoon at the l of last semester.

Students Nominate Officers On Monday

Student body nominations for representatives to the Student Council will be held this Monday, April 27. Student Body President Paul Arrington anounced yesterday. The nominations by ballot are scheduled from nine until two o'clock in Douglas House.

Each student who wishes to nominate will receive a ballot with spaces provided for the nomination of three rising seniors, three rising juniors, and two rising sophomores.

On Wednesday the six seniors, six junior and four sophomore nominees who received the largest number of votes Monday will be voted on. Three senior and three junior representatives will be chosen, with two representatives coming from the sophomore nominations.

The following Monday, May 4 the three elected senior council members will be in the race for Student Body President. The man receiving the largest number of votes will become president, and the runner-up will become vice-president.

Secretary-treasurer will be the elected junior representative with the largest number of votes in Wednesday's election.

Foundation's Gift Endows Scholarships

The Deering-Milliken Foundation has presented Presbyterian College $15,000 for use in the school's scholarship program, President Marshall W. Brown announced today.

The funds will probably be used to underwrite the present Founder's scholarship program. This competitive program was established to encourage academic achievement. Each top scholarship pays up to $500 per year for four years to the high school student who qualifies on the basis of intellect, character, and leadership.

Tomorrow Last Day For Reserving Present Rooms

Tomorrow, April 25, is the last day set aside for students to reserve the dormitory rooms which they presently occupy.

The week of May 4-9 has been set aside for students to make reservations for other rooms expected to be vacant. Seniors and juniors have priority for those rooms in Bailey that will be vacant.

All students are urged to see Mrs. Nancy Binder, secretary to the deans, and discuss room reservations with her.

Eshbaugh Elected New IRC President

Rohe Eshbaugh of Louisville, Ky., has been elected President of the PC International Relations Club. He has already taken the reigns from Evin Varner of Bennettsville.

The new vice-president is Tony Gavalas of Augusta, Ga. Alan Pitts of Langley, takes the treasurer's position from Ebby Mayfield of Greer. Elected secretary was Joe Pickard of Charlotte, N. C., who replaces Bo Jeanes of Easley. The Executive Committee consists of Fred Meade of Beaufort, and Tom Spratt of Spottsylvania, Va. Professor Earl Halsall will serve as the club's advisor.

The IRC seeks to stimulate student interest in interntional affairs. The club has a varied program of panel discussions on significant topics, prominent speakers, and several films each semester. IRC week during the spring is the highlight of the club's activity.

Spring Dance Band Finally Scheduled: The Five Kids

A band for the Spring dance has finally been secured, it was announced today. Playing for the IFC-sponsored Masquerade Ball will be The Five Kids of Greenville. The Kids, under the direction of Randolph Edwards, is a group composed of four vocalists, two saxaphones, an electric guitar, Bass, and piano.

The Spring dance weekend will be a one-nighter at the local armory. Friday night the six social fraternities on campus will have individual parties. The Saturday night event, the annual Masquerade Ball, is scheduled from 8 o'clock until 12.

A cash prize will be awarded the couple who is judged to be wearing the best costumes. The IFC urges all students to wear costumes. The dance is completely informal, those not in costumes, wearing bermuda shorts or other casual wear.

The Masquerade Ball is the final event of the Presbyterian College IFC-sponsored social season of four dances.

ROTC Battle Group Impresses Inspectors

Last Thrusday and Friday, April 16 and 17, the annual Federal Inspection of the Presbyterian College ROTC was carried out by Colonel Edward P. Thomson, commander of the Tennessee Sector, and Lt. Colonel John C. Wilkerson, Assistant PMS&T at Georgia Institute of Technology.

Lt. Colonel William C. Barnett, PMS&T here at Presbyterian College, said this week that the final official results have not yet been received, but that everything seemed to have been satisfactory in all areas. In this type of formal inspection, the rating is either satsifactory or unsatisfactory.

The Presbyterian College Battle Group was complimented especially for their fine appearance on the field and at the parade on Friday afternoon. Another thing that impressed the inspectors was the outstanding leaders of the corps.

Lt. Col. Barnett also said that during the informal inspection in February the Presbyterian College ROTC received a rating of "superior."

Possibly the general opinion of the Presbyterian Military Department can be summed up by this statement that Colonel Thomson made to Cadet Colonel Russell Prince after the parade, "You have a very fine corps here at Presbyterian."

Tonight

Choir Gives Program Before Church Meet

PC's robed choir makes its second unique performance of the '58-'59 season tonight when ti appears before the General Assembly as it mets at Druid Hills Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga. In the 12-year pearod before this legislative body.

Earlier this spring, while on tour in Florida, the 24-voice choir appeared on Miami's television channel 10 for the morning worship service sponsored by the Miami Inter-Church Council.

In their performing for the General Assembly tonight, they will be doing so in the highest court of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. Delegates from approximately twenty states will be there for the purpose of discussing legislative matters of the church.

After their concert Friday night, the songsters of PC will depart from Atlanta early Saturday morning and travel to Brevard, N. C., where they will be in charge of the Sunday morning service. From Brevard they go to the evening services at the Tryon Presbyterian Church.

Returning home on Sunday night, the choir has only two concerts remaining on the 1959 spring schedule Clinton and Donalds. This will complete a busy schedule which takes them throughout four states, 5000 miles, and twenty-three churches.

In its General Assembly appearance, the choir will sing "Let God Arise," by Goudinel, "Adoramus Te," by Palestrina, and the Negro spiritual, "Were Yo uThere."

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Editorials : Features : Humor

With Many Thanks . . .

The Blue Key would like to say THANKS both to the students and the administration for your interest and concern about the problem of dormitory life. It has been our pleasure to serve as a vehicle of communication or liason on this matter.

The quick and positive action of the administration by establishing a proctor system deserves commendation and proves their interest in student affairs.

The concern of the students in their college community also merits commendation. Without this, our work would have been ineffective. You now have evidence that your opinions are respected, so don't hesitate to speak honestly in the future about your campus life.

This hardly needs to be mentioned, but without your support, the proctor system cannot be fully effective. We know that your co-operation in our survey of the noise problem and your desire for positive action is indicative of your support of the new system. May we resolve to make it a success.

—ALAN R. McKIE,
Blue Key President

Soapbox Anyone?

Student body nominations are slated for Monday of next week, with elections following soon after. We won't be trite and dwell on the importance of the student body officers as they guide us through the coming year, of get-out-and-vote for who you think is best qualified, or of may-the-best-best-man-win. Rather, we would like to complicate matters.

We would like to hear campaign speeches from the candidates for the offices. This would add color to what we hope is a heated race, which is always fun. Also, it would offer a variation in chapel programs.

Above all, the delivery of concise addresses, giving the vote-seekers' platform (we do hope they will have one) could, and should be a valuable guide to the vote-giver. The result could be a better race and a better student government.

We'll even furnish the soap-box.

CHAPEL CONDUCT CUT

(All letters to the editor must be signed; names will be withheld on request. Letters do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the editors.)

SATIRICAL SLAP

Dear Editor,

It has come to my attention from several sources as to the applaudatory conduct and respect shown by our student body to members of our faculty and administration and visiting guests, who come to speak in Chapel. This conduct and respect was illustrated to me in a very high degree in Chapel this morning.

First, I observed that the conduct exemplified what up-standing Christian young men Presbyterian College produces. Secondly, I observed that the conduct be shown to the speaker, much less to an elder person.

In closing I wish to commend the student body . . . and say that I could not have been a part of such, for you see I was one of the few, who sat back and taunted the speaker by coughing excessively, shuffling my feet, and causing a general nuisance of myself by hindering those main persons who were trying to get something from what the speaker had to say.

—Name withheld by request

TODAY'S GENERATION?

Dear Editor,

I had the misfortune of being present in chapel this morning. Since I came to Presbyterian College, I have never seen such disrespect for an official of this college as I saw this morning.

There were many of the students who are interested in the information that was being given, and most of them probably still do not know what was said. The talk was being given not as punishment for crimes but to lead the students to a better education. Is it possible that we are not here to learn but to disgrace ourselves, our homes, and our school?

Perhaps there is no answer to this. Perhaps today's generation has been taught that speakers are to be taunted.

JUKING AT JUDD

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

"There's Lowman's fleeting horn calling us to the aid of our Platoon leader again."

"Yeah, I guess we'd better pop out to the drill field and help out with the drilling this morning."

"What time is it, P. C.?"

"7:50."

"We're supposed to be there now."

"Yeah—I sure do hate to hop out of the sack to go to these early drills with just a week of it left."

"I know what you mean."

"You know, G. B.—there's only one good thing about jumping out of the sack at this time of the morning."

"There is? What is that, P. C.?"

"The good point is when you remember that you only have 17 hours and 45 minutes till you can get back in again."

"Well, let's go wade through the wet marshes of the baseball field."

"If we've got to, let's go."

"FOLLOW ME"

After I finally got out of chapel I spotted Crudely emptying his flask into a Watt's fountain Pepsi.

"What you got there, P. C.?"

"Just a mixture I formulated during one of my chemistry labs."

"What do you call it?"

"Now that you baited the trap—I'll tell you. It's Pepsi-Gine."

"Pepsi-Gine?"

"Yeah."

"What's in it, P. C.?"

"Pepsi-Cola and Emergine, of course."

"I know it don't just sit there—what does the odd combination do?"

"Well, when Pepsi-Cola hits the spot, Emergine picks it up."

"Oh, no—I'll see you, P. C., I've got to leave on that."

Later, after my 12:15, I decided to head to lunch.

"Wait a minute, G. B.—I'll go with you."

"Hurry up—we won't want to miss out on anything."

"Yeah, especially Carter's party."

"What party?"

"This is Carter Redd's birthday and we are gonna have a little celebration."

"No joke."

"Yeah."

We entered the chow hall.

"Check the announcements while I get a couple of trays, P. C."

"O. K."

"Anything important?"

"Naw."

"What's that stuff—roast beef?"

"No, it looks like Jack Clontz, to me, G. B."

"Oh."

"Surprise, G. B."

"What?"

"Look in that second pot."

"What is it?"

"You don't know?"

"No."

"I guess it has been a long time."

"Well, what is it?"

"It's potatoes."

"Real, honest-to-goodness potatoes?"

"Sho 'nough."

"Gosh, I didn't recognize them—it's been so long."

"Say, don't get too much remember the party."

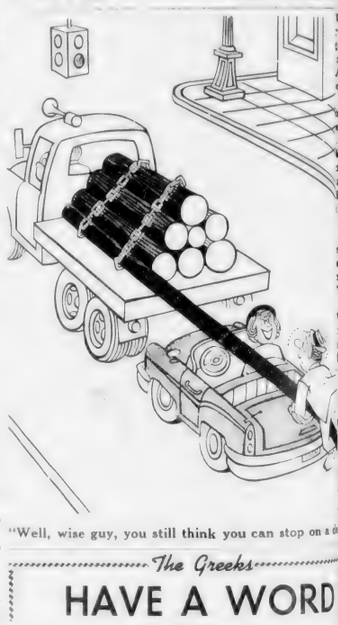
"Oh, yeah."

"There's Carter over there."

"How you doing, Carter?"

"G. B.?"

"Carter!"



"P. C.!"

"Got everything ready for party, Carter?"

"Just about—some of it is ing."

"What we got?"

Behind The Blues

Baseball, the sport which has developed more charac , more interest, and more goodwill than any other, seems be almost a thing of the past as an amateur sport. Why? e answer lies partially in the college students of today. Joe Wynn, a Cleveland Indians scout, says, "It seems to me that base l could stimulate the game in colleges more than it does. Kids don't to play baseball. They're at the rah-rah stage. They like bodily con t and want the girls to watch them, so they go out for football or bas ball. Besides the baseball coach is usually an assistant in something s."

This lack of interest causes poor talent for everyone, including the jors. Eventually, unless something is done to rectify this situation, eball could well be on the way out.

The majors could present a solution to this situation. They spend reat sums of money on their minor league programs. Why couldn't ey also extend their spending to a certain number of colleges, sug est the proper coaches, even paying half their salary if necessary. It ould be well worth their while and the game's.

If this were done the players could be put in a pool and drafted much in pro football. This would add incentive to the players, like they e in pro football.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Upon noticing that Newberry will meet Wofford at the Orangeburg ; we did a little wishful thinking. Wouldn't it be nice if PC could en ge in a game of this type. It would be a highlight of the entire football son, adding much to the spirit of players and students alike.

A little known fact among PC students is that Lou Brissie is a Pres erian alumnus.

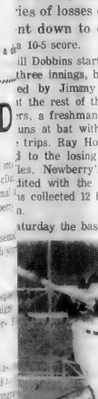
Lou was a well known pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics in he late '40's and early '50's. One year he won 17 games, when his ecord was among the best in the league. The amazing thing about all is that he performed this feat under a great handicap. During World War II, Lou was hit in the leg by German shrapnel. He spent many weeks in an Army hospital. During his entire major league areer he performed with a leg brace.

He has now retired from the pitching ranks, but is performing a worth le service as head of the American Legion baseball program.

SWIM, ANYONE?

Rohe Eshbaugh announces that Senior Red Cross Life Saving Class s will begin Monday night at 8:00. Those students who are interest d be at the swimming pool at 8:00 sharp. An attempt will be made schedule the classes at the convenience of those taking the course. he course will be completed by May 13.

THE VERY END



We have been asked as to why the PiKA and Alpha Sig softball teams e left off the list of those given in last week's Blue Stocking. This list, ch included games won and lost, contained only those teams which played games through Wednesday.

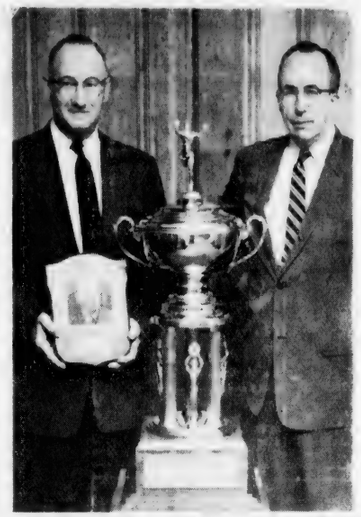
gged opponent in a double-head with The Citadel.

All the team members seem to ve the mutual opinion that er a have been the big reason for thus unsuccessful season. rd baseman Wayne Godfrey, o has been effective this sea son as a long ball hitter, said. "We just haven't had the proper desire to win. This factor and the errors have kept us out of the win column. If we're going to beat Citadel we'l have to play tight knit ball. The Citadel has a hard hitting ball club, and we'll have to really hit to beat them."



Freshman pitcher Jerry Chitty feels that "We have great potential. If we could stop making so many errors, we'd be hard to handle. I believe we have as good a hitting team as can be found anywhere in the state."

Catcher Morgan Byers stated, "If we ever tighten down we'll start winning ball games. We can hit the ball, but we allow our opponents to get so many unearned runs."

The Blue Hose pitchers are having a rough year. Old Man Luck seems to have deserted them completely. Ace Moundsman Bill Dobbins seems to be having the worst luck, as he has pitched very good ball only to have lost four out of four games. Harvey Blanchard has won one and lost two; Jerry Chitty is even at one and one; while Harold Raeford has won one and hasn't tasted defeat.

Ted Leahy, Raeford, Captains Paul Chastain and Tony Benson, Goolfrey, and Bill Sease have all been tagging the ball well. This group plus the fine looking pitching staff should snap the Blue Hose out of their slump and get on the winning road.

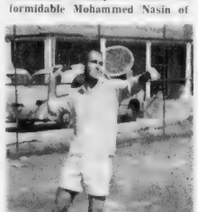
Annual Event Sees Last Matches Today

PC seems well on the road to winning its 20th straight South Carolina tennis championship, in the state matches which are being held here this week.



At the end of Thursday's play the Blue Hose had aman in the finals in each of the singles positions. Ed Caviness was also a finalist in the freshman event, which did not count on the team totals.

Each team entered one player in each of the six positions. This enabled the No. 1 player of each team to compete against other No. 1 players and so on down the line.

This was probably the most successful of these events, as seven of the state's colleges entered. This group included Wofford, South Carolina, Erskine, The Citadel, Clemson, Furman, and host Presbyterian.

The finalists are No. 1., Harry Hoffman; No. 2, Jim Shakespeare; No. 3, Tom Elliott; No. 4, Creighton "Beansie" Frampton; No. 5, Dave Greenslade; and No. 6, Bobby Daniels. Hoffman defeated Pete Gerry, Erskine, 6-3 and 6-1 to reach the finals. Shakespeare defeated Clyde Mynatt of Furman in the semi-finals 6-2 and 6-0. Elliott started slowly but finished strong to whip Billy Joe Ransom of Erskine 9-7 and 6-2 in the No. 3 semi-finals. Frampton eased by Ronnie Parker of Erskine 6-1 and 6-1, and Greenslade coasted to a 6-0 and 6-0 win over Bobby Dobson of South Carolina. Daniels also posted a 6-0 and 6-0 score in defeating Dickson Cunningham of Erskine.

Hoffman will face the winner of the Sonny Sumner (Clemson) and Jack Sterling (Citadel) match in the finals. Shakespeare meets the formidable Mohammed Nasin of HARRY HOFFMAN . . . PC's new state No. 1 champ!

Clemson, while Elliott faces once-beaten Bobby Burns, also of Clemson. Frampton will take on The Citadel's Fred Bieus and Greenslade meets another Clemson will go up against Thurmond Bishop of The Citadel.

Bobby Daniels and Greenslade whipped Parker and Ransom of Erskine to advance to the No. 3 doubles finals. The score was 6-1 and 6-2. In the other two doubles positions Hoffman and Shakespeare and Frampton and Elliott drew a bye in the first round, and have not seen action yet.

Caviness overwhelmed Furman's James Skadder 6-1 and 6-1 to move to the finals in the freshman event. Here he will face George Parm of The Citadel, who defeated PC's Bill Stone 6-2, 4-6, 6-1. Varn was ranked as one of the South's best during his high school days; however, Stone was playing under the handicap of a hurt back.

The freshman doubles had not begun Thursday afternoon. Caviness and Stone will represent the Blue Hose in this event.

Mural Volleyball Out of Spring Sports Program

All intramural play must end by May 21st, Irvin Montgomery, director of student activities, said today. This date is set in respect to final exams.

The question of whether or not to have intramural volleyball was brought before the intramural council. The vote was against adding this sport due to lack of time.

Spring intramural chairman Rohe Eshbaugh, explained that to have a fair 'round robin," 30 games would have to be played, with two games a day making fifteen playing days. Providing that the courts are dry, they could be ready for playing on Monday, the 27th, which leaves nineteen playing days, with the SCA picnic, cross-country run, track meet, and swimming meet, all taking one afternoon apiece.

The remaining fifteen days would be sufficient to carry out the program, Eshbaugh stated, but rain, which makes the courts inaccessible for several days, should be taken into account. The possibility of playing in the gym was ruled out due to the expense factor.

However, the volleyball court will be set up for fraternities who may wish to include this in their individual intramural programs.

Montgomery Lists Intramural Events

Director of Student Activities, Irvin S. Montgomery, has announced that Kappa Alpha was awarded the basketball trophy on the basis of the championship performance of their No. 1 team, The Gray Ghosts. The Ghosts emerged victorious in a hard-fought intramural tournament, which featured the top four teams from regular season standings. The final ratings of these teams were: Gray Ghosts, PiKA, Sigma Nu, and Chinese Bandits in that order.

In the same vein it has also been announced that an intramural basketball all-star team will be picked in the near future. This squad will face a ferocious team picked from the faculty. The proceeds from this thriller will go to the Araba refugee fund.

Another up-coming intramural event is the cross country race which will be held next Thursday. This race will begin at the WPCC radio station and the finishing point will be the flagpole on the plaza. As many students as possible are urged to enter this race. The winners time will be entered in the record book as this is the first race of its kind.

Linksters Fall 20-7 To Augusta College

PC golfers lost to Augusta College Thursday afternoon by a 20-7 score. Jack Shawn in the No. 1 position scored a half point for his team. No. 2 Al Copeland, and No. 4 Charlie Morris picked up a point apiece. Frank Sells racked up three points from his No. 6 position, while the team as a whole scored one and a half points.

The Hose linksmen will play Furman Friday in Greenville. Al Copelan will be at No. one, Shawn at No. two, Max Clyburn, at No. three, Morris at No. four, and Hexie McDonald and Harry McDonald at No. five and six positions, respectively.

Presbyterian now has a 2-5 won-lost record. They have victories over Belmont Abbey and The Citadel.

Dr. Carter Receives Large Study Grant

Dr. Nolon Carter, chairman of the chemistry department at PC, has received a grant to support his research program on "The Application of the Schmidt Reaction to Camphorquinone and Other Related Reactions."

President Marshall W. Brown today announced that the Research Corporation of New York City has allotted $1,000 for this project as a contribution to the academic and scientific program of the college.

Dr. Carter said the research is to gain "insight into the mechanism of a series of related molecular arrangements when applied specifically to camphorquinone or proper derivatives."

Wise, Hardin, Waters Vie For Student Body President Post

• Clash at Polls on Monday

Tom Wise, Joe Hardin, and Bob Waters were elected Wednesday as senior members of Student Council. Ebby Mayfild, Ed Minus, and Billy Hagood were nominated, but withdrew from the race. On Monday, May 4, Wise, Hardin, and waters will run for the student body presidency, with the man polling the second top number of votes becoming vice-president.

For the first time this year a coalition aliegedly appeared in student elections. The new coalition supposedly consisted of three fraternities; Kappa Alpha re-joining previous ties with Sigma Nu, and Pi Kappa Phi. Pi Kappa Alpha Alpha and Alpha Sigma Phi remained independent along with Theta Chi.

Elected Junior representatives for next year were Bill Betchman of Summerton, Frank Forbes of Atlanta, and Ron Boston of Darlington. Betchman becomes secretary-treasurer of the Student Council by way of polling the most votes in the junior race Other candidates in the race were Rohe Eshbaugh, Paul Ard, and Donald Kay. Sophomore council members chosen were Jimmy Thompson of Manning, and Bob Stevens of Orangeburg. Jim Lowry was the other nominee for this position, Frank Sells withdrawing earlier

The three candidates for the student body presidency come to the close of the race well qualified. Tom Wise has been on the Student Ccouncil for three years, secretary of the choir, and a member of the SCA cabinet.

Joe Hardin was military editor of the PaC-SaC, on the freshman control board, and secretary-treasurer of the IFC. Bob Waters is battle group sergeant-major, quarterback on the football team, and a member of Seabbard and Blade.

Dr. Stevenson Given Housman Study Grant

Dr. John W. Stevenson, chairman of the Presbyterian College English department, has received a grant from the Southern Fellowship Fund to complete his study of the poetry of A. E. Housman this summer.

He already has done a considerable amount of research on Housman and has had two previous articles on the poet published in the South Atlantic Quarterly.

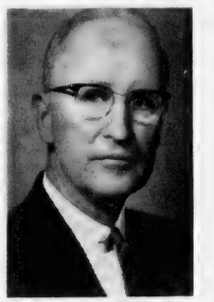
Dr. Stevenson has been a member of the Presbyterian College faculty since 1950, except for one year during which he taught at Millsaps College. He has headed the English department for the past year.

Theta Chi, Pi Kapps Elect New Officers

Pi Kappa Phi and Theta Chi social fraternities have both recently held elections for officers for the coming year.

John Gossett, a rising senior from Glenn Springs, will head Theta Chi, replacing Dick Cushnie. He will be assisted by Richard Sanders of Woodruff, as Vice-President, and Don Kay of Anderson, as Secretary.

Other Theta Chi officers are Frank Richbourg, treasurer and IFC representative; Dich Cushnie, pledge marshall; Tony Gavalas, chaplain; Rou Kay, librarian; and Gerry Pitts, historian.



Beta Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi will be under the leadership of Dick Faulkner, a rising junior. Tommy Middleton will serve as Warden, and Ed Wells is to be Secretary. Rising junior Frank Forbes of Decatur, Ga., will represent the fraternity in the IFC; also, he is the new Treasurer.

Pi Kapp's remaining officers are Tom Elliott, Historian, and Ralph Dunham, Chaplain.

National Defense Loan Funds Now Available To Students

Application forms for the National Defense Student [illegible]oan fund will be available on May 8 at the Business Office, G. Edward Campbell, business manager, said today. [illegible]he funds will be distributed to the first students who com[illegible]ete the application forms and qua[illegible]y for these monies that can be [illegible]ed for tution, room, board, and [illegible]er related college expenses.

Some funds will be available for [illegible]e immediately and other funds [illegible]n be committed for the Summer [illegible]ssion of 1959 and for the school [illegible]ar 1959-60. All students having a [illegible]ed should contact the Business Of[illegible]e on Friday, May 8.

Students may borrow as much as [illegible],000 for each school year. Interest [illegible]3% per year begins when the stu[illegible]nt ceases to be a full-time student [illegible]d the first payment of interest and [illegible]incipal is due one year after stu[illegible]nt ceases to be a full-time stu[illegible]nt. It is possible to repay the loan [illegible]er a 10-year period. If one teach[illegible], 10% of the loan can be paid for [illegible]ch of the first five years of active [illegible]aching which means that one [illegible]ould have only 50% of the orig[illegible]al loan to repay.

A Week Of "Grace"?

Final Examinations are drawing near, a fact which we are sure needs no emphasizing to the student body. Finals are, to say the least, trying and important. Their importance and the great amount of work necessary in preparation for them justifies a student's outcry as quizzes are assigned right on through the week before exams.

Many schools give their students a "day off," in which to prepare, without any distractions, for finals. This would be heaven . . . we would not aspire to such heights, rather we advocate a "week of grace." This simply would mean no quizzes the week before exams, unless absolutely necessary. The week would also call for the co-operation of the students, by planing no social events or meetings during the allotted time.

It is simple, but not silly. A "Week of Grace" could well mean better grades.

Elections: Perfect Record

It is good not to break records. We must admit though, that we were worried about student body nominations Monday, but true to form, it was not held on the announced date, but Tuesday. This kept a perfect record; for not a single election this year has been held as originally planned.

The postponement of the nominations until Tuesday, for reasons unknown, created a bad situaiton. Elections Wednesday folowed on the heels of the nominations, giving the candidates little time for campaigning.

As ballots were handed out on Wednesday, a majority of the voters were not made aware of the fact that several candidates had withdrawn their names from the race, information that they certainly should have been given.

We hope that the new student council will put the proper managing of an election at the top of their improvement list.

Old Maid At Midnight

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

I was trying awfully hard to get some sleep the other night after completing the last of four quizzes that morning. I had been up pretty late studying for them all week so I was sort of weary.

There was some scurrying in the hall, the door opened and the light was turned on. Through my squinting eyes I recognized Perceval Crudely and a few of his new-found friends.

"Hey, G. B., how you doing?"

"Well, I was doing pretty good."

"What's the matter?"

"I'm trying to get some sleep."

Not as it was I pulled the covers over my head to try and keep out the light and some of the noise that PC and companions were making.

It wasn't long before I heard a few pennies being pulled across the table. This was nothing of anything wrong.

(All letters to the editor must be signed; names will be withheld on request. Letters do not necesarily reflect the opinions of the editors.)

Dear Editor,

In your editorial of two weeks ago you wondered why there were so many D's and E's. Perhaps I can provide the answer,—maybe not, but at any rate I'd like to express my views on the subject.

When a student has a quiz in every course he's taking in a period of three or four days, how can he be expected to make decent grades? Some may say this never happens—but it does—once every month. The first such occurrence this semester was the last few days of February. That particular week I had a quiz in everything, including military, plus a term paper due.

The final four days before the holidays were devoted to that wonderful period known as mid-semester exams. Now some professors were nice enough to give their quizzes the week before mid-semester exams so the students would have so many quizzes together. Very thoughtful, but too many teachers got the same idea and in one case reported a student had no quizzes the week set for exams, but all them the last three days of the preceding week.

This brings us to the final week in April. Here again we find the same thing happening—every professor wanted to give a quiz this week. He expected you to make good on his test and when you didn't he too wondered why and told you that you were not interested in his class.

Finally there are the last few days before exams—this period is given to the profs to make one last attempt to enter a grade in their books. As the tradition has been this year—the teachers will all probably find time to work their quizzes in that week. By the time exams roll around in a couple of days, you're too tired from studying for quizzes to find anything interesting in studying for exams.

Could giving so many quizzes together be related to cheatng? Perhaps so. If a student has three tests on a particular day, which is often the case, he doesn't have time to study sufficiently and when he goes to class the next day he's got three different subjects stuffed in his forgets or gets mixed up of this, so what does Cheats.

I'm not griping about t zes—just all of them once.

I think that some sor should be worked ou wouldn't happen. For m exams I wouldn't be oppo ning them the same w and maybe have them half hours long—no othe just tests and only two would mean no other study for

Thinclads Travel To Carolina For State Track Tournament

Memorial Trophy, Relay Event In Honor of Late Walter Johnson

PC cindermen have spent a busy week in preparation for the South Carolina Olympics, better known as the State track meet, which will be held in Columbia tomorrow.

This event will feature teams representing the University of South Carolina, Clemson, Furman, The Citadel, Wofford, Newberry, and Presbyterian.

Carolina, Clemson, Furman, The Citadel, Wofford, Newberry, and Presbyterian.

This will mark the first time in the long history of the meet that the event has been held away from the PC campus, where it was nursed to maturity by the late Walter Johnson. It has now become the leading event of its kind in the state.

In memory of its great founder, a trophy will be given to the winning relay team. This should serve to make this event one of the day's most intreesting.

Coach Spooner takes down a relstate broad jump champion Curtis though they are young, they are very scrappy and are quite capable of pulling an upset.

The Hosemen will be paced by Captain Ed Messer, a dashman, and state broad jump champio nCurtis Linder. Linder will be trying to set a new record this time as well as

PC Netmen Close Successful Season

Presbyterian netmen finished ir 1959 season by dropping a 6-3 atch a powerful Rollins team. This loss left the season's record 12 wins and five losses. The uns defeated Erskine, Clemson, iversity of South Carolina, Wofd, University of Georgia (2), Kalazoo, Harvard, Furman, George-n, University of Virginia, and ke. Losses were to Yale, Univery of Miami, Harvard, Georgia ch (2), George Washington, and llins.

Considering that the main core the team was made up of freshen, the season was a very successful one. Only one player will be ost to graduation. He is co-cap-n Jim Shakespeare. Shakeseare enjoyed a very successful ividual season as he suffered ly one loss. Added to the list of am victories is the South Caroa State Championship, which e Hosemen captured for the 20th raight time.

Results of the Rollins match were follows: Jose Ochoa (R) defeated urry Hoffman 6-2, 6-3; Jim akespeare (PC) defeated John nrichson 7-5, 6-1; Luis Semingoez) defeated Tom Elliott 6-4, 4 6, Dave Hewitton (R) defeated eighton 6-3, 6-2; Dave Greenslade C) defeated Mike Abegott 7-5, ; Mike Deeming (R) defeated Caviness 6-4, 6-4; Hoffman and akespeare defeated Ochoa and mingoez 6-3, 6-0; Henrichson and witson defeated Elliott and ampton 6-3, 6-0; Deeming and egott defeated (Bill) Stone and viness 6-1, 6-2.

Abbey and Citadel Defeat Baseballers

PC's men of the diamond dropped both ends of a double-header to The Citadel Saturday.

In the first game Bob Colby pitched the Bulldogs to a 6-1 victory. Colby gave up 6 hits, while Harold only gave up seven in his losing cause. Three of these hits went to Catcher Bill Marsh, who placed two of them out of the park. Raeford led the Hosemen with three hits in his three times up.

George Alms was the winner in the nightcap as he gave up eight hits in the 10-5 game. Marsh also collected three hits in this one. Co-captains Tony Benson and Paul Chastain each had two hits. Jerry Chitty started for the Hosemen, but was relieved at the top of the fourth by Jimmy Howell, who went the rest of the way. Chitty was charged with the loss. Alms helped his own cause by hitting a two-run homer.

The Blue Hose continued their losing ways by dropping a 7-5 game to Belmont Abbey Wednesday afternoon. Bill Dobbins was the loser. Harold Raeford continued his hitting ways by collecting two safeties.

Leighton Announces

S.C. Tennis Tournament Moves To Clemson For '60

Clemson will play host next year to the South Carolina Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament which has been staged at Presbyterian College for the past 25 years, PC Coach and Tournament Chairman Jim Leighton announced today.

He said a plan for shifting the meet among other colleges from year to year had been adopted by the tournament committee in an effort to stimulate greater interest in tennis throughout the state.

Leighton pointed out that Presbyterian College is delighted with the mounting interest in the net sport as evidenced by greater participation this year and by the desire of other schools to sponsor the tournament. The Hose long have reigned as a national tennis power, and PC has maintained the state meet through some years when few teams competed.

Les Longshore, Clemson net coach, will direct the tournament next season. Leighton has served as its chairman since 1950, his first year at PC.

Joiner Wins First Cross-Country Run

In the first intramural cross country in PC history, Bobby Joiner took the number one spot. The course of 1.8 miles was covered in the time of 11 minutes and 15 seconds. Bobby received a personal trophy and his time will go down in the record books.

The participation in this event was rather disappointing, but it is hoped that in the future more interest will be shown in the race. The 1.8 miles covered a distance from the WPCC radio station to the plaza flagpole.

Monday began the third week of competition on the intramural diamond. Leading off, the undefeated Gray Ghosts handed Sigma Nu their first loss. Larry Wood pitched for the Ghosts in the 5-4 win over the Sigs' hurler, Dan McQueen.

Mike Brown led the Alpha Sigs in a 7-3 win over the Champs in the second contest of the day. Art Blackwelder pitched for the Champs.

Tuesday, the fast balls of Bob Mathews placed the PiKA's in a 13-3 victory over the PiKaps in a fast-moving game.

Wednesday the last contest of the week featured the Gray Ghosts in a tight, squeeze of 13-11 over the Dukes. Again Larry Wood was the winnng pitcher

BEHIND THE BLUES

Why is it that the athletic squad which is the most neglected is usually the one worthy of the most praise. (Such is the case with the PC golf team.) In other sports one has thousands or at least hundreds of fans to cheer him on to victory. Yet they love the game so they shrug off the obscurity and keep playing to the best of their ability.

Yes, it's hard work, but to them it's worth the effort. They are really sportsmen. They apply themselves purely for the love of the game. No praise comes their way, but he loves the game and that's what counts. He holds that his school should not go unrepresented in it. To them the satisfaction of playing and attempting to gain credit for the College is reward enough to offset the disadvantages they must face. And there are many such disadvantages. For example, they furnish their own transportation, clubs, and balls.

This team deserves nothing but praise. They represent an unusually high degree of dedication. Indeed, even before the regular season had started they were out on the links preparing for the coming season. They have truly earned any praise which they receive. The minor sports situation is a regrettable one. Any man who is willing to accept the hard facts of such a role in the PC sports program is certainly worthy of the recognition normally reserved for the participant in the better publicized and better attended events. They are the most under-rated men of PC.

Under-rated or not, PC's golfers have represented their school creditably this season, with a record that can compare favorably with the record of other PC sports, which receive much more glory. In the last week the PC'uns have downed Carolina, Augusta College, and The Citadel. This is definitely puts them in the running for the state championship. Max Tyburn has been playing excellent golf, usually good enough to capture medalist honors. In the South Carolina match Freshman Frank Sells rammed a hole in one

It is indeed unfortunate that lack of student interest should keep such fine efforts relegated to neglect.

TENNIS TOURNEY

College tennis in the nation and South Carolina seems to be rising in interest. The recent state match held here was a proof of that. Seven teams entered and although the perennial champs, PC walked away with honors for the 20th straight time, it was on the whole much more interesting. Citadel and Clemson are becoming more and more tennis conscious. Next year, Celmson has asked to hold the meet. In all probability this event will begin making the rounds of the various state colleges from now on.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

While spring sports take the spotlight, Coach Frank Jones has been making the rounds all over the South in search of new talent for his football. Rumor has it that he has been pretty successful . . . Another rumor along this line has it that Mohammed Nasin's (Clemson's star tennis player this year) younger brother is considering enrolling at PC next fall.

Blue Hose Golfers Comeback With Consecutive Victories

PC linksters have made a roaring comeback this week, dropping The Citadel, University of South Carolina, and Augusta College.

All of these victories were considered upsets and they put the Blue Hose golfers into surprisingly strong contention for the state championship. The scores on the matches were as follows: PC 15-USC 12, P C20-Augusta 7, and PC 14-The Citadel 13. In the Carolina match Frank Sells slammed a hole-in one.

The Blue Hose had lost previous matches to Carolina and Augusta, thus showing that they are improving as the season moves along. Max Tyburn and Al Copelan have paced the Hosemen in their recent success.

HEXIE McDONNOLD, one of PC's dedicated golfers.

The individual results of The Citadel match were: Dekle (C) defeated Shawn 2-1. Copelan (PC) defeated Trotter 2½-½; PC defeated Citadel 2-1; Clyburn (PC) defeated Reynolds 3-0; Pateriai (C) defeated Harry McDonnold 2½-½. Citadel defeated PC 2½-½. Hexie McDonnold (PC) tied Hinds 1½-1½; Sells (PC) defeated Boyd 2½-½; Citadel defeated PC 2½-½

Gay Maddox, a rising junior from Spartanburg, has been elected president of Westminster Fellowship for the coming year.

"As far as I know, this is the first time a girl has been elected to be President of W. F.," cites past president Glenn Gibson. Gay served as vice-president last year, and did an excellent job in that capacity.

The other officers are: Vice-President, Don Dunlap, a rising junior from Charlotte, N. C.; Secretary, Clara "Tottie" Fussel, a rising sophomore from Rose Hill, N. C.; and Treasurer, Edd Collins, a transfer from Clemson College, whose home is in Pageland.

Last Monday night the Baptist Student Union elected Roscoe Lindsay of Marion to the office of president for the school year 1959-60. Carl Latham will be vice-president; Gay Verdi, social chairman; Don Bridges, secretary-treasurer; Joe Nixon, publicity director; David Morgan, Christian Action Chairman; and Jimmy Hughes, day student representative.

Roy Bower, a rising sophomore from Kingstree, will serve the organization as devotional chairman.

Glenn Gibson Heads Ministerial Group

Glenn Gibson, a rising senior from Reddick, Fla., was chosen to take the lead of the Ministerial Club from retiring President Don Hendrix, of Thomaston, Ga., this past Thursday.

The other officers are: Vice-President, Rohe Eshbaugh; Secretary, Jim Lowry; Treasurer, Pat Griffin; Chaplain, Bob Smith; Historian, Joe Pickard; Evangelistic Team Chairman, Paul Reid; and the advisor of the club for the coming year will be Dr. Joseph Gettys.

For Student Body President

Candidates Discuss Thier Platforms

In an attempt to bring to the student body pertinent information pertaining to the May 4 election of student government president, The Blue Stocking held interviews with three candidates. The following is a summary of their particular platforms:

HARDIN: MORE UNITY

"Generally speaking, my platform is the individual student and a unified student body. I will support the student at all times if the cause is just; I'll always be open for ideas and suggestions from individuals; the student council will take a more active part in student affairs. With this and more coordination and cooperation of the major student organizations, I feel confident that the student body might move toward a better whole."

When asked of his views on the controversial honor system, Hardin had this to say: "At the present time, the destiny of the honor system seems to be possessed by the administration. It is a student possession. It's success depends upon the student; therefore it's future belongs to the student body. I would like to see this come about. It is definitely true that we need more clarification upon the matter. A detailed study is needed. It will take time and concentration that will extend beyond one year, but it needs to be started soon."

"The whole constitution of PC's student government needs to undergo careful study and consideration. There are many points in particular need of clarification." Hardin stated.

"There needs to be more support and understanding among the student body, administration, and IFC here at PC and with better organization and planning, I believe these can be achieved. I am a strong believer in the IFC as a governing body of the fraternities, but perhaps a club such as the Germans, is needed for the social life of our campus. Good dances cost money and I feel better financial support could be derived through the student body administration than through the fraternities."

Asked if he had any changes in mind, Hardin suggested the possibility or organized elections in the future, including formal nominations and campaign speeches. He feels this will bring greater interest and larger student body support.

WATERS: MORE STUDENT CONTROL

In an interview with Waters, the following items were given as those things the candidate would like to see develop in the school year of '59-'60.

1. More strength in student body government. The student government is to be for the benefit of the students and therefore will be controlled by the students.

2. More student representation in the student body government. The student will be at liberty to depend on the student body for support. In the matter of trials, Waters hopes to see a more organized trial procedure with the welfare of the student as its main concern. Each trial case must have "complete" evidence proving the guilt of the student before any action is taken by the student goverment.

3. In suming up, Waters expressed a desire to see PC have a better all-around program of student activities, taking a bigger part in state student government activities.

WISE: BETTER ORGANIZATION

"The Student Council should not only be a punitive group but should serve as a vehicle for the students who have complaints against administration and faculty rules. I'd like to see the Student Council become a more organized function of government.

"Regular meetings should be planned to discuss campus problems and student activities. The council is not just an organization to pass judgment on violators of our constitution, but it is also a group of elected representatives of the student body to improve and maintain student unity and interest."

Looking toward improvements in the coming year, Wise commented on the spirit of the student body. "The PC spirit is only what the studets have made it. The student council could act as a co-ordinate along with the Director of Student Activities. Weedends are particularly dull at PC, everyone seems to leave. This fault in itself points to the idea that the five or six days in classes are just drudgery. Perhaps more social functions among the students in general could improve the spirit. It gives all the students a common interest throughout the year. Let's bring the center of activity back to the campus."

Blue Key Names New Members In Annual Spring Tapping Today

Eight Student Leaders Selected; Whitelaw Chosen As Honorary Member

Formal tappings were held in chapel this morning to induct eight new members into the Blue Key National Honor Fraternity. Seven students were chosen from the rising senior class on a basis of leadership, scholastic aptitude, character, and service. Dr. Neil G. Whitelaw, a member of the faculty, was chosen as an honorary member of the fraternity.

Dr. Whitelaw has been connected with the college 23 years and now serves as Professor of Physics. Since coming to PC in 1935 from the faculty of the University of Wisconsin, there has been no year when he has not had former students holding fellowships and teaching assistantships in departments of Physics at leading universities. During World War II the Oak Ridge Project, then completing the development of the atomic bomb, sought Dr. Whitelaw, but he remained at PC to teach.

The following juniors were tapped into Blue Key this morning:

GIBSON

Glenn Gibson from Reddick, Fla., is former treasurer and president of the Westminster Fellowship, and is the new president of the Ministerial Club.

HAGOOD

Billy Hagood, Pi Kappa Alpha, is from Easley and has been treasurer of his class for two years, managing editor of The Blue Stocking, a charter member of the Sophomore Scholastic Honor Society, treasurer of his fraternity, and is a rising member of IFC and president-elect of his fraternity.

Vote Set For Constitutional Changes

The Student Council, in a formal meeting on April 27, proposed the following amendments to the Constitution of the Student Government of Presbyterian College. These amendments will be voted on next Thursday, May 14, and must be approved by the faulty and voted upon by a majority of the student body, with the approval of three-fourth of those voting in order to become an active and valid part of said Constitution:

1. A ninth section shall be added to Article IV concerning Student Councilmen. It shall read as follows:

"If at any time during the school year, a seat on the Student Council is vacated, the council shall have the power to nominate a slate of candidates, and a special election shall be held for the student body to elect this new member."

2. A subsection shall be added to Article VI, Section 1 concerning the election of class officers. It shall read as follows:

"If at any time during the school year, a class office is vacated, the members of that class shall nominate possible candidates and a special election shall be held."

3. A new article shall be added to the constitution to classify students according to classes:

"'A': To be classified as a Sophomore, a student must have earned 24 hours and 18 quality points; 'B': A Junior must have earned 54 hours and 54 quality points; 'C': A Senior must have earned 90 hours and 90 quality points. In addition, a Junior must have completed his Freshman 'required' courses and a Senior must have completed his Freshman and Sophomore 'required' courses."

4. A change shall be made in Article IV, Section 7, Subsection B concerning qualifications for Student Councilmen. It shall read as follows:

'Maintenance of an overall average of 'C' as well as a 'C' average with no 'E' for the preceding semester, and a clear conduct record is necessary to be nominated for the Student Council."

Note: These proposals are being submitted without prior approval of the faculty and will be submitted to the faculty upon favorable vote. This is being done in order to expedite processing of these amendments so that they may be entered in the 'Knap Sack" for the '59-'60 sessions of school.

A Need For Organization

Fraternities are the focal point of student life at Presbyterian College. Were it not for the six fraternal organizations and their governing body, the Intrafraternity Council, this campus would be completely defunct socially. Politically, the fraternities play the vital role in any election.

THESE CIRCUMSTANCES SHOULD NOT EXIST. It should not be the responsibility of the IFC to present all of the campus-wide social events. Its duty should be supplementary, with other organizations—such as the Germans at other schools—taking charge of campus-wide dances. This group, financed by an addition to the matriculation fee, could well provide PC with a topnotch social season.

Secondly, the fraternities should not cuddle the political baby in their paternal laps. Approximately fifty per cent of the male student body is non-fraternity members. While it is safe to assume that a majority of the better student leaders are fraternity men, it is equally safe to say that there are many capable students outside of the ranks of the Greek organizations.

Therefore, we would advocate an Independent organization. Such a group could make the Greeks perk up their collective ears. Elections would become highly competitive—possibly with an absence of coalitions—and non-fraternity men would have a better chance to serve in an elected office, and enjoy a fuller, richer, and more rewarding life as students.

HAVE A WORD

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

The pledges and brothers at the last meeting made final plans toward the Spring Dance and our Hawaiian Holiday this weekend. Congratulations go to Don Hyde on his engagement and to Jim Eller on pinning that "North Carolina gal."

KAPPA ALPHA

Monday of this week we were quite fortunate in having with us our most distinguished Knight Commander, Reverend McCloud Frampton of Orangeburg. Commendable comments were graciously received by the brothers and pledges. It was decided that a bunch of roses be set aside in the Presbyterian Church next Sunday in memory of a deceased brother, Mr. Silas Bailey of Clinton, founder, friend, and loyal supporter of Beta Pi Chapter. Plans for various parties were also completed.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

At the regular meeting of Mu Chapter, plans were completed for a Space Dance and Roman Holiday this weekend. Congratulations were extended to Bob Waters and Jim Bennet for their recent honors. Brothers of the week were the newly elected fraternity officers, plus Waters and Bennet.

PI KAPPA PHI

Beta Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi held its regular meeting Tuesday night. The new officers were installed and given their duties for the next semester. Plans were discussed for parties to be held Friday and Saturday nights of the spring dance weekend.

SIGMA NU

At Sigma Nu's regular meeting Tuesday night final plans were completed concerning a joint party with Kappa Alpha. The theme will be taken as that of a Beat Generation atmosphere. The brothers are to be commended for their fine job in building and completing a new patio and refreshment counter. Final plans for the house-party at Windy Hill during the first week in June were also completed.

Co-Eds Tell Their Reasons Why

by BOB SMITH

The other day I was quietly sitting in my room contemplating the faces and countenancing the course of events that I would follow for the afternoon. There occurred a loud kick at the door. I refrained from answering it because I knew the exact nature of the visit—an article for the one and only weekly publication on the campus. Well, I finally let Graham in, and as expected, the first thing he said was, "We have an extra special assignment for you. Ask the co-eds why?"

"Why what?"

"Why they came to PC, what else?"

After a quick game of tennis, I started my search for the co-eds. As I was ambling across the Plaza I stumbled into three of the charming creatures, one of which promised to give me an answer. I walk[ed] back into Douthit House with [them] and underwent the Orange[burg] while they proceeded to tell their tale of events that I would follow. Between mouthfuls of her Hamburger, Gay finally became the one to voice "Why."

Gay said Dr. Gettys had a lot to do with her coming here so he talked her into trying for a Founder's scholarship which she eventually received. She also stated that she had applied at Queens, Winthrop, and Converse which led me to believe that the fact that PC was primarily a boy's school did not have too much to do with her final decision. I guess the possibility of meeting Ed was an after thought.

Later in the afternoon, I took up a position on the main hall that would enable me to catch them as they came in. Tattie was my first victim, but she took it like a true [lady] and answered my questions. When I opened the big question, I began to wish I was all ready to have the last answer. She informed me that she had applied at Duke and had been accepted but when her application was processed, the

PC Views Final Senior Parties

By GRAHAM EDMUNDS

Tuesday afternoon, I walked into my room after finishing the final history exam of the year, and found Percival Crudely standing in the middle of the room with his hands on his hips. He gave me a quick look and then returned to the odd objects scattered around.

As I looked over the room myself, I saw a suit case, one coat on a desk, and all sorts of clothes on the floor. On the other desk, the floor in the corner was a stack of books that I asked hardly used and in another portion of the room there was a pile of underwear. Quick as a flash, I knew what was going on so, turning to Pc, I said:

"What's the deal here? what are you doing?" Opening his trunk and throwing a few things in, he said:

"I'm packing."

"Packing. You must be going off this weekend."

"Not me, man—this is dance weekend, and I'm gonna juke it up."

"Well what are you packing for Pc?"

"Packing up to go home at the end of the year, of course."

"Why so soon? We've got three weeks, you know."

"I'm not gonna have time to pack these last couple of weeks. I've got to go visit Charlie and Gene and party it up with all my Senior buddies who'll be graduating and whom I may never see again."

"Sniff, sniff."

"It does sort of get you, doesn't it?"

"Yeah—really does. Say, Percival, you're packing your Bicycle playing cards."

"Yeah—I figure I've won enough money for this year and just decided to retire them, after all, they've had pretty much of a workout."

"PC, you'd better check all these things here and make sure."

"Yeah, I've done a little borrowing this year."

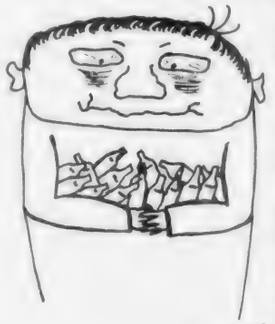
"Say, Percival, did you happen to find any new friends this week?"

"I sure did, G. B. I guarantee you everyone was trying to get my [attention]."

With such good qualities and [charm] each [one] had you couldn't [help] recognize a social campaign[er] [in the] [mak]ing from each side.

[Yo]u know, G. B., you almost [re]mind me of a Pegasus.

"No joke.



"Heck yeah, man, [it] [is] the only [way to go].

"Yeah, I [be]."

"Well, G. B., [and] I've [had] me some and [so] [I'll] [be] [on] [my] [way].

"White you're [at it], [you] [might] [as] [well] [help] [me] [by] cleaning up the [room] a [bit].

Rules For Dance Weekend

By PERCIVAL CRUDELY

While checking my SCA calendar, which, by the way, doesn't have Mother's Day listed, I find that this weekend is the Spring Dance and the close of the social season. Looking over the faculty rules for socials, I decided that they needed adding to for this Masquerade Ball Now, in view of the festive occasion I've made an intense study into the past dances here and came up with some governing factors. Adding these to the ones passed through the pens of Lou Kemia, The Baby Blue, Hit O. Myth, True Blue, Yorick O. Why, and the ever immortal Hot O. Rudy, we have the following list:

1. Everyone must wear some kind of clothing.

2. Cellophane costumes are absolutely prohibited.

3. If you go as a baby, be sure to have milk in the bottle.

4. It's too close to exams to gas as professors.

5. All animals, with the exception of pink elephants and Pc will be prohibited.

6. Fan dancers and bubble dancers must have fan and bubbles. I've had one with a pea-shooter many times.

7. Please don't go as yourself, especially professors that is.

8. Non-daters must be in the hall no later than 5:25 if they want a good seat for the parade.

9. Girls who have never been to PC before may expect leering, clapping, stomping, coughs and sneezes.

10. Boys must not use their normal "homely" corners. No one will be permitted to keep one hand in his pocket while dancing.

11. Males, and some females, are not expected to recognize their dates after 11:45.

12. Stags must leave the fraternity rooms no later than 12:00 as they must be on duty in the dormitories to show fellow students the way to go home.

Well, that's it. I hope everyone who reads these rules and regulations will abide by them to the letter and really have a ball up.

Remember—if you're going to that keg—wait for me.

Swim, Track Meets Are Scheduled As Intramural Season Nears Close

• Last Chance for Trophy Points

Another week being completed in the intramural [sports] [pro]gram, only one team remained still undefeated. The [most] [exc]iting game of the week had unvanquished Alpha Sigma Phi meeting the unbeaten Gray Ghosts with Alpha Sigma Phi easily becoming the victor. The second game of the week between P. Kappa Alpha and PiKA's on top 10-0.

The Alpha Sigma Phi's were handed their first defeat by the Pi Kappa in the final game of the week. O'Neil Crocker was outstanding in the winning effort.

[The] schedule is seen in the final events of the year. In addition to the remaining softball games, Robe Eshbaugh, intramural spring sports [coordinator] announced [today] [that] the track meet, to be held this Tuesday, May 12, will consist of [various] track and field events that had not been made known to day at press time. However, lists will be posted of these events for the benefit of all prospective participants.

[A] [meet] is scheduled in the college [pro]gram.

Ryan Montgomery, director of student activities, stated yesterday that thanks were due to the intramural council and especially Don Fowler for their work in making this year's intramural program a successful one.

Golf Captain Al Copelan hits a practice shot in preparation for the South Carolina state tournament to be held next week at Hampton.

PC'uns Split Pair With Indians, Fleet

PC Blue Hose capitalized on three Newberry pitchers to score a surprising 15-4 upset over the Indians Saturday afternoon.

Harold Raeford went the distance for the Blue Hose giving up nine hits.

Tony Benson was the big gun of the day at bat, collecting four hits including one home run slammed to the centerfield corner. As a team the Hosemen collected 10 hits, two ers getting at least two hits were Bill Sease, Charlie Howard, Paul Chastain, Ray Hodge and Ted Leahy.

Wednesday afternoon the Pc [Hose] dropped to Erskine Gabriel [by] [an] earned runs. Tony Benson led hitmen with two hits, one going for a homer.

Stratton Will Head '59-'60 Block P Club

Star basketball letterman Bob Stratton of Lawrenceburg, Ky., was elected yesterday to head the Block "P" Club for the 1959-60 school year. He replaces Ralph Chambers in this position.

Bill Dobbins of Joanna, who stars as a Blue Sox hurler, is to be the new vice-president, and Paul Ard, basketball guard from Atlanta, fills the office of secretary-treasurer.

The annual "baseball game" initiation ceremony will be held on Monday and Tuesday for those who have lettered this year in a varsity sport.

PC Finishes Fourth In State Track Meet

The University of South Carolina captured first place in the State Track Meet Saturday afternoon. However, they barely eased past a strong Citadel squad. The Gamecocks captured 47 and one-sixth points to the Bulldogs' 44 and a third.

Presbyterian was on the bottom of the totem pole as they snagged out 15 and five-sixth points. But no credit can be taken away from Coach Spooner's inexperienced squad, as they fought hard.

Finishing in the running for the Blue Hose were Curtis Linder, third place broad jump; Jon Vastine, fourth place javelin; Bill Hill, tie for second in the high jump; Ed Messer, third in low hurdles; Billy Benton, fourth in the pole vault; Ed Messer won first place in the first heat of the 100-yard dash with a true time of 10.0. He finished first in the second heat of the 220, and second in the first heat of the 220 low hurdles.

An outstanding day was had by Freshman Bobby Beddingfield in the Frosh meet as he won first place in the 100-yard dash (10.3) and the 220 in 23.0. He took fourth place in the 220 low hurdles despite a hard start.

Fierce Faculty Five Defeat 'Mural Stars

With the help of the scorekeepers and referees the Fierce Faculty Five defeated the Intramural All-Stars Tuesday night.

The faculty hotshots were composed of Dr. Jones, Col. Barnett, Captain Bennett, Pete Hay, Andy Howard, Irving Montgomery, and Vic Sponer.

The All-Stars, among whom there are still cries of "gypped" and "dirty play," were made up of Ed Jackson, Cecil Morris, Flash Gordon, Bill Francis, Bob Biggerstaff, Harry Hoffman, and Skip Saerance.

ADMIRING THE Walter A. Johnson Relay trophy, which was awarded to the University of South Carolina Saturday at the State track meet, are (L to r.): Coach Rex Enright of USC; Mrs. Walter Johnson; Mrs. L. C. McCarthy, daughter of the late Walter Johnson; and her husband, Capt. L. C. McCarthy. The trophy was given in memory of the former PC Athletic Director and founder of the State Track Meet.

BEHIND THE BLUES

WITH MARTIN CHITTY

As the year draws to an end, we feel this is a good time for taking stock of the past athletic year.

All in all it's been a good year, one of the best in recent memory. The Blue Hose footballers won thir first Little Three championship in 10 years with a victory over all the conference opponents and an over-all 6-3-1 record. It was even more successful when it is remembered that the Hosemen were picked to finish on the bottom of the list. Head Coach Frank Jones was nominated to a well deserved honor. Bill Wrigley of South Carolina football coach of the year. Bobby Pate and Richard Wrigley were Little Three Back of the Year and Lineman of the Year, respectively. Pate was also second team all-state, and halfback Tony Benson was honorable mention All-American.

The Blue Hose roundballers finished with an 11-9 record. Highlights of the season were the upsets over Belmont Abbey and Georgia Teachers. Bill Sullivan was second team all-state. Bob Stratton was third team and Ralph Chambers was awarded honorable mention. Ken Caswell was named Outstanding Player of the Little Four and the team as a whole finished second in the conference.

Tennis led spring sports with a fine 12-7 record as Coach Leighton presented his usual exciting team. The netmen won their 20th straight State championship. Prospects for the future are bright here as four of the six men this year were freshmen. Number one player of this year, Harry Hoffman, will also return. Jim Shakespeare, the only senior, finished the season with only two defeats. This is one of the finest records in PC tennis history.

The linksters got off to a slow start, but they have come back strong, winning their last four matches. They will enter the state match next week with an excellent chance to capture top honors.

Trackmen finished a hapless year without a victory, but under the guidance of new coach Vic Spooner they should be stronger next year.

Coach Ehrhardt's baseballers have featured a hard-hitting team, but they have made scads of errors, thus giving them a poor record.

There have been general changes in the coaching department as Head football coach Frank Jones moved up to Athletic Director. Head basketball coach Courts Redford resigned along with track coach Lonnie McMillian. Vic Spooner, a former star athlete of Texas Tech, moved in as track coach, while the basketball coach has yet to be named.

Only three home football games are scheduled next year; however there are three games which are not scheduled on a home and home basis—Furman, Tampa, and The Citadel. It is a shame that a school must be forced to schedule such games. It isn't the coaches' fault that this must be done, nor is it the students' fault. The fact is that more money must be made on games in this way than there can on a home and home basis. We do not know on whom the blame rests, but it is depriving PC students from watching their team in action. Why can't we bring crowds, other schools do it. The answers must be somewhere. Perhaps the alumni could help this matter. Surely they should be interested in the squad and hoping that the students get a fair break in support of their football team.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

Athletic Director Frank Jones has received fifty applications for the head basketball job . . . Bobby Beddingfield left little doubt as to the fact that he was outstanding freshman in the state track meet . . .

Golfers Prepare For State Meet At Hampton Next Week

Presbyterian linksters, after winning four straight matches, will journey to Hampton, S. C., on May 15, for the state tournament. This tournament will continue through the 16th.

The Hosemen have scored successive victories over the University of South Carolina, Augusta College, The Citadel, and Belmont Abbey. The [last] two victories over Abbey were by a [combined] [total] of [one] stroke. [Harrington] scored the medalist with a 76.

Heyward Sullivan of Furman will be the defending champion on the 36-hole match scheduled for the 16th.

The Blue Hose will face The Citadel, Wofford, and Furman in the coming meet.

Dr. John Stevenson, golf coach, is well pleased over the showing of two fine freshmen, Frank Sells and [Steve] Clyburn as [well] as [the] [rest] of the [team]. The [team] [has] [a] [record] of [four] wins, [one] loss, and [one] [tie] at five wins, five losses.

The [team] [is] [now] [at] [full] [strength] [again] [and] [is] presented with the idea of increasing [their] [chances] of [winning] [the] [state] [tourn]ament. With a new surge of confidence, the PC team enters the match with eyes on a title.

Six Nationwide Greek Societies Compose PC's Fraternity System

The Blue Stocking

I.F.C. Greek Edition

ΑΒΓΔΕΖΗΘΙΚΛΜΝΞΟΠΡΣΤΥΦΧΨΩ

"The greatest youth movement of our times," is the name given to the fraternity system of our colleges. Here on our campus there is no difference. The Fraternity offers the student intellectual, social, and spiritual benefits. Each one of these organizations is based on the highest of ideals. The Fraternity offers positions of leadership which add to the character of the individual. The general purpose of these groups is to build character, leadership and the personality. After graduation, the fraternal idealism remains and alumni ties are strong through Alumni clubs.

We all know that the main function of the "Greeks" is social, but there are many other contributions which they give the student and institution. I hope this edition will be of interest to many and place some light on the Fraternity System, its needs, its contributions, and its future.

—JOE HARDIN

Brotherhoods Are Social; But Foster Student Scholars

One of the strongholds on which our fraternity system stands is an active encouragement of scholastic ability. The Inter-Fraternity Council's Constitution starts the emphasis on the grade standard of the over-all Fraternity system on our campus. In order to pledge a fraternity, the student must obtain ten quality points at mid-semester or eight quality points at the end of the semester.

The ten quality point system, which was used this year for the first time, raises the standard and also allows the student to become a pledge before the semester is over. This gives an added incentive to make a "C" average to meet the requirement of the IFC in order that the student may be initiated into the Brotherhood of his chosen fraternity at the beginning of the next semester.

When the student becomes a pledge, he receives encouragement from the members of his organization and study help from the experienced upperclassmen. This aims at getting the student in the Brotherhood, but also adds to his scholastic standing. Once in the Brotherhood, his brothers are always wiling to help in any way to keep his grades average or better.

The fraternities use various means to keep its members on top scholastically. Here, the college keeps close statistics on the fraternity men. These averages are released by the Registrar's Office every semester to the fraternities and for publication. This gives an element of competition to the organizations.

Some of the National offices give to the chapters scholarships which go to a person or persons who have a high scholastic ability. These scholarships give to the members an initiative to work for these aids. There are many ways to add to the competition of grades—parties for the "A" students, dinners, and just the humble average students of the group.

The rules of the IFC encouragement by their fellow fraternity men, and individual pride, gives the fraternities a very good over-all scholastic achievement. Here are the statistics for the past two years as obtained from the Officer of the Registrar:

1957-58—First Semester

	Men	Avgs.
Fraternity	194	1.29
Non-Fraternity	326	1.07

Fraternities Started At William and Mary

The first Greek letter college fraternity was Phi Beta Kappa, founded at the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg Va., on December 5, 1776. It was a social club of five students, and had all the features which characterize the modern fraternity, a ritual with secret obligations, a motto, a grip and a pin. William and Mary was taken over for military purposes during the Civil War nd the fraternity would have died except for the fact that chapters were granted Yale and Harvard.

National Histories Have Broad Scope

One of the greatest assets of college education which is frequently overlooked by both educators and students, is one's association of the mind. It is the education of the whole self as we work and play with others who share many of the same interests that we have.

Psychologists tell us the man is by nature a social being, and that he desires to belong to a certain group and have a sense of belonging. This was the reason fraternities came into being. Colleges are designed to train the mind but students must also develop socially, physically, morally, and spiritually. The college curriculum leaves a gap here and fraternities satisfy these needs. Fraternities prepare a student for life in his society. Finally, and most important of all, it establishes friendship on a firmer and more lasting basis.

Presbyterian College has six social fraternities and two honor fraternities. College fraternities are named from the letters of the Greek alphabet, thus getting the name of "Greek letter fraternities." All have secret rituals, mottos, grips, and passwords which are only known within the brotherhood. Following is a short sketch of each fraternity on our campus, giving its history in brief .

Alpha Sigha Phi was founded at Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut, on December 6, 1845. The chapter on our campus is the Alpha Psi Chapter and is one of the 56 achapters in the nation. There are 28,266 members all total. The National Headquarters is located in Delaware, Ohio. The fraternity colors are cardinal and stone and the flower is the Talisman Rose.

The Kappa Alpha Order, founded at Washington and Lee University on December 21, 1865, has 47,000 members. Presbyterian College's Beta Pi Chapter is one of the 83 active chapters. The National Administrative office is located in Atlanta, Ga. Crimson and gold are the colors, while the national flower is represented by the Crimson Rose.

The University of Virginia is the founding place of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity on March 1, 1868. Pi Kappa Alpha now boasts of 53,500 members, with 117 active chapters and 75 alumni chapters. Mu Chapter is the name given to the PiKA chapter on this campus. The flower of the fraternity is the Lily of the Valley and the colors are garnet and old gold. The national office is located in Memphis, Tenn.

Pi Kappa Phi was founded in our own state, at the College of Charleston on December 10, 1904. Beta Chapter was one of the first 52 active chapters. The total membership consists of 20,026 and there are 43 alumni chapters. The colors are white and gold and the flower is represented by the Red Rose. Sumter, South Carolina, is the home of the National Office.

Since 1890

Local Fraternities Have Varied and Colorful Pas

Fraternity history at PC dates back to 1890 when Mu Chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha was founded. Except for the brief period of inactivity from 1912-24 ,when there was a national anti-fraternity movement. Presbyterian has had an active and vigorous fraternity lstystem. Local chapters are proud of their histories, which we hope will prove to be of interest to all PC students.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Sigma Phi came to PC's campus in 1946, when Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity and Alpha Kappa Pi Fraternity voted to merge at their separate conventions. The AKP chapter at Presbyterian became Alpha Psi Chapter of Alpha Sigma Phi. Earlier, the fraternity suite was located above Belk's, but is now located on Broad Street in a comfortable suite of rooms.

KAPPA ALPHA

Beta Pi of Kappa Alpha Order was chartered on December 29, 1929, with charter members Joe Finney Mason, P. S. Bailey, Porter H. Bomar, Benjamin F. Knowles, William O. Player, Jr., and Thomas M Robinson. The chapter room was located on the third floor of Neville Hall, and at the close of the Second World War, the charter was moved to its present location behind Laurens Dormitory.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Mu Chapter ranks as the oldest chapter on the campus, having first been established here in 1890. Fraternities were outlawed at PC in 1912 and Mu went out of existence until it was re-founded in 1924. It has had a continual existence since that time. Mu has continually ranked among the top chapters of Pi Kappa Alpha and twice in the past ten years it has been judged the top chapter in the fraternity.

PI KAPPA PHI

At the first meeting of Pi Kappa Phi at the College of Charleston, the first Pi Kapps set as their goal to become a national organization. Andrew Kroeg was elected the "Supreme" Archon in 1906. At this time PC was the only school in the state that did not prohibit fraternities. By dint of much personal effort on the port of Kroeg, through contacts made by members of the mother chapter while visiting Presbyterian for athletic and forensic competition, a group of men became interested in affiliating, an on March 9, 1907, the Supreme Chapter received its first application for a charter, and Beta came into being.

SIGMA NU

Iota Chapter of Alpha Lambda Tau was organized on the pus in 1926 as a local cl the Rapier Club. It affilia ally in 1927. The strength Iota Chapter during the enablel it to maintain a leadership in the past when five other fraternities activated on the campu after again becoming chapter of Sigma Nu were installed as a unit of the frternity.

THETA CHI

Organized at Presbyter on December 5, 1942, the Chapter of Theta Chi was chartered with members. Prior to its charter known as Beta Kappa served as the first Presid the alumni advisor was Jacobs, III.

Presbyterian's Greeks Speak Of A Busy Year

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Stag suppers and dances have highlighted the social year of Alpha Psi. Besides the regularly scheduled IFC dances, the chapter has had a pledge party, Parent's Day Dance, annual Hawaiian Holiday Dance, the Carolinas-wide Black and White Ball, and several other events. Advisor Ben Collins was named Grand Chapter Advisor for the Carolinas. A final "fling" has been planned in a week-long beach party at Ocean Drive. All hasn't been play, though, the pledges have built a new lounge, the suite has been improved new furniture added.

KAPPA ALPHA

Beta Pi Chapter started the year off by remodeling the interior of lodge and building an outside porch, and later getting grass to grow on the front lawn. The chapfinished second place in intramural football and r Gray Ghost basketball team took first in intraal basketball. The social calendar was highlight by the Old South Ball and its local annual wild party. A joint party with Rho was held shortly eafter. Again the chapter will award a cup for outstanding senior athlete.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity got off to a flying start by winning first place in the campus homecoming decorations. This was followed up by a tea for the freshman boys and their parents. During the year the chapter has had a special party for the children at Thornwell Orphanage, a Space Ball, Roman Holiday, a formal dance and the annual PiKA weekend. The PiKA's won first place in intramural football. The chapter had the honor of having brothers elected to many outstanding campus offices.

PI KAPPA PHI

The Pi Kapps started the year with the music of cles Miller for the Rush Week open social, and followed through with the closed costume Shipwreck Ball, pledge party that kept the pledges on their toes. Their Queen will be crowned this Saturday night. PC weekends always end at the Mary Lou Ranch for Pi Kappa, with a casual get-together. The social season will end with a beach party at Ocean Drive.

SIGMA NU

A very successful Rush Season started the Sigma Nu year. The chapter received 18 pledges in the Fall and three at the beginning of second semester. During the past year the Sig house has taken on a new look. The 42 members joined together and made improvements on the ground. A brick wall and a dance floor was put in the patio. The Fall Open Social started off the year very successfully. The highlight of the Spring was the annual "Moose of the Year" dance.

THETA CHI

At the beginning of the year, the brothers and pledges corated the fraternity suite. This included new furnipainting, and refinishing of the floors. The chapter also the highest grade point ratio of any fraternity on campus a ratio of 1.7 This was fourth out of 125 Theta Chi chapand first in this region. Many parties and social gathgs have been held during the year.

Fellowship Stems From Varied Activities

Housing Problem Is Vital Issue Before PC's Fraternity System

Housing is acknowledged as one of the greatest problems facing Presbyterian's fraternities. The six social groups at PC are located in various places on campus and in town.

Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, and Theta Chi are located on the third floor of Neville Hall. Kappa Alpha's suite is in an end of the college maintenance shop, while Alpha Sigma Phi calls a downtown lodge home. Sigma Nu remains the lone fraternity with its own house.

Almost with a single voice, the Greek letter organizations decry the present arrangement. Those located in Neville are especially outspoken. They speak of three flights of stairs to climb, lack of ventilation and fire escapes. Some complain of being cramped.

The ideal plan for housing of the Greeks is the fraternity lodge system. The college has a plan for providing these lodges, but almost without exception, this plan has failed to meet the approval of the fraternities.

The house, to be built by specifications of the school, costs $12,000. Half of this is paid by the fraternity, the other half by the school, which also provides a lot.

The $6,000 from the school goes to the individual fraternity as a loan with interest. This is paid by the room payments of two members who reside in the lodge. When paid for, the house becomes property of the school. The room payments continue, and become an endowment fund. The fraternity then must lease the building back from the school at a "minimum rate."

When various school officials were queried as to this "minimum rate," none were able to supply actual figures.

This plan contrasts to Wofford and other similar schools where the lodge is built by the school and

Alpha Psi Delta Sorority Has Phoenix-Like Past

Alpha Psi Delta Sorority, is a social organization for the coeds on the Presbyterian College campus. It seeks to promote character, leadership, scholarship, and to perpetuate a friendly and sisterly spirit among its members.

Alpha Psi Delta has disbanded and reorganized several times through the years. The present chapter, now some six years old, has twelve active members.

The sorority operates and functions under the same rules and regulations as most sororities and fraternities, though it is not a national organization. This is due to the fact that there is no other sorority on campus. Because it is not a national sorority, it is not a member of the Inter-Fraternity Council, though governed by it.

Alpha Psi Delta enters into many campus activities during the year, though unable to enter into all of the Intramural activities. Such activities include: perfect attendance for Religious Emphasis Week, skits at various times, Chapel series, Community Chest Drive, etc.

There are social activities which the sorority carries on. There is the tea for new students each fall, various parties throughout the year, the party given at which time the Secret Pals were revealed, and the suppers enjoyed during the pledge season .

Each year the sorority has a project of some kind. During the second semester the sorority took as their project remembering the residents of the Laurens County Home (for the aged). They did this by sending cards on special occasions to each resident and having a party for them, and visiting them on several occasions.

Thus you can see that Alpha Psi Delta Sorority, though small, is a very active and growing organization on the Presbyterian College campus.

PC's Chapters Rank In Top 25 of Nation

Statistics taken from the "Fraternity Month" reveal that all six of PC's fraternities rank among the top twenty-five national fraternities according to number of chapters.

Number seven nationally is Sigma Nu with 125 chapters, following closely in the number eight spot is Theta Chi with 123 chapters. Pi Kappa Alpha is number eleven, having 117 chapters. Kappa Alpha Order with eighty-three is ranked sixteenth, Alpha Sigma Phi with fifty-six chapters is number twenty-two, and number twenty-three is Pi Kappa Phi, composed of fifty-two chapters.

I do feel that fraternities on this campus could take a more active part in college affairs, such as the Proctor System which is being introduced next year. There may be a little too much social emphasis in these organizations here."

Dr. Pope, Director of Guidance Center—"I definitely believe that fraternities at PC are making great strides in building character, personality, leadership, and scholarship among our students. I have observed notable changes in several boys as a result of their pledging a fraternity. Among these changes have been better social and emotional adjustment to campus life. Furthermore I think our fraternities are making progress in strengthening our faculty-student relationships. I appreciate all they are doing and I wish them continuing success."

Dr. Carter, Professor of Chemistry—"I think that the fraternities work probably better at PC than at some other schools that I am acquainted with; however, I feel that too much of campus social life depends on fraternities, and also that fraternities over-emphasize social life to the detriment of studies. They could help members by showing more interest in academic work and raise the standards. In this way academically weak students could be helped in their college life."

Mr Erwen, French Professor—"I think that fraternities add greatly to the life of a college campus and PC would be the poorer without them. The social life afforded by the fraternities does not have to be at the expense of the students' academic work and, as a matter of fact, fraternity men as a whole receive higher grades than non-fraternity men I am glad PC has fraternities."

Dr. Whitelaw, Professor of Physics—"I think that fraternities first and foremsot should encourage scholarship. One of the most noticeable things is the improve-

However, the registrar's office finally realized this and the fact that it meant she would have to be given a scholarship, resulted in her receiving an additional letter which cancelled her acceptance. Lokoing for another school offering the same course of study, PC furnished the answer . . . . and, of course, Don.

My next victim was sitting at a table over in the corner with her "one and only." I had no more pulled up a chair when she began to reel off her reasons why. Alice had a list of reasons that she must have been rehearsing all day as she listed them as:

(1) PC was supposed to be a Christian school. (2) My high school football coach and several other PC graduates developed my interest in the school. (3) I understood PC's history department was good. (4) I received a Founder's scholarship; (5) I did not know there were so few co-eds." Vol. XXXVIII | Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., September 25, 1959 | No. 1

THE NEW BELK auditorium-chapel, under construction since last September, is currently behind schedule. Officials say that dedication of the structure will probably be held in February. Student use of the building is slated to begin with the second semester. The auditorium is a result of the Diamond Jubilee Development campaign held in observance of the 75th anniversary of the college.

PC Enrolls 517 Students As Fall Semester Begins

Record Number Of Applicants Received For 79th Session

One hundred and seventy-three new freshmen and transfer students have joined the 1959-60 studnt body at Presbyterian College. With the 344 returning upperclassmen, this gives the total of 517 members to the 79th session

Col. A. J. Thackston, dean of students, reports that there was a record number of applications made during the past year. Out of 2,988 applications only 173 were allowed to enter due to limited space. This number of applicants seems almost incredible. But Thackston explains that this number is composed of all those who showed interest in PC. Of that number, many did not meet the entrance requirements, others changed their preferences of schools and entered other institutions, others decided against entering college, financial and family crises prevented enrollment and other various reasons.

Despite the number of applicants the student body falls short twenty-seven of the record enrollment of 544 for the 1958-59 sesions. The Office of the Dean of Students cites the decrease in the Clinton area students and the out of own students living of campus as the reason for this.

The campus and off-campus breakdown of enrollment and the class distribution was released from the Office of the Registrar:

Boarding students, 410; Clinton area students, 82; and out-of-town students living off campus, 25.

Zodiacs To Play At Annual Homecoming Dance Next Friday

• Alumni Reunions Set Saturday

Starting off the myriad of 1959 Homecoming activities will be the IFC Homecoming Dance at the Clinton Armory from 9 until 1 on next Friday night, October 2. Music will be provided by the Zodiacs, formerly known as the Gladiolas.

Dress for the Friday night dance will be PC formal and cocktail dresses, according to announcement by the IFC.

The homecoming queen, chosen by popular student vote, will be crowned during the halftime ceremonies of the Wofford-PC game Saturday night.

Old grads will arrive on Saturday morning with the Alumni Board of Directors meeting to begin their program. Following will be various class reunions and an alumni luncheon. The Alumni Gold P for outstanding accomplishments will be presented to Dr. Plumer J. Manson, imminent orthopedic surgeon of Miami, Fla.

Students, too, will have a busy week-end. Fraternities will all compete in the traditional homecoming decorations, with the displays exhibited as follows: Alpha Sigma Phi, front of Bailey; Pi Kappa Alpha, Douglas House; Theta Chi, Neville Hall lawn; Pi Kappa Phi, Spencer lawn; Sigma Nu, Science; and Kappa Alpha, on the Plats near the flag pole.

Hardin Will Head Battle Group Staff

Joe Hardin, senior from Greenwood, has been named Commander of the Presbyterian College Cadet Battle Group for the 1958-59 school session. Hardin holds the rank of Cadet Major.

Assisting the Commander is Bob Waters who is the Battle Group Executive Officer. Waters holds the rank of Cadet Captain.

Named to the top staff position of S-1 was Sid Faress who will serve as Adjutant. Jesse Johnston is to serve as S-2 and is the Intelligence Officer of the unit. S-3 is Cliff Stovall who has the duties of operations and training. The Battle Group S-4 is Carl Latham who serves as supply officer and is in charge of clothing and equipment.

Company Commanders are as follows: Headquarters, Don Denning; A, Ben Donaldson; B, Jim Bennett; C, Dick Wood; D, Vernon Workman.

Freshmen Score Well On Tests

Dr. George Bellingrath, academic dean of PC, reports that the freshman class placement tests average is slightly higher than any previous clas in the school's history. This observation was made after a study of their replacement tests and a comparison of them with previous tests.

This is the realization of efforts made in the last four years. The increasing entrance rate has reversed the present situation and the one that existed in 1954 and 1955. Instead of having the problem of filling every room available, the administration now has twice as many applications as they have room.

Bellingrath states that the Dean Bellingrath states that the average student is approximately the same as the average student of the other classes now at PC, but that there is a slight increase in the select group and a slight decrease in those students who are accepted but not expected to complete the requirements for graduation.

On the recently completed placement tests, the verbal remained on the level of previous years while there was a considerable increase

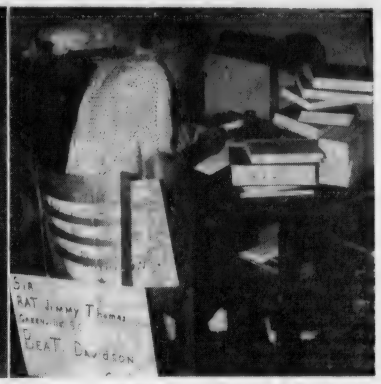
Concert Series Comes To College

Eric Friedman, violinist, is to open the current Community Concert series in November, to be followed by the Tucson, Arizona, Boys' Choir in March, and Brian Sullivan, tenor, in April. Dr. Stevenson, chairman of the Fine Arts Committee, made this announcement Monday night.

For the first time PC students are automatically members of the Clinton Community Concert Association. The school has purchased a block of 500 tickets, so students will not have to pay to attend the concerts.

Blue Key Trip

The PC chapter of Blue Key national honorary fraetrnity will travel to Wofford this coming Tuesday in conjunction with the annual PC-Woffod sportsmanship competitioo.



The visit will be reciprocated later in the week by the Wofford Blue Key Chapter, who will entertain the PC student body at chapel period.

THE BLUE STOCKING PRESENTS

Editorials : Features : Humor

An Empty Stadium

The Blue Stocking recognizes the problem of working out a schedule of ten football games each year, but we fail to understand the rarity of home games in the '59 schedule. Only 30 per cent of the games were scheduled for Johnson Field; one played before school started.

We would like to pose this question: If the football team is not for the students' benefit, for whose benefit is it?

We also recognize the problem of the small gate receipts at Presbyterian College. However, the Hose have proved themselves worthy of being watched. People enjoy watching good football. We want them at home!

Having played perhaps the first game of the national '59 schedule, we find ourselves being rushed to continue the early start. The student body returned to campus to learn there were only two weeks to prepare for Homecoming. The turmoil this inexcusable situation has put the IFC into, not to mention the individual fraternities and those who wish to date, is not the best way to begin a new academic year. Our constitution states: "Homecoming Queen: Shall be chosen two (2) weeks prior to Homecoming." (Article VI, Sec. 3). This would have required an election on the day of registration.

Let's have more activity on Johnson Field next fall!

A Tradition Rots

Ask any freshman and he will tell you that the PC Bell Tower is a mighty important part of the campus. Besides the "ratting" duties, the Tower also announces PC's athletic victories. This has been so for many, many years. Now this tradition is rotting.

We suggested last year that restoration of the Bell Tower should be undertaken. It would, we observed, cost very little, especially in view of its importance. If possible, we suggest again, the Tower should be placed at the top of the campus improvement list. If the College cannot see its way clear to restoring the structure, perhaps a student contribution would be successful. A school lives in its students and alumni through tradition—this is one we hate to see die.

An Editor's Notebook

IT SEEMS STRANGE not to see Coach Lonnie Mac around the canteen and book store. After retiring from coaching, he now has left the active college scene permanently. We're told that he plans to fish and rest . . . happy fishing to one who deserves a large catch.

AS WE BEGIN ANOTHER year of publication, it seems befitting to remind the students of letters-to-the-editor. The Blue Sock is your newspaper, and the letters column is a good way to express your views. We invite your contribution.

A BOUQUET OF ROSES to the administration and the Fine Arts Committee for the college membership in the Clinton Concert Association. A fine step in the right direction for PC.

AND A WELCOME TO the freshman class . . . one of the smartest to come to PC, and another indication that our school continues making progress.

THE RETURN OF CRUDELY

by GRAHAM EDMUNDS

It was Thursday, the opening day of school for old students, and I was busily hanging pictures while my new freshman roommate, Cleveland Henderson Thornton, was writing a letter to Mom.

Suddenly, a car came to a screeching halt in the parking lot. This wasn't unusual, so I thought nothing of it. The next sound I heard was that of an upperclassman calling for a few freshmen; however, this, too, was nothing out of the ordinary, so I continued hanging my pictures.

Then it happened—the door opened and with his cane in hand, Percival Crudely, the third member of our 132 Smyth C section trio, entered.

"P. C.!"

"Hello, G. B., how's the war treating you?"

"Just great, man, how 'bout yourself?"

"Oh, I can't complain. Say, G. B., step back a minute while these freshmen unload."

Behind Percival were 16 freshmen and one butler.

"Say, P. C."

"Yeah, Babe."

"What's this butler doing here?"

"Oh, he belongs to some freshman named Reginald Appleton Tiddlewinks, III, who refused to carry anything. He said Patrick would do it."

"You reckon Patrick is going to do his ginning for him, too?"

"I don't know, G. B."

"P. C., I want you to meet our new roomo — Cleveland Henderson Thornton."

"Where is he?"

"Well, he's using a new deodorant called Vanish—he puts it on and disappears . . . then everyone wonders where the smell is coming from."

"Well, G. B., what did you do this summer?"

"I worked as a Camel Spotter for the Army."

"A Camel Spotter?"

"Yeah, every time I saw one, I went and telegraphed the government. What did you do, P. C.?"

"I worked in a pet shop, G. B."

"Oh, and what was your job?"

"What does one usually do in a pet shop?"

Modern Science and The 'Kickless Kiss'

If "filter smoking" is such an improvement over the run-of-the-mill kind what is to prevent a stampede in the direction of "filter smooching"? Should the Madison Avenue boys put their minds on it they likely could come up with some very convincing arguments.

They could make the point that a suitable filter placed between the lips of the smoocher and the smoochee would prevent the interchange of germs and be absolutely sanitary. What a campaign they could contrive for the "kickless kiss."

And if filtering becomes more and more prevalent what is to dissuade the experts from selling us a bill of goods about "filter drinking"? The filter, you see, would remove all the alcohol and render "filter drinking" as harmless as taking a snort of branch water.

"A drinking man's filter", I can hear the pitchman declaiming, "and a choking man's waste."

"Filter drinking" likely would have a considerable appeal for those desiring to go through the motions of tying one on without the hazard of a resulting hangover or any of the other complications accompanying over-indulgence in fortified waters.

And should the public be conditioned to filter smoothing and filter smoothing and filter drinking it would be just a short step to filter eating. An expertly contrived adget could remove not only the fat-building ingredients from food but also the vitamins,

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity made plans for having a Combo Saturday after the Homecoming game which will be opened to all freshmen and non-fraternity men.

The Brothers made plans for a "Stag Supper" in the near future.

Extensive plans were made for the renovation and the purchase of new furniture. These plans include the repairing of the pool table, the purchase of new couches and a ping pong table.

KAPPA ALPHA

The year's first meeting of Beta Pi Chapter of the Kappa Alpha Order was held on September 22. Current No. 1 Ben Donaldson reported on his trip to the National Convention which was held in Kansas City Missouri. Donaldson told the brothers of the various minor modifications in Kappa Alpha that resulted from the convention.

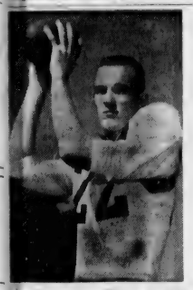
Tentative plans were also made for a Tea Dance and Drop-In to be held on Homecoming weekend.

PI KAPPA PHI

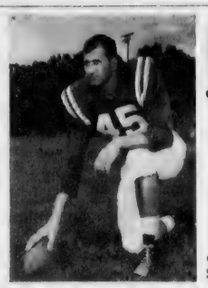
Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity held its first meeting Tuesday night. George Lane of Beta Kappa Chapter at Georgia State was welcomed into the brotherhood of Beta Chapter. Socials were planned for after the Home coming Dance and after the football game at Peck's Mary Lou Ranch.

THETA CHI

The weekly meeting of Beta Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity was held on Tuesday night, September 22. Plans for the Homecoming week end were made, which include refreshments that will be served in the fraternity suite during the Friday night dance intermission. All freshmen, alumni, and friends are welcome to the Open House after the Homecoming football game.



SIGMA NU



Since the house has a "new look," the brothers of Sigma Nu met at the Mary Musgrove Hotel for a supper session. Administrative duties were taken care of and plans for Homecoming were made.

Congratulations to Pledge Sonny DuBose on his recent marriage. We are very proud of the good job that Sonny, Bill Schofill, and Cecil Morris are doing in the forward wall of the Blue Hose.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Mu chapter made plans for a party to be held on Friday night of homecoming, after the IFC dance. The Five Kids will play at the event in the Legion Hut. Arrangements were completed for the open social to be held Wednesday.

Co-Captains Waters and Chastain will lead Hose into battle with Davidson.

Hose Attack Wildcats Tomorrow Afternoon

'Battle of Presbyterians' Promises Offensive Thrills

Coach Frank Jones revs up his wing T attack in hopes of a third straight victory as the Hose go against Davidson Saturday.

This will be the 18th "Battle of the Presbyterians". The North Carolinians lead in the series, having won nine and lost seven while one ended a tie.

The Davidsonians emerged the victors last season, taking a hard-earned 7-6 decision. They are slight favorites again this season.

However, the PC'uns have other ideas. A flashy backfield led by halfback Bobby Pate and quarterback Bob Waters plus a solid line should make things plenty rough for the Wildcats.

Davidson will be led again this fall by quarterback Charlie Benson and halfback Dave Worden. These two picked up where they left off last week when they led the Cats to a 42-7 massacre of the Catawba Indians.

With both teams able to move the ball, it appears that another offensive thriller is on the way.

The Hosemen came out of the Furman game with only one serious injury. Starting end John Vastine suffered a brain concussion and will probably not see action Saturday. Davidson expects to enter the game in top shape.

Coach Jones will probably start with Jimmy Kolb and Paul Chastain at the ends; at tackle will be Bill Schofill and Cecil Morris; Billy Ogden and Don Bridges will be the guards; and Mac Copeland will hold down the center spot. Waters will call signals from quarterback, at the halfbacks will be speed merchants Pate and Dave Morgan, while Bill Hill will run from fullback.

Waters and Chastain Elected As Captains

In pre-season football elections quarterback Bob Waters and end Paul Chastain were elected to serve as co-captains for the coming year.

Waters was one of the better quarterbacks in the state last season. He has been PC's number one field director for the past two seasons.

Chastain begins his fourth year of varsity football. He is an outstanding passreceiver and plays a rugged game of defense.

Furman, East Carolina Fall Victim To The Blue

• Socks Stage Two Upsets

Who says that lightning doesn't strike twice in the same place?

Furman's Purple Hurricanes are likely to disagree with that old adage after two lightning-like TD's by PC halfbacks Bobby Pate and David Morgan during the second quarter of last Saturday's game.

These two touchdowns were the big guns in the thrilling 24-23 Blue Hose victory over Furman.

A scoreless first quarter was no prophecy of things to come. Furman began moving shortly after the second quarter began, mainly on the brunt of their big fullback, George Angelica. The Purple Hurricanes moved the ball to the Hose 43, where it became fourth and ten. Sutton came in and booted a 23-yard field goal, Furman 3, Presbyterian 0.

Pate took the ensuing kickoff on his own 10 and behind near perfect blocking streaked 90 yards for the first PC rally. Cole's extra point try was blocked.

After the kickoff, the Hurricanes began to roar again. They drove from the midfield stripe to the four, where Angelica took it over with 3:47 left. Sutton converted. Furman 10, Presbyterian 6.

The Hose took the kickoff, but a pass interception gave the ball right back to Furman. The Hurricanes couldn't get going and Coy kicked, Pate took the punt and handed off to Morgan, who thrilled the crowd with a beautiful 93-yard scoring run. Sease Converted and it was Presbyterian 13, Furman 10 at halftime.

Furman began to roll in the second half kickoff. Baker's fourth down 22-yard pass to Kemp gave the Hurricanes a first down at the PC 13. Later, Baker struck again, hitting Fowler at the two for a first and goal. Reserve fullback Loath rammed across as Furman scored with 9:33 left in the third period. Sutton split the uprights and it was Furman 17, Presbyterian 13.

The Hosemen picked up an easy two points early in the fourth quarter as a bad Furman snap sailed into the end zone. Furman 17, Presbyterian 15.

Furman kicked from its 20 and PC quarterback Bob Waters set sail on a sensational 51-yard run to the eight. Pate got four and Morgan moved it to the one, but PC lost five on offsides. Pate went to the three where guard Bill Sease booted a fourth down field goal. Presbyterian 18, Furman 17.

Baker's passing and Angelica's running soon gave the Hurricanes 6 more. Kemp went the final yardage from the six. Gillis' pass try for the extra point was deflected. Furman led 23-18 with 9:05 left in the game.

Chastain raced back the Hurricane kickoff to midfield. Waters hit Pate on a beautiful 15-yard scoring play with 7:30 remaining. The try for the point was no good, but the Hose were in front 24-23.

But the scrappy Baptists weren't through. They quickly moved the ball to the 16 where a fourth down field goal attempt went wide.

EAST CAROLINA

Presbyterian opened the gridiron season in a winning fashion, defeating East Carolina 18-13. Two fourth down TD's by Bill Hill guided the Blue Hose to a colorful 18-13 victory.

The Presbyterian forward wall was the show of the night. Led by tackle Bill Schofill and guards Billy Ogden and Sonny DuBose, it kept the Pirates from scoring within the 20-yard line once and again halted it on the two-yard line in the first half.

Late in the first period halfback Bobby Pate intercepted Carpintie's aerial and returned 19 yards to the East Caolina 41. Two plays later Pate sailed off right tackle, cut back to his left and outran the secondary on a colorful 36-yard touchdown scamper. Edison Fairy missed the try for the extra point.

A rugged PC line stopped consecutive second quarter scoring threats before the Pirates finally scored.

A drive starting from the Hose 46 was completed when Bass scooted around his left end from 6 yards out with 44 seconds remain-

Singing The Blues

by MARTIN CHITTY

Here we are again and here's another football season. Our Blue Hose are off and running this season with two big victories already under their belts. But there's no time for happy memories with eight more rugged contestants looking Head Coach Frank Jones and staunch crew in the face. Of more immediate concern are the Davidson Wildcats, who last week had a hey-day romping over Catawba 42-7.

Several bright stars have risen. The big talk thus far centers around halfback Bobby Pate, last year's Little Three Back of the Year. Twice in succession, he has been named South Carolina "Back of the year". Despite Pate's excellent performances, no small measure of credit can be given his cohort at halfback, David Morgan. This combination could be the top one-two punch in the state.

Directing the team this year is quarterback Bob Waters. Hard-running fullback Bill Hill rounds out the backfield.

At the ends, Line Coach Clyde Ehrhardt has two solid performers in Jon Vastine and Paul Chastain. Chastain co-captains the squad along with Waters. Big tackles Bill Schofill and Cecil Morris add bulk to the line. Don Bridges, Sonny Dubose, Billy Ogden, and Don Abee alternate at guard, while Mac Copeland directs the line from his pivot position.

All in all, this shapes up as one of the strongest first units ever assembled at PC; however, lack of reserve strength worries Coach Jones.

Several outstanding freshmen give bright promise for the future. Among those are freshman end Billy Eberhardt of Dublin, Ga.; tackle John Gettys of Union; halfbacks Wayne Fowler of Manchester, Ga.; and Ronnie Hampton of Kannapolis, N. C.; and fullback Edison Fairy of Orangeburg; and Norman Snellgroves of Fayetteville, N. C.

OFF BEATS

Coach Clyde Ehrhardt considers freshman tackle John Gettys to be as fine a freshman lineman as any in the state. Gettys, incidentally, was a high school All-American.

Furman halfback Don Kemp, who played an excellent game Saturday night, is a former PC player.

PC was the only Little Three eleven to come through with a victory last week, as Wofford dropped a close one to Lenoir-Rhyne 15-7, and The Citadel romped over Newberry 48-0.

RECORDS OF THE FUTURE—"Like man, this is a crazy game," but here I go.

PC over Davidson by three. The Wildcats are tough, but Frank Jones' razzle-dazzle offense should baffle them.

Newberry over Catawba by six. Both had rough times in their opener, but it's hard to keep down a Harvey Kirkland squad.

Wofford over Elon by 12. The Terriers seem to be improved in spite of their loss last week.

Presbyterian College had the largest percentage of participants in intramural athletics of any college in the state during the past school year, according to figures released by the National Intramural Association.

The 97 per cent participation recorded by PC students also ranked among the best in the five-state Region Four which is composed of institutions in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, and Virginia.

The broad Presbyterian intramural program produced 14 basketball teams, 10 softball teams, 8 touch football teams in addition to squads and tournaments in cross country track, swimming, volleyball, ping pong, horseshoes, and tennis.

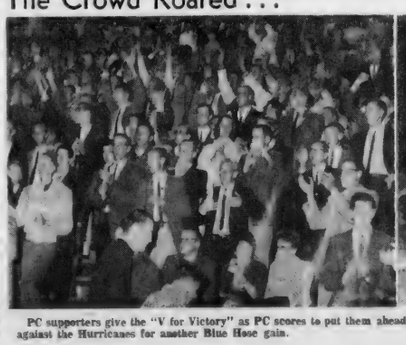
Intramurals are under the sponsorship of the Student Christian Association, under the leadership of Chairman Larry Wood.

59-60 Intramural Season Gets Underway Next Week

by ED LORING

The well-organized intramural program kicks off the season next week as the footbal teams take the field. Last year there was excellent participation form all the student body and the Intramural Council is looking forward to an even more successful year.

This year will feature flagball instead of the usual tough game. All players will wear a flag on each side and the oposing team members must grab one of them.



With last year's top freshmen going to fraternity teams, strong squads are predicted from the Greek ranks. Top lineman Bland Quantz was drafted by the PiKA's. Speedy back Jim Rakestraw will be in action for the Pi Kaps, while ends Chris Hunter and Skip Saverance are on the roster of the Gray Ghosts.

Because of size and returnees from last year, PiKA and KA should take top place, with either team capable of winning the crown. Third place will see Sima Nu losing only to the one and two teams, while the freshman team will give a close bid in the running. Alpha Sig and Pi Kaps will field fairly equal teams, but will be slow on the line.

Mr. Montgomery, director of the intramural program, announced that there will be a ping pong and singles tennis tournament. All those interested in these teams and the swimming team are asked to cotact him.

The pool, it was announced, will open next week, and will remain open if interest is sufficient.

The Crowd Roared . . . . . And PC Took No. 2

PC supporters give the "V for Victory" as PC scores to put them ahead in Saturday night's contest with Furman. Morgan smashes off tackle against the Hurricanes for another Blue Hose gain.

IRC Examinations Will Be Held Monday

IRC examinations will be given October 5 at 7:30 p. m. This examination made up of questions taken from the leading news events of recent weeks, plays a large part in the final selection of new members. Anyone who cannot take the examination at the scheduled time is asked to contact Fred Meade at 107 Spencer to arrange a suitable time.

A reception for the freshmen class will be given at 7:30 p. m., September 28, by the International Relations Club in the Meeting Room of Douglas House. Dress will be coat and tie.

PICK - A - WINNER

Want a free pass to the Broadway Theater? Well, here's how to win one! Just pick the winners of the following games and give the winning margin in the PC-Davidson game and it's yours. Well, not quite like that. You see, we only have one ticket, so we'll have to give it to the prophet who comes closest. Anyway, it's fun.

6—Decisions of the judges will be final; winner announced in next week's paper.

Theta Chi Leads Scholarship Ratings

Theta Chi again led PC's six social fraternities in scholarship last semester with a grade point average of 1.58. This was considerably higher than the all fraternity average of 1.27, as well as the total enrollment average of 1.17 and the 1.07 ratio compiled by non-fraternity men.

The other fraternities were ranked in the following order: Alpha Sigma Phi, 1.44; Pi Kappa Alpha, 1.23; Kappa Alpha, 1.14; Pi Kappa Phi, 1.13; and Sigma Nu, 1.11.

Actually, the highest group average was achieved by the local Alpha Psi Delta sorority, whose members had an overall grade point ratio of 1.74.

ing in the first half. Carpenter split the uprights for a 7-6 East Carolina edge at intermission.

Neither team was able ot score in the third period although a PC drive to the EC 33 was killed by a 15-yard penalty.

A bad snap from center gave PC the ball on the Carolina 31. Morgan picked up three as the quarter ended. On the first play of the last period Bob Waters handed off to Pate who in turn handed off to Morgan, who sprinted 19 yards to the East Caolina nine. Morgan took off again but was stopped on the one. From there Hill took it over. A Waters to Chastain pass was no good for the try.

East Carolina came roaring back on a Zehring to Beale pass, good for 50 yards and a touchdown. The Hose started their winning touchdown march from their own 41. The key point in this drive was a 23-yard run by Pate to the EC 30. Hill carried to the 16 in two attempts. Two plays later he scored from the 10. The try for the point was no good.

"Use Old Doctor Scrogins food filter and starve to death while eating like a horse," I can almost hear the boys reading from the idiot boards.

The cigarette boys have certainly started something and there is no reason to believe that they have reached the limits of effectiveness in their own field. It would come as no surprise to see advertisements extolling the virtues of the "all filter cigarette" in which the sales message would revolve around the point that these smokables contain absolutely no tobacco and, consequently, no harmful tars or nicotine. Also, for all the ood they would do the smoker they could be lit at either end, in the middle, or just left unlighted for maximum satisfaction.

First Of Six

Social Calendar Opened By Pikas

Presbyterian College social events will get underway Wednesday, September 30, as Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity holds the first of six open socials to be given by the fraternities during the coming weeks.

Each Wednesday night for the next six weeks there will be one of these open socials, all beginning at 8:00 p. m. and ending at 12:00 p. m.

The purpose of the open socials is to acquaint new students with fraternity life as it is found at PC. All freshmen, non-fraternity men, co-eds, and the college faculty are cordially invited to attend these functions.

Following Pi Kappa Alpha will be Theta Chi on October 7; Kappa Alpha October 14; Pi Kappa Phi October 21; Alpha Sigma Phi on October 28; and Sigma Nu on November 4.

The Inter-Fraternity council has set the fraternity smoker dates for December. Kappa Alpha heads off on December 2; Sigma Nu is December 3; Pi Kappa Alpha December 4; Theta Chi on December 7; Alpha Sigma Phi is December 8; and Pi Kappa Phi on December 9.

Saturday Schedule

The schedule for Saturday, September 26, has been compressed to make it possible for students to attend the PC-Davidson game.

8:55 classes will meet at 8:00 a. m.

9:50 classes will meet at 8:30 a. m.

10:45 classes will meet at 9:00 a. m.

11:40 classes will meet at 9:30 a. m.

ALL CLASSES WILL BE CONCLUDED BY 10:00 A. M.

Four field goals in one game by a man who'd never kicked one before! Bobby Conrad himself said, "I never kicked a field goal in high school or college. In fact, I never even tried." But the amazing Texas A&M back broke two All Star records by booting four three-pointers, including one for 44 yards, as the 1958 college stars upset the Detroit Lions, 35 to 19. Conrad is now a Chicago Cardinal.

DON'T SETTLE FOR ONE WITHOUT THE OTHER!

Alumni Return Tomorrow For Annual Homecoming Activities

• Large Attendance Expected

Several hundred alumni are expected back on the Presbyterian College campus for 1959 Homecoming activities this Saturday.

They'll participate in a full program highlighted by class reunions, lengthy meaus in the dining hall and a Little Three football clash between Presbyterian's undefeated Blue Hose and the Wofford Terriers.

The schedule also includes a president's reception, presentation of an alumnus-of-the-year award and various alumni meetings.

Dr. Plumer Jacobs Manson, outstanding orthopaedic surgeon of Miami and a 1918 graduate of PC, will receive the 1959 Alumni Gold P Award from President Marshall W. Brown at the 1:30 p. m. Alumni Luncheon. John Holland Hunter, Sr., of Clinton, will serve as master of ceremonies for the occasion, and Mrs. Edgar Sadler, of Clinton, will render several musical selections.

Activities will begin with the annual fall meeting of the alumni board of directors at 10:30 a. m. Saturday. Class reunions are to follow at 1 p. m., with these classes set for special meetings: 1908, 1909, 1918, 1919, 1924, 1928, 1929, 1933, 1934, 1938, 1939, 1943, 1944, 1948, 1949, 1953, 1954 and 1958.

After the Alumni Luncheon, President and Mrs. Brown will entertain in the Douglas House at the annual president's reception during the hour 3:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. The Alumni Association meeting at 4:30 p. m. and Walter Johnson Club meeting at 5:15 p. m. then follow in that order in the Douglas House before the supper bell rings at 6 p. m.

As a climax to Homecoming, the colorful Blue Hose gridmen will go after their fourth straight victory of the year in an important Little Three battle which marks the 43rd meeting with arch-rival Wofford. The game is set for 8 p. m. under the lights of Johnson Field.

PC Campus Will Get Facelifting

Business Manager G. Edward Campbell has announced plans for a special landscaping project on the main campus of Presbyterian College.

This work is planned for the near future under the direction of Hugh Harris, landscape architect and planning consultant of Greensboro, N. C. His previous work in Clinton has included landscape projects at Clinton-Lydia Cotton Mills, and at the First Presbyterian Church.

Harris already has under study a topographical survey of the area and campus sketches showing tree and sidewalk locations. He will direct his attention upon these eleven phases: grading and drainage, soil, grass, trees, shrubs, courts, play fields, drives and parking areas, walks, enclosures, and special features.

The proposed work will be conducted within the scope of the plan designed by New York Architect Charles W. Leavitt in 1912 during the administration of President Davison McDowell Douglas.

Choir Lists New Members; Begins Practice for Year

• "Christ The Lord" Is Theme

From approximately forty candidates, mostly freshmen, who competed for the vacant positions left in the choir by graduation, twenty-one have been selected to sing with the well known group this yaer.

These twenty-one new members passed successfully the technical and voice tests that were given. With only fourteen old members returning from last year's group, the bulk of the choir will, therefore, be these new men. They include:

First tenors: Rollin Butler, Roy Autry, and George Reeves. Second tenors: Del Buttrill, Mark Glenn, Bobby Piephoff, Wirt Skinner, Lee McIntyre and Richard Standford.

First basses: Tom Cook, Griffin Helwig, Everett Connelly, Johnny Dickerson, Karl Bosserman, and Jerry Howington. Second basses: Paul Woodall, Payton Morrison, Paul Robinson, Allen Freeman, Billy Jones and Charles Copley.

The traveling choir is to be selected from this group. The schedule for this year calls for reservations in Georgia, Virginia, Washington, D. C., and the Carolinas.

The theme for this years' concerts is "Christ the Lord," and both ancient and modern music will be presented.

Sometime during the season, Dr. Patte will have conducted his 500th concert with the choir—a rare record for a choir conductor.

When asked his impression of the new candidates, Dr. Patte stated that there are a few nice voices, although a lack of tenors. However, there is a good foundation in the second base section. He further commented, "with much work and intensive training, there's no reason why at the end of November we won't have an outstanding choir again."

The conductor said that the position of accompanist and organist will be vacant after this season and if anyone with appropriate training is interested in filling this vacancy, he should contact Dr. Patte. Requirements are eleventh and twelfth grade in piano and, if possible, some knowledge or organ.

Voice leaders for this years' group have been announced. They include: for the 1st Tenor section, Frank Sells, second tenor section, Bill Stubbs, First bass leader, Dick McGaughey, and Hal Roberts for the second bass section.

Student Council Vote Set For Wednesday

Two representatives to the Student Council from the Freshman class will be elected on Wednesday, October 7. At this same election, a junior representative will be chosen to fill the vacancy of Ron Boston, who transferred to USC this year.

For the vacancy three men will be nominated by the Student Council and these names will appear on the ballot Wednesday.

Nominations for class officers are also scheduled for Wednesday. Elections for these positions will follow on Wednesday, October 14, according to Student Body President Bob Waters.

BSU To Hold Chapel

The Rev. Bill Dyal, misionary to Costa Rica, will speak during chapel services on Wednesday, October 7. The program will be sponsored by the PC Baptist Student Union. Rev. Dyal will be accompanied by Charles W. Horner, State BSU Secretary.

Pope Chosen Veep Of Guidance Group

Dr. L. B. Pope, director of the PC Guidance Center since 1957, was recently named vice-chairman of the Guidance Section of the Presbyterian Education Association of the South. Mr. Alvin H. Smith, Guidance Center Director of Hampden Sydney College, was named chairman.

The Association held its meeting in Montreat, N. C. Those attending the conference were directors, associate directors, and counselors from guidance centers in Tennessee, Virginia, Missouri, Texas and the Carolinas.

Dance, Open Houses Highlight Weekend

Student preparations for homecoming hit a high point today. Fraternity men have been busily preparing their displays for the weekend.

Tomorrow someone's work will pay off as a committee composed of members of the Alumni Board of directors appointed T. A. Kirven, president, will judge the decorations. Awards of twenty-five, fifteen, and ten dollars will be made, respectively, to the fraternities having the top three decorations. The decision will be announced over the PA at the game.

Halftume ceremonies of the homecoming game will include the presentation of the Wofford Blue Key trophy to PC. The trophy is awarded on the basis of the winner of the most intercollegiate athletic contests for the past year. The senior sponsors of the football team will be presented at the half. Each senior football player is eligible to have a sponsor and she will sit on the sidelines during the ball game.

Highlight of the festivities will be the crowning of the homecoming queen, Miss Ann Fowler, by Student Body Vice-President Tom Wise. Miss Fowler, a senior at Greenwood High School, will be escorted by Robert Sherrill.

Each of the six social fraternities on campus will hold open house during dance intermission, following the dance, and after the Saturday night football game. Douglas House will hold a drop-in for all students during intermission. The student center will be open until 2:00 a. m., Friday night and 1:00 a. m., Saturday night. Sunday hours for the building are from 1:00 to 7:00 p. m.

The annual IFC-sponsored dance will begin at 9:00 p. m. at the local Armory. The Zodiacs, formerly known as the Gladiolas, will play until 1:00 a. m. Dress for the occasion will be PC formal and cocktail dresses.

An Empty Basement

A year ago, Douglas House was opened to PC's student body. Among her many facilities was a basement, full of inoperable washing machines. They remained that way for the entirity of the school year.

We returned this year to find a change in Douglas House. No inoperable washing machines — in fact, no washing machines at all. Often the student body is not told the whys and wherefores of all the actions of our college, so we are not aware of what future awaits the empty basement.

Perhaps it would be impractical to restore the washers since the town offers three launderettes equipped with washers and dryers, but we feel it is equally impractical to let space be wasted.

Douglas House is the student center for PC and it seems that the space should and could be used toward the benefit of the students.

Moving Forward

Anticipating the return of many alumni tomorrow, it is a good feeling to know they will be returning to an alma mater that is progressing—a good feeling for us, who are participating in the progress, and a good feeling for them, for their efforts have been necessary.

While the returning alumni will be immediately faced with our physical progress—Douglas House, Belk Auditorium —we would like to bring to their attention less obvious, but perhaps more important progress.

Last year the academic program was revised and now offers greater educational opportunities to students. The faculty has continuously improved. Less desirable instructors have been replaced with competent men of learning. To those who are responsible, we offer our appreciation.

There has also been a more select group of students accepted for work under these improvements—a definite step toward a healthy future.

The creation of a fine art series and the concert series gives the students an opportunity for enjoyment and education that was heretofore impossible.

Presbyterian College is moving forward and is inviting her students and alumni to accept the challenge of accompanying her.

"THOSE STUPID FRESHMEN!"

by GRAHAM EDMUNDS

Tuesday afternoon as I was entering the dingy halls of Symth "C" after leaving my military, find your way around 201, class, I heard someone who sounded like a Bobby Jones student, giving a lecture in the back corner closet. As this back corner closet was my room, I opened the door to see what was the matter. There in the bedroom, Percival Crudley was explaining to our freshman roommate that no one changes their sheets this early in the year.

"Freshman, nobody even thinks about changing them until semester break and besides, you haven't been sleeping on them but nineteen nights now. So put them back on there and don't give me no back talk. Shape up here — forget that high school stuff and adapt the PC way of life—these stupid freshmen."

"Yes sir!"

"That's telling him, P. C."

"Oh. G. B., I didn't hear you come in. Where you been?"

"I've been to military, know where you're at, class."

"Is Captain Scott still waving his lightning rod around?"

"Yes, but he's telling Doctor Stevenson's jokes so he really doesn't need it."

"G. B., I hear that Dr. Steve is answering the phone claiming that he's Lady Chatterly's Lover."

"Yes that's about as bad as Joe Gettys calling himself Mr. Sports Commentator of 1959."

"Speaking of Professors, G. B., I noticed something about Mr. Hallsall in class today."

"Yeah, what's that ?"

"Well, when he lit his cigarette, he then blew out the match and replaced it in the box."

"I guess that makes him the true economizer then, P. C."

"G. B., have you been over to the canteen lately?"

"Yes, I notice that Mr. Powell is in charge of things over there now, and it looks like everything is really organized."

"Have you seen the advertisements for Powell's Towels?"

"Yes, and I guess you've noticed that since he's in charge they added a few extra goodies on the menu like: french fries on bun, roast beef delight, jello a la Fritos and rice with Pepsi."

"G. B., I hear the rumor that they're gonna have the campus landscaped."

"Well, it needs it."

"And G. B. they're gonna have white rose bushes all over the place."

"I guess the bushes will serve to remind us of that memorable event in history."

"What event are you referring to, G. B.?"

"The Lost Colony, of course."

"G. B., they sure have got some tough songs on the hit parade this week. Especially that one that's sung by that large choir. It's number 10."

"Yeah, they'll be revising the Presbyterians' theme song before long."

"Oh, Which one is that, G. B."

"You know—'Que Sera Sera'."

—And then there are those of us who can't spel.

Rules for Dance Weekend

By PERCIVAL CRUDELY

While checking over the recently published SCA calendar, I find that a whole month has gone by in just three days and it's Homecoming Dance Weekend already. In view of these circumstances, and looking over the faculty rules for socials and dances, I decided that a few new rules needed to be made and added to the list. I've made an intensive study into the past dances here and have come up with these few extra governing factors:

1. Everyone must wear some kind of clothing.

2. All animals, with the exception of pink elephants and PC wolves are prohibited.

3. Non-daters must be in the chow hall no later than 5:25 if they expect a good seat for the parade.

4. Girls who have never been to PC before may expect leers, cheers, clapping, stomping, whistling, coughs and sneezes.

5. Boys must act natural and use their normal "homely" manners. No one will be permitted to keep one hand in his lap while eating.

6. Males, and some females, are not expected to recognize their dates after 11:45.

7. Stags must leave the fraternity rooms no later than 12:00 and must be on duty in the dormitories to show fellow students "the way to go home."

Well that's it. I hope each one of you reads these rules and follows them to the letter and really juke it up and have a good time.

Shulman Writes Of Teen Dwarf

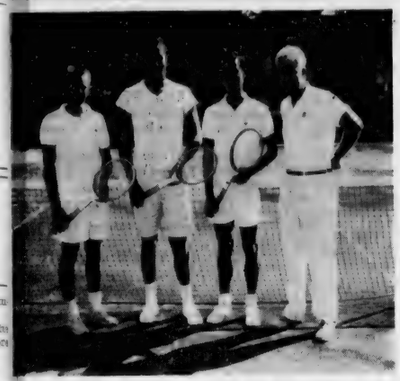
"I Was A Teen-Age Dwarf"

By Max Shulman

Max Schulman, whose humerous books, "Rally Round the Flag Boys", "Barefoot Boy With Cheek", and "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", have been on many best-seller lists, has just published another—, "I Was A Teen-Age Dwarf".

Shulman writes in the first person, under the name of Dobie Gillis. Dobie is not oversexed but not undersexed either. "Let's just say I'm sexed." From age 13 to 30, Dobie chases girls like Elizabeth Barrett Schultz, Helen R. G. (for "Rotten Girl") Spencer and Zelda Gilroy. They aren't Raving Beauties, but then Dobie is no prize catch himself.

"I Was A Teen-Age Dwarf" is a very readable piece of literature which will become very popular.



Movie Schedule . . .

The campus movie schedule for the next few weeks was announced today by Irvin Montgomery, director of student activities.

Next week's free film is "Las Vegas Story" with Jane Russell and Victor Mature.

In succeeding weeks the following are set: "Girl In Every Port" (Groucho Marx, Marie Wilson), "Macao" (Jane Russell, Robert Mitchum), "Riff-Raff" (Pat O'Brian, Anny Jeffrey), "Double Dynamite" (Frank Sinatra, Jane Russell), "Do You Love Me" (Maureen O'Hara, Dick Haynes, Harry James), and "Badman Territory" (Randolph Scott).

The campus movies are a recent addition to the student activities program. The director has requested student comments on the films and suggestions on features for future bookings

Famed PC Tennis Team Begins Season's Workouts

Tennis coach Jim Leighton believes that "the early bird gets the worm."

Net practice has already begun as Coach Leighton expects another fine season. Veterans back from last year's squad are Harry Hoffman, Tom Elliott, Beansie Frampton, Dave Greenslade, Ed Caviness and Bill Stone.

Three newcomers are expected to bring aid to the team this spring. They are freshmen Tony Wilson, George Turner and Harold Hope.

Wilson, who hails from Scarsdale, N. Y., was junior runner-up in that state last year. He also placed third in the Eastern Junior division. Turner, of Plant City, Fla., was conference champion in his senior year. Hope of Union was one of the top South Carolina prospects during his high school days.

Singing The Blues

Well, it's 3-0 now. We wonder if there is another team in the nation who can claim the same record and have only scored eleven more points than their opponents. Everybody gets their money's worth, but doggone boys, it's nerve racking.

There have been individual stars, but the entire team deserves credit for the great comebacks they have made. It shows a lot of daire.

But there's no rest for the weary. This week the Hosemen face an improved Wofford squad. The Terriers consistently play "fired up" ball against PC. The Methodists sport a fine running offense. Thus far they have done little passing, but there's a good chance the Terriers may open up with some aerials for this affair.

If anyone could give a trophy for such, we would like to nominate PC halfback Dave Morgan as "Mr. Hard Luck." Dave has at least once in every game had a fine run called back due to a penalty. Although sporting a rushing average of 4.8 yards a carry, which is highly respectable in any book, it would be much higher had not several of his been called back. Here's a helpful hint to opposing teams: watch out for this guy. A lot more is going to be heard from the PC right halfback spot.

Switching to the other halfback post, Bobby Pate, already a hot candidate for Little All-American honors, leads the state in scoring with 30 points on five touchdowns. He is averaging 7.7 yards a carry. Pate's TD's have come on runs of 36 yards, 90 yards, 9 yards, 62 yards and a 50 yard pass play from QB Bob Waters. He has picked up over 250 yards rushing in the three games.

We also extend congratulations to the Hose second unit which made its finest showing of the young season Saturday. Their play should make the coaches breathe a little easier, when substitutes are needed.

OFF BEATS—A near sell-out crowd is expected for the Homecoming game. At any rate it will be the largest crowd seen here in a long time . . . Many oldtimers upon watching this year's PC backs are reminded of the famed "10 second" backfield fielded here some years back.

FUTURE RECORDS—With a lot of luck, we now have 3 hits out of 3 played. But it's another week, so hang on!

PC over Wofford by 12. A stuck out neck often gets chopped, but we feel reckless . . . Lenoir Rhyne over Newberry by 20 . . . The Bears have too much power for the scrappy Indians . . . The Citadel over Davidson by six . . . the Bulldogs rebound after the FSU slaughter.

Hose Meet Terriers Tomorrow; Game Begins Little Three Play

• "Wofford Toughest Opponent": Jones

"I am convinced that Wofford will be the toughest opponent we have faced so far this season," Presbyterian Coach Frank Jones said today in the midst of preparations to entertain the Terriers tomorrow night.

Football fans agreed that evaluation should set the stage for one of the state's major games of the year.

"They have the biggest backfield in the state," he said, "and a rugged defensive team that probaby will give us more trouble than any to date."

Jones pointed out the Terrier defenders move quickly and pursue well, which means that "you don't make the long run against them very often."

And the long run, bursting out of PC's exclusive wing-T, has been the main scoring punch of the undefeated Hosemen in their three straight victories thus far. Halfback Bobby Pate, for example, sailed 36 yards against East Carolina, ran back a Furman kickoff 90 yards and raced 62 yards against Davidson. Halfback Dave Morgan added a 93-yard punt return against the Purple Hurricanes, and Quarterback Bob Waters broke open the Davidson contest with his 67-yard run.

These boys and Fullback Bill Hill will match their backfield prowess against the hefty Wofford crew led by talented Gary Whitlock at quarterback, and such halfbacks as 220-pound Jim Benson, 205 Bob Roma and Jackie Drawdy.

Presbyterian appeared in good physical shape at mid-week, having emerged from three hard-fought ball games without serious injury.

One of the brightest developments in the PC camp, meanwhile, has been the way in which the second unit line has progressed. Coach Jones was impressed by the performance against Davidson, in stopping cold two second-half Wildcat drives, and he credited this effort as a major contribution to the victory.

Pate, Hill Named The "Cardiac Kids"

Two Georgia boys in the persons of Bobby Pate and Bob Waters dominate Presbyterian College record books to date, a review of cumulative individual statistics showed today.

And fans have coined the name "Cardiac Kids" for the Blue Hose team which staged its third straight, last-quarter comeback victory in whipping Davidson by a 25-21 count last Saturday. Two earlier thrillers saw PC defeat East Carolina, 18-13, and then slip past Furman with a 24-23 score.

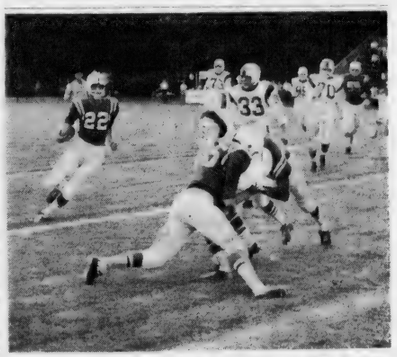
Bobby Pate, the sizzling Little All-American candidate from Fitzgerald, Ga., ripped off another long touchdown gallop of 62 yards last Saturday. His total rushing for the three games now stands at 259 yards in 34 carries for an average of 7.6 yards per carry. Pate has accounted for five touchdowns thus far, for a total of 30 points.

Quarterback Waters, who won the Davidson game with a 67-yard run in the final quarter, leads the Hosemen in total offense. In addition to his 81 yards in 14 rushes from scrimmage—for a 5.8 average—the Sylvania, Ga., signal-caller has completed 8 of 15 pass attempts for 132 yards. And this combined effort totals 213 yards in 29 offensive plays.

Bill Hill, of McKeesport, Pa., ranks next to Pate in the ball-carrying department. The big 205-pound fullback has plowed for 160 yards in 35 carries for a 4.6 average, and he has scored three touchdowns. Halfback Dave Morgan, of Greenville, meanwhile, has skipped off 129 yards in 27 tries for a 4.8 average.

College Library To Be Painted

The Presbyterian College Community Library, operated in co-operation with the City of Clinton, will receive an interior sprucing up—thanks to the city fathers.



A special appropriation of $1,500 was approved at a recent city council meeting for the purpose of painting the interior of the building. The last paint job was completed several years ago. The exact date of the work has not been set.

KA, PiKa Hold Spotless Records

The first week of intramural football saw only the K. A., and PiKa teams with undefeated records. The opening game was taken by the members of the K. A. squad in a 21 6 victory over the PiKaps. Jimmy Rakestraw led the offense attack for the Pi Kaps, but was unable to hit paydirt.

The second game of the week pitted Sigma Nu against the Shros, independent team. The Sigs were able to win only by Jerry Chitty's fine extra point pass.

The strong PiKa team, moving quickly, took an easy win over the PiKap charges in a 21-6 effort. The week closed with K. A. topping Sigma Nu 13-6 with the Sigs threatening strongly to the closing minutes of the game.

Wildcats Fall to Blue Hose In Second-Half Comeback

• Waters Scores Winning Touchdown

Quarterback Bob Waters raced 67 yards for a fourth period touchdown Saturday to give Presbyterian a comeback 25-21 victory over Davidson.

Waters pulled 6,000 fans to their feet when he was apparently trapped at his own 33 on a pass attempt, but he broke loose, shook off a host of Wildcat tackles and slanted for the sidelines. A block by end Paul Chastain at the 20 knocked out the last Davidson defender.

Presbyterian went ahead 7-0 when Davidson fumbled the opening kick off and the Blue Hose drove 58 yards in six plays. Halfback Bobby Pate went the final nine for the score and Bill Sease booted the point.

Davidson finally got its attack rolling at the end of the first period, however, and rolled up three TD's in the second period.

Penalties and PC mistakes helped the Wildcats to the scores, two of them by halfback George Hart. Bruce Usher booted all three extra points.

The Wildcats scored an apparent winning touchdown, when, with 24 seconds left in the first half, Presbyterian took timeout, stopping the clock and giving Davidson one more shot at the goal line. Davidson got to the one when the clock ran out before the play could be started

PC had been offsides before the horn sounded and the Wildcats' fullback Dave Warden went over from the one. But the second half was all Blue Hose. With Davidson driving, fullback Bill Hill intercepted a Charley Benson pass on his own ten and returned it to the 38.

On the next play Pate made a sensational 62 yard run for the score, but his pass for the two points failed.

The next time the Hosemen got their hands on the ball, they drove 60 yards for the score. Hill did the honors from the three. A 32-yard pass from Waters to end Jimmy Kolb set up the score. Morgan's successful run for the tying two points was called back because of a penalty. The next try failed

Runs by Pate, Hill and halfback Dave Morgan set the stage for the final drive.
